Sir,-I have the honour to present the report on Archives for 1889.*

There have been received last year from the staff employed under the direction of the High Commissioner at the Public Record Office, London, copies of the State Papers (Colonial Series) down to 1807 for Lower Canada and to 1812 for Upper Canada. There are in addition the volumes of the series "America and West Indies" down to 1769, which include the correspondence of Braddock, with an account of his death four days after the engagement in which he was wounded (9th July, 1755), and sketches of the position of the forces, the one showing that at the beginning of the action, and the other their position about two o'clock, when the whole of the main body had joined the advanced and working parties, then beaten back from the ground first occupied. These plans, which have been partly published, were sent in a letter from General Shirley to Sir Thomas Robinson, dated 5th November, 1755. The documents in this volume (A. & W. I, vol. 82) afford a valuable contribution to the history of this action, for the result of which Braddock has been severely censured and as strenuously defended. The series of volumes now received under the title of "America and West Indies" contains the correspondence of the Commanders during and for some time subsequent to the close of the war in North America in 1760, including the Indian hostilities, Indian conferences, &c. All the plans in the original letters have been traced and bound with the copies; a few have been published in works dealing with the events to which they relate; but the majority are still unknown. They include some plans of the order of battle in different engagements, harbours, forts and proposed defences, north and south, as might be expected, the military command extending at that time over the larger part of North America, including the portion now forming the United States. In the volume for 1769 (vol. 125) is an elaborate report on the defences of Quebec, with plans for a citadel on Cape Diamond, prepared by order of Sir Guy Carleton. These volumes contain the contemporary record of the events of an important period in the history of North America, and will prove of great service to investigators.

A series of volumes relating chiefly to the affairs of the British Army serving in North America from 1756, forms a supplement to the last mentioned series, and will be found of use in dealing with many questions of interest, whose solution depends to some extent on the identification of officers employed on different services.

^{*}In the report for last year, by a typographical error, the date here was given as 1887, instead of 1888. It was corrected in the French edition.

The volumes relating to the old Province of Quebec and to Lower and Upper Canada, subsequent to the division in 1791, are absolutely essential to the study of the period since the Conquest, and of the advance in the settlement of the different counties and townships. The documents relating to the two Provinces, as has been stated in a previous report, are being copied concurrently, so as to carry on the record of the course of events in both Provinces, it being impossible to separate them without detriment.

I beg again most respectfully to direct attention to the question of having copies made of the Archives in Paris relating to this continent. These have been reported on by M. Marmette, Assistant Archivist, and many applications are being received for additional information and for copies. It is impossible to obtain a thorough knowledge of the history of Canada under the French régime without access to the official correspondence, and I am, therefore, compelled again to urge that favourable consideration be given to this representation.

Among the papers acquired from private sources are some received from the family of the late Judge Badgley, Montreal. One is a journal of Laverenarye, 1738-39 (published in this report, with remarks); the others are letters from Bienville, Governor of Louisiana, and a memoire by Father Coquart, dated in 1750, without title, but addressed to the Intendant (Bigot), giving an account of the King's posts—Malbaye, Tadousac, the Islets de Jeremie, Chicoutimi and Sept Isles. Father Coquart was a Jesuit, who was sent in 1746 as missionary to Chicoutimi and Tadousac; these stations he continued to serve till his death, besides others which were added in the course of years. He died in 1765, and was buried at Chicoutimi; the body was subsequently removed to Tadousac, where it now lies.

Correspondence and other documents of the late Capt. Bulger, chiefly relating to the war of 1812-15, have been acquired from his son, Mr. A. E. Bulger of Montreal.

An interesting pamphlet, "Lieut. James Moody's Narrative of his exertions and sufferings in the cause of the Government since the year 1776," was published in London in 1783, and has long been out of print. His grandson Mr. J. W. Moody, of Yarmouth, N.S., who possesses one of the few copies, which it is to be presumed are still in existence, has had the kindness to make and transmit a written copy to this branch, for preservation, for which thanks are due.

The list of works presented shows that the publications of the Public Record Office, London, are regularly transmitted as issued, as well as the Reports of the Deputy Keeper of Records and of the Historical Manuscripts Commission, the value of which can scarcely be overrated. A general acknowledgement to the different Provincial Governments for documents received appears to be all that is now necessary, their official publications being regularly received and arranged for reference.

An examination of the list referred to will show how widespread is the interest in the work of this branch. The applications for information on various subjects, many of them relating to important public and private interests, are daily increasing. Among these are references for information required by different Departments to enable settlements of claims to be made; others are from private individuals respecting successions and other questions of a similar nature. interest subjects, increasartments dividuals spoint of view this branch has been of great service, an important part of its functions which is apt to be overlooked, its value for historical purposes, being that to which attention is chiefly called, owing to the greater publicity naturally given to this part of the office, as there is scarcely a recent work published relating to the history of Canada or the United States that does not contain acknowledgements of obligations to this branch for information given and assistance rendered. It will not, I trust, be considered out of place to quote one or two of the many notices by authorities on historical subjects in the United States; those from Canadian writers are equally favourable. In the Atlantic Monthly (Boston, Mass.), for November last, is a review of Mr. Theodore Roosevelt's "Winning of the West;" which states that he has in the preparation of the work "consulted original documents in the State Department at Washington, the Canadian Archivos at Ottawa—unrivalled on this continent for materials in Western history."

In the "Narrative and Critical History of America," edited by Mr. Justin Winsor, the latest extensive work on this subject, it is stated, in reference to the sources of information with respect to Canada from 1763 to 1867: "The most remarkable service done to the history of this period (1763 to 1791), as well as to that of several years following, has been accomplished by the Canadian Archives Department, Ottawa, whose collection, begun in 1872, under the indefatigable management of Mr. Douglas Brymner, has grown with marvellous rapidity in the few years of its existence." (Vol. VIII, p. 171.)

At the recent meetings of the American Historical Association the Canadian Archives have been specially noticed for their importance. At the meeting in Boston, in May, 1887, Mr. Justin Winsor, of Harvard College, President of the Association, in his address on the "Manuscript Sources of American History," says: "We owe it to the intelligent action of the Dominion Government and to the assiduity of the Dominion Archivist, Mr. Brymner, that copies of the Haldimand Papers are now at Ottawa, of which we are given an excellent key in the calendar in course of publication by that same Officer."

At the meeting of the same association held at Washington in December, 1888, the President, Dr. F. W. Poole, of Chicago, said, in reference to the "Sources and Facilities for the Study of North-Western History:" "I will first call attention to the collection of original documents in the Canadian Archives at Ottawa. A large portion of these documents relate to the early history of the North west, then a part of Canada. Some of them have been used by Mr. Parkman; but as a collection it is little known to writers on Western history. It covers the period from the earliest settlement of Canada to recent dates, and is especially rich in documents of the last century relating to the North-West, in reference to which our National and State archives are very weak.

"The intelligence with which these documents have been collected, arranged, and calendared in print is most creditable to the Canadian Government, and to its accomplished Archivist."

In summing up, Dr. Poole adds:

4 Something of the enterprise of the Canadian Government should animate the Congress of the United States in the establishment and support of a Department of Archives, which will be worthy of this nation."

The report of the Secretary, Professor Herbert B. Adams, states that the paper read on Canadian archives by Mr. Brymner was one of the most suggestive of those presented at the meeting, and that from it the "Association learned what scientific order can be brought out of a chaos of State papers by well directed efforts with only moderate Government aid."

The paper referred to follows, it being at your desire included in this report, as it contains a summary of the work done from the beginning to the date of the meeting. Some introductory sentences are omitted:—

"The functions of the archivist are not the same as those of the librarian; neither can h. be called a historian. He collects the documents from which history is to be written, and must, therefore, have a sufficient knowledge of the works that exist treating not only of the subjects with which he has to deal, but also of orhers which have, at first sight, a very slight and indirect bearing on them. As an archivist he has to collect the rough material to be formed into structures of exquisite beauty in the hands of the skilful workman, or to be raised by the dishencest and incompetent into unsubstantial erections, which crumble into ruins before the first rude blast c adverse criticism.

"The more clearly does the archivist feel this distinction between him and the historian, the more useful is his work likely to be. If he seek to obtain reputation as a historian, by so much will his proper duties be encroached on. He must not forget that he is only the pioneer, whose duty is to clear away obstructions; the cultivated fields will follow. The elder Disraeli thus describes the services rendered by men of letters who are not authors: 'The concealed aid which men of letters afford authors may be compared to the subterraneous streams, which, flowing into spacious lakes, are, though unobserved, enlarging the waters which attract the public eye.'

"Many of our Canadian records have been, unfortunately, destroyed by fire on various occasions. The peripatetic system, under which the seat of Government was removed at intervals from one town to another in the original Canadas, acted, during its continuance, as a bar to the systematic collection of records. Subsequently the division of powers, by which the control of lands, education, &c., was given to the Legislatures of the Provinces composing the Dominion, deprived the Federal Government of the records relating to many most important subjects. There was no systematic collection of records when, in 1871, a very numerously signed petition was presented to the three branches of Parliament, praying that steps should be taken to have the material relating to the history of the country collected and arranged for reference. On a joint report from the Senate and House of Commons, Parliament assigned to the Minister of Agriculture, who is also Minister of Arts and Statistics, the duty of accomplishing the object the petitioners had in view. I had the honour of being selected to organize the new branch of the Civil Service, and in June, 1872, was furnished with three empty rooms and very vague instructions.

"The first step was naturally to make a preliminary survey of the work to be done. Fortunately, steps had been taken by Dr. Taché, the Deputy Minister of Agriculture, to have a large collection of military correspondence, which had been stored at Halifax for transmission to London, retained there till the result of an application for the transfer of these papers to the Dominion Government could be known, the application having been made in anticipation of the appointment of an archivist, provided for by Parliament, but not then made. On my appointment 1 proceeded to Halifax, where I examined and reported on the papers, but the negotiation dragged on, there seeming to be little room to hope for a satisfactory result.

"In 1872 the preliminary examination was confined to the Capitals of the different Provinces, at each of which I spent some time, and in 1873 I went to London, where I visited the various Government offices, the British Museum, every place, in fact, that I thought would throw light on the work I was appointed to organize. I then

I then recommended, as a first instalment, that the collections made by Genera' Haldimand, Governor of Canada, during the United States Revolutionary War, should be copied. These had been presented to the British Museum in 1857, by his (grand) nephew, Mr. Wm. Haldimend. Two collections were presented by that gentleman. The one known as the "Haldimand Collection" relates to the events of that officer's career on this continent; the other-the "Bouquet Collection"-deals more especially with the military operations of Bouquet, the general outlines of which are known to historians. The documents in this latter collection cover a period of ten years, from 1754 to 1764, these for the year 1765, which form part of it, relating chiefly to the administration of Bouquet's estate. The collection is in thirty volumes.

"The period covered by the Haldimand Collection is the most obscure in Canadian history, and the correspondence throws a flood of light not only on events in Canada of that epoch, but on contemporary events in what were known as the American Colonies, whilst they still formed part of the British Empire, and during the Revolutionary War, from the first muttering of discontent, immediately after the cession of Canada, to the attainment of independence twenty years later. The information contained in these papers relates to an immense extent of territory. On the Ohio; the Mississippi; the Illinois; the Wabash; in the Floridas; on the Lakes from Superior and Huron eastward; in the frontier posts to the north and south; Michillimakinak, Detroit and Niagara; on Lake Ontario, with its fortified posts on the mainland and islands; on both sides of the St. Lawrence above and below Montreal to the Gulph and onwards to Nova Scotia; on the Richelieu, Lake Champlain, the Mohawk Valley, the Hudson. In fact, there is scarcely a locality bordering on, approaching to, or whose interests might affect the future of Canada, respecting which there are not more or less minute details to be found in this mass of correspondence, which fills no less than 232 volumes, and covers a period of thirty-three years of public service.

"The writers who treat of the period during which Haldimand was Governor and Commander-in-Chief had little opportunity of testing the truth of the charges brought against him by those who were detected in a conspiracy and imprisoned for the safety of the Province; nor does much regard appear to have been paid to the peculiar circumstances in which be was placed from the time be succeeded Carleton to the date of his recall in 1784. I must confess, that I have derived from the study of the correspondence a high idea of the abilities of Haldimand, and of the moderation he showed in the exercise of almost unlimited power at so critical a period, when a calm and sober judgment was needed to restrain passion and to enforce repression without having recourse to violence.

"Before leaving London, in 1873, I made arrangements for copying the documents in these two collections. In arranging for this work, it was proposed, in order to lessen the cost, to have only a careful selection made and copied. My own view was, that no man could tell what documents might or might not be safely omitted, even the most trifling being a link in the chain of evidence, as every investigator knows. The Minister of Agriculture, the Hon. John Henry Pope, saw the propriety of my recommendation, and gave the necessary a 'hority to have the collections copied in full. On this point I may be pardoned for quoting the words of a recent writer on Egyptian antiquities. He says: 'No object has been deemed too trivial for examination. The relations of one monarch to another have been found on scraps of vases, chips of wood, and fragments of papyri. A mutilated hieroglyph on the dress of a statue has revealed a political mystery, and a series of erasures on granite blocks, a religious revolution.' A curious instance of the correctness of the statement just quoted is to be found in the proof afforded by a contract for the sale of a piece of land, recorded on a tablet now in the British Museum, of the existence of a King of Babylon twenty-five centuries ago, which was suspected but not proved.

"But whilst engaged in the work of investigation, that of acquisition was not neglected. By personal negotiation with the authorities at the War Office, for which the previous correspondence had prepared the way, I succeeded in convincing them that the collection of correspondence at Halifax would be more useful at Ottawa than immured in the vaults in London, and by the end of the year 1873 fully eight tons of official documents were brought from Halifax and deposited in their original cases in the archive rooms.

"Those familiar with the subject know the formidable character of the work of arranging and classifying such a mass of documents. The papers were secured in cases, each containing correspondence for one or more years, tied up in bundles. An attempt had been made to indicate the subjects by titles, but there had been no effort to arrange them according to any sort of systematic classification. Each title, of which there were 82,000, carried a variable number of enclosures. I have in round figures estimated the documents at 300,000 (given by a typographical error in one of my reports as 200,000), but I think that an actual count would show them to be about 400,000-probably more.

"The first thing to be determined on was the system of arrangement to be adopted. I have said that I was turned loose into three empty rooms. I had now a mass of unsorted documents to deal with. Being entirely alone, I had full scope to adopt any system I chose, without let, hindrance, or remonstrance. First, then, I adopted, as the foundation, the chronological order, so that the record of events might follow naturally, no matter who was the recorder. Next, as in dealing with these documents, it would be impossible to have them indexed, even imperfectly, for years, the most practicable way would be to divide them into subjects, breaking them up, as it were, into fragments for mastication. In much of the correspondence this was comparatively easy, from the general official rule (not always, however, observed) of freating only one subject in each letter. There are numerous exceptions to this. The Queen's father, the Duke of Kent, who was in command in North America, was one of the greatest offenders, his letters dealing at length with all sorts of subjects, whilst the Duke of York, Commander-in-Chief, Her Majesty's uncle, deals with one subject at a time, and one only. They had one peculiarity in common, Each had a secretary, who wrote a beautifully clear hand, a characteristic also of the royal brothers, as, in fact, of most of the gentlemen at the end of the last and beginning of the present century.

"Having decided on the first principle of arrangement—namely, that it was to be chronological—I proceeded with that, in the first place, by means of tin boxes, each with four pigeon holes. These I had arranged round the four walls of one of the rooms, and by taking a limited number of years, I was able to get the letters, returns, accounts, memorials, &c., arranged by years, months, and finally days of the month. It should be borne in mind, that the documents were of many shapes and sizes, from a scrap of paper of possibly quarter of an inch, to the largest size of paper made, and the writing and ink from the rudest and poorest up to the most cultured and the finest that could be produced. Let me remark, too, that in the earlier documents each of the covering letters had endorsed the name of the writer, the place where and the date when written, and a short but clear abstract of its contents. Gradually, as time went on, these careful notes ceased; the abstracts first became obscure and then vanished, only the date being endorsed. Much of the trouble of ascertaining the subject of the earlier documents was removed by their careful endorsation, but that advantage was lost by the modern and imperfect practice.

"The next matter to be attended to was the choice of subjects and titles.

"The first part of the work had been purely mechanical, the arrangement of documents according to dates requiring no special qualifications beyond industry and patience. The next, however, demanded a little more brain power in order to determine the subjects and their titles, and to select the documents that should properly belong to each subject. It is clear that the latter could only be done by reading the documents; it is equally clear that to wade through each of a mass of papers, between three hundred thousand and half a million in number, meant a work of many years. But here training on the press came into play. The work of rushing daily through fyles of exchanges to select the most interesting material for the making up of the next day's paper is in itself a training for work of this kind. Like the medicine prescribed by the Greek physician Douban to the leprous King of Persia, which was absorbed by exercise, as told in the veritable Arabian Nights, the contents of the documents seemed to be absorbed rather than taken in by any slower process, and thus the work went on from day to day. I may express, parenthetically, my thankfulness that, rapidly as the work was done, I find in indexing that few errors were committed in the arrangement. The documents were then bound, the work proceeding like that on Solomon's Temple, 'neither hammer, nor axe, nor any tool of iron was heard while the house was building.' In other words, I kept everything as quiet as possible, until some progress had been made in the work of collecting and arranging.

"The collection of which I now speak covers a period from about 1785 to 1870. It largely relates to military affairs in the Provinces, including the preparations to meet anticipated hostilities consequent on the first French Revolution; original records of the War of 1812; the strained relations between Great Britain and the United States for some years previous to the declaration of war; the Rebellion in Canada in 1837-8, with the proceedings of the sympathisers from the United States. Then there are reports of expeditions to the North-West; many most important details respecting the Indians from about 1788; documents relating to the construction of the canals by the Imperial Government; very complete reports of the proceedings in Canada of the Royal Engineers; details of the defensive posts and fortifications; much interesting information respecting the chief cities and new settlements, including those formed from the weaver population of Scotland, ruined by the introduction of the power loom, and who, it may be noted, made most successful settlers.

"The division with the title 'Settle"s' includes also a collection of the original correspondence with the exiled French Royalists who, after the massacre of Quiberon and the suppression of the struggle in La Vendée and Brittany, entered into negotiations with the British Government for a grant of land in Upper Canada. They began an establishment about thirty miles north of Toronto, but the situation was ill-chosen and the settlers unsuited for the rough work of clearing, so that the scheme collapsed, and the leader, the Count de Puisaye, died in poverty in London. In addition to the original documents relating to this last subject, I had copies made in London of other correspondence, which makes the information on this attempt at settlement fairly complete. It may be said that almost everything relating to local subjects coming within the jurisdiction of the Military Commanders is to be found here, besides much that is of a civil character. There is, however, little of political history. That information has to be sought for elsewhere, and the gap in that respect is being rapidly filled up.

"This collection being complete, I have distinguished it as series 'C'. To facilitate research, I had an index placed in each volume. At first I thought of limiting the index to the names of the writers and recipients of letters, to memorialists and subjects, but finally resolved to grapple with the task of indexing every name of every person and place mentioned, together with such subjects as could be briefly stated. To do more was hopeless. By this time the copies of the Haldimand and Bouquet Collections were beginning to arrive. These I had arranged to have bound in London, after revision, so that they could be placed on shelves on arrival. As a relaxation from the drudgery of indexing, I took to making abstracts of these, specimens of which are to be found in the annual reports on Canadian Archives since (and including) 1884. In making these abstracts I had a double end in view: one, to make the documents readily accessible; the other, to make a thorough revision of the copies, so as to make certain they were exact transcripts. Lists were made of all doubtful points, which I transmitted to the revisors in London for further examination. By this process, I believe as exact copies have been secured as it is possible to obtain in transcribed documents. It is scarcely necessary to say, that I have insisted on the copies containing every peculiarity of spelling, every error, and that no variation in these or in any other respect is allowed.

"In addition to the larger and more general collections, a considerable number of original warrants for the payment of officials, clergy, schoolmasters, pensioners, and others, besides accounts relating to the Lake Marine, to the Indian and other Departments, was added. These also I arranged and had bound in 197 volumes. They are fully indexed, and have been found to be of great service in the settlement of questions in dispute. Then there have been smaller lots, constantly added to, consisting of family papers, including such documents as original accounts and journals of the Invasion of Canada in 1775, correspondence relating to the War of 1812, Indian treaties, early settlements, and many of a purely local nature. These are bound, but not yet indexed; all received are arranged and bound immediately after their reception.

"As it seemed an obvious duty to gather up the scattered threads of the occupation by the French of a large portion of North America, copies were procured of the old Acadian registers, so far as these were obtainable. That work has been going on since, so far as pecuniary means would allow. Copies of many of the church registers of the old French settlements in the West have also been obtained and are now on the shelves.

"The report on Archives for 1882, to which I beg to refer, shows the extent of the ground to be covered, if the Archives are to be in any degree of use to the Dominion as a whole, instead of degenerating into a merely local collection of documents. I therefore conceived it to be absolutely necessary to set about the work of collecting, as at least a beginning the printed journals, sessional papers, departmental reports, &c., of all the Provinces. The attempt to obtain the earliest of these records has been fairly successful. The gathering of them as they are issued; the securing of pamphlets, new and old, even of fly sheets, has been carefully attended to. In several cases, the early Provincial records in printed form are much more complete than those in the libraries of the Provincial Legislatures.

In 1881 I obtained the services of one clerical assistant. That year I went to London to make arrangements for completing the copying of all the documents relating to Canada in the British Museum. As the report for 1881 contains all that is of importance concerning that visit, I think it only necessary to say further, that in dealing with the question of the grant to Sir William Alexander, the Lord Stirling so well known in connection with Nova Scotia, I was not satisfied with the papers relating to that Province, but obtained also a considerable number of documents concerning New England, the entanglement of Lord Stirling's affairs with those of Gorges and Mason appearing to render that necessary.

"If I have been too prolix in entering into these details, I must apologise for taking up the time of a meeting like this. It has been done partly to show that no really good work of this kind springs into being suddenly; that it is a process requiring time and labour, but that the difficulties of forming such a collection are not insuperable. Patience is needed, above all watchfulness and perseverance. The man entrusted with the work must make up his mind that it is to be accomplished, and undertake it, not as a heavy task, but as something to rouse his faculties. Nor is the expense deadly. There has never been a sum of more than $6,000 annually voted by Parliament for this service. It requires great economy in management; it is not always sufficient, but any excess of expenditure beyond the grant is speedily checked.

"I shall be very brief in what remains. In 1883 I returned to London and obtained from the Imperial Government much more favourable conditions for transcribing the State papers than the rules in force allowed, many restrictions being removed, which were found to impede the work.

"In July 1883, Mr. Joseph Marmette was appointed Assistant Archivist, and entered on the work of investigation in Paris. I would refer you to the reports for 1883, 1885, 1886 and 1887, for Mr. Marmette's account of the documents in Paris, which I feel sure will be found interesting. We are ready to begin the work of copying there, when Parliament shall see fit to grant a sufficient amount for the purpose. What I did that year in London, for the time I could be spared from duty ist, and orts for ı Paris, work of for the m duty in Canada, is to be seen in the report for 1883. I spent some weeks in Paris, and was, I think, fortunate in securing a number of valuable historical works, "Besides the documents specially mentioned, we have on the shelves the British State papers of the series bearing the title 'America and West Indies,' from 1755, the first year of the final struggle for supremacy on this continent between Britain and France. These papers include the operations in Nova Scotia, the siege and capture of Louisbourg, the campaigns in Canada till the conclusion of the war. It is very desirable to begin the copying of that portion of this series which relates to Nova Scotia, and the Maritime Provinces generally, but fortunately the intelligent and careful labour of Dr. T. B. Akins, the Archivist of Nova Scotia, renders delay less prejudical than it would otherwise be. His work has been admirably done. The 'Colonial Series' of the State papers begins in 1760, continuing, so far as the old Province of Quebec is concerned, till 1791, when it is parted into two streams by the formation of the two Provinces of Lower and Upper Canada. When that point was reached, I had the staff of copyists divided, half taking Lower and half Upper Canada, so that the papers relating to each might be received concurrently. That work is carried on steadily, with a competent staff of copyists.

"We have, also, a variety of family papers of various periods; numerous documents relating to the refugee loyalists, inaccessible to Sabine and others who have hitherto written on that subject; copies of old parish registers from Acadia and the Lower St. Lawrence, from the Illinois, Detroit, &c., besides notarial registers, originals and copies from the latter named place. More of these registers would have been copied had means permitted. There are miscellaneous documents of general interest as well as those local to Canada; a very valuable collection of printed historical works and pamphlets old and new; county histories, manuscript and printed. and, as I have already said, original accounts of many of the early settlements; the valuable collections of the publications of the Public Record Office, London, numbering now upwards of 400 volumes, which I was fortunate enough to obtain as a gift from the British Government. The new volumes of these are sent as issued, besides the important and valuable reports of the Historical Manuscripts' Commission, which is bringing to light the treasures hitherto concealed in the muniment rooms of the old British families.

"My ambition aims at the establishment of a great storehouse of the history of the colonies and colonists in their political, ecclesiastical, industrial, domestic, in a word, in every aspect of their lives as communities. Included in this should be the history of the old French régime in Acadia, Canada, Louisiana and the westward; of all the British Colonies in America, from their beginning down at least to 1796, when the last of the frontier posts were transferred to the United States. The fortunes of all were so intertwined that it is impossible to separate the records of them without injury. It may be a dream, but it is a noble dream. It has often spurred me to renewed effort, when the daily drudgery—for it is drudgery—was telling on mind and body. It might be accomplished, and Ottawa might become on this continent the Mecca to which historical investigators would turn their eyes and direct their steps. But who is sufficient for the task?"

The following is an extract from a letter by Mr. Walter Shanly, M.P., enclosing a number of inscriptions from grave stones in the old English burying-ground, Montreal. The letter fully explains the reason for publishing these inscriptions.

"I send you a few jottings, taken many years ago in the old English Burying-ground here in Montreal, and hich, seeing that the tombstones from which they were transcribed are no longer to be found, may have sufficient historic value to entitle them to preservation in the Archives. Some of the names recorded are of persons conspicuous in the "Haldimand Collection," and other official correspondence of the latter half of the last century. The burying-ground in question was on the corner of Dorchester and St. Urban streets. Some dozen years since the city government decreed its destruction, and it was converted into a park—so called. In some few cases, where descendants of the early English residents were still to be found, and who thought it worth their while their ancestors' bones 'from insult to protect,' the tombstones and monumen.s, with the remains they guarded, were removed to Mount Royal Cemetery. But such instances were not many and, doubtless, the ashes of scores of once noted citizens of Montreal now lie beneath the sward of the new 'park,' while the stones that once marked the graves and 'implored the passing tribute of a sigh' have been turned to base account in the macadamizing of the streets. 'They manage these things better' in the States. In Boston the "Kings' Chapel' and the 'Park' burial places, and in New York Trinity and St. Paul's Church Yards, situated in the heart of commercial quarters of their respective cities, would, if put up for sale, have a money value to be reckoned by millions; but the hand of the destroyer has never been permitted to touch them. The sacred acres are jealously guarded as part of the history and carefully tended as among the adornments of the two cities."

A different course to that followed in Montreal has been taken in other places. An evidence of this is furnished by a "Sketch of the old Parish Burying-ground of Windsor, Nova Scotia," forwarded by Mr. Henry Youle Hind. The Town Council of Windsor has obtained possession of the ground, one of the oldest rural places of interment in the Dominion, and are taking steps for its preservation and ornamentation, and it is with a view to assist in this object that the sketch has been written.

The Calendar of the Haldimand Papers is finished in this report, the titles of the volumes indicating to a large extent, but not altogether, the nature of the documents they contain. The proceedings against the Hon. John Cochrane are in five volumes, the contents of which will fully explain the nature of the case, as referred to in correspondence to be found in preceding volumes, and need not be further referred to. Volume B 213 contains "Memorials from Officers and Soldiers in the Army," the documents in which correspond to this description, with the exception of a communication from the Jesuit Roubaud, of whom an account was given in the report on Archives for 1885, beginning at p. xiii. A very full summary of the document written by Roubaud is given in the Calendar; the text is in B 213, beginning at p. 304. It is undated and without any special address, but very characteristic of the man, who. whilst betraying Du Calvet's confidence, and selling his secrets, laments his fate, saying : "Il en est réduit a moi, que la facilité de caractère entraine toujours vers les malheureux" (p. 308). In volume B 206 Roubaud's correspondence closed in April, 1787, when he appeared to be in the last stage of wretchedness. It will be seen by Haldimand's diary that he was alive subsequent to that date and apparently living on charity.

Among the memorials from civilians in Canada (B 217) are several from and respecting negroes, showing the legal existence of slavery down to 1784, the date of the last document on that subject in this volume, which is a petition from a free negro to be protected in his liberty, threatened by the husband of the woman with whom he was a servant.

Some interesting information may be found in B 217 respecting the early efforts to establish a system of Protestant education in the Province, and in the following statement I have supplemented this by details contained in other documents.

James Tanswell, who succeeded Mr. Reid as school teacher in the city of Quebee, had, according to his own statement, "spent the twenty first years of his life in acquiring a universal education" was assistant in several schools in England, and opened an Academy in London, which he continued for seven years. In 1772, through Messrs, Watson & Rashleigh on behalf of gentlemen in Nova Scotia, "he was prevailed on to cross the Atlantic in order to plant the liberal Arts & Sciences in that Country." After being five years in Nova Scotia he was induced by Sir Guy Carleton to remove to Quebee, where he was to receive every encouragement. He did not arrive until Sir Guy Carleton had left, but appears to have been well received by Haldimand,

The boarding school Mr. Tanswell opened proved a cause of loss, he having, as appears by a memorial of the 1st July, 1782, sunk £500, and met with little encouragement, so that he was compelled to ask for other employment to add to his earnings from school fees. A year later (July, 1783) he asked authority to call his school "His Majesty's Royal Quebee Academy," an authority granted him, as he styles himself in a power of attorney dated 31st January, 1785, "Master of His Majesty's Academy" (powers of attorney, 1784-94). Even this title did not appear to bring prosperity, as in March, 1784, he again sent in a memorial appealing on account of his circumstances for an additional room in the Bishop's Palace, "that which Mr. Reid did formerly keep school in." At that date he had been placed on the Civil list for £100 sterling a year, but the warrant for his six months' salary, from 1st November, 1783, to 30th April, 1784, did not issue till the 9th of July of the latter year (Warrants 1784, Vol. 1, p. 127). He was subsequently interpreter for the courts, besides holding some other small offices.

Schools were established among the loyalists at Machiche, Sorel, St. John's etc. but these were not, so far as the evidence goes, of a kind to furnish more than the most limited education. The first teacher in Montreal who aimed at anything higher, was John Pullman, who, in a memorial dated in January, 1779, stated that he had left New York in 1773 by the recommendation of the Rev. Dr. Ogilvie, to try to establish a school in Montreal, in consequence of an application to him from gentlemen of that city. From the memorial it would appear that he there kept a school under the direction of a committee, and now applied for a licence as Protestant schoolmaster. similar to that granted to Tanswell in Quebec, the recommendation in his favour being signed by the leading men of Montreal. No allowance appears to have been granted to him, and Pullman struggled on, but owing to the number of loyalists and others who had opened schools, his scholars decreased in number and he was reduced to great poverty, so that in 1782 he applied for any small employment as a clerk and for a subscription to a work he had prepared, of which the full name is given, the short title being the "Cash Clerk's Assistant," What became of him there is nothing in the documents to show.

Finlay Fisher opened a school about 1778, and from his own statement, it was well attended and flourishing. In his memorial, dated 5th June, 1783, he applied for a share of the grant made to Christie (of whom some account is given in connec-

It was not till the 1st of November, 1785, that effect was given to his petition, the first warrant for the increased amount being dated on the 1st of May, 1786, for the salary for the preceding six months. (Warrants, 1786, Vol. I, p. 77). In a paper on the "State of Religion" it is stated that the £25 forfeited by Christie was given for a schoolmaster to the Indians on the Grand River, but the evidence of the warrants is incontestable, that the £25 for an Indian school must have been drawn from some other source, as Fisher received for many years after the date of the paper the additional salary granted to him when Christie lost it by his misconduct.

An undated memorial prays for the appointment of the Rev. John Doty to the office of schoolmaster in Montreal, but as he was, about the probable date of the memorial and for a number of years afterwards Protestant Minister at Sorel, it is evident that he did not enter on the situation.

The earliest teacher in Montreal of whose life there is any definite information was the Rev. John Stuart, afterwards first Anglican clergyman at Cataraqui, now Kingston. He was born in the Province of Virginia, in 1736, according to Hawkins; Sabine says 1740, and was ordained in England, returning in 1770 to Philadelphia, from which place he was sent to the Mohawk Valley as an Indian missionary. At the breaking out of the American Revolutionary War, he was put under arrest for his loyalty, as is shown by a letter from Schenectady dated the 29th November, 1780, to Sir John Johnson, in which he says that having been a prisoner on parole for two years, he had at last obtained permission to be exchanged for Mr. Gordon, of Ball's Town, so that he might proceed to the British Provinces. The exchange was not effected, and on the 16th April of the following year he was still at Schenectady, and to him and three other principal men of that place Sir John Johnson looked for intelligence of the enemy's movements, in room of "Hudibras," who had been betrayed by one Hewson, a volunteer with Joseph Brant, who deserted from Fort Stanwix and gave information at Albany against the Loyalists. Haldimand had on the 12th of April suggested Mr. Stuart's name, but did not know how far his situation with the people might favour his obtaining intelligence, "but at any rate, he may collect all the different rebel newspapers in a box, and have a certain place agreed upon, suppose a hollow tree, to deposit them."

On the 30th of July, 1784, Haldimand wrote to Sir John Johnson that he could not think of exchanging Mr. Gordon for Mr. Stuart, and pointed out how useful the latter might be in the revolted Provinces, although at a sacrifice of his own personal comfort.

In the following October he was, however, in Canada, and opened an academy in Montreal for youth, in conjunction with Mr. Christie. In acknowledging receipt of the advertisement, Haldimand offered to give every encouragement to so laudable an undertaking, and appropriated towards that object part of the bounty allowed by Government, adding, "Your advertisement will be published to-morrow, but I directed the words 'principally intended for the children of Protestants' to be left-out, as it is a distinction which could not fail to create jealousies, at all times improper, but more particularly so at present." He desired him also to receive all classes with the same readiness.

With this injunction Mr. Stuart promised to comply, and said that, in fact, he had already done so, having admitted every person that offered, Protestants, Catholics, Jews, &c., and that no distinction would be made on the score of religious sentitiment or on any other ground.

Unfortunately for the success of the school, the assistant, according to the report made to Haldimand on the 27th November, 1782, was incapable of teaching even the lowest branches. He knew nothing of the classics, which Mr. Stuart was himself to teach, but he professed to be a perfect master of all the practical branches of mathematics, arithmetic, &c., yet could not solve the first rules, and knew nothing even of the most ordinary English subjects. The report with great simplicity says: "I could have dispensed with his ignorance of the English language and faulty accent, but when I found him unacquainted with the rules of common arithmetic, and often obliged to apply to me (in the presence of the pupils) for the solution of the most simple questions, I could no longer doubt of his inefficiency," The consequence was a separation and the engagement of a new assistant. The old school room was left to Christie, who did not keep his scholars long, and left the Province shortly after the separation, as is stated in a memorial by Finlay Fisher, dated 1783. At the date of the report the attendance at Mr. Stuart's school was 44, with a prospect of increase. The warrants show that the Government allowance to him was £50 sterling a year, continued until he left to become chaplain at Cataraqui. This was one half of the full amount, the other half being divided between Christic and Finlay Fisher.

The great desire of Mr. Stuart appears to have been to settle at Cataraqui, and in February 1784, he wrote twice to Major Mathews, pressing his request. In April he had engaged a substitute to take charge of his school during the time he proposed to be absent. In July he reported that he had visited Cataraqui, where he obtained a lot within a mile of the barracks, and had spent some time among the Indians. The society had left to himself the choice of the place of his future residence, but had reduced the salary he had received as missionary to the Mohawks from £70 to £50 for the new station, and he asked if he was to obtain the office of Chaplain at Cataraqui. In 1786, says Sabine, he opened a school at Kingston, which agrees with the indications afforded by the warrants, the last of which, for his salary as schoolmaster in Montreal, is for the six months from the 1st of November, 1785, to the 30th April, 1786, for £25, equal to £50 a year; the first for his salary "as Minister of the Church of England at Cataraqui" for the six months beginning on the 1st of May, 1786, and ending on the 31st of October, for £50, being double the salary as schoolmaster. It is unnecessary to follow Mr. Stuart farther, as he ceased from this time to have any connection with the work of education in Montreal,

In volume B 220 is a collection of documents relating to the movement for the introduction of French priests into the Province. In June, 1783, a very numerously signed petition that presented to Haldimand by Messrs. Mezières and Delisle, praying that two French priests tately arrived might be allowed to remain in the country to perform religious service and to assist in the work of education, &c. The answer on the 24th of June was conciliatory in tone, but explicitly stated that the orders to send the two French priests back to France were given on public grounds alone, and referring to Mgr. Montgolfier and the priests of the Seminary for evidence of the good will Haldimand had always shown to them. The correspondence, which will be easily found in the calendar of B 220, may be referred to by those interested in the subject. Other correspondence on the same subject is in B 185-2 beginning at page 403.

That the refusal was due to political causes and to the stringent orders Haldimand had received from the Ministry does not seem to be doubtful. His consideration and kindness to the nuns at Montreal and Quebec, and his readiness to relieve them of the burden of taxation, are evident from the answers to the memorials for relief from taxes prayed for by the nuns of the General Hospitals of Quebec and Montreal, as well as from the ladies of the Congregation. The memorials and answers will be found in B 219, p. 9, and in B 223, pp. 167 to 188. The answer to the application of the nuns of the General Hospital of Montreal is substantially the same as those given to the other similar applications. It is dated the 29th January, 1781. "Wishing to recompense the good services which the religious ladies of the General Hospital of Montreal have rendered, and daily render, to the public by the asylum which their house gives to the infirm and poor of both sexes as well as to foundlings -we by these presents (in the name of the King) make a gift and remission of the droit d'amortissement, which is due to His Majesty for the acquisition which the said religious ladies of the General Hospital have made of the Seigniory of Chateauguay mentioned in the present petition."

In 1784 a census was taken of the population of the three Governments—Quebec, Three Rivers and Montreal—in addition to which Bishop Briand supplied a list of the parishes, curés, revenues, &c., in his diocese, and Mr. François Baby, Adjutant General of Militia, furnished a general enumeration of the ecclesiastics and religious communities. The general census will be found in volume B 225-2 in detail; only the summary of it is here published, but the other tables are given as they appear in the volume. The complete census of the three Governments in the volume mentioned will be found for Montreal at page 386, Three Rivers, 389, and Quebec, 390. A census of Indians (p. 393) taken in 1783, is also given, the whole, as well as the ecclesiastical tables and the militia returns, will be found at note B , together with a memorandum on the state of religion in the Province in 1790, having a very complete statement attached, showing by districts the number of clergy, schools, scholars, Catholic and Protestant, &c., in the Province at that date. The notes to the census are not repeated in the tables as printed here.

No remarks are necessary on the volumes—B. 226, 227, 228 or 229. There are three volumes (B. 230 to B. 232), containing Haldimand's diary, which is given in full. The entries were made irregularly, sometimes in one of the books, sometimes in another, so that it has been difficult to arrange them in exact chronological order. The attempt to do this has not been absolutely successful, except where public events could be made use of as a guide, although no very important error will be found, and notes have been made where the dates cannot be positively established. The determination to publish the diary in full was not arrived at without serious consideration, so much of it deals with the busy occupations of an idle man, dining, visiting, eard playing, &c. It was, however, felt that the character of a man who filled the office of Governor and Commander-in-Chief at so critical a period of the history of Canada, and whose conduct in that position has been so sharply criticised, might be more justly estimated, whether the judgment be favourable or unfavourable, by giving the diary complete, rather than by making extracts which might not unreasonably be suspected to have been chosen for reasons, consciously or unconsciously, biased by prejudice, either in favour of or against the writer. The diary, which is in French, has been printed exactly as it was written, so far as can be made out. It should be remarked, however, that whilst many of the errors in spelling, &c., may have arisen from carelessness in hastily writing the entries, the writing is so small and difficult to read that it is not impossible errors may have been committed in copying, in spite of the utmost care. In many cases the proper names are given in most eccentric forms, some no doubt from being imperfectly heard when introductions took place. Every care has been taken to identify the persons meant and the conjectural names have been added in brackets.

I have, according to the rule I have usually observed in the reports, made a translation, so as to be of service to those whose knowledge of French is imperfect.

In the course of publishing the calendar, inquiries have been made respecting a certain General Budé, whose letters were evidence that he held a position near the person of the King. The diary shows that he was an intimate friend and counsellor of Haldimand, with whom he was in constant association. Budé was a native of the Pays de Vaud, who was at one time page to the Prince of Orange, and afterwards held a commission in the Sardinian service. When it became necessary to select a tutor or governor for Prince William Henry (afterwards William IV), Salzas, who had been assistant to Lord Holderness, Governor to the Prince of Wales and Prince Frederick, and had secured by his conduct in that capacity the King's confidence, was consulted by His Majesty on the subject of the selection. Salzas recommended Budé, who became a permanent resident in the Royal household, and was made a General in the Hanoverian service. He was afterwards appointed private secretary to the Duke of York, and died at Windsor on the 30th October, 1818, at the age of 82. He is highly spoken of as a man of great attainments, honour and prudence.

Salzas, in whom George the Third and the Queen took a lively interest, as is shown by the diary, was a native of Switzerland, was a tutor in Holland and became private secretary to Lord Holderness and then deputy governor to the Prince, as already stated. (Life of William IV, p. 17.)

Whilst a large space is occupied with the most frivolous details of dining and visiting, yet glimpses are to be had of the men by whom the history of Canada under British rule was first moulded. The character of Amherst does not appear in a very favourable light, he being represented as self-seeking and regardless of the interests of those whom he sought to make useful to himself. Some of the entries show Carleton's necessities, which compelled him to secure all the advantages possible from his position as Governor General of Canada; others indicate Clinton's extravagance; others the doubtful character of Chief Justice Smith and the undue influence he exercised over Carleton; others again the intrigues for place and honours not dwelt on, yet clearly shown. At page 213 of the diary, as printed in this report, is a curious contribution to the history of the Yorktown capitulation, a strike among the carpenters in New York having delayed for a fortnight the departure of the fleet intended to co-operate with Cornwallis. These and other details may be found useful in the study of public events. Haldimand's kindness towards his relations, his generosity to the young officers of his battalion and others, and the hospitality he extended to all Canadians arriving in London are shown very clearly in the diary, in a matter-of-fact way, and cannot be disregarded should his biography ever be written.

One entry shows the little control King George III had over his family, who behaved with great rudeness whenever the restraint of their mother's presence was removed, the influence the Queen possessed over her unruly children being plainly indicated. The fondness of both King and Queen for social gossip has brought out the story of Lord Heathfield's proposed second marriage, not noticed by any of his biographers. Lord Heathfield, better known as General Elliott, for three years defended Gibraltar against the combined attack of France and Spain, with a handful of men. As one of his biographers says: "All the eyes of Europe were upon his conduct, and his final triumph was universally allowed to be among the most brilliant military transactions of modern times." Singularly enough, the date of his birth was unknown to his biographers. One of them says he was born about the year 1718; the others give the year (1718), but without further particularizing. His own statement to Haldimand leaves no doubt on the subject; he was, he said, born on the 1st of January, 1718. Lord Heathfield was a man of the most abstemious habits, used no animal food, drank no wine and was satisfied with four hours sleep; but in his seventy-third year, after a shock of paralysis, he made up his mind to marry again, to the unconcealed amusement of the Court but to the great chagrin of his only son and of his relations. Before the marriage could take place, however, he died on the 6th of July, 1790, at Aix-la-Chapelle, on his way to Gibraltar.

Haldimand survived his friend Lord Heathfield only a few months, having died at Yverdun, in Switzerland, probably in the May following. The notice of his death in the Annual Register for 1791, is placed after those for June, and states that he had died lately. A certified copy of his will is among the Archives (Series M. G., Vol. 26, p. 59), dated 30th March, and entered at Doctor's Commons on the 21st of June, 1791. The following is a copy of the will:—

In the name of God Amen.

In the report on Archives for 1887, some remarks were made in relation to the negotiations with Vermont for re-union, the documents relating to these being among the Haldimand papers. Since the date of that report other State papers have been received, containing further correspondence on this subject. Extracts from this correspondence will be found in Note C, to which reference is made. Additional light is thrown on the policy of the leading men of Vermont, and it confirms in a remarkable degree the inference from the reports of the negotiations held with Justus Sherwood and Dr. Smyth, that, but for the capitulation of Cornwallis at Yorktown, Vermont would have resumed her allegiance to the Crown.

The calendar of the "Bouquet Collection" has been begun and finished in this report. It may be briefly stated that Bouquet was a native of Switzerland, and served in the Dutch and Sardinian armies. He and Haldimand were in 1754 selected to raise men for the "Royal Americans," a corps intended for the British service in America, the officers of which were to be either American or foreign Protestants. (This corps was afterwards known as the 60th Rifles). Bouquet was actively employed in America during the last years of the war between France and Britain, and held a leading command in the contest with the Indians, including the period of the Pontiae War. He died in Pensacola, Western Florida, some time previous to the 4th of September, 1765, that being the date when the inventory of his effects was taken after his death. Unfortunately, by a fire at Captain Callender's house at Carlisle, Bouquet's public papers and receipts down to July, 1759, as well as his baggage and private papers were destroyed, so that the correspondence is not complete.

By his will, made in July, 1763, he directed that his executor, Thomas Willing, should burn all his papers that had no connection with the public affairs in which he had been concerned (A 23-2 p 270), but his last will, made in April, 1765, has no direction of this kind, and Colonel (afterwards General) Haldimand was appointed his heir and executor (A 30, p. 22). Although much of the private correspondence has thus evidently been lost, what has been preserved and the public documents show Eouquet to have been possessed of considerable natural abilities, carefully trained. A thorough soldier, he was keen in perception and prompt in execution; kindly in his intercourse with his officers, yet quick to eneck any approach to undue familiarity, or want of respect, a power he seldom required, however, to exert. Like every good leader, whilst able to understand the general bearings of the situation of affairs, he made himself fully acquainted with the minute details, the want of attention to which has so often proved fatal in military movements.

A very cursory examination of the correspondence will show that it was to him the Generals, under whom he successively served, looked for the execution of the plans laid down for the campaigns in which he took part, and that these plans were largely due to his advice and suggestions.

In Parkman's "Montcalm and Wolfe," an account is given of Bouquet's services in 1758 (Vol II, Chap. XXII); and a graphic description of the battle of Bushy Run, or rather Edge Hill, in 1763, is in "The Conspiracy of Pontiac" (Vol II, Chap. XX.) The story is told in Mr. Parkman's felic tous style and forms a striking picture. The letters of the 5th and 6th of August, containing the report of the two day's fighting, written by Bouquet to Sir Jeff. Amherst, are published in an Appendix to the work last cited. An account of the battle, which excited great attention, is in the Annual Register for 1763, beginning at page 24, but several important details are wanting. An admirably clear account of the Indian contests is furnished by Dr. F. W. Poole, in the "Narrative and Critical History," Vol. VI, Chapter IX, with a portrait of Bouquet and other illustrations, and a copious list of authorities. With all the accounts of this action, it might be considered unnecessary to do more than refer to it here as part of Bouquet's history. But the correspondence previous to the relief of Fort Pitt, in the course of which he had the two days' fighting at Edge Hill, and that subsequent to the defeat of the Indians, have never been published, although of importance, in view of the difficulties thrown in the way of the British commanders,

The two letters already published by Parkman cannot be omitted in the series given at Note D. without injury. The casualty return is supplied from the Colonial Office Records (A & W. I. 98-2 p. 382). It does not accompany the letter contained in the "Bouquet Collection."

The correspondence in this note gives clear evidence of the state of feeling in the Colonies on the subject of raising troops in their own defence. In "Montcalm and Wolfe," (Chapter V, p. 137), is a striking account of the efforts of Dinwiddie, lieutenant Governor of Virginia, to obtain troops from the Colonies to co-operate with the British regulars in the campaigns against the French, and the little success he met with. The Governors of the different Provinces could do nothing with the Assemblies, with whom most of them had some standing dispute or other. Then the Colonies could come to no common agreement for mutual defence. "As the lands invaded by the French," says Mr. Parkman, whose own words I prefer to give rather than to condense the statement, "belonged to one of the two rival claimants, Virginia and Pennsylvania, the other colonies had no mind to vote money to defend them. Pennsylvania herself refused to move. Hamilton, her Governor, could do nothing against the placid obstinacy of the Quaker non-combatants and the stolid obstinacy of the German farmers, who chiefly made up the Assembly * * * * With men abundant and willing, there were no means to put them into the field, and no commander whom they would all obey." (Montcalm and Wolfe, Vol. I, p. 141, 142).

This was whilst the contest was in progress to decide whether France or Great Britain and her colonies should secure control of the northern part of this continent. After that had been decided, the colonists were free from dread of attacks by the French, but the scourge of an Indian war still compelled a large part of the population to trust to the British troops to defend their lands and protect their lives. The ill feeling of the Assemblies towards the Governors of the Provinces has been almost the sole cause assigned for the refusal to raise troops, either to assist in offensive operations against the French or the defensive and offensive measures necessary to meet the barbarous warfare of the Indians. The correspondence in the "Bouquet Collection" shows, however, that the spirit of resistance to the slightest exercise of a controlling power by the British Government was much deeper and more widespread, and this spirit was evidently not a new development from any recent, real or supposed, encroachment on Provincial rights. After the Treaty of Paris of 1763, one of the chief causes assigned for the outburst of this feeling, especially in Virginia, and in Pennsylvania, was the prohibition of the King to the settlement on the lands secured to the Indians by the Treaty of 1758, and reserved for their use, a reservation repeated in the proclamation of 1763, following upon the Treaty of Paris. Of the correctness of this statement, there does not appear to be any dispute on the part of those who have treated of this particular phase of the question of colonial independence, but it has been represented that the reservation of Indian lands was the cause of the irritation, and the blame for what was inevitable from the predisposition of the colonists, has been laid on the policy of the British Government, as formulated in the report by the Board of Trade. That report recommended the enforcement of the Indian treaties, and as a consequence the preservation of the fur trade, a collateral advantage arising from the honest fulfilment of engagements. discussion of the policy of preserving the occupation of those lands by the Indians, Dr. Poole says, in the work already referred to ("Narrative and Critical History," Vol. VI, p. 688):

"Such in clear and specific terms was the cold and selfish policy which the British Crown and its Ministers habitually pursued towards the American colonies; and in a few years it changed loyalty into hate, and brought on the American Revolution."

A careful study of the notes which accompany Dr. Poole's valuable contribution, the facts being carefully stated and supported by authorities, would seem to lead to a different conclusion, and tend to modify the opinions generally expressed in the United States on the Indian policy of the British Government.

A marked change is, in fact, taking place in the views of historical writers in the United States on the subject of the causes that led to the revolt of the Colonies and the subsequent revolution. The juxtaposition of passages from an Eastern and Western author will most strikingly exhibit the nature of the change:

"There is no general assertion which comes nearer to the truth on this subject" (the sentiment of independence) "than that, from the first colonization of America by the English, the spirit of independence was latent here, and was in a steady process of natural development."* "The Treaty of Paris may be said to have laid the corner stone of American independence. It lifted the cloud of terror which had so long overhung the great wall of the Alleghanies. The colonists no longer felt that they needed England's protecting arm to secure them from the French." "

The complaints of the commanding officers in the two periods, those immediately preceding and those immediately succeeding the close of the French war in 1760, show a marked similarity in regard to the treatment of the British troops, who were fighting for the benefit of the Colonies as much as for the interests of the Empire at large. It is unnecessary to refer in detail to these complaints, but some may be briefly indicated, as found in Bouquet's correspondence.

In 1757, then, it appears by that correspondence, that neither money was voted nor men supplied, except in the most grudging manner, by the Provincial Assemblies over whose limits Bouquet's command extended; that extortionate prices were charged for all supplies furnished to the army, and for every article sold to the private soldier; that an import duty was laid on the provisions required to feed the troops employed to defend the country and the lives of the inhabitants; that the colonists, whilst pleased to have troops to defend them, made no difference between a soldier and a negro; that the want of quarters caused epidemics of sickness, which reduced the troops to one-third of their nominal strength, the only Province excepted being Georgia, of which it is stated that though poor, it had done well. In 1758 no change for the better appears to have been made. Carolina sent a regiment naked, a strong term, no doubt, but the men must have been miserably clad, as they could only be exercised on a fine day. This state of feeling prevailed to the close of the French war and before any serious question had arisen regarding restrictions on the settlement of Indian lands. The reports of the conduct of the Provincial troops, the good conduct of some, the constant desertion of others, are to be found in the calendar.

To the same indication of the contents of the correspondence must be referred those who desire to investigate the course pursued by the Colonies during the Indian warfare, which was continued with increased violence after the close of actual hostilities with the French on this continent, as the calendar, gives a very full abstract of the correspondence and other documents. The letters at Note D give a glimpse of the obstacles in the way of the British commanders, but the documents in the collection from 1761 to 1764 must be read very carefully by those who desire to possess a thorough knowledge of the events connected with that period of terror in the settlements, and of the extent and magnitude of the confederation formed by the Indians, as a last general stand against their subjection to the whites. At Note E is a correspondence respecting Indian lands; the proposals in 1760 for their settlement; the proclamation by Bouquet in 1761, prohibiting hunting or settling on them by unauthorized persons; the correspondence with Governor Fauquier and General Amherst on the subject; and, to complete the documents on that head, the Royal Proclamation of 1763, so far as it relates to these lands.

It is one of the advantages of such collections as those made by Bouquet and Haldimand, that it is possible to ascertain the real characters of the men, not merely their public acts and utterances. In the course of Bouquet's correspondence frequent references are made to a family named Willing living in Philadelphia, one of whom became a partisan leader in the Revolutionary War. It is apparent that if there was not a formal there was an understood engagement between Bouquet and one of the young ladies. Mr. Lunan, a gossiping correspondent, constantly speaks of the family, in such a tone as makes it evident that the engagement was generally believed. It was naturally, therefore, a shock to Bouquet to receive news of the marriage of Miss Willing, which Lunan, dreading the effect, dared not communicate plainly himself, but employed Captain Ourry, an intimate friend as well as brother officer of Bouquet, to do so. In a letter of the 12th February, 1762, Ourry gives the information, which he says Lunan considered too disagreeable to do, of the marriage of Miss Willing to Mr. Frances, a gentleman of fortune, who had arrived only the previous October from London. On the 6th of March following he again writes urging Bouquet to throw off the melancholy into which he had fallen; and advising him to double his exercise, &c. "But," he says, "I observe that instead of that, you run full drive into the lion's mouth, by indulging a melancholy solitude, You are I hope sensible by my last, that I do not make light of your disaster and am far from feeling merry upon it, for no one can condole more sincerely upon the occasion than your sympathising friend," &c. (A 12-1 p 311).

Ourry writes again, this time in French on the 10th of March, a long letter, of which the opening paragraph sufficiently shows how much the disappointment preyed on Bouquet's mind, "I have read, my dear friend," says Ourry, "and re-read attentively your sad letter of the 1st, and am deeply touched with your condition. I see that your mind, agitated like the sea after a violent shock of earthquake, has not regained its tranquillity. I had only too well foreseen the fatal effect of this sudden event. Would to God I could also have prevented it!" * (B 12—2 p 314).

After reminding Bouquet that in writing to announce the marriage, he had done so in such a manner as to open the flood gates of passion that it might be the sooner exhausted, Ourry continues: "I am moved by the touching recital of your painful situation, and I conjure you by all you hold dearest and most sacred not to let yourself drift at the mercy of a passion which possesses you and which will soon deprive you, if you do not take care, of the means still remaining to you to overcome it." † (A 12—2 p 314). The letter is full of good sense and true friendship.

It was after Lunan had give him a vague notification of the approaching change in the Willing family, that Bouquet wrote the following letter, in answer to the charge that two words in a letter to Mr. Willing were undecypherable. Lunan's letter is dated the 18th of January, the answer is in February, the day not given. It is published to show the mastery Bouquet had gained of the English language, and his thorough familiarity with its idioms, as well as the genial style of the correspondence he held with his intimate acquaintances, reserving for his friends the deeper thoughts of his heart:—

FORT PITT, Feb., 1762.

Are you not ashamed Lunan to raise a dust and crow over two miserable words you happened to stumble upon in one of my letters, while I am obliged to keep a man here at high wages to decypher your hieroglyphics, and lose whole lines after all.

Should you not have remembered the precept,—not to behold the mote in your brother's eye, while there is a beam in your own.

See now to what trouble you have put me to confute you! I had to run to the Arabs, for their art of guessing at obscure characters; to the Egyptians for a proper name to those unintelligible † † † which you impose upon me for letters or words, and at last to the Scriptures, to make you blush at your presumption.

Instead of bringing this first confusion upon yourself, would not your time have been better employed in ruminating sedately upon the wholesome advice I had given you To Marky. Don't you see the girls disappear one after another, as the stars below the horizon? And will you never consider that old age is at hand, ready to invade you with all his comfortless train?

Who but an affectionate wife will then bear the grating sound of a threatening old cough and the deadlier repetition of older tales?

Who will be your faithful attendant in sickness? Who can handle your gouty leg and rub your rheumatic arm with a gentler hand? And who, saving you from the rapacious clutches of disaffected servants, will take the load of your domestic cares and make your home agreeable to yourself and your friends.

Who shall be the most sacred depository of your most secret thoughts; the kind partaker of your joys and sorrows? Who your friend, your counsellor, your guide, but the wife of your bosom?

Think of that Master Brooke, and before the heavy hand of Time engrave deeper furrows on your blooming cheeks, improve the present day, for to-morrow it may be too late.

[†] Je suis attendri du recit touchant que vous me faites de votre situation douloureuse, et je vous conjure par ce que vous tenez de plus cher et de plus sacré, de ne vous pas laisser aller à la merci d'une passion qui vous mêne, et qui vous privera bientôt, si vous n'y prenez garde, des moyens qui vous restent encore pour la dompter."

After having (so long ago) resisted the strong impulse of Nature, and ever since the more powerful attractions of a seducing eye: Ah Lunan! will you yet be deaf to the persuasive voice of reason, and repenting too late, die at last a forlorn batchelor?

For my own part, if I live to see more propitious skies, I swear by the dear remembrance of my former loves that the first and sole business of my life shall now be to exchange that ill-fated title for the endearing name of Husband.

In the meantime, I remain my good friend,

Your very anxious humble servant,

II. BOUQUET.

It will be seen how different is the tone of this fetter from those written to his friend Ourry. It is impossible to tell whether, when it was written, Bouquet had more than the hint given in Lunan's letter of the approaching change in Mr. Willing's family, that is, Miss Willing's marriage. Although enough was said to alarm him, no trace of apprehension on that point is in the letter, yet there can scarcely be a doubt that rumours had reached him to which Lunan's reference gave body, and, it so, considering how deeply he felt, it is but another proof of how little can be discovered of a man's real state of feeling from his letters to acquaintances, however, intimate these may be.

A series of "the Writings of Washington," edited by Mr. Worthington Chauncey Ford, is in course of publication, part of his letters to Bouquet being in the second volume. Additional letters to those published will be found in Volume II of series A of the Archives. These letters may be studied with advantage. Besides those from Washington to Bouquet there are some from the latter in answer. The volume is calendared in its numerical order.

The journal of Laverendrye already referred to, is at Note A, with a translation. It is scarcely necessary to say much of the explorer, whose name and the general account of his explorations are well known to the students of the history of Canada under French rule. A brief sketch may, however, be useful. Laverendrye was the son of the seignior of Varennes, who filled the office of Governor of Three Rivers for twenty-two years. He served in the army first here and then in Europe, whence he returned, and in 1728 was in command of the post on Lake Nipigon. Here he formed the plan of exploring the country to the North-West, which was approved of by Beauharnois, the Governor, and in 1731 he left Montreal on his first journey, which he undertook as a trading expedition, the French Ministry refusing to contribute towards the expenditure.

In a statement of his services and sufferings, which Laverendrye presented to the Minister of Marine, dated the 31st of October, 1744, published in Margry's Collection of Documents, (beginning at page 581 of Volume VI), a short account is given of his journeys up to that date, in which the expedition of 1738-39, of which the document at Note A is the journal, is mentioned, but the journal itself has never been published. In Garneau's History (edition of 1882-3, pp. 125 et sequ), a summary account is given of Laverendrye, to which reference may be made.

Laverendrye's account of the massacre of his son and his party in 1736, which is referred to in the journal now published, is given in his memorial to the Minister

3, which Minister of Marine. Two of his sons with two men had been sent to Fort Maurepas to act as a guard and to wait his arrival, but returned unexpectedly on the 4th of June, bringing news of the death of his nephew La Jemernye and of the scarcity of food.

"I had" he says, "many people in the Fort (Saint Charles) and no provisions, which determined me to send in haste three cances to bring us assistance and some goods. The Reverend Father (Auneau) immediately resolved to go to Michillimakinak. He asked me for my eldest son, as he hoped the journey would be speedy. I could not possibly oppose him, he being absolutely resolved. They embarked on the 8th of June, and were all massacred by the Sioux at seven leagues from our fort, by the greatest of all treasons. I lost my son, the Reverend Father and all my Frenchmen; I shall regret it all my life." (Margry, vol. VI, p. 589).

These were the risks to be run by the early explorers of those regions. After the death of Laverendrye in 1749, the work was undertaken by Le Gardeur St. Pierre, the journal of whose expedition from 1750 to 1752 was published in the report on Archives for 1886.

Forty years after the death of Laverendrye (1789), and again in 1793. Sir Alexander Mackenzie made an exploration of the country. In the first he reached the North or Frozen Ocean and in the second, the North Pacific. An account of his expedition was published in 1801, with the title "Voyages from the River St. Lawrence through the Continent of America to the Frozen and Pacific Oceans in the years 1789 and 1793." As the volume may be easily found, it is unnecessary to do more than refer to it. His remarks on the consequences flowing from the certainty that the North-East or North-West Passage from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, so long sought for, had no practical existence, may be quoted, his most sanguine expectations of the benefits to be derived from a passage across the continent being far exceeded by the facilities now afforded by railway communication. At page 497 of the quarto edition of 1801 Sir Alexander says, "The non-existence of any such practical passage being at length determined, the practicability of a passage through the continents of Asia and America becomes an object of consideration. The Russians who first discovered that along the coasts of Asia no useful or regular navigation existed, opened an interior communication by rivers, &c., and through that long and wideextended continent, to the strait that separates Asia from America, over which they passed to the adjacent islands and continent of the latter. Our situation, at length, is in some degree similar to theirs, the non-existence of a practical passage by sea, and the existence of one through the continent, are clearly proven, and it requires only the countenance and support of the British Government to increase in a very ample proportion this national advantage, to secure the trade of that country to its subjects."

The search for a North-West or North-East passage had been continued for many years, the Russians having contributed largely to the prosecution of this object. Jeffery, in a translation of Muller's account of Russian discoveries, puts that work in an accessible form, it having been written in High Dutch. The translation was published in London in 1761, a thin quarto with maps. That Sir Alexander Mackenzie's voyage did not settle the question is a matter of notoricty, other expeditions having been subsequently sent out to continue the search for a North West, passage.

An account of Vancouver's voyage in 1790, continued down to 1795, principally, as the title states, "with a view to ascertain the existence of any navigable communication between the North Pacific and North Atlantic Oceans," was published after the death of Vancouver (London 4to, 1798), in three volumes; an octave edition was published in 1801-2 and a French translation in 1799. Nothing more than a reference is needed to these volumes. The correspondence urging on the British Government the sending such an expedition has never been published. It is given in this report as part of Note A, and is the more interesting to Canadians as containing the views of men holding positions in Canada respecting the most efficacious means of conducting the explorations proposed. What these were may be found in the correspondence itself.

The reference to the anticipated war with Spain made in the entry in Haldimand's diary of the 5th May, 1790, may justify a short sketch of the state of affairs leading to this, as well as to the proposal for the expedition.

The Spaniards laid claim to all the lands on the Northern Pacific up to the borders of the Russian establishments, and in accordance with this claim they had the coasts watched by ships of war to prevent encroachments or settlements. In what is described as the usual tour of the coast of California by the Spanish ships. British vessels were discovered and seized at Nootk a Sound, on the ground that by right of discovery, previous and subsequent to 1774, the coasts had been taken possession of by Spain, the form of taking possession being more particularly repeated in 1775 and 1779, all along the coasts as far as Prince William's Sound. In appealing to France in terms of the Family Compact of 1761, for armed assistance in the war then apparently imminent between Spain and Great Britain, the Spanish Ambassador on the 16th June 1790, represented to the Court of France as an undoubted fact, that by treaties and for other reasons stated, all the coast to the north of Western America on the side of the South Sea, as far as beyond what is called Prince William's Sound, which is in the 61st degree, was acknowledged to belong exclusively to Spain. and for that reason was due the detention, a word used instead of seizure, of the two British vessels seized in the Bay of St. Lawrence, or Nootka, situated in the 50th degree to the north of California.

These pretentions were not acknowledged by the British. A company had been formed in 1786, of merchants residing in the East Indies, to open a trade with the North-West coast of America for supplying the Chinese market with furs and ginseng. Two vessels were that year fitted out and placed under the command of Lieut, Mears. During the winter of 1786-87 he remained in Prince William's Sound, and in the autumn of 1787, he carried a cargo of furs to China. In subsequent voyages he obtained land at Nootka Sound, and from different chiefs the promise of an exclusive right to trade along the coast. Having associated with another firm, trading with the same object, an agent was directed to fix his residence in Nootka Sound, to erect a house and prepare to carry on trade. Vessels loaded with stores and provisions, as well as articles for the trade, sufficient for three years, were dispatched from China in April and May of 1789. In addition to their crews, they had on board artificers and nearly 70 Chinese, who were to settle on the American coast in the service and under the protection of the associated company. Previous to their arrival, other vessels left on the coast and trading from Nootka Sound were seized reipally, by the Spaniards, a fate which befell the "Argonaut" from China, which arrived off commu-Nootka Sound on the 3rd of July. Representations being made to the British Govred after ernment a demand was sent to Spain for restitution and for compensatio, which edition was granted shortly after negotiations had opened. As printed materials to trace e than a the course of the events connected with the seizure and restitution of these vessels British are to be found, it is not necessary to enter into minute details. The correspondence is given between the Courts of Britain and Spain is in the Annual Register for 1790, begincontain. ning at page 285, and the substance of a memorial from Lieut. Mears to the Right flencious Hon, W. W. Grenville (p. 285); the memorial itself, with accompanying documents, is among the Archives (series P, vol. 72, No. 4).

> It is interesting to note that the trade from the Pacific Coast to China, which is in process of development since the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway was in existence and actively carried on by means of sailing ships a hundred years ago, and at the same time the suggestion was made by Ogden in the letter now published, that that route might be used ro carry intelligence to the East Indies in time of war.

On the 24th of May, 1790, His Majesty sent a message to Parliament, that Spain was arming and that he had given orders to make such preparations as would put it in his power to act with vigour and effect in support of the honour of his Crown and the interests of his people and asking for means to take such measures and to make such augmentation of his forces as might eventually be necessary. The answer was an assurance that the most zealous and effective support would be given, Every preparation was made for war on both sides, and it seemed impossible that it could be averted, when on the 24th July, two months after the King's message to Parliament, peace was established, Spain having offered complete reparation. This sudden surrender on the part of Spain has been attributed entirely to the celerity with which the British fleet was fitted out, but probably the action of the National Assembly of France had as much to do with the pacific determination of the dispute as any other cause. On the 16th June Spain sent a categorial demand to France, for compliance with the terms of the treaty of 1761, known as the Family Compact, which stipulated for mutual assistance in time of war. The demand was couched in the most urgent terms, and asked that the measures to be taken should be active, clear and positive, as an indispensable preliminary to a successful negotiation. The answer was not long delayed. The National Assembly had taken the alarm before the demand had been made by Spain. In prospect of such a demand, the question was raised to determine in whom resided the power to declare peace or war, and a resolution was introduced that it should be vested in the National Assembly alone, Mirabeau proposed a middle course, but the revolutionary journals threatened a general massacre should the extreme proposal be rejected, and the power to declare peace and war was, without qualification, vested in the National Assembly. (Allison 1853, Vol. I, p. 329). Thus the Family Compact was destroyed, and Spain, deprived of her ally came to terms, as already stated, on the 24th July, 1790, the terms being embodied in a convention signed on the 28th of the following October, but in anticipation of the war, the Spaniards had been endeavouring to obtain the alliance of the Indians on the Mississippi to attack the British settlements (Series Q 50-1, pp. 30, 32). The Convention no doubt put a stop to these proceedings. By this agreement it was stipulated that, besides the reparation for the seizure of vessels, Great B. itain should have an equal right with Spain to the exercise of all commercial undertakings in those seas formerly reputed to belong only to Spain, and ships were sent to receive formally the restitution of the territories on which Spain had seized. It will thus be seen how direct is the interest Canada has in this question of the Nootka Sound seizures.

Peter Pond, on whose map Mr. Isaac Ogden relies (Note A, No. 3) was a fur trader, who in 1778 was entrusted with the disposal of Indian goods belonging to traders who had entered into partnership in the North-West trade. He settled for the winter of 1778-9 on the banks of the Elk River, which he erroneously called the Athabasca, and was very successful in his dealings with the Indians. A massacre of traders and the outbreak of small-pox ruined the fur trade, the only fortunate people being a party which had penetrated in 1780 to the northward and westward, as far as Lake La Rouge. Mr. Wadi .:, who was in charge of this party, and was subsequently murdered, is described by Sir Alexander Mackenzie as a Swiss gentleman of strict probity and known sobriety. Two sets of traders, of which Wadin's partners formed one, agreed to unite their goods, and Pond was appointed by the other set of traders to be joint representative with Wadin. He appears, from the cautious statements made by Sir Alexander, to have been a rough trader, and the two men could not agree. Sir Alexander says that about the end of 1780 or beginning of 1781 Wadin was shot in his own house, a crime for which Pond and a clerk of Wadin's, named Sieur, were tried for murder, but acquitted. "Nevertheless" says Sir Alexander, "their innocence was not so apparent as to extinguish the original suspicion."

The sworn statement of Joseph Fagniaut, described as a voyageur, taken before a magistrate in Montreal, fixes the date as the beginning of March, 1782. The deposition is a graphic account of the affair. About nine o'clock in the evening, Fagniaut left Mr. Wadin's, and ten minutes after, when seated in his own house, which was beside and touching that of Wadin, he heard two musket shots. He first sent a man to see what was wrong; then, on his report, went himself and found Wadin stretched on the floor beside his bed, his left leg broken and wounded from the knee downwards, two or three balls having passed through; these he found on the spot. While in the act of entering he saw Pond and Toussaint Sieur at the door, when Sieur asked Wadin if it was he who had killed him. Wadin answered: "Be off both of you, let me never see you again." (Allez-vous en tous les deux que je ne vous vois plus). He then became too faint from loss of blood to answer the questions put by Fagniaut, and died before it could be ascertained which had shot him--Pond or Sieur, or if both were equally guilty.

A motive for the murder is furnished by the fact of Pond and Wadin having come to blows a month before, and of a quarrel having taken place on the evening of the death, an hour before supper. (Archives, series B, vol. 219, p. 113).

The widow on the 29th of May, 1783, in a memorial to have the two men, Pond and Sieur, apprehended by the military officers commanding at the back posts, gives as the reason, "that from the great distance of country the civil power cannot exert itself for the purpose of apprehending and bringing the offenders to justice." (B 219, p. 123).

som stoo Pond, as stated by Mr. Dalrymple, was a native of the United States, and becoming dissatisfied with the trading company whom he served, returned there about the end of 1790, to seek employment. (Series Q., vol. 50-1 p. 1.)

A few words may be said of the writers of the documents published in Note A.

. George Dixon was the captain of the "Queen Charlotte," which made the voyage around the world in the years 1785 to 1788, along with the "King George," commanded by Captain Nathaniel Portlock, the account of which was published in London in 1789.

Isaac Ogden was, at the time he wrote to his father, acting clerk of the Crown. He was afterwards a judge of the Vice-Admiralty Court in Quebec.

Alexander Dalrymple was hydrographer to the East India Company, having been employed when a youth as a writer in the service, and placed in the secretary's office. In 1795 he was appointed hydrographer to the Admiralty. He was warmly interested in voyages of discovery.

Captain Holland was a son of Major Samuel Holland, for many years Surveyor-General in Canada.

In the report on Archives for 1886, documents and a plan were published respecting a canal, which had been constructed on the north side of the Sault Ste Marie, about 1797. The existence of this canal had been entirely forgotten, the only reference made to it being a casual mention in Harmon's Journal and one by Schooleraft, so that great doubts existed as to whether it was ever in actual use.

Judge Steere, of Sault Ste Marie, Michigan, having, on the statements in the report, called the attention to this subject of Mr. A. S. Wheeler, General Superintendent of the St. Mary's Falls Canal, Michigan, an examination was made by these two gentlemen on the spot, and the results communicated by Mr. Wheeler in a report to Colonel O. M. Poe, of the United States Engineers, at Detroit, a copy of which was kindly sent me, from which the following extracts are taken. It is to be observed that sketch No. 2, mentioned in Mr. Wheeler's report, is a reprint of the plan published in the report on Archives for 1886. The two sketches, Nos. 1 and 3 sent by Mr. Wheeler have been lithographed and published here for reference. After stating that Judge Steere had called his attention to the report, Mr. Wheeler says:

"He invited me to accompany him in a search for the ruins. I did so, and was present when they were found. The unusually low water of this season facilitated the search. Joseph Cozens, provincial land surveyor, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., felt much interested in the matter and furnished a gang of men who removed a portion of the earth, which covered and concealed the floor and foundation, all that remained of the structure. These were found to be in perfect condition; indeed, they could be used again for a similar purpose if necessary. Sketch No. 2 is a plan which accompanies a letter written by Messrs. Forsyth, Richardson & Co., and dated April 18, 1803. The gentlemen were former partners in the North-west Company, but were dissatisfied, and seeking to establish a new company. It will be observed that the canal is shown on this 'plan,' but not the lock. Sketch No. 3 shows those parts of the floor, the foundation on which it rests, the lower ground-sill and the remains of some timbers shown at 'D,' 'E' and 'F,' the use of which is not exactly understood, but which probably served to connect the lock with its upper approach.

"The floor of the lock is forty feet long and eight feet nine inches in width. It is made of plank two inches thick running longitudinally. They are fastened to transverse foundation timbers with wooden pins shown at 'B.' There are thirteen planks, the seventh or middle one being narrower than the others. The lower transverse timber formed the sill for the gate. It is twelve inches square. On the top of this is pinned a piece of oak eight inches wide and four inches thick. It is probable that this piece was the cleat against which the lower edge of the gate rested when closed. There are mortises in each end of this timber shown at 'A.' These mortises, the countersinking and notch in the floor plank seem to indicate that vertical timbers fourteen inches square stood at these points.

"The remains of an old wharf were found at 'B,' Sketch 1. There are many large boulders along the shore and in the shallow water, but it was observed that all had been removed from in front of the lock, leaving a wide and safe entrance. At 'C' Sketch No. 1, were found old timbers imbedded in the earth on both sides of the stream. These timbers appear to be part of the foundation of a dam. The fall in the water from this point to the old lock is at present about seven feet. It is probable that the dam raised the water two feet, thus giving a lift to the lock of nine feet. The timber used seems to be spruce. There were some nails used about the structure, three or four of which were removed. They were hand-made and seemed to have been been cut from a square rod and headed by a blacksmith. The small stream between 'A' and 'C' Sketch No. 1, seems to be recent. It was probably caused by the dam at 'C' and did not exist until after the lock and its approach were destroyed. It is this stream, which carried down the material which covered and concealed the floor and foundations."

After quoting the description given by Captain Bruyères, R.E., of the canal, wharf, &c., at the establishment, taken from the report on Archives for 1886, p. xxix, Mr. Wheeler continues:

"It seems probable from this description and from the parts of the structure remaining, that the lock and its upper entrance, or leading trough, as it is called by Captain Bruyères, were both constructed of wood and in the manner of a flume, that is, the bottom and sides were of plank, the sides held in place by vertical timbers tied together at the top by horizontal cross pieces, which were high enough so that boats could pass under them. This theory is sustained by the fact that the transverse timbers still remaining under the floor of the lock have mortises in their ends for vertical timbers and by the further fact that there are no remains of earthworks or retaining walls on either side of the old lock, or its upper approach.

"The dotted lines from 'A' to 'C,' in Sketch No. 1, show the probable location of the approach or 'leading trough.' The canal mentioned by Bruyères is still very conspicuous. The 'pathway of the round logs' can yet be found in place."

Referring to the same report as to Franchère's visit in 1814 (Report 1886,

p. xxviii), Mr. Wheeler continues :

"No definite mention is here made of the lock, but it is almost certain that if it had been in existence at the time of the attack it would have been destroyed. Being built of wood and mostly above ground it could have been destroyed as easily as the buildings and sheds. This then indicates a limit to the duration of the lock. It was completed in 1798 and could not have existed after 1814. It is, however, quite possible that it was destroyed or abandoned before 1814, as no reference to it has been found later than 1803. Indeed, it is not certain that it was ever successfully used as a lock. It may have early been converted into a raceway for the saw mill, and this may explain why its existence as a lock has been so completely forgotten.

It is estimated that there were used in the entire structure 20,000 feet board measure of two inch plank and 5,000 feet running measure of hewn timber.

This report leaves no doubt of the existence of the lock, and the report of Capt, Bruyères would seem to establish the fact, doubted by Mr. Wheeler, that the lock was in successful operation up to that date-that is, September, 1802. Nothing being, however, clearly stated as to the use of the lock, although it is difficult to conceive how access could be obtained to the canal without it, the question becomes one of interpretation of documents. Thanks are due to Judge Steere and Mr. Wheeler for their courtesy in communicating the result of researches made in the interests of historical truth.

Before the time when this canal was built projects were entertained of opening up water communication by means of canals, which were not accomplished for many years after. This was the case, among others, with the Chambly Canal, which was proposed by Mr. Silas Deane, so far back as 1785, and as an introduction to the documents published in Note F, with the title: "Canal from Lake Champlain to the St. Lawrence," Lord Dorchester's letter to Lord Sydney, is here transcribed. The date is the 24th of October, 1787:

"My Lord,-

"A proposal was made to me by Mr. Sllas Deane, a few days before my departure from England, to cut a canal from Lake Champlain round the rapids of St. John, into the basin of Chambly, for the purpose of opening a navigation to that Lake from the River St. Lawrence of a certain burthen.

" As far as a cursory view of the country can justify an opinion, this object appears to be practicable and useful, both in a commercial and political view, provided the conditions of executing the same be not objectionable. I have therefore advised Mr. Deane to lay the particulars of his plan and proposal before your Lord. ship, that the same may be considered, and submitted to the King's pleasure.

" I am &c.

"DORCHESTER."

The Silas Deane, whose proposals are in Note F, was born in Groton, Connecticut, on the 24th December, 1737. He was a member of the first Continental Congress, on the outbreak of the American Revolution, and was sent as a secret political agent to France, to ascertain the views of the French Government and to obtain military supplies. He left Bermuda on the 24th of April, 1776, the vessel in which he had at first embarked in March having been obliged to return, reached Bordeaux on the 6th of June, and arrived in Paris early in July, "a stranger to the language as well as the customs and manners of the nation." He made the acquaintance shortly after of M. Beaumarchais, whose services to the revolted colonies are so well known to all who have studied the events of that period, that it is only necessary to refer to them. In November of the same year (1776) Deane was joined by Franklin in Paris; he, with Arthur Lee, having been sent by Congress to negotiate treaties with France, a work in which Deane took part. On the 4th of March, 1778, he received the order for his recall by Congress on charges made by Arthur Lee, against him, Benjamin Franklin and John Adams. (See "The Case of Silas Deane, published by the Seventy-Six Society, 1855. Gordon's History of the Rise, &c., of the United States, 1788, vol. ii, p. 372, vol. iii, pp. 38, 217, 218). After the peace (apparently about 1785) he went to England, and it was whilst there that the proposals contained in Note F were made. It will be seen by in atter to Nepean, dated 20th May, 1789, that he intended to sail for Quebee in June, but as he died on the 28th of August, it is clear that his intention was not carried out. He died at Deal, it is stated in poverty. In the last of his observations, he anticipated by many years a proposal which was renewed some time ago, but unsuccessfully, for the construction of what was then called the "Caughnawaga Canal,"

A similar proposal was made by Mr. Adam Lymburner in 1791. In order to facilitate the transit of goods from the States of New York and Vermont to be shipped at Quebec, he says:

"It would be necessary to cut a canal of about six miles from the top of the rapids of St. Therese to the basin of Chambly. I do not suppose it would require more than three or four locks, the canal to be seven feet deep and fourteen feet wide. Large boats would then be able to come from the further end of Lake Champlain to Quebec, without unloading, a distance of upwards of three hundred miles." (Q. 57-1, p. 61).

On this subject the following letter from Ira Allen, of Vermont, is of sufficient interest to justify its publication. The letter is addressed to the Duke of Portland.

Suffolk Street, No. 8 Charing Cross, 19th March, 1796.

My LORD.

I had the Honour of addressing to your Grace two memorials proposing to open a canal, and praying, in behalf of the State of Vermont, a sanction to navigate from Lake Champlain through the River St. Lawrence to the Atlantic Ocean, on which I feel the most anxious Hopes for your Grace's favourable Decision.

At a late Interview at your Grace's office Mr. King having expressed your Grace's Desire that all possible Information be obtained relative to this matter, particularly with respect to the advantages which may accrue to Great Britain from the execution of the measure proposed, I take leave therefore to subjoin to the Reasons already submitted in my said memorials to your Grace the following:-From the solid establishment of a wisely regulated commercial Intercourse between Great Britain and Vermont naturally productive of reciprocal Benefits, the Blessings of an immutable Peace will be assertained between the two Countries; under these happy circumstances Vermont tenacious and true to its own interests rather than hazzard its essential and most valued enjoyments by any concurrence whatever in Designs of hostile nature, must in all possible events feel insuperable Impulse to stand or fall in the faithful support of her Commerce with Great Britain, and in the Result the Commerce of Vermont instead of being carried on by the way of New York and Boston must naturally take its course through the Hands of British Merchants who also may avail themselves of the very peculiar and important advantage, in time of war, of shipping their goods to and from Canada secure from Capture, in the neutral Vessels of Vermont, and Government will be free to employ the ships of war, otherwise necessary for Convoys therein, on any other urgent service.

As to the apprehensions which I understand from Mr. King may possibly be suggested in opposition to the salutary measure proposed, viz. "That the laying open "the Canal and Navigation in question might tend to disseminate Republican Prin"ciples among his Majesty's Canadian Subjects," I have only to remark that so far from there being any Ground for such apprehension, it will, nay I am warranted to assert must, prove the most efficacious Remedy of any that may possibly be concerted for obviating all attempts of such Dissemination as well as wholly to frustrate their operation and effect,

With respect to the sufficient Powers and authorities, which Mr. King is pleased to represent to be vested in the Legislature and Government of Lower Canada, for accomplishing the object of my solicitations to your Grace I humbly submit to your Grace, that in the result of frequent communications with the late Governor

IRA ALLEN.

In August, after three month's absence on the Continent of Europe, Ira Allen again wrote to the Duke of Portland on the subject, pressing for an immediate decision, as he was preparing to leave for America, so soon as he had adjusted some mercantile transactions. (Archives, series Q, vol. 77, p. 339).

The tone of the letters is remarkable, and seems to indicate a continuance of the feeling of Vermont, tersely stated by Mr. E. J. Phelps in an article in the Nineteenth Century for February, 1888. Referring to the claims against the settlers on the New Hampshire and New York grants, Mr. Phelps says: "The Vermonters resisted these claims, set at defiance the legal process from the New York courts, and in defence of their lands maintained the independence of their State, under a constitution of their own, until 1791, when their titles having been conceded, they applied for admission, and were received into the Union."

In spite of the various representations of the commercial and political importance of the proposed canal, nothing was then done. After the close of the war of 1812, and in 1818 a bill was passed authorising a company to build a canal, but little practical work was done, although money was spent, until after the union of the two Provinces, when the canal was begun as a public work in 1844 and completed in 1849, sixty four years after the original proposal had been made by Mr. Deane. (See General Report of the Commissioner of Public Works for 1867).

The history of the Lachine Canal is much the same. In Mr. Lymburner's letter, quoted above, he also proposes that a canal should be built from Lachine to Montreal, a distance, he estimates, of about seven miles "that the boats bringing the produce of the upper settlements for exportation may proceed directly to Montreal. At present every thing going to or coming from these new settlements must be carted that distance, which will fall very heavy on the rude produce of the Lands." (Q. 57-1, p. 62).

It was not till 1815 that any steps were taken to construct the canal. Like the Chambly Canal, it was to be the work of a company, but that also had to be assumed by Government, which completed the work in August, 1824, the first vessel passing through in 1825.

On the 13th July, 1826, Colonel By, who was the officer in charge of the construction of the Rideau Canal, wrote to General Mann, of the Royal Engineers, proposing, for military and commercial purposes, the building of canals capable of passing steamers measuring 110 to 130 feet in length, from 40 to 50 feet wide and drawing 8 feet, besides deepening the north passage round the Island of Montreal, which, with the addition of one or two locks, would form one uninterrupted line of $6b-c\frac{1}{2}$

Colonel By's views respecting the effect of a canal to connect Lake Champlain with the Richelieu are identical with those of Lymburner in 1791. He says:

"By opening the Richelieu River in the same manner, to admit the steamboats entering Lake Champlain, would be the means of making the River St. Lawrence the great outlet for all the produce of that vast tract of land connected with the lake, notwithstanding the strong efforts the Americans are making to draw off this trade by cutting various canals."

Colonel By's estimate of the total cost was-for

he Welland Canal	C100 000
Ridon	. 2400,000
Rideau	400,000
Grenville	100,000
North side of the Island of Montreal	150,000
Richelieu	150,000

£1,200,000

By's letter (of 16 p ges) is among the Archives, series C, Vol. 42, p. 58, the correspondence in C 43, beginning at page 42. The decision come to by the Board of Ordnance on the report of Major General J. Carmichael Smyth being adverse to By's enlarged views, the canals were ordered to be constructed on the limited dimensions first determined on.

The whole respectfully submitted.

No. 1.—JOURNAL OF LAVERENDRYE, 1738-39.

(Translation)

Journal in the form of a letter, from the 20th of July, 1738, date of my departure from Michilimakinak, to May, 1739, sent to the Marquis de Beauharnois, Commander of the Military Order of St. Louis, Governor and Lieutenant General of the whole of New France, lands and country of Louisiana, by his very humble servant Laverendrye, lieutenant of a company of the detachment of the marine in Canada, commissioned by his orders for the discovery of the Western Sea.

I had the honour, Sir, last year to notify you of my departure from Michilimakinak in six canoes, twenty-two men, so fitted out as to be capable of making great speed. I reached the flat lands on the morning of the first of August, the twelfth day after leaving. I stopped there about three hours to speak to the Indians as your representative. I found there only the chief of the Gamanestigouya, a few old and a few young people. I had already known that they had all left to go among the Sioux. I caused to be assembled what men there were, made them a present of tobacco and wheat, which they value more than merchandise, which is given to them cheap. I began my speech by finding fault with them for going to war against the word they had given me last year when passing among them, to undertake nothing till my return; that I brought them your word that you were not for the present inclined to have war; that every one should keep quiet on his lands; that you had your reasons for this; you would have them warned it you required their services. I then communicated news about which they are very curious.

The chief answered me at once: My father, be not vexed with us; parties have been raised against our will. It is the Canard (Duck, Indian name of M. LaPlante) who wished it, to tell the truth, speaking with fine presents from our father, which thou seest here with us. We did not wish to listen, expecting thy return; we are not children to have two words; thou hast been long with us; thou shouldest know us; we have always been attached to our father; we shall always be so. I encouraged them in these good dispositions, to listen after this only to chiefs entrusted with your orders, to hunt well in order to supply the wants of their families, that the French would bring your bounty to them upon their own land. I bade them adiou, wishing to take advantage of the good weather for the rest of the day. I arrived on the 5th at Gamanestigouya. I had your orders published and left a copy with the French who keep the fort, concerning that post and that of Tekamamihouenne, to be handed to M. de Lamarque, who was to arrive there at an early day. I left on the morning of the 6th, and went to the Lake Tekamamihouenne. On the 22nd of the present month I found a war chief, Monsony, with a small band, who was expecting me near the little straight on the said Lake. They begged me to camp early to give them the news. I did so and made them a present in your name, then read to them the replies which you had had the goodness to make to their speeches to keep quiet for the present, to take good care of their lands, so that the French, who came from so long a distance to supply their wants, should always find The chief answered me: I thank thee, my father, for having had pity on us. I will carry the news to all our people who are gone for the wild rice; I shall make them joyful at thy return and in relating to them the will of our father, with the words thou hast brought and the account which the old man has given me, as well of our father as of all he has seen below. Thou wilt find many people at thy fort of Lake of the Woods; all the chiefs expect thee. In finishing my speech to them, I recommended them to continue very faithful to the French, not to forget your words, to hunt well, so as to satisfy the traders. He answered with loud acclamations of gratitude, assuring me that he would never forget all that I had told him. I did my best to encourage him and went to Fort St. Charles, Lake of the Woods. On the 31st I did not find Lacolle, chief of the Monsony; I sent to notify him. Wishing to speak to all the chiefs together, I deferred speaking to them till the 3rd of September, when I collected all the headmen in my room, and made a present in your name to the three chiefs, Lacolle Lamicoine and leChenail, of whom I have several times spoken in my previous journals. I began by the answers to their speeches, which you had had the goodness to make, emphasizing strongly each paragraph, in order to make them understand the [kindness] you felt for them; that all [you] had allowed them was well assured to them, so long as they on their side should be obedient to your word. I knew that the old man whom I had brought with me, entrusted with their words, although with empty hands, had made a faithful report to them of the kindness [you] had shown him; he constantly sang your praises; that they had a good father, who should be pleased by doing his will. LaColle answered for all the others, that he did not cease to weep for my son and all the French men; that the lake was still red with their [blood], which called for vengeance, which he had not been able to take as he wished. It was not for them, people without intellect, to ask your reasons for keeping them quiet for the present; that they were obedient children; agreed to your will; would keep their lands as you ordered them, still hoping that you would obtain vengeance at some future time for the miserable stroke the Sioux had made on their lands. However, you were the master to punish or to pardon; that he thanked you in the name of all and prayed you to acknowledge them as your true children; that they would always be faithful to us; you ordered them to keep their lands; that was to their interest. Lamicoine gave profuse thanks for the great care I had had of his brother. It was from the old man whom I had brought with me that he had learned he would never see him more, begging me to assure you of his gratitude; that whilst he lived he would not forget the good you had done to his brother; that it would be for him and his to be always attached to the French; that my return had brought joy to all; that (! eir joy would not be long continued, as according to what his brother had told him, I was going to winter a long way off; that he prayed me not to abandom them; if I wished to go far away from them to leave one of my children; that he wished it was in his power to follow me; that he would do so heartly; that his brother and his nephew who expected to follow me, would take his place. I encouraged them to keep their word and to hunt well to supply the wants of their families; that I was going further on; that was your will; I wished to increase the number of your children; that I left my eldest son with them in my place, who was adopted by the nations and would inform them of your words. The council ended with many thanks. I then thought of preparing to leave; had my son received as commandant in my absence, and had an order published. Taking the two others with me, I deferred leaving until the 11th of September, waiting for Mr. Lamarque, to whom I had promised not to hasten, so as to give him the opportunity of joining me, he having promised me at Michilimakinak to make haste so that he might come with me in the autumn for the discovery of the Mandans, who were formerly called Ouachipouanne, according to the Monsony, Courtchouatte, Croes, Mandans: these are the names of the nation. Seeing on the 10th of the month that he had not arrived, and everything being in good order, as well at the fort as for my departure, I left on the 11th, as I have already stated, hoping that he would join me soon to come with me. I arrived at Fort Marpas [Maurepas] on the 22nd, where I had the arms examined, published je trouvés dix cabanes de Crix deux chefs de guerre, qui m'atendoit avec bien des viandes ayant été averty que je venois, il me priere de leur accorder un séjour pour avoir le plaisir de nous voir et nous donner a mangér, je leurs acordéestant bien aise de leur parlér, je sis venir les deux chess a ma tante, je sauois qu'il aloit tous les ans aux Englois, que l'on m'auoit raporté qu'il y en auoit un qui auoit receu vn collier des Englois auec un present pour jouer un mauvais tour aux françois, je dis a celuy que l'on m'auoit accusée tout ce qui m'auoit esté dit de luy, j'ay eu l'honneur de vous en escrire l'année derniere de michilimakina, des bruits qui couroit a ce sujet, il me respondit mon père, je say que j'ay beaucoup denuieux qui parle contre moy, je n'ai point esté aux Englois il y a plus de six ans, jay envoyés à la vérité ces dernières année que les françois nous a abandonnés il nous faloit avoir nos besoins, demande a ceux qui ont esté pour moy que voîla icy sil ont entendue parlér de quelque chose d'aprochant, je te peus assurer que l'Englois est tranquile et ne nous parle point du françois, Ce sont des menteurs qui ont fait courir ces bruits là, tu en conoitera la vérité par la suite tant que le françois tiendra icy nos terres, nous te promettons de ne point alér ailleurs. Je leurs fis un petit présent pour les encouragér à tenir leurs paroles, je leurs fis le recit de tout ce que jauois dit a tous les autres tant de uos ordres que des nouvelles, nôtre vieux leurs fit ensuite vn grand recit de son voyage ce qui leur fit bien plaisir, le Chef que jauois acusée me dit mon père nous te remercions de ce que tu as bien parlé la bas a notre pere pour nous, nous conoissons aujourd'huy qu'il à pitié de nous en nous envoyant des françois sur nos terres pour nous aporter nos besoins, nous nous tiendrons tranquiles comme il le souhaite, les Sioux en fasse de même, nous auons toujours le cœur malade de ton fils, qui est venu le premier batir un fort sur nos terres, nous laymions beaucoup, jay deja esté vne fois en guerre pour le venger, je nay desfait que dix cabanes qui n'est pas suffisant pour nous contenter mais aujourduy nostre pere nous ordonne [de] nous tenir tranquile, nous le ferons, il me demanda ensuite ou je prétendois alé, que la rivière des assiliboilles estoit fort basse, nous courions grand risque de mettre nos canots or de service [que] nous alions ché des gens qui ne sauoit point tuer le castor, ne [se] couuroit que de peaux de beuf ce qui ne nous faloit point, Cestoit gens sans esprit qui nauoit jamais ueu de françois, et ne le pouroit connoître, je luy respondis que je voulois alér dans l'otonne chez cette nations de blancs, dont l'on mauoit tant parlée que je monterois la rivière plus que je pourrois pour me mettre a portée de faire mon voyage selon uos ordres et que je uoulois augmenter le nombre de uos enfants, aprendre a chasser aux assiliboiles et leurs donner de l'esprit, que l'année prochaine j'yrois d'un autre bord, tu risque beau-coup mon pere que les canots ne sorte a laige, il y a beaucoup d'assiliboilles cest vray il ne save point la chasse du castor, je souhaite que tu leurs donne de l'esprit, je partis le 26. monuieux me demanda arestér quelque jours auec les Crix qui Luy demandoit avec grande instance qu'il me rejoindroit en peu,-Comme il auoit sa voiture j'y consenty volontier et luy recommandés de bien encouragée ces gens la a bien chasser, porter des uiures aux fort françois et a tenir la parole qu'il mauoit donnée, de ne point aler aux Englois, il me dit qu'il leurs parleroit de son mieux, qu'il esperoit que je serois content, je trouvée les eaux fort basses l'estée s'est passer sans pluye, la rivière uient de l'ouest, serpente, beaucoup large et grand courant beacoup de batures elle est bordée d'un beau bois sur cès bords et prairies a perte de veue dans les profondeurs, ou il y a beaucoup de beuf et serf, je pris le partis d'allér par terre, a suiure les prairie auec le monde inutile dans les canots, Le chemin est bien plus cour par les prairies, l'on Coupe plusieurs pointes de la riuière à la fois, l'on peut tenir un chemin droit, le gibier est le long de la rivière en grande abondance i ne marché pas long temps sans rencontrér des assiliboilles qui auoit été auerty que montois dans leurs rivière venoit au deuant de moy, je poursuivy toujours mon chemin remettant a leurs parler sur leurs terres, la Compagnie augmentoit tous les jours, je marchois six jours en employant bien le temps; Le 2 d'octobre au soir les sauvages m'auertire que je ne pouvois monter plus loin la rivière trop basse que mes canots ne pouvoit passér le bois que pour la portée de tout le monde estant au portage qui va au Lac des prairies car c'est le chemin des assiliboilles pour allér aux Englois, tu arestera tout le monde estant iey, tu veux alér ché les mantannes te voila à la portée du chemin, je consulté your orders concerning the said post, gave a copy of it to Mr. Larivière, clerk to these gentlemen, and selected five of his men to come with me. As I had agreed, I left nine men with Mr. de Lariviere. I went to the fork of the Asiliboiles (Assiniboine) on the 24th, where I found ten Cree huts and two war chiefs, who expected me, with a quantity of meat, having been notified that I was coming. They begged me to agree to remain, to have the pleasure of seeing us and of giving us something to eat. I agreed, being happy to speak to them. I sent for the two chiefs to my tent. I knew that they went every year to the English; it had been reported to me that there was one who had received a belt from the English to play a bad trick on the French. I told the one who had been accused everything that had been said of him. I had the honour of writing to you last year from Michilimakinak; of the rumours current on the subject. He answered: My father, I know there are many envious men who speak against me; I have not been to the English for more than six years. I sent, indeed, during the last years that the French abandoned us, and it was necessary to have our wants supplied. Ask those who have been on my account, who are here, if they have heard of any such accusation. I can assure thee the Englishman is quiet and does not speak of the French. They are liars who have set these rumonrs affoat. Thou wilt know the truth in time. So long as the French shall hold our lands here, we promise thee not to go elsewhere. I made them a small present to encourage them to keep their word; I told them everything I had said to the others, as well your orders as the news. Our old man then gave a great account of his journey, which afforded them much pleasure. The chief whom I had accused said to me: My father, we thank thee that thou hast spoken well below to our father for us; we now know that he has had pity on us by sending to us Frenchmen on our lands to supply our wants; we will keep quiet as he desires; the Sioux should do the same; our hearts are still sick for thy son who came the first to build a fort on our lands; we loved him much; I have once already been at war to avenge him; I have destroyed only ten huts, which is not enough to satisfy us; but now our father has ordered us to keep quiet; we shall do so. He then asked me where I intended to go; that the River Assiniboine was very low; that we ran the risk of making our canoes useless; that we were going among people who did not know how to kill the beaver, and covered themselves only with ox skin, which we did not need. They were a people without intelligence, who had never seen the French and could not know them. I answered that I wished to go in the autumn among that nation of whites who had been so much spoken of; that I would ascend the river as far as I could to put myself in a position to make my journey according to our orders; that I wished to increase the number of our children to learn to hunt on the Assiniboine and to give them intellect, and that next year I would go elsewhere. Thou dost run a great risk, my father, that the canoes will leave empty. There are many Assiniboines, it is true, but they do not know how to hunt beavers; I wish that thou shouldest give them intelligence. I left on the 26th, My old man asked me to remain a few days with the Crees, who urgently asked him to remain with them and that he would rejoin me shortly. As he had his vehicle I consented willingly, and recommended him to encourage these temple to hunt well, to carry provisions to the French forts and to keep their word not to go to the English. He told me that he would speak to them as well as he could, and that he hoped I would be satisfied. I found the water very low, there in wing been no rain last summer. The river flows from the west, winding about greatly, wide, with a strong current and many sand bars; it is lined with fine woods on the banks and the prairies extend beyond sight, through whose extent are many cattle and deer. I chose to go by land, following the prairie; with the useless people in the canoes. The road is much shorter by the prairies; several points of the river are cut at once, and a straight road can be kept; game is along the river in great abundance. I had not marched long without meeting several Assiniboines who, having been warned that I was ascending their river, came to meet me. I still kept on my road, deferring to speak to them on their own lands. The company was increasing daily. I marched six days, making good use of the time. On the evening of the 2nd of sur ce que nous devions faire, nons content environ a soixante Lieues de la fourche par eau et par terre trente cinq a quarante, a prendre les prairies, tous se trouvere uoyant que nous ne poucions passer outre et que nous courions grand risque de mettre nos Canots hors détat de pouvoir sortir estant dans vn endroit sans ressourse dans l'endroit pour les acommoder, n'ayant ny gomme ny rasinnes, qu'il estoit plus a propos de rester dans un endroit ou il y avoit beau a bastir, et qui estoit le chemin pour aler aux Englois, que nous avions lieu d'esperér bien du monde, et tous gens qui certainement ne vont point au fort de morpas je me desterminée le 3 au matin à choisir un endroit avantageux pour y batir un tort, que je fis commencer sur le champ, jesperois toujours que Mr de lamarque me viendroit joindre, si jeusse monté plus haut il n'auroit peu me venir trouver, je parlés aux assiliboilles pendant que Ion batissait a force, je les assemble tout près de ma tante, leurs fis un present de uostre part, en poudre, balles, tabac, aches, couteaux tranches, aleines, le tout bien estimé parmi eux qui sont en grande nécessité de tout, Il me receure en grande cérémonie bien de pleurs pour témoignage de leurs joye pour leurs peine, je les receus au nombre de uos enfants, leurs fesant ensuite un ample instruction de vos ordres repetant a plusieurs fois enfin quil le pusse concevoir, cela parût leur faire un grand plaisir, il me firent de grand remerciment, en promettant des merveilles, je leurs recommendés de faire savoir aux assiliboilles de la Rivière rouge quil y auoit des françois chés eux, que les françois ne les abandonneroit point tant qu'il auroit de lesprit il devoit conoître la bonté que uous auiés pour eux et leur enuoyant leurs besoins de si loing, que leurs parent, le vieux que j'auois menés auec moy leurs pouvoit dire ce qui en estoit ariuée a nous du jour, il nespargnoit rien a la verité pour les bien instruire et leurs aprendre ce qui en est d'avoir a faire aux françois, tout finit par des grands pleurs et remerciments, quelques jours apres je m'assuré d'un guide que je payé auec dautres pour macompagner a ma descouuerte et me porter de lequipage, le neuf au soir Mr de Lamarque av le Sr Nolant son frere, huit hommes en deux canots ariuerent à nous, ce qui me fit beaucoup de plaisir, j'en temoignée ma reconnoissance à M. de lamarque de la peine qu'il auoit bien voulu prendre de nous amener du renfort, je m'informée de luy s'il auoit laissé bien du monde aux fort St. Charles lac des bois, et ce qu'il auoit laissé au [fort] morpas, il me repondit qu'il auoit laissé huit hommes aux premiers auec deux tresteurs, ayant amené tout ce qu'il y auoit [de] canots nesperant pas pour cela les pouvoir chercher [charger?] nayant pû aporter grand marchandises qu'il m'auoit promis de me venir joindre il nauoit pas voulu me manquer de parole, que j'auois besoin de monde pour ma descouverte qu'il m'en amennoit et cela sans luy faire de tord n'ayant pas besoin de son monde pendant le cour de lyuér. Je le remercié en luy disant que sil ne gagnait [joignait] dans notre Des Cou [verte] il auroit toujours pour épargné luy et tout son monde des frays jusquaux retour, Il me dit qu'il vouloit entrer dans la depence je luy repondis, que cela ne seroit pas, Il me sufisait qu'il me fournit du monde et luymesme, sans qu'il fuse de besoin d'entrér dans la Despence, que j'auois déjà mis a part, je luy doné une place a sa demande dans mon fort pour y batir une maison a logér tout [son] monde aux retour de notre voyage le 15e du mois le fort et les maisons estant acheuées, je songés a tout faire aprester pour mon despard. Mr Delamarque me dit auoir amené M. de Louuière à la fourche avec deux canots pour y batir un fort à la comodité des gens de la rivière rouge, je trouvé cela bon si les sauvages sont averty. Le 16, je fis battre la génerale, pour passer tout le monde en reueu et détachée ce qu'il me faloit de monde pour ma descouverte, apres la reueü des armes je fis publier uos ordres de ce qui regarde le poste destaché vingt hommes, dix a Mr. delamarque et dix des miens je les auertis de se tenir prest pour la 18, leurs fis donner une liure de poudre, vingt balles à chaque, soullier, ache, chaudiere pour leurs utilité dans le voyage, donnai a chaque homme francois et sauvage vn sac de poudre de quatre liures soixante balles, deux brasses de tabac, quelque menuité de marchandises, plus pour leurs besoins que pour autres choses, comme aleines, pierres à fusil, tirbourres, battefeux, je fis metre dans vn sac de cuire ce que je voulois portér pour le present qu'une femme de notre guide me portoit et tout ce qui m'estoit utile pour mon particulier mon domestique

October the Indians notified me that I could not ascend the river further, the water being too low; that my canoes could only pass the woods, provided all the people were at the portage which goes to the Lake of the Prairies, for this is the road of the Assiniboines in going to the English. Being here thou wilt stop everyone; thou wouldest go to the Mandans; thou art close to the road. I consulted what we should do, believing that we were about sixty leagues from the fork by water and about thirty-five to forty by land, by taking the prairies. All present, seeing that we could not pass further and that we ran a great risk of damaging our canoes so that we could not leave, being in a place without resources for repairing them, having neither gum nor resin, felt that it was more suitable to remain in a place where there was plenty and which was on the road to go to the English, that we had reason to hope well of the people and all persons who certainly do not go to Fort Maurepas. I resolved on the morning of the 3rd to select an advantageous place to build a fort, which I made them begin immediately. I still hoped that M. de la Marque would come to join me. If I had gone higher up he would not have been able to find me. I spoke to the Assiniboines whilst they were building an oven. I assembled them near my tent, made them a present in your name, of powder, ball, tobacco, axes, knives, paring knives, awls, the whole much valued among those who are in great need of every thing. They received me with great ceremony; many with tears in testimony of their joy in exchange for their griefs. I received them among the number of your children, giving them afterwards full instructions respecting your orders, repeating them several times in order that they might comprehend. That appeared to give them great pleasure. They thanked me greatly, promised to do wonders. I recommended them to inform the Assiniboines of the Red River that there were Frenchmen among them; that the French would not abandon them; so long as they had intelligence they ought to know the kindness you had for them by sending them what they needed from such a distance; that their relative, the old man, whom I had brought with me, could tell them what had taken place with us daily. He, in truth, spared nothing to inform them and to teach them what it is to have to do with the French; all ended in great weeping and thanks. Some days after, I secured a guide whom, with others, I paid to accompany me on my search and to carry the baggage. On the evening of the 9th Mr. de la Marque with the Sieur Nolant, his brother, and eight men in two canoes arrived, which gave me much pleasure. I testified my Mr. de gratitude to la Marque for the trouble he bring us reinforcements; I questioned him if he had taken to left many people at Fort St. Charles, Lake of the Woods, and whom he had left at [Fort] Maurepas. He answered me that he had left eight men at the first with two traders, having brought all the canoes he had, not because he hoped to be able to load them, not having been able to bring the heavy goods, but that he had promised he would join me, and did not wish to break his word, that I required people for my expedition, that he had brought them, without injury to himself, not requiring his people during the winter. I thanked him telling him that if he joined in our expedition he would be saved, himself and all his people, the expense until they returned. He told me he wished to share the expense. I answered that that could not be, it was enough for me that he supplied the men and himself without the necessity of sharing the expense which I had already provided for. I gave him room, at his request, in my fort to build a house to lodge all his people. On the return from our journey on the 15th of the month, the fort and houses being completed, I thought of making everything ready for our departure. Mr.de la Marque told me he had brought Mr. de Louvière to the Fork with two canoes to build a fort there for the accommodation of the people of the Red River. I approved of it, if the Indians were notified. On the 16th I had the drum beat to arms, to pass every one in review and to select such as were necessary for my expedition. After the inspection of the arms, I published your orders regarding the post; I selected twenty men, ten of Mr. la Marque's and ten of mine. I warned them to keep themselves in readiness for the 18th, gave them a pound of powder and twenty balls each, shoes, an axe, a kettle to be used on the journey; gave to each man, French and Indian, a bag of powder, sixty balls, two et mon esclave le portoit, cela distribué, je fis receuoir Sanschagrin homme d'esprit sage et prudent qui me fait la fonction de sergent, commandant à mon absence menant mes deux enfants auec moy, luy laissant deux soldats et dix engagés pour la garde du fort, luy donné ensuite l'ordre et instruction par écrit de tout ce qu'il auoit a faire pendant mon absence, le 18 tout étant en bon ordre dans le fort, je fis partir tout notre monde avec ordre daler camper proche et partis ensuite avec Mr. delamarque sur le midy, en encouragent les sauvages que je lessois aux fort de chasser aux beuf le castor nestant pas encore bon, pour fournir des viures aux françois que je lessois nôtre petite bande consistoit à 52 personnes vingt engagés tous bons hommes Mr de la marque son frere, mes deux enfans, mon domestique un esclave, le reste sauvages. Le troisieme jour de notre depard, un vilage de quarante cabannes assiliboilles, nous joignirent a dessein de me parler. Le chef me demanda de vouloir bien luy acordér la journée pour avoir le plaisir de nous voir et nous donner a mangér, je lui acordée à la solicitation de notre guide, je fis un petit present au chef de poudre et luy fit tout le recit que j'avois fait a tous les autres. Il me temoigna beaucoup de reconnoissance, en promettant bien des merueilles, qu'il aloit porter des uiures aux françois et chasseroit de leur mieux, enfin d'avoir leurs besoins. Le 21 nous continuames nostre route jusqua la premiere montagne eloignée de nostre fort de vingt six lieues toujours au sud quard de sud ouest de la premiere montagne a la seconde a ouest quard nor ouest 24 lieues, de la pointe de la seconde montagne, a alér chez les mantannes en droiture il faut tenir le sud ouest quard ouest, il sen faloit de beaucoup que nous ne fime de chemin droit pour deux lieues en droiture, nous en fesions de trois et quatre de nostre fort, il peut y avoir cent vingt lieues, a ouest sud ouest, que nostre guide nous a bien augmenté de plus de cinquante a soixante lieues, et nombre de sejour auxquel il nous aloit consentir malgré nous, nous fesant paser le plus beau temps de l'automne en se jour, nous auons mis quarante six jours a nous rendre, que nous aurions bien fait en saise ou vingt jours au plus, Il nous faloit prendre patience par force, tout ce que je pouuois dire a nôtre guide pour le faire diligenter ne servoit de rien, Il nous fit faire pour comble de bonheur vingt deux lieues de chemin qui nous éloignoit de nôtre route, pour joindre un vilage de cent deux cabanes qu'il auoit esté découvrir et nous auoit amenes huit hommes, que les Chefs du vilage m'envoyoit pour me prier de les allér joindre qu'il estoit tous dans le sentiment de macompagnér chés les mantannes, me faisant dire que les Sioux frequentoit souvent par la et que j'avois besoin descorte, il fallut bien se resoudre a y aler nous y ariuames le 18e de novembre, sur l'aprés midi, il estoit venu nombre de couriés au devant de nous, nous [y] fumes receu avec grande joye l'on nous conduisit, M. de lamarque, son frere, et mes enfants dans une cabane d'un jeune Chef ou tout estoit prèst pour nous receuoir, l'on nous fit grand chaire et a tout nostre monde qui ne manquoit point de bon apety. Le 19. je fis rassembler les chefs et principaux du vilage dans la cabane ou jestois, je leur donée un present de uostre part en poudre, balles, couteaux et tabac, en leurs disant que je les recevois au nombre de vos enfants, que s'il auoit de l'esprit que vous leurs prometies de ne les point abandonnér que les françois estoit aujourdhuy establie sur leurs terres et leurs fourniroit tous leurs besoins qui leurs faloit chasser au Castor et bien garder leurs terres que vous ne vouliez point de guerre pour le présent voulant aplanir toutes les terres que tous nos enfants puisse vivre tranquile, dont jaugmentois le nombre tous les jours je leurs fis le récit que javois fait a tous les autres, ce fut grand remerciment par bien de pleurs et ceremonie, en passant leurs mains sur ma teste me prenant à vôtre lieu et place [pour] leur père et nos françois pour frere, en passant les mains sur la teste a tous en pleurant, cette ceremonie faite larenqueur [harangueur] me dit nous te remercions mon pere d'auoir bien voulu te donnée la peine de venir à nous, nous allons tous tacompagner aux mantannes et te ramener a ton fort, nous avons envoyés quatre hommes les auertir, qui vien [nent] darivér, raporte que les mantai nes sont en grande réjouissance de [ta] venue chez eux et doive venir au devant de toy. fathoms of tobacco; some small wares, more for present necessities than for any thing else, as awls, gun-flints, gun screws and steels. I had put into a leather bag what I wanted for present use, that a wife of our guide carried for me, and all that was of use for myself, my servant and my slave carried. That settled, I had Sanschagrin received as commander in my absence, as a man of wise and prudent mind, who fills the office of sergeant. Taking my two children with me, I left him two soldiers and ten hired men as a guard for the fort, and then gave him orders and instructions in writing of all he was to do during my absence. On the 18th, all being in good order in the fort, I made all our people set out, with orders to encamp not far off, and afterwards to leave with Mr. de la Marque about noon, encouraging the Indians whom I left at the fort to hunt cattle, the beaver not being yet good, to furnish provisions to the French whom I left. Our small band consisted of 52 persons, twenty hired men, all good men, Mr. de la Marque, his brother, my two children, my servant and a slave, the rest Indians. The third day after leaving, a village of forty Assiniboine huts joined us, with the intention of speaking to me. The chief asked me to grant him the favour of remaining for the day, to have the pleasure of seeing us and of showing their hospitality. I agreed, on the solicitation of our guide. I made him a small present of powder, and made the same statement to him as I had done to all the others. He testified much gratitude, promising wonders; that he would carry provisions to the French, and would hunt to the utmost, so as to supply their wants. On the 21st we continued our route, as far as the first mountain, twenty-six leagues distant from our fort, still to the south by south-west; from the first mountain to the second west and by north-west, 24 leagues. From the point of the second mountain to go direct to the Mandans we must keep to the southwest. But we were obliged to do much more, as on a road which is two leagues in a straight line, we made three or four from our fort. It may have been a hundred and twenty leagues to the west south-west that our guide lengthened the road by from fifty to sixty leagues and a number of stops to which we were obliged to agree, making us spend the finest weather in autumn staying still, so that we took forty-six days to go a distance we should have done easily in sixteen or twenty days at the most. We had perforce should have done easily in sixteen or twenty days at the most. We had, perforce, to have patience; all that I could say to our guide to make him hasten was to no purpose. He made us take for the height of happiness twenty-two leagues of a road which was taking us off our route, to get to a village of a hundred and two huts which he had gone to look for, and had brought us eight men, whom the chiefs of the village had sent to beg me to join them, that they were all inclined to accompany me to the Mandans, telling me that the Sioux often visited in that direction and that I had need of an escort. We had to make up our minds to go there. We arrived there on the 18th November, in the afternoon. A number of messengers had gone before us and we were received with great joy. They led us, Mr. de la Marque, his brother and my children, into the hut of a young chief, where every one was ready to receive us. They made a great feast for us and for all our people, who did not want for a good appetite. On the 19th I assembled the chiefs and head men of the village in the hut where I was, I gave them a present in your name of powder, balls, knives and tobacco telling them that I received them into the number of your children; that if they had sense you promised not to abandon them; that the French were now established on their lands and would provide for all their wan; that they must hunt the beaver and keep to their lands; that you did not wish for war at present, desiring to make all the lands smooth, so that all our children might live in peace, of whom I would increase the number every day. I made the same recital to them that I had made to all the others. There was great thankfulness, with many tears and ceremonies, by passing their hands over my head, taking me in your room and place as their father, and our Frenchmen as brothers by again passing the hands over our heads, all weeping. This ceremony ended, the orator said: We thank thee, my father, for so willingly taking the trouble to come to us; we are all going in thy company to the Mandans to bring thee to thy fort; we have sent four men to warn them who are about to arrive who report that the Mandans are greatly rejoicing at thy coming remercie de leur bonne volonté et les encouragés à nous rendre promtement qu'il voyoit "ussi bien que moy la saison fort avancée, sachant que les mantannes nestoit pas prouisionnés de graisses j'en fis achetér dans le vilage en donnée a tout nêtre monde a porter ce qu'il en voulure, et en fit porter pour nous par les sauvages, que je paye pour cela, l'auerty nos françois que jestois dans le desein de paser une partie de lyver chés les mantannes qu'il nesitasse point de se bien chargér de graisse, sinon qu'il mangeroit leurs ble et feues a leaux, le 20. tout le vilage se mit en marche pour se rendre, à 17 lieues ou il auoit marquée le rendés uous aux mantannes, tout les jours lon ne nous entretenoit, de blanc que nous alions voir françois comme nous qui se disoit desendant de nous, tout ce que lon nous disoit nous donnoit bonne esperance de faire une descouuerte qui merita atention, M. de lamarque et moy, le long du chemin nous nous fesions des projets sur tout ce que nous atendions dire, croyant ucritable, dont nous avons bien eu a disconter, je fis remarquer à Mr de lamarque le bon ordre auec lequel les assiliboiles marche pour preuenir toutes surprises marchant toujours dans des prairies, de caute et valons depuis la première montagne, ce qui ne lesse pas d'estre de fatigue a marcher, monter et descendre fort souvent dans la journée, Il y a des plaines magnifiques de trois et quatre Lieues, La marche des vilages assiliboilles, surtout quand il sont nombreux est en trois colonnes des descouvreurs de vend sur les elles à une bonne arrière garde, les vicillards et estropiés marche dans celle du milieux qui est le centre. Je fosois tenir tout les françois ensemble autant que faire se pouuoit. Si les descouvreurs apercoive sur la route des bandes de beufs comme il arrive souvent, le crix se fait qui est bientost rendue & larriere garde, tout ce qu'il y a d'hommes dans les colonnes des plus alerte, joigne la vendgarde, peur cerner les bestes, dont ils en tue nombre, chacun prend de la viande ce qu'il en veut. Puisque cela areste la marche, lavant garde marque le campement il n'y a point a passer outre, les femmes et les chiens porte tout Lequipages, les hommes ne sont chargés que de leurs armes, ils font porter a leurs chiena souvent jusques aux bois pour faire du feux estant obligée souvent de camper en plaine prairie, les iles de bois sont de loing a loing, le 28. nous ariuames au matin a Lendroit marqué du rendé vous pour les mantannes, qui arriuere sur le soir, va chef avec trente hommes et les quatre assiliboilles, le Chef apres auoir consider quelques temps de dessus une hauteur la grandeur de nostre uilage, qui ne lessoit pas que de paroistre, je fis conduire dans la cabane ou jestois ou lon auoit preparé une place pour le receuoir dans un Costé de la Cabanne, il se vint placer près de moy quelqu'un de ses gens ensuite de luy, me presenta un present de blé d'inde en espie et de leur tabae en endoüille qui nest pas bon ne sachant pas l'acomoder comme nous, il est bien comme le nostre, auec cette différence qui ne le plante point et le coupe verd, mettant tout a profit, coton et les feuilles ensemble, je luy en donné du mien, qu'il trouua bien bon, javouë que je fus surpris, mattendant a voir des gens differents des autres sauuages, surtout le recit que l'on nous en auoit fait il ny a point de difference d'auec les assiliboilles nue couverd seulement d'une robe de beuf, porté négligemment sans brayet, je conus des lors que nous auions bien a desconter de tous ce qui nous en auoit esté dit le chef me parla en assiliboile me témoignant la joye que je donnois a toutes leurs nations, de mon arriuee ches eux qu'il me prioit de les accepter du nombre de uos enfants, quil vouloit par la suite ne faire quun aucc nous que je pounois disposer de tout ce qu'il anoit qu'il me prioit de restor a son fort qui estoit le plus près plus petit que tous les autres, mais bien muny de viures, quil estoit six fort a la même nations, qu'il estoit le a ul un peu eloigné de la riuière me dit auoir receu deux colliers de moy, que los me feroit voir en ariuant qu'on auoit toujours esperés me voir, je le remerciés de toutes ses honnestetés et offres, luy disant que je venois de bien loing pour faire amitié auec eux, que je leurs parlerois si tost que je serois arriué à leurs fort, il nous joua sur le champ une marote, ayant consideré notre uilage en arivant comme jay marqué, jugent quil y auoit bien du monde si tout cela ariuoit a son fort, quil faloit faire une grande consommation de grains, leurs maniere estant de nourir gratieusement tous ceux qui vont chés eux, ne vende le grain que pour emportér il fit de grand remerciments aux assiliboilles de leurs avoir amenés le françois chez eux, quil ne pouvoit amongst them and are to come to meet thee. We have sent other four young men to bring them to the place we have selected for them; we will go quietly to the hunting to have fat on arriving there, to eat with the grain of which they always eat much, having seldom either meat or fat. I thanked them for their good will, and encouraged them to send us on quickly; that they could see as well as I, the very advanced season. Knowing that the Mandans had no supplies of fat, I purchased it in the village to give to all our people whatever they would carry, and made the Indians carry for us, for which I paid them; I warned our Frenchmen that I intended to spend part of the winter among the Mandans; that if they did not take a good load of tat, they must eat their wheat and beans with water. On the 20th, the whole village set out on the march to go the seventeen leagues where the meeting place for the Mandans had been chosen; every day they entertained us with the tale that the whites we were going to see were Frenchmen like ourselves, who said they were our descendants. All they told us gave us good hope of making a discovery which would deserve attention. Mr. de la Marque and I m de plans along the road from what they were telling us, believing that to be true, from which we had to deduct much. I observed to Mr. de la Marque the good order in which the Assiniboines march to prevent surprise, marching always on the prairies, the hillsides and valleys from the first mountain, which did not make them fatigued by mounting and descending often in their march during the day. There are magnificent plains of three or four leagues. The march of the Assiniboines, especially when they are numerous, is in three columns, having skirmishers in front, with a good rear guard, the old and lame march in the middle, forming the central column. I kept all the French together as much as possible. If the skirmishers' discovered herds of cattle on the road, as often happens, they raise a cry which is soon returned by the rear guard, and all the most active men in the columns join the vanguard to hem in the cattle, of which they secure a number, and each takes what flesh Since that stops the march, the vanguard marks out the encampment which is not to be passed; the women and dogs carry all the baggage, the men are burdened only with their arms; they make the dogs even carry wood to make the fires, being often obliged to encamp in the open prairie, from which the clumps of wood may be at a great distance. On the morning of the 28th, we arrived at the place selected for the meeting with the Mandans, who arrived towards evening-a chief, with thirty men and the four Assiniboines. The chief, after having from the top of a height considered for some time the extent of our village, which appeared of a good size, I had him brought to the hut where I was, where a place had been prepared to receive him on one side of it. He came and placed himself near me; one of his people then, on his part, presented me with a gift of Indian corn in the ear, and of their tobacco in rolls, which is not good, 48 they do not know how to cure it like us. It is very like ours, with this difference. that it is not cultivated and is cut green, everything being turned to account, the stalks and the leaves together, I gave him some of mine, which he thought very good. I acknowledged that I was surprised, expecting to see different people from the other Indians, especially after the account given me. There is no difference from the Assiniboines; they are naked, covered only with a buffalo robe, worn carelessly without breech clout. I knew from that time that we had to make an allowance for all we had The chief spoke to me in Assinibome, testifying the joy which I had given to all their nation by my arrival among them; that he begged me to accept them among the number of your children; that he wished afterwards to have to do only with us; that I might dispose of all he had; that he begged me to remain at his fort, that it was the nearest and smaller than the others, but well supplied with provisions; that there were six forts belonging to the same nation; that it was the only one not far from the river. He told me he had received two belts from me; that they had been shown to me on my arrival as they had always hoped to see me. I thanked him for all his civilities and offers, telling him that I had come from a long distance to form a friendship with them, and that I would speak to them so soon as I should have arived at their

A quaire arpent du fort, sur une petite hauteur, une partie des anciens du fort accompagné dun grand nombre de jeunes gens matendoit pour me presenter le calumet et me faire voir les deux collier que je leur auoit envoyé il y a quatre ou cinq ans, l'on me donna un siège et a m'de lamarque, je receu leurs compliments qui ne consistoit que a la joye qu'il resentoit de nostre arrivée, jordonné a mon fils le cheva-

fort. He immediately played us a trick; having examined our village on his arrival, as I have stated, judging that there would be many people, and if they all came to his fort, there must be a great consumption of grain, their custom being to feed liberally all who came among them, selling only what was to be taken away, he gave many thanks to the Assiniboines for having brought the French among them; that it could not have happened more opportunely; that the Sioux would not be long of arriving among them, having been warned, begging me, like the Assiniboines, to assist them, hoping much from our valour and courage. I was entrapped like the Assiniboines, with this difference, that the Assiniboines stood confounded, whilst I rejoiced, believing that I had found an opportunity to be avenged on that accursed nation. I promised him every assistance from myself and our Frenchmen should they come whilst we were with them, for which he thanked me. He was sent for to come to the feast and questioned respecting the Sioux. The Assiniboines, numerous, strong and robust men, are not brave; they greatly fear the Sioux, whom they think to be braver. The Mandans know their weakness and profit by it, as opportunity arises. The council was held to discuss what should be done. The most decided opinion was that it was not necessary to go further than to warn me of the risk I was about to run if I wished to pursue our course. An old man rose firmly: Do not think that our father is a coward; I know him better than the others do; I have been with him ever since he left his fort; do not believe that the Sioux can frighten him or any of his people. What will he think of us? He has lengthened his road to join us, agreeing to our wish for his company among the Mandans and to bring him back to his fort. He would have gone to-day if he had not listened to us, and you would think of abandoning him by letting him go alone, which cannot be. If we fear the Sioux let us leave our village here till our return; let every man able to march follow our father. All agreed in the old man's opinion; it was decided that only a few should remain to protect the women; all the rest would accompany me. I was notified of the result of the council; word was sent throughout the village to warn every one to be ready to march the day after to-morrow, the 30th of the month, thus making a little longer delay among the Mandans, who knew how to profit by it by the sale of their grain, tobacco, peltry and painted plumes, which they know the Assiniboines greatly value, who had brought and now gave in exchange muskets, axes, kettles, powder, balls, knives and awls. They are much craftier in trade than the Assiniboines and others, who are constantly their dupes. We left on the morning of the 30th, about 600 men, several women without children, the best walkers. On the evening of the third day of our march, about seven leagues from the first fort of the Mandans, I was informed that an Assiniboine had taken the bag from my s lave on the road, under pretext of relieving him, and had returned to the village. My box, in which were my papers, and many things of use to me, were in the bag. I immediately engaged two young men to run after him, whom I paid making them promise to bring the bag to the Mandans, where I would wait for them. They set out during the night, overtook the rascal, who had already decamped from the village, made him return everything and came back to their village to keep the whole, hoping to restore it to me on my return, not daring to come after me, being afraid of the Sioux. I saw myself deprived of many things which were of daily use. The orator gave notice that we must leave before four in the morning in order to arrive early at the fort. I found at a league and a half, about noon, near a small river, a number of people who had come to meet us had lighted fires, expecting us, and had brought coarse grain cooked and flour made into a paste, with pumpkins, to give all enough to eat. Two chiefs had made a place ready for me near the fire and presented me first with something to eat and to smoke. Mr. de la Marque arrived shortly after me. I asked him to sit near me and to eat whilst resting. We remained fully two hours resting. We were warned that it was time to go. I made one of my children take the flag painted with the arms of France, and march at the front; and ordered the French to follow in ranks. The Sieur Nolant relieved my son in carrying the flag, each taking it in turn. The Mandans would not let me march, but offered to carry me, to which I had to consent, being requested by the Assiniboines, who told me I would displease them greatly if I refused.

At four acres from the fort, on a small height, the old men of the fort, accompanied by a great number of the youth, were waiting to present me with the calumet and to show me the two belts I had sent them four or five years ago. They gave a seat to me and to Mr. de le Marque. I received their compliments, which related only to the joy they felt at our arrival. I ordered my son, the Chevalier, to make all our Frenchmen draw up in line, the flag four paces in front; all the Assiniboines who had muskets placed themselves in line like our Frenchmen. After compliments had been paid, I saluted the fort with three volleys. Many people came to meet us, but nothing in comparison with what appeared on the ramparts and along the trenches. I marched in good order to the fort, into which I entered on the 3rd of December at four in the afternoon, escorted by all the French and Assiniboines. We were led into the hut of the head chief. It was certainly large, but not enough to hold all who wished to enter. The crowd was so great that they crushed one another, Assiniboines and Mandans. There was only the place where we were, Mr. de le Marque, his brother and my children, free of them. I asked that the crowd should retire, to leave our Frenchmen clear, and to put their baggage in a place of safety, telling them they had all time to see us. Everyone was put out, but I had been too late. The bag of goods had been stolen, in which were all my presents, through the fault of one of the hired men in whose care I had placed it before reaching the fort. He had unloaded on entering the hut without looking out for the bag, which he had put beside him in the great crowd. I felt rather confounded; my box lost, my bag of presents, which was very necessary for the place, and there were up wards of 300hvres inside. The Assiniboines seemed greatly annoyed and at once made a strict but useless search. Their fort is full of caves, well suited for concealment. The chief of the Mandans appeared to be greatly moved at my loss, and said for my consolation that there were many rascals among them. He would do his utmost to discover something about it. Had I accepted the offer of the Assiniboines, I might have had it found in a little time by force, but I preferred to lose it and to make peace about everything, as I wanted to spend a part of the winter with them to get a knowledge of the more distant country. On the 14th I had the principal Mandans and Assiniboines assembled in the hut where I was. I gave them my present of powder and balls, telling them that I could give them nothing else; that they all knew that what I had brought to give in presents had been carried off. I declared to them that I was inclined to remain some time to gain a knowledge of the country according to our orders, which I could not do in a day. The Mandans testified their joy, assuring me that I need not be afraid of fasting, that they had provisions in reserve, far more than were necessary for us, and that their whole fort was well supplied, that I might dispose of it being master among them. The elder of the Assiniboines, the orator of the village, said to me: My father, we have brought thee here; I do not doubt that thou mayest be well here; we flatter ourselves with bringing thee back to thy fort; thou art the master to do what thou shalt consider suitable; we will come to seek thee, so soon as thou shalt wish it. Speaking then to the Mandans: We are leaving our father; take great care of him and of all the French; learn to know them; they know how to do everything; he is a spirit; we love and fear him; do like us. We leave much grieved at the theft which has been committed on our father by entering among us; what can he think of us; we cannot deny that it is an unworthy thing. The Frenchman came to see us and you robbed him; we are pleased that our father should be good or it would not have passed in that way. I do not fear to tell you so; we could have found the bag had he wished it; there is still time if he will. I made him finish, as I saw the old man was getting heated. One of the Mandan chiefs answered: Neither I, nor my people have any share in what you accuse us of; I do not answer for others; I am vexed enough; I have had every search made by my young men; I have nothing to reproach myself with. Who knows if it is not an Assimboine? There were some of both in the crowd; thou can'st answer for nothing. Be not uneasy as to what regards our father and all his people; he is here master as if he were at home. We beg him to number us among his children. This I did at once, by putting my hands on the head of each chief, which

These people faisoit tous dress leather better than any of the other nations, and work in furs and feathers very e courir le tastefully, which the Assiniboines are not capable of doing. They are cunning traders, it aperçeu. cheating the Assiniboines of all they may possess, such as muskets, powder, balls, ur descam. kettles, axes, knives or awls. Seeing the great consumption of food daily by the fit atendre Assiniboines, and afraid that it would not last long, they set affoat a rumour that the partir les Sioux were near and that several of their hunters had noticed them. The Assiniux proche boines fell into the trap and made up their minds quickly to decamp, not wishing to logé dans be obliged to fight. A Mandan chief let me understand by a sign that the rumour sant mon about the Sioux was to get rid of the Assiniboines. At six is the morning they all e marcherê left in great haste, believing the Sioux were near and fearing that the road might be avec tor blocked up. The chief with whom I had lodged brought five men to remain with me, remercier saying: My father, I still hope that you will join us for a little; I march peaceably. le recom-Here are five of my young men whom I give thee to remain with thee and to guide on ne uint thee when thou shalt wish to leave. I made him a small present to thank him, ur massutelling him that he knew that I had sense and that I intended shortly to reward him luy peut for his attention. He left with great protestations of friendship. I was notified shortly after that an interpreter whom I had paid liberally to secure him 'auoit pas bon assi. had decamped in spite of all the offers which my son, the Chevalier, had esois fort, made him, as he was going after an Assiniboine woman with whom he oille, nous had fallen in love, but who would not remain with him. He was a young man of e que par the Cree nation speaking good Assiniboine. As there were several Mandans who s les jours spoke it well enough, I made myself very well understood, as my son spoke Cree and profité du the Cree interpreted into Assiniboine. But here was the height of misfortune, as faire aux we could only make ourselves understood by signs and demonstrations. If I had des assilisuspected my interpreter, who every day assured me he would always remain with ir et quelme and never abandon me, I would have taken advantage of the time I had him with é, comme me to make the demands on the Mandans I wished to make. But flattering myself s'il anoit that I had a man on whom I could rely, I put off till after the departure of the ords-de la Assiniboines. All day I was greatly embarrassed; all that I wanted to know and the ne journée few questions which I had put were asked in the evening after everyone had retired; s pananis such as, if there were many people along the river going down, and what nations; if the places at a distance were known. I was answered that there were five forts on ement en nis et allithe two banks of the river, belonging to their nation, much larger than that in which ouillés, les we were; that at a day's journey from the last of their forts were the Pananas, oac au bas who had several forts; then the Pananis; that these two nations who held much a lautre. of the country and were now at war for four years, had always from all time been closely united and in alliance together; that he would tell me afterwards the ime nous. sorte des causes which had set them at variance. The Pananas and Pananis made their forts ue pour la like them. In summer they grew wheat and tobacco on the lower part of the river, nt connert which was very wide, land not being visible from one shore to the other; the water nt courir. bad for drinking. All these lands are inhabited by whites like us, who work in iron. ntil estoit The word iron among all the nations here means all sorts of metals, which t maisons they call iron; that they only marched on horseback, both for hunting and continuait war; that these men could not be killed by la riuière arrow or musket, being covered with iron, but that by killing the horse the man could be doit, plus eaught easily, as he could not run; that he had a shield of iron very clear, de belle fought with lances and sabres, with which he was very skilful; the women were a aler ou never seen in fields; their forts and houses were stone. wood was along the river in places and also on the prairies in islands; that the further down the more the hills increased; that many of them were only rocks of fine stone, especially along the river. I asked it it took long to go to where the whites, the horsemen, were. I was answered that the Pananas and Pananis had horses like the whites; it would take a whole summer to make the journey, and that since they were at war with the Pananas the men would not undertake to go far, the roads being closed to them. That cattle were abundant on the prairies, far larger and fatter than those we had seen on their prairies; their coat white and of several colours. He showed us horns split in half, of a greenish colour which hold nearly three pints. In all the huts they have them in use as ladles, proving that they have killed many when the road was open. That was all I could learn even by chance, as I had relied on my interpreter, that I would have time to be thoroughly informed at leisure. Six days after the Assiniboines left I sent my son, the Chevalier, with Sieur Nolant, six Frenchmen and several Mandans to the nearest fort, which is on the bank of the river. If well received they were to sleep there, to get the best information of the course of the river; who dwell there; if they are acquainted with the lower part, in accordance with what was told us; to learn all that could be ascertained by signs and demonstrations. After their departure, Mr. de le Marque and I walked about to observe the size of their fort and their fortifi-I decided to have the huts counted. It was found that there were a hundred and thir , of them. All the streets, squares and huts resembled each other. Several of our Frenchmen wandered about; they found the streets and squares very clean, the ramparts very level and broad; the palisade supported on cross-pieces morticed into posts of fifteen feet. At fifteen points doubled are green skins which are put for sheathing when required, fastened only above in the places needed, as in the bastion there are four at each curtain well flanked. The fort is built on a height in the open prairie with a ditch upwards of fifteen feet deep by fifteen to eighteen feet wide. Their fort can only be gained by steps or posts which can be removed when threatened by an enemy. If all their forts are alike, they may be called impregnable to Indians. Their fortifications are not Indian. This nation is mixed white and black. The women are fairly good-looking, especially the white, many with blond and fair hair. Both men and women of this nation are very laborious; their huts are large and spacious, separated into several apartments by thick planks; nothing is left lying about; all their baggage is in large bags hung on posts; their beds made like tombs surrounded by skins; all go to bed naked, men and women. These men are always naked, covered only with a buffalo robe; a great part of the women naked like the men, with this difference, that they wear a loose apron, about a hand breadth wide and a foot long, sewed to a girdle in front only; all the women have this kind of protecton, although they have a petticoat which gives no constraint, they do not close the thighs; as is the case with other Indian women when they sit down. Several carry a kind of gown of very soft deer skin; there are many deer, they are very small. Their fort is full of caves, in which are stored such articles as grain, food, fat, dressed robes, bear skins. They are well supplied with these; it is the money of the country; the more they have of it the richer they believe themselves to be. They are fond of tatooing, but never more than half of the body is tatooed, both of men and women. They make wicker work very neatly, flat and in baskets. They make use of earthen pots, which they use like many other nations for cooking their food. They are for the most part great caters; are eager for feasts. They brought me every day more than twenty dishes of wheat, beans and pumpkins, all cooked. Mr. de la Marque, who did not hate feasts, went to them continually with my children. As I did not go to them, my share was sent to me. The men are stout and tall, generally very active, fairly good looking, with a good physiognomy. The women have not the Indian physiognomy. The men indulge in a sort of ball play on the squares and ramparts.

On the evening of the 4th, the Sieur Nolant and my son arrived, well satisfied with their journey, having been well received and strongly urged to remain longer. The fort is on the bank of the river, as large again as this; the squares and streets very fine and clean; their palisade is in the best order and strength; the whole built in the same fashion as the one in which we were. From what they could hear, all their forts were alike; who saw one saw them all, with this difference, that some were much larger than others; that the last was the largest of all. The nearest to the Pananas that the river appeared to go was, according to the compass, southwest by south, by signs given to them; the lower part may go to the sea to the south-west by west. They were often amused with broken talk; not being able to answer questions put to them, they answered something else, for want of understanding. The waters of their rivers come down with great rapidity, having many shoals. The water is not good for drinking, being brackish. We have constantly found from the last mountain almost all the marshes and ponds brackish, or sulphurous. What they could understand was, that on the lower part of the river there were men like us, who made cloth and linen, were very numerous, and had wars with a large part of the Indians. We saw that it was useless to question them, as they could not understand us. We did not cease going to their feasts all the time we were at their fort, but could not attendall those to which we were asked. We noticed that in the plain there were several small forts, of forty or fifty huts, built like the large ones, but no one was there at the time. They made us understand that they came inside for the summer to work their fields and that there was a large reserve of grain in their cellars. This is all the information they could give of their journey. On the 8th of December, I ordered my son to take the altitude which was forty-eight degrees, twelve minutes. On the evening of the 7th I had consulted with Mr. de la Marque as to the course we should take. Like myself, he knew that little remained with us for presents, which rendered it impossible for us to go further; the season too trying to be able to undertake anything, and above all, no interpreter nor any hope of getting one during the winter. We had every reason to fear that the roads would become impracticable in spring on account of the waters and with the risk of arriving too late for the setting out of our canoes; the powder I would have would not perhaps be enough to supply all our wants during the winter and with the small quantity of goods remaining we might find ourselves in a difficulty about all our people, having no longer anything to carry us on, as the Indians would only serve us so far as they were paid and that in advance, as they looked on promises as a very small resource. On the other hand, that we had reason to apprehend setting out on a march in the worst season of the year. After having considered the whole, we decided that we must set out, leaving two men fit to learn the language in a short time, one in the fort in which we were and the other in the nearest fort, as being alone they could learn much more quickly and could consequently give all the information. Mr. de la Marque selected one of his hired men, a man of intelligence, whom he offered me as being one of the most capable, able to write. I accepted him with pleasure and gave him my servant as the second, although he was very useful to me, as well as very useful and attached to my service, I preferred to deprive myself of him for the good he might afterwards render, knowing his strong and quick intellect, with a good memory and facility in learning languages, very wise and fearing God. I gave him full instructions of all he had to do, and on his side, Mr. de la Marque promised to send to look after them next summer. That ended, so far as regarded the two men whom I left, I notified our five Assiniboines, whom I made to understand that I wished to set out shortly, which gave them much joy. I showed them by signs, not being able to make myself understood otherwise, that it would be necessary for them to set out with two Frenchmen on the morning of the next day, that everything would be ready for them, so that they might go speedily to the village to warn them to expect us; that I would leave four days after them, so that I might prepare everything for the journey. I then informed the Mandans of my design, which appeared to give them much sorrow. I showed them the two Frenchmen whom I left in my place, recommending that they should be taken good care of. They gave me many thanks, with great protestations of friendship and fidelity. I then let them know that I would not abandon them. I asked the chief to give me meal for the journey. The news soon spread throughout cent hommes dans la journée en peu de temps, tout sempressoit de m'en aporter, je fis prendre a tous nos gens ce qu'il en voulure, cela fut fait en tres peu de tems, ayant pourveü a tout ce qui estoit de besoin a tout notre monde, je fis asemblér les chefs et principuux mantannes, leurs fis un présent de poudre balles et plusieurs menuité qu'il estime beacoup par le besoin ou il en sont, je donné au premier chéf vn pauillion, luy donné une plaque de plom, que j'auois ornée par les quatre coing auéc du ruban l'on la mit dans une boëte pour estre gardé a perpetuité, en memoire de la prise de possession que je fesois au nom du Roy de leurs terres, elle sera bien gardée de pere en fils mieux que si je leuse mise en terre ou elle auroit pu courir rise que destre friponé, je leurs fis comprendre du mieux que je peus que je leurs lessois cette marque en memoire des françois venue sur leurs terres, j'aurois fort souhaité me pouuoir faire entendre pour leurs dire bien de choses, qui leurs auroit esté fort utile et a nous ce qui ne se pouuoit a mon grand regret et aux leur. the fort. On the morning of the 8th, I made the two Frenchmen set out, guided by two Assiniboines, as I have already said, to go to warn the village of my departure. Wheat flour pounded for the journey was brought, much more than was necessary. I thanked them, giving them some needles which they greatly value. They would have loaded a hundred men for the journey; in a short time all hastened to bring me some. I made all our people take what they wished, which was done in a very short time. Having provided for all that our people needed, I assembled the chiefs and principal Mandans, made them a present of powder, balls and several trifles, which they greatly value, owing to their need for them. I gave the head chief a flag, gave him a leaden plate, which I had ornamented with ribbon at the four corners. It was put into a box to be kept in perpetuity, in memory of my taking possession of their lands, which I did in the King's name. It will be preserved from father to son, better than if I had put it in the ground, where it would have run the risk of being stolen. I made them understand as well as I could, that I left them that mark in memory of the Frenchmen who had come upon their lands. I very much desired I could have made them understand, in order to tell them many things which might have been very useful to them and to us, which to my regret and to theirs I could not do. I had wrought with so much diligence, that on the evening of the eighth every thing was ready for our departure, which I calculated to accomplish sooner than I had given notice of. During the night, between the 8th and 9th, I was taken ill, and in a very short time was very ill; I did not know what to think of it. I kept my bed for three days. Finding myself better on the fourth, I prepared to set out the next day. I gave the two men enough to defray their expenses liberally, and even to pay a guide, if need were to bring them to our fort; informed them once again of the cause which obliged me to leave them there. So soon as they could make themselves anderstood, they were to neglect nothing to learn what was this nation of whites, what metal they worked with; if there were any mines to their knowledge; what nations were above, going up the river; if they knew a height of land-in a word, to neglect nothing to obtain all possible information respecting the country.

I set out, although ill, in the hope that it would be nothing and that I would recover at the village my box in which I had put some remedies. On the 13th of December, to the great regret of all the Mandans, a chief came to conduct us a league and a half's distance, whence I sent him back; he testified to me by great demonstrations the regret he felt at my departure, making a sign that I would not abandon him, but to return and that he would accompany us. I gave him a small present of powder, once more recommending the two Frenchmen whom I left with them. He made me a sign that he would take one to his own house. I dismissed him after giving him many thanks. In the evening I noticed that we had only two Assiniboines with us. They made me understand that one had remained with our Frenchmen, not wishing to abandon them; that they would return only in summer with them. I arrived at the village on the 24th, still very ill. We had experienced excessive cold, which caused great delay. My box was restored to me; nothing had been touched; they had been satisfied with the slave's bag, which was returned to me empty. Having rested a little, I reproached them for lying to me respecting the Mandans; that there was very little truth in all they had told me. They answered, that they had not pretended to speak of the Mandans, saying that they were like us, that they had intended to speak of that nation which is at the lower part of the river, who work in iron. An Assiniboine rose above the others, saying to me: This is the only one who can speak better to thee about it; thou hast not understood properly what was said to thee; I do not lie. Last summer I killed one who was covered with iron, as I have already said several times. If I had not killed the horse first, I could not have killed the man. I said to him: What hast thou brought of his spoil to show us that thou speakest the truth? As I wished to cut off his head, I noticed men on horseback. who were blocking the way, I escaped with difficulty; I kept nothing to carry off; I threw away every thing I had even to my blanket, in my flight. What I say is true, and I will have it told to thee by others who were with me the following spring. They are not here now, but thou shalt see them. What I have said I repeat; the other side of the river cannot be seen; the water is sait; it is a country of mountains; a great extent between the mountains of fine land; many cattle, big and stout, white and of different colours, many stags and deer; I have seen their wheat fields, where no women are to be seen; what I tell thee is without deceit; thou wilt learn further of it afterwards. I continued my journey after three day's rest. I reached the first mountain on the 9th of January, where we remained a ong time. Mr. de la Marque made up his mind to go on, seeing me still very ill, in order to send me assistance. He arrived on the first of February; I arrived only on the 10th, greatly fatigued and very ill. I met the assistance he sent me at thirty-five leagues from the fort, which gave me creat pleasure, having great need of it. I have never endured so much wretchedness in my life, from illness and fatigue, as in that journey. I found myself, after a fortnight's rest, a little restored. Mr. de la Marque waited my arrival to carry out his design of going to Fort Maurepas, having learned that there were no provisions. I told him that I thought his presence would be very useful in his post. He determined to set out, asking me to leave his brother with a large party of hired men for provisions at my fort, flattering themselves that there was more hope there of seeing people. We were nearly starving, when fortunately two huts of Indians came, whom I stopped at the fort. They supplied us by their hunting moose and deer. We numbered fortytwo persons in the fort, which means a large consumption of food. Mr. de la Marque left on the 16th of the month. I received news from him shortly after. He informed me that he dreaded a famine, not seeing Indians. We are now in the 16th of April and have not yet seen any one, I do not know how God preserves us,

I sent my son, the Chevalier, that morning, the 16th of April, with an Indian to go to make a search for the fort of Lake Winipigon, and to take notice of the rivers which fall into it, especially the White River (to which I intend to go on the return of our canoes), from the mine which is in the lake, and from that which is in the White River, from the outlet of the lake, to notice the turn of it, and endeavour to prevent the Indians from going to the English, by making them hope for our speedy arrival.

I received a letter from Mr, de la Marque on the 23rd of April, which notified me that he had not yet had any of the Indians; that he has decided to go to find them in the great river Winipigon where they are engaged building their cances.

I think he is leaving the post too early; the Indians might arrive from the Red River after his departure. On the 22nd of the present month I learned from an Indian that a large band of Assiniboines had drawn up on the Lake of the Prairies who were working on their cances to go to the English.

On the 24th I sent Sanschagrin with a hired man to bring them here so as to turn them from going to the English.

On the 30th five Assiniboines arrived towards evening to let me know that a large number of people was coming; we in we much need of them, having done nothing till now.

On the 3rd of May this great band was reduced to very few.

On the 10th, Mr. Nolant, despairing at no more coming, asked leave to set our representing to me that there were no more provisions and that they could be remaillonger. I did my best to induce him to have patience for some time yet, being much vexed that he should go empty.

Seeing him determined to set out, I gave him permission,

On the same day, the 10th, in the evening, fifteen Assimboiles arrived to notify us that there were sixty huts coming and that they had been told we had go

I sent them back with tobacco to hasten their coming. They arrived on the 18th and did their trading in a short time. These left. On the 20th, three men arrived to beg me to delay our departure, that thirty huts would arrive. I made them set out with speed, giving them tobacco to tell their people to hasten their coming.

I discovered these days a river flowing to the west. All the lakes and rivers of which I have had any knowledge go to Mudson's Bay, the Northern Sea, except the Mandan River.

Il sont si beste qu'il pense que lon les ua attendre une partie de l'Estée et quil sera toujours assés temps pour emportér leurs castor. Je leurs promets bien sitost mon fils ariués et les deux hommes que j'ny laissés au mantannes descamper d'iey au plus vitte.

I will obtain complete knowledge of it this summer, either by myself or some person on my behalf.

I have deferred the departure of my canoes till the 28th of the month, waiting uselessly for the people to come; only a few arrived, all postponing their coming till summer.

They are so stupid that they think they will be waited for into the summer, and that there will always be time enough to carry off their beavers.

I promised them that as soon as my son and the two men arrived, whom I had left with the Mandans, I would remove as from this quickly as possible.

No. 2.—CAPTAIN GEORGE DIXON TO EVAN NEPEAN.

Str.—Since I had the Honor of a personal conversation with you have seen Mr. Dalrymple who agrees with me that it is too late for the undertaking by way of Hudson's Bay and that to go by way of Quebec is only losing time. It is his Opinion that a ship should be sent by Government as soon as possible round Cape Horn and a Settlement made on the other side, and from thence the journey should be undertaken.

His reasons for this are. The Russians having got full possession of Cook's River—Prince Wms. Sound; and he makes no doubt but they will soon have settlements to the Southward, as they are in possession of all the Information Mr. Etches is enabled to give, who is at Petersburg on that Business at this present time.

The Americans last year had a ship on the Coast, she as yet is not arrived—two were there under Portuguese colours and I am told of one under Swedish, to say nothing of the Spaniards who we are sure are extending their settlements Northwards.

Upon the whole I am afraid if something is not done and that immediately this valuable Branch of Commerce will be lost to this Country and in consequence of that Loss the Traders both from Hudson's Bay and Canada will find themselves in a bad neighbourhood.

I am, Sir,

Your humble servt.,

GEO, DIXON.

No. 6 Jas. St., Covt. Garden, July 14th, 1789,

No. 3.—ISAAC OGDEN, QUEBEC, TO DAVID OGDEN, LONDON.

An extract of a Letter from Isaac Ogdon, Esq., at Quebec, to David Ogden, Esq., of London, dated Quebec, 7th Novemr., 1789.

In my last Letter I gave you some account of the extent of the Commerce, and of this Country, and as I am convinced that common Report of estimation of Distance, &c., will not be satisfactory to a Philosophic mind, and as since I have had an opportunity of seeing a map or chart of that Country made by a Gentleman of observation and Science, who has actually traversed it, and made his map in it, and with whom I have this week had several Conversations, with the map before me, I am able to give you all the satisfaction you wish for, exclusive of the map itself, which I could not get a copy of, but I hope to send it to you the next Summer.

The following are observations that I took from the map.

It begins at the apper end of Lake Superior, in Lat. 46-47 North, where there is a Portage of near 9 miles before you enter the waters communicating to the

The Mississippi heads in the same Lat, with the head of Lake Superior, about 10 Degrees of Longitude to the westward of it, and from the Portage there is a water Communication to that River, and down it, which is only interrupted by the Falls of St. Anthony. The traders go on this Course Westward, leaving the Mississippi to the Eastward one thousand miles; and may go south west down the Mississippi to

The furs much inferior to those on the North West trading Posts,

From the end of the Portage at the Head of Lake Superior, all the Lakes and waters as high up as Lat. 58 and Long. 124 set first to the North-West and North, and then take a South Easterly and South course, and empty into York River, (Hudson's Bay). These Lakes and Rivers are almost innumerable.

Some of them are very large such as the Lake Winnipeg, Lake of the Woods and others. The Mouth of York River lays in Long, 94 West and Lat, 57. It is an extensive large River setting nearly West, and is supplied by the above Lakes and Rivers which fall into it from the North and South.

The Hudson's Bay Company have Posts several hundred miles west from them, but none to the Northward; -Our Traders pass them at one of their posts about the Lat. 57 and Long. 110. A Chain of Lakes, &c., continue from thence to the Lat. 58 & Long, 124 when with a small Portage they enter into the Rivers and Lakes that run a North West course and empty into other Lakes and Rivers, which all finally communicate and empty into a great Lake called the Slave Lake, which lays between the Lat. of 63 & 65, being three degrees in width, & Long. from 125 to 135, and this Lake is the last water before you come to the Great Northern Ocean, which lays in Lat. $68\frac{1}{2}$ & in the Long. 132 where the water ebbs & flows, of which the Gentleman gave me indubitable Proofs.

The Lakes that empty into the Great Slave Lake, at least the largest of them are named the Arabaska (which has a large River running into Slave Lake of three or four hundred miles at least in Length, its course North West) the Lake, or rather the upper Lake of the Woods, or Lake of the Hills (there being one near Lake Superior) and this Lake extends itself near 8 degrees of Long, and lays in Lat. 60 and the Lake Pelican which is also large, and besides these there are a number of and is very large, it runs North West several hundred miles in Length.

From out of the Great Slave Lake runs a very large River, which runs almost South West, and has the largest Falls on it in the known World, it is at least two miles wide where the Falls are, and an amazing Body of Water. This River leaves the Lake in Lat. 64 & Long. 135, & the Falls are in Long. 141.

The great chain of Mountains that extend from Mexico along the Western or Pacific Ocean, and the Northern Pacific Ocean, terminates in Lat. 621 & Longitude 136, so that the Slave River runs to the Westward of them and emptys into the Ocean by its course in about the Lat. of 59.

There is no wood to the Northward of Slave Lake, there is only a little low Brush which is filled with a species of Buffaloes which have no Tails, but have long Hair on the Back of their Thighs & Legs that resemble a Tail. They are smaller

When you have proceeded thus far, & have looked over your map, you will readily conjecture what River the above Slave Lake River is known by, when it empties into the Ocean. To save you much Trouble I will tell you it is Cook's River, which he penetrated upwards of 70 Leagues North Eastwd., as you will see by his chart. Cook's River as he has laid it down in his chart (that is the Mouth of it) lays in Lat. 59-40 & Long. West 154.

His calculation and laying it down was East Longitude, but if you deduct his Eastern Long, from 360 you will find it to be 154 West. His course up the River was North Easterly, the course of the River out of Slave Lake was South Westerly,

He traversed his River that course near 70 Leagues North Easterly, the River out of Slave Lake is known as far South Westerly, therefore the distance to form the Junction or to ascertain the River to be the same is very short. The Mouth of Slave River at the Lake is in Lat. 64 & Long. 134. The mouth of Cook's River is in Lat. 59-40 & Long. 154. The Course is North Easterly and South Westerly. The Degrees of Long. in that Lat, are but little more than 26 miles upon the Average to a Degree, and the Difference of the Lat, only about 4 Degrees. Hence, and as there is no other known Vent for the River setting out of Slave Lake, nor any other River in that Country to the Northward, or Southward of Slave Lake to form such a River as Cook's River, there can be no doubt, but the Source of Cook's River is now fully discovered and known. There are other Proofs that are incontestable-Cook found a great quantity of drift wood on the Coast.
Banks of the River that emptys into Slave Lake.

This wood is only found on the Neither are there any Rivers of any size from the near Approach of the Mountains to the Sea to the Eastward of the Lake. The Rivers of Arabaska, Slave and Mountain, which empty into Slave Lake are annually twice overflown, in the month of May by the breaking up of the Ice, and in the month of August by the melting of the Snow on the Mountains. Hence then is accounted for the quantity of drift wood which Capt. Cook met with, and these could only be launched into the Ocean from Cook's River-for as I have already observed, there can be no extensive River to the Southward of Cook's River, or the River that empties out of Slave Lake, as the great Chain of Mountains approach to the verge of Slave Lake & River.

Another Proof is, that the Gentleman (from whose Chart and from whom I collected the above Information) met with two Indians who came, as they said up a River from the Northern Pacific Ocean, all the way to the Slave Lake.

They brought him in 1787 a Blanket which they received from Vessels which were at the Mouth of the River; they say that the River he was in is large to the place of Discharge and Navigable, so that if we take the Latitude and Longitude of the two Rivers, the Courses, and all the other circumstances into consideration, little doubt remains that they are the same.

In the Northern part of the Slave Lake there was a great quantity of Ice on the 15th July, 1787, and in that year the Indians from that Lake penetrated North, and where the waters ebb and flow.

At the Northern Ocean they met with and killed a number of Esquimaux Indians, which Indians are to be found only on the Banks or Boundary of the Ocean from the Labrador Coast Northward, and they are found on the whole Extent of that Coast as far North as we have any knowledge. Cook went as far North as 72 or 73 and was there obstructed by the Ice. He was there in August, my Informant tells me, that if he had been a month later, he would have met with no obstruction from Ice in that Quarter. This I believe, and at the middle of September he might have passed the Northern Coast of America, and have returned to Europe by that Rout. On the North Western Coast of America there is a large or long Point of Land that extends to the Lat. of 71 or further, and then the Coast trends South Easterly so that when you are in Long. 128 the Ocean washes the Land in the Lat. of 682.

The Inferences that I shall now draw are,

1st. That Lake Superior lays in the first Range of High Lands between this and the Western Ocean, in Lat. 46, 47 & the waters from thence are discharged by the Rivers St. Lawrence and Mississippi.

2nd. That the waters to the Westward and Northward of the Lake up as high as Lat. 58 & Long. 124 discharge themselves by an Eastern course into York River, which empties into Hudson's Bay,

3rd. That in Lat, 58, lays the great Height of Land from whence the waters divide and run Easterly and Westerly. The former into the Atlantic and the latter into the Pacific Ocean.

4th. That the great Slave Lake is the most Northerly large piece of water before you arrive at the Northern Ocean, and that the River which rises from that Lake empties into the Northern Pacific Ocean, and is the River that Cook discovered.

5th. That an easy communication with, and an advantageous commerce may he carried on by Posts established on Lakes Slave, Arabaska, Pelican, &c. &c., and to deliver the Fruits of their commerce at the Mouth of Cook's River to be then carried to China &c., and that as Cook's River and the Lands on Slave Lake, Arabaska &c. are very fine, some advantageous settlements may be made there which may be

The Country about Arabaska is exceedingly fine, and the Climate more moderate than it is here, which is owing to its Propinquity to the Western Ocean. The Distance is not more than 200 Leagues, it so much, on a West South Western Course. We have a Post there, as we have on the different Lakes from Lake Superior to the upper end of Slave Lake, the number of Posts is 21, in that distance where Traders are posted to trade with the different Tribes of Indians,

The distance from this Town to the Head of Lake Superior is 750 Leagues and from the Head of Lake Superior to the Creat Slave Lake is one thousand Leagues, in the whole 1750 Leagues.

The person from whom I had my Information is Peter Pond, who was supplied with the proper Instruments here to take his Latitude and instructed fully in the knowledge of Astromony &c. &c. His Latitude is undoubtedly Right and his Longitude is near Right. It was taken by some Persons sent from York River seven hundred miles to the westward of it, and from thence by the Courses of the Rivers and Lakes, no great mistake can be made.

Perhaps another use might be made in time of War by this Rout, which would be to convey Intelligence to the East Indies by that Rout

Another man by the name of McKenzie was left by Pond at Slave Lake with orders to go down the River, and from thence to Unalaska, and so to Kamskatsha, and thence to England through Russia &c. If he meets with no accident you may

The season being so far advanced renders a voyage round Cape Horn inexprelicent, I do not say impracticable, for admitting a Vessel to sail the beginning of March, we cannot fairly suppose less than three months to double Cape Horn, which brings it to June, the beginning of winter in South Latitude. Allow three months more to the N. W. Coast of America. This brings it to September, which is the beginning of winter there. But altho' it is therefore an inexpedient season to proceed round Cape Horn on discovery of that Coast It admits a question whether It would not be better under the disadvantage to make the voyage immediately than to procrastinate: for altho' their arrival on the Coast of America would not be at the most proper season for Discovery, there would be some advantage in the passage round Cape Horn, for the Lion's Voyage P. 4, says it is commonly found that the winds in the winter months are favor able to go round Cape Horn from Europe and anfavourable to come out of the South Seas, and by the Journal of Winds at the Falkland Islands this opinion seems to be confirmed as the Easterly winds seem, at least, as frequent as Westerley in June more frequent in July.

Admitting therefore that the Vessel came upon the Coast of America so late even as October we know by experience of the Prince of Wales and Princess Royal who remained on the Coast till after the middle of Novr., that it is practicable to remain on that Coast so late, but these Vessels were at Calamity Harbour in Lat. 54° 12' North and the present object of Discovery is De Fouca's Strait in 481 N. Lat., and if they can find a convenient harbour on that Coast to winter in, much progress may be made by land during the winter towards effecting a communication; and if they choose they can proceed to the Sandwich Islands & return at the early part of Spring,

But however much I may be an enemy to Prograstination, on any account, my opinion is that the present operation ought to be by Hudson's Bay in preference to

The antient idea of a N. W. Passage was by the Hyperborean Sea on the N. of America, altho' I am very far from meaning any imputation on Capt. Cook's memory or abilities. I cannot admit of a Pope in Geography or Navigation.

It is alledged that the Esquimaux's extend to the most remote parts of the North Coasts of America. This the Language given in Cook's voyage proves incontrovertibly in western parts; and it is beyond dispute that the Esquimaux's are confined to the Sea Coasts & its vicinity; that they are not to be found where there is not a communication with the sea, is self evident from the nature of their Boats &c., & therefore the argument is almost demonstrative that there is a Sea Communication, navigable for their Bonts, from Labrador & Greenland to the utmost extremity of America & the Islands.

Whether the Sea Communication is navigable for more than Boats, is a matter well worth examining,

Every modern discovery tends to corroborate the old reports, and in the earliest maps, long before Hudson's voyage, the Bay or Sea which bears his name is Distinctly marked, the represented of much less dimension than it is,

In these maps a channel is represented as communicating the N. W. part of that Sea which corresponds to Repulse Bay, with the Hyperborean Ocean; and this sea communication is conformable to all the Indian Maps, which continue the Sea coast from Churchill in Hudson's Bay to the Copper River

Captain Meares, who was frozen up in Prince-William-Sound, remarks, that there are no High Islands of Icc, such as are found in Cross-Sound in a much lower Latitude. His inference is a natural one, that Cross-Sound is a Sea communication to a higher Latitude where these High Islands of Ice are found

Capt. Portlock fearnt from the Indian at his Hurbour, to the South-ward of Cross-Sound, that there was a Sea beyond the mountains, which environ that Harbour, to the Eastward and the concurrent opinion, of all those who have visited the Coast for many degrees to the Southward, is that the whole is only a Range of Islands.

The opinion therefore of a N. W. Passage is strongly confirmed by the concurrence of the antient Reports, the Indian Maps, and the opinion of those who have recently visited the N. W. Coast. The only allegations to the contrary that Capt. Middleton represents Repulse Bay to be shut up, and that Capt, Cook & Capt, Clerk could not find a Passage by the Strait of Anian now called Behring's Strait.

Whoever looks into Capt. Middleton's Journal will, I am confident prefer the positive testimony of the Indian Maps, to his conjecture, and without controverting the Inference drawn from Capt. Cook's voyage. This can by no manner of argument prove the Sea, from Repulse Bay round to the Westward is unnavigable.

The many great Rivers of Asia disemboguing into that Sea which lyes on the North of It, bring down multitudes of Drifts, which will tend to congregate Ice. That Ice may be so accumulated between Asia and the opposite Coast (the extent Northward of both which is unknown) as to prevent a passage that way. But we have no Reports to indicate any considerable Rivers falling into the Hyperborean Sea from Repulse Bay to the meridian of Cross-Sound & both Mr. Hearne and the Canadian Traders represent the northern part of America as destitute of Timber.

The allegation concerning the Bar of fixed Ice, admitting this as a Fact, instead of an Hypothesis, as it is by some alledged to be, make nothing in favour of what it is brought to prove, for we know the sea is navigable at Spitzbergen to 80° N. Lat. and we have no reason to believe the Coast of the Hyperborean Sea, from Repulse Bay westward extends to 70° N. Lat. The Canadian Traders represent it to lye in Bay westward extends to 10 A. Lat. The Canadian Traders represent it to lye in 68½ N. & Mr. Hearne only alledges it to be in 72° N. Lat. The Danes have a settlement in Davis's Strait in 73° 15' N. Lat., and there is no one circumstance, either in Mr. Hearne's Journal or in the Canadian Reports, to counterstance, in the Canadian Reports, to counterstance, either the Canadian Reports, the Canadian Reports and the Canadian Reports nance an opinion that the Country on the west of the Northern part of the Hudson's Bay is uninhabited in winter; on the contrary Mr. Hearne set out in December from Churchill, where the climate seems to be more temperate than at Albany, altho' the latter be much further to the South, and this is a strong presumption of a Sea to the

But even supposing for a moment, what is not supported by any probable inference, that the navigation westward by the North of Hudson's Bay is impracticable, then we are to consider the matter as confined to an Examination by Land.

The Canadian Traders represent the distance from Quebec to the extremity of Lake Superior to be 750 Leagues or 2250 Geographical miles, & from thence to the Great Slave Lake 1000 leagues, or 3000 more, in the whole 1,750 Leagues or 5250 Geographical miles. Altho' this distance be admitted to be greatly exaggerated, still the estimation operates equally in favour of Hudson's Bay when compared

I will suppose the distance in a direct Line may be admitted in miles instead of Leagues, because I would give the fairest computation, this gives 1750 miles, three a country full of falls & rapids to impede the navigation,

We shall take it however only to the Island in the Arathapescow Lake at 1350

This distance from Hudson's Bay is only 600 miles, of which above 200 is the Chesterfield Inlet known to be navigable. The Canadian Trader represents the Arathapescow Lake to extend 100' to the Eastward of the Island, Mr. Hearne 90'; and a very considerable portion of the remaining 300 miles is occupied by the Dobaunt

By Hudson's Bay the Discoverers would profit by the information of Mr. Turnor whom the Hudson's Bay Company have sent into those parts and from whose Astronomical abilities we may reasonably expect competent Information, whereas Peter Pond's allegation (as reported by Mr. Holland) "that the Observations of the Latitude in his last Journey agreed to a second with the positions in his former map." laid down by Estimation, betrays his ignorance or impudence and invalidates any

Supposing some person of knowledge and veracity to be sent with him it is probable Pon I would hide that Person as is at present alledged of a person whose

It is also to be considered that Pond is a native of the United States, and cannot therefore be deemed to be attached to this Country. He also pretends to the Sovereignty of the Lands adjacent to the Arathapeskow Lake, so that by encouraging him we may be fostering a viper in our bosom,

The most eligible mode of promoting the enterprise would be by sending one vessel round Cape Horn without delay & another to Hudson's Bay; and the Hudson's Bay Company have expressed their readiness to co-operate with Government as the Esquimauxs on the West side of the Bay, are on Friendly Footing with the Hudson's Bay Company's Agents, some of them might probably be induced to accompany the Adventurers in their Canoes. Mr. Hearne mentions that the Esquimauxs winter at a very great Lake, called Yathked, situated to the S. W. of the Chesterfield Inlet, & it is not improbable they may be induced under the English Influence to accompany som of our People across those Lakes & by those Rivers which the Indian Maps represent as connecting Hudson's Bay & the Arathapescow Lake, which would obviate the objection made to the navigation from the Northern Parts of Hudson's Bay, as being a country destitute of Birch-wood for

I cannot omit mentioning the propriety of having Dogs as a watch; for the Indians coming upon their enemies like a Tiger by stealth, The Alarm would be given and their Brutal Ferocity prevented.

Dr. Sir,-My Friend Mr. Wegg the Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company, desires me to say that the Directors of that Company have unanimously determined to send their Sloop of about 90 Tons at the Company's Expence, if Government will send a proper Person in her to examine if any out let can be found from Hudson's Bay to facilitate the communication with the West Coast. They are particularly solicitous that Government would send a proper Person in her that the Publick may be assured of every thing being dar a to effect the desired purpose.

They also wish that two pre Persons may be sent by Government to travel inland to ascertain the shortest communication by the Lakes & Rivers, and The Hudson's Bay Company will defray any reasonable Expence of that undertaking.

No. 7.—CAPTAIN HOLLAND'S PLAN TO EXPLORE FROM QUEBEC.

(Archives, series Q, vol. 49, p. 381.)

The following Planstrikes Mr. Holland as most Eligible for carrying into Effect the proposed Expedition for Discovering, and Exploring the Interior parts of the Northern and Western Quarter of America: Lying between Lake Aurabusquie, or Arathepeskow and the Line of Coast discovered by Capt. Cook:

First. That the Party to be employed should consist of not less than sixteen Persons, including a Surveyor and Assistant: Four Men having some knowledge of Boat Building; Eight Canadians, and Two Indians, for navigating Two, or sometimes Three Canoes, in order at Times, or as occasion may require to be enabled to Detach one, on any separate work which may present itself, such as exploring Rivers, sketching in the side of a Lake opposite to that taken by the Main Party and Chief Surveyor with whom Two Canoes must constantly be stationed for fear of accidents to either; and by keeping the Duplicates, Plans, observations, Journals &c. separated less injury would be sustained by the loss.

One of the great Obstacles to impede such an Expedition, would be the want of Provisions. It will therefore be necessary that a sufficient Quantity (for at least Three years consumption) should be deposited at Aurabusquie, to be conveyed thither from the King's Stores at Fort Michilimacinac, and as our Canoes, from the smallness of their size would not be able to contain the Quantity requisite, a Party, and Canoes, might be spared from the Fort, to aid in the transporting of it to Aurabusquie; from whence our chief operations ought to commence.

The Track from Lake Superior thither being known (and an accurate survey not the object in view) all that appears necessary between those Places is the ascertaining the Latitude and Longitude of some Principal Posts in our Route; and making such Sketches as may be useful to Persons who may follow. This I presume will be all that can be done in the course of the Ensuing Summer, supposing the Party to depart from Quebec about the end of May; at which Place, and at Montreal; a Month at least will be consumed in making the necessary Preparations Prior to our Departure. Little further during the winter season can be done at Aurabusquie, than exploring the Surrounding Country; making Observations; gaining Intelligence; and preparing for pursuing our Route in Spring; which I think should be by mounting the Slave River; thence North West coasting the Slave Lake (which by Information gained at Quebec from Persons who have been in that Country) is not less than Ten Degrees of Longitude; That it discharges itself into a River which takes its course N. West, and that its Distance from thence, to Prince Williams Sound or Cock's River, does not exceed Fifteen Degrees of Longitude.

After reaching the mouth of Cook's River, or whatever other River, we may fall in with on the outset, It will be advisable to stretch along the Coast, to the South East, to observe the course of all such rivers as may appear of importance; until we shall be joined by the Party, intended to depart from Hudson's House, who I apprehend will follow the Coast to the North West, and explore the rivers in like manner untill our Junction.

Sir,-Presuming from the advanced state of the season, that little more can be done this year towards prosecuting the intended exploration of the Interior parts of the North West of America; than in making such arrangements at Quebec during the winter as will enable us to leave that place the Instant the Ice breaks up in Spring; to effect which I conceive it of material consequence to have the necessary Instruments and other articles to be procured in this Country shipped this season for Canada, for the following reasons, That after Sunday next the 1st of August the direct communication by shipping to Quebec closes till next Spring; when from numberless impediments their arrival is frequently retarded till near the commencement of June at which time we should be near Michilianacinak. At the Settling of the Peace in 1762 it was represented to Government that there were a vast number of French Protestants in Canada, for whose benefit it would be proper to send out Clergymen who could preach in that language, though in reality the number was very small, and the English Protestants were ten times as many, and about two years ago amounted to 6,000, and upwards. Accordingly three clergymen with a stipend each of £200 a year, were sent out to their respective Parishes of Quebec, Montreal and Trois Rivières, viz.: Mr. DeMontmollin, Mr. DeLisle and Mr. Viziere. About 6 years ago, a Mr. Geary went over for one winter, with the same salary, but came back to England.

And last year the Revd. Mr. Toosey, who has two Livings in Suffolk, was sent in his room, without being appointed to any settled place wherein to officiate as a clergyman.

These are all the clergy in that extensive Province, except the Revd. Mr. Stuart and Mr. Doty the Society's Missionaries; lately placed, the one at Cataraqui, and the other at Sorrell, with a salary of £50 a year from the Society.

The neglect of church duty appears from repeated accounts sent to the Bp.

of London, and the Society, to be most shameful.

There is not a single Protestant Church in the whole Province.

The French Minister at Quebec, a reformed Jesuit cannot preach in English, and is very negligent in his duty.

The Minister of Trois Rivière is a most dissolute character. He was formerly a Recueille [Recollet] monk at that place, quarrelled with his Abbot, and then got ordained here in England, and went back the Protestant Minister of that place, where he never does any duty at all.

The Minister at Montreal (who is also Chaplain to the Garrison) when he does officiate, it is in the Chapel of the Recollects Convent, on Sunday mornings only, and on Christ-mas day & Good Friday.

The paucity of French hearers hath so far set aside divine service and preaching in French, that the Society have credible information, that for four years together not 4 sermons were preached in that language. The evening service is never performed, and the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper not administered above 3 or 4 times in a year, at Montreal; not so often at Quebec, and not at all at Trois Catechizing is unknown in that country.

The ill effects of this neglect are very obvious, and have been severely felt.

The greater part of the Inhabitants at Montreal are Presbyterians of the Church of Scotland. These, being weary of attending a Minister, whom they did not understand, & for other reasons, have established a Presbyterian Minister, and subscribed liberally to his support. His name is Bethune, and he was late chaplain to the 84th Regiment, & while Mr. Stuart assisted Mr. DeLisle (which he did for a short time) he used constantly to attend the Service of our Church.

Had a worthy Clergyman of our Church settled there, this had been prevented. There are two schools, to each of which a salary of £100 a year is allotted by the Government, the one at Quebec and the other at Montreal. The Schoolmaster's name at Quebec is Tanswell.

The Revd. Mr. Stuart had the School at Montreal for a short time (after his flight from Fort Hunter where he was Missionary) until, about 2 years ago the Govt. thought proper to take half the salary away and divide it between a Mr. Fisher and a Mr. Christie, both Presbyterians. The latter turning profligate, absconded, and the Govt, took that opportunity of giving £25 to a schoolmaster recommended by Joseph Brant, at the New Indian River, name unknown.

But, besides the division of the Salary, there is neither a schoolhouse nor Land appropriated, nor Trustees appointed, nor any Regularities made respecting the application of the £100 salary.

The Inhabitants are opulent and generous & only want a proper person to place and establish a Seminary. In that case, the Income cannot fail of being considerable, The prices for Tuition have been for Latin half a guinea, for English and Arithmetic 2 dollars per month. There is not an English School in the place.

Such was the State of Religion in Canada till the Society sent the two foremen-tioned Clergymen.

The first, Mr. Stuart, is missionary at Cataraqui and to the Mohawks at the Bay of Kenti; and Mr. Vincent is the Society's Schoolmaster there. Mr. Stuart is to divide his time, betwixt the Mohawks & the New Settlements of Loyalists, for which his allowance of £50 is inadequate.

It is hoped, therefore, that Government will make an addition to it, & also appoint Mr. Stuart Chaplain to the Garrison at Cataraqui, and give instructions to the Governor, to allot a Glebe, & to erect a Church & Parsonage-house and also a School-house, with a Salary & Land.

The same is desired respecting Mr. Doty at Sorrel (except that there is no Garrison there).

A Missionary is wanted also at Johnstown, 36 miles above Coteau de Lac, with the assistance of Government.

There are Loyalists settled from Cataraqui as far as the Indian Boundaries, where a Clergyman may be of use, & they desire one.

There are 44 families of the Church settled at Oswegatche where a Mr. John Bryan at present officiates.

There is a Settlement likewise of the Six Nations at a Village upon the Grand River, 40 miles above Niagara, who stipulated with General Haldimand that Government should build them a church & furnish them with a Minister & Schoolmaster, Sir J. Johnson has already established the latter & pays him. (Note, there was not a resident Clergyman at Niagara during the whole war).

The Society would find a Schoolmaster at Montreal, if put upon a proper Establishment.

As Mr. Toosey has no fixed employment, and is an Englishman, might not be be directed to officiate either at Quebec or Montreal, or Trois Rivières, where it is presumed that Churches ought to be built?

According to this Representation, there will be wanted at least three more English Clergymen, for which there must be an assistance from Government, in addition to the Society's. It is hoped that, as it was in the first sending out Ministers to Nova Scotia Government will make an allowance to such Ministers as may go from hence, and find them a passage.

VERMONT NEGOTIATIONS.

No. 1.—GOVERNOR SIMCOE TO MR. DUNDAS.

Avoust the 2nd 1791.

Sir,—As I understand from Mr. Levi Allen of Vermont that He is in expectation of being admitted to an interview with you, I conceive that it will not be disagreeable to you if I take the Liberty of communicating to you those circumstances with which I have been acquainted relative to his former transactions with Lord Grenville; and some few observations which I flatter myself may give you some insight into his views, preparatory to such conversation as you shall think proper to hold with

Mr. Allen as commissioned under the great Seal of Vermont presented a Memorial to the Committee of Privy Council on the 13th June 1789, Stating the wishes of Vermont to form a commercial intercourse with this country, a Similar Alemorial having been presented to the Secretary of State, upon Ld. Grenville's Requisition. The Lords of the Committee of the Privy Council for trade made a report upon it, full of information on the 17th of April 1790: a twelvementh having nearly clapsed since the original Report had been presented. In the first conversation that I had the bound to had with Ld. Grenville or Condition matters. that I had the honor to hold with Ld. Grenville on Canadian matters, I took the Liberty of pressing upon his Lordship the necessity of cultivating the good disposition of Vermont, of whose importance his Lordship seemed to have formed a just value by having already transmitted Allens Letter for the Opinion of the Privy Council; & I then told his Lordship that totally unapprized of the goodness He had to think of me for the Government of Upper Canada, & unconnected with his Majesty's Ministers, I had come to town with the determination to do my utmost in support of an Object which seemed to have been hitherto unattended to (insomuch that Allen was about to depart) but which I had always considered of the greatest consequence to this Country. The appearance of the Spanish War added to the propriety of forming this mutual connection, and I waited on I.d. Grenville with Mr. Allen, his Lordship gave him a hundred pounds, which Allen received as his annual compensation for Losses as a Loyalist which He affirms himself uniformly to have been, & in consequence to have suffered a long Imprisonment to the destruction of his property.

The Misfortunes of the British Army to the Southward prevented Vermont from joining Great Britain as is evident from the correspondence in your office between the Allens Gen'l. Haldimand & Sir II. Clinton.

This province has now two separate Interests: That part which borders on the North River naturally wishes for a connection with New York; Robinson the late tiovernor is the Chief of this description of men: the other, by far the Larger Division, & what is of more importance, unlimited in its Lands, & therefore hourly encreasing in its population, from the circumstance of their waters flowing into the St. Lawrence is naturally disposed to a connection with Canada; of this Party are the Allens & Chittenden, at this moment (as L. Allen believes) The Governor; and who the Past year excepted has been the Governor of this powerful State from its commencement. Levi Allen's first mission was to Lord Dorchester; his Lordship opened the Trade to Vermont, except in some few particulars, at the same time he did so, to all the Inhabitants without distinction who lived upon the shores

Levi Allen came to London; He wished the Trade to be further enlarged, & some inconveniences under which it laboured to be done away.

He told me that Commerce was the "opening wedge" by which G. Britain could work upon & command Vermont; & in the Spirit of the expression, & with undissembled Intentions, fully as ambitious in the point of honor, as they were self interested in that of Commerce. He was anxious to return to Vermont directly, unconnected with the Canada Merchants, & independent of them, with a cargo suited to the market, that He might make a display of his services, & of the Commercial advantages that He had obtained & might strengthen by these means his family interest & connections & prevent Vermont from listening to the overtures of

Among others, I gave him some credit & procured him more, but his voyage was delayed by his hands being pressed, & other mishaps; so that he could not reach the Sorrel; but bore away for Georgia. He is returned with a sufficient cargo to pay his debts, but unfortunately, at present there being little vent for that commodity, He has been obliged, to warehouse it at Liverpool.

I think it proper to submit this succinct account to you; to which I add that I have an opinion of his Honesty; & that I have no doubt, but that his Brother Ira Allen (Ethan being lead) is of the same sentiments that I believed him to have been of during the War. "That a neutrality was the proper policy of Vermont, but that if she could not preserve it her interest lead her to join Canada."

Since Levi Allen's absence an alteration has taken place in the affairs of Vermont, Chittenden suddenly lost his election, & Robinson was chosen Governor; &it is affirmed that Vermont has joined Congress. Allen says, that it was by surprize and accident, that Robinson obtained the Government that Chittenden is now rechosen, & that He believes Congress has resolved to admit Vermont into the Confederation, but that Vermont has not yet decisively resolved to join Congress. This seems to be matter of conjecture the not without probability; perhaps Government may have better information on this head. Allen states, That the meeting of the Assembly of Vermont is in October. That he wishes to be present at it, altho' he should fail in what seems to be the great object of his ambition, He being able by a Cargo, directly imported from this Country to exemplify the advantages of a Com-

By the admission of Vermont & Kentucky, there are now fifteen States in the Alliance, & I beg leave to offer a few remarks why in my opinion a connection with each of these new States, is more necessary & profitable to G. Britain than with any other separate State of the whole Confederacy. The original United States passed the Tzeniths of their power, almost, at the moment of their Existence. This was effected partly by the British Acts of Parliament which restricted their West India Trade, but chiefly by the immense Emigration "hich took place to the Southward, wasting their Strengths at the present, & offering at no very distant period natural Allies to those who shall command the Mouth of the Mississippi, or be in possession of the Chain of Lakes which stretch themselves out parallel to the Line of Emigrations.

Vermont has grown and is daily growing into great strength, her position in the Neighbourhood of Quebec leaves that province absolutely at her mercy. She can strike at the ill fortified Capital, or cut off all the Communications of the St. Lawrence as she pleases, on the other Hand, in Alliance with Canada, she presents a formidable Barrier of Mountains, which are impregnable fences against the United States.

Kentucky has not so many advantages in a military view for offence or defence, but in case of a rupture with Spain her alliance would be of the utmost importance, The Committee of the Privy Council in their Report of April the 17th 1790 state, that the Eastern States of America wish to admit Vermont, & the Southern States, Kentucky into the Confederation as reciprocal Ballances.

The United States are certainly divided in Interest, & the British connection with them stands upon that footing, which requires great circumspection. The Commerce of the Southern States is an immediate advantage; The Power of the Eastern an Object of future approhension & caution. Vermont & Kentucky have certainly separate & distinct interests from either; with the Southern States; they cannot export their Commodities by means of the Atlantick; nor with the Eastern can they be injured by the carrying Trade being in the possession of Great Britain. It is upon the ground of these separate Interests (even supposing Mr. Levi Allen's Ideas that Verment has not finally joined Congress to be ill-founded) That I humbly conceive He may yet be of important Service; &, Sir, I have intimated as much to him. I do not conceive it to be probable that Vermont can have submitted to participate in the present Debt of the United States, but it is reasonable to presume that in case of her admission into the alliance, she may have agreed to pay a certain portion to the Expences of the federal Government now; It is of the utmost Importance to G. Britain that she would not upon any account suffer imposts to be laid upon British Manufactures, or permit duties arising from them to be collected on her Lakes or Rivers for the use of Congress. The result of such a determination on the part of Vermont would be, that she would become the storehouse for Smuggling all British Commodities into the Eastern States, facilitated by the Speedy means of transporting them in the Winter over the Snow upon Sleighs, and by this very traffic Vermont would gradually alienate herself from the governing Powers of the Congress, and rivet more strongly her natural connections with Canada. I also intimated to Mr. Allen that as the United States are divided in their Sentiments upon commercial matters into two parties, the Representatives of Vermont must give her decided voice with the Southern States who are against laying any duties & further Imposts on the British Commerce, as G. Britain tho' she should have the utmost regard for Vermont now that State has joined the Alliance cannot probably make any distinction if she shall be obliged in her own defence to retaliate by duties & prohibitions. These points, at the least, I should think the Allens &c. &c. might carry; & the voice of Vermont directed by its own Interest and that of Great Britain against

The general opinion of the Eastern States.

The example would have great influence on that connection which It is hoped we shall obtain with Kentucky, (The majority of whose Inhabitants I have authentic Intelligence are averse to the union with Congress) & not only so, but on all those Settlers on the Rivers which flow into the Lakes & who may be taught to reject as unconstitutional and oppressive every Idea of such federal duties being levied upon them as are raised on the Inhabitants of the Sea Coasts.

Mr. Allen does not know how far the Government of Canada has been directed to accede to his former requisions; nor does he press them. He seems inclined to wish them to be reserved as a Boon to cement that connection which is his favorite

I have thus, Sir, endeavoured to state to you the views of Allen; and I must beg of you not to be prepossessed against him from his uncultivated appearance. The Family are remarkable for their sound sense, & spirit of enterprize; & the prejudices which have been excited against them principally rose from the misrepresentations of the N. Yorkers. I have endeavoured to explain Allen's commercial Object & the publick advantages to which it may lead. He has lately received his pension; He would not be too late even now, for the Sorrel with merchandize, but He cannot afford to risk the demurrage of the Vessel. I submit to you whether an advance on his Pension or some other means might not be of Essential Service in enabling him to carry bis Points, & appear with consequence among his Country men at a Critical Period? I have not intimated in the slightest manner any such idea to him. Yet, as I can never but be of opinion that Great Britain is not for a moment secure of Canada, in its present weakness, unless she has firm friendships with Vermont, I am sure that you will have the goodness to pardon my zeal in seizing every means to promote the great cause in which my whole Heart is engaged; & in this principle, will read with a favoable eye the circumstances & Opinions which I have felt it my duty with all deference to submit to your consideration,

Sir, your most obt. & most Humble St.

I arrived at Halifax in 27 days, the next morning sailed for Boston, arrived there the sixth day, and the third day reached Windsor in Vermont, the place of the Annual Session of the General Assembly, a few days after they had convened; and to Massembly held about six months previous, to the then stated term, and that previous thereto there had been a convention of deputies from each Town, at which convention, & after confirmed in the adjourned Session of the Legislature, the Junction with the close of it (Twenty one days) during which time found, if the Junction aforesaid Mr. Nepean directed me in case the Junction was actually settled, by no means to Vermont Language, the great advantages that would have accrued to Vermont had they were;

The Truth of which was acknowledged by a great Majority of both Houses, & almost all condemned the measure as premature, aledging that if they in future found a necessity of joining Congress, it was time enough to join when that necessity appeared, & that they felt themselves much hurt that a set of designing knaves merely to obtain places of Honour and profit, should lead the State by the nose blindfold to perpetrate an act to the disgrace of the Legislature, subversive of the Interest of the State, & for which Posterity would have cause to curse them. Further, I beg leave to observe my whole dependance was and I certainly knew the Legislature of Vermont met only the 2d Thursday in October annually, as by Law established, except by adjournment or a Special Assembly, or some Emergency called by proclamation of the Governor for the time being, with advice of Council, and I am amazed that the Secretary of State nor any one in England had no information of the Convention, or adjourned Session of the General Assembly in Vermont, the both had been convened six months before I left England.

I am fully satisfied if I had arrived last year with the well chosen assortment of goods agreeably to the original plan, Vermont would not have joined the Union, at least would have been procrastinated, which would have amounted to the same thing, for if the matter had not been done at the time in the manner it was hurried on, the same would not have taken place ad infinitum. The goods coming through Canada directly from the manufacturers in England and sold cheap in Vermont would have opened the eyes of the people, more than all the wise learned men of Europe would have done by Logical Orations. The facts were General Ethan Allen being dead Ira Allen Esq. thro' his cursed lucrative Ideas was afraid of loosing Lands adjoining Canada Line, Therefore was silent, a number wanted to go to Congress & tho' four only would be sent yet 44 at least expected the appointment, all their Influence & oratory was not sparingly scattered over the State; Governor Chittenden tho' really opposed to the measure, thought it unpopular to oppose it, so poor Vermont had not one of any considerable consequence to say a word for her real Interest, (in popular Governments the Governor is a Cypher). I am grievously disappointed, & shockingly mortified, that after so many of the leading & realy the first men in and out of Office in the State, should previous to my going to England, give me such strong assurances, they never would join Congress; but on the Contrary would wish to become a British Province; and then without the least appearance of any necessity whatever suffer the Junction to take place, without the least

Instead of writing this long letter, under my disappointment I should set off for Quebec in order to have a personal Interview, but your orders to me in England were to the contrary, which orders as any other I may receive from time to time, shall be punctually attended to, the same as tho' I was on Military duty under your

NAVY HALL, August 5th 1794.

Sir, -- Having a safe opportunity by Captain Vandeleur I can not resist offering to you the enclosed communication which I received thro' the Secretary of this Province, Mr. Jarvis, from the Governor of the State of Vermont and which I have formerly transmitted to Lord Dorchester.

Many paragraphs have of late appeared in the New York papers intimating that the Inhabitants of Vermont are disposed to commence Hostilities against Canada. some very respectable people of Vermont were with me when I received such News Papers; who without hesitation affirmed that they were fabricated by the People of the State of New York, that they did not contain the sense of the People of Vermont but were meant to stir up enmity between the British Government and the Vermon-

I enclose to you a News Paper that has lately fallen into my hands and which contains some paragraphs that evidently are of such a texture and fabrication.

I cannot but deplore that means have not been taken to discriminate the foundation on which the Proprietors of the Lands in Vermont are at issue, with the Proprietors of Lands in Canada from the general and more extensive Principle on which Great Britain retains the Jurisdiction, of certain territories, which surround those Posts; the evacuation of which has been suspended untill the Treaty of 1783 shall be

The Distinction, before I left England, I did myself the honor of remarking to you, Sir, and enforcing the policy of an immediate settlement of this Contention. The Proprietors of Vermont must inevitably be now forced to shelter themselves under the right that State has to assert its Jurisdiction for the recovery of those Lands; which Jurisdiction they probably would not have concerned themselves about, could they from any Quarter have received their profits and on the side of Vermont, Great Britain is engaged in a dispute, almost inveterate, which has not for its basis a National cause, but originates from an unjustifiable grant of the Canadian Government, which could not have been supported, had not the Revolution taken place, and the State of New York, and New Hampshire, been separated from

There are Sir abundant proofs in your office of the facts as mentioned by Governor Chittendon and Lt. Colonel Mathews the late General Sir F. Haldimand Aid du Camp, and Sir Henry Clinton can illustrate them.

The people of Vermont with whom I have spoken all agree, that State would gladly embrace and support a neutrality, that their Country might not become the

To what extent the people of Vermont who are friendly to Great Britain may be of real Service, It is impossible to say, but there are such probable grounds for supposing they may become highly beneficial that I feel it a duty to make this present statement to you, Sir, most earnestly hoping that Lord Dorchester has already thought it an object worthy of his consideration.

I have the honor to be, Sir, Your most obedt. & Humble Servt.,

J. G. SIMCOE.

No. 4.—STATEMENT BY MR. JARVIS.

(Archives, series Q, vol. 281-1, page 269.)

On the 12th of January I called on Governor Chittenden at his house in Williston on Onion River and spent that night with him in company with Colonel Fay, (his private Secretary and Secretary of State) in the course of the Evening the conversation turned on the war in Europe. When Governor Chittenden expressed a very great disapprobation of the popular measures in France "that if Congress takes "a part in the War in favor of France I am sure Vermont will never accede to it but "will make the best bargain they can for themselves (addressing himself to me) I beg you will give my compliments to Governor Simeoe, and tell him that the "Governor and Council of Vermont are of the same opinion that they were in the "year 1781 when Colonel Fay was three weeks on board a King's Vessel in Lake "Champlain negotiating a union with Canada &c. &c. when the news of Lord Corn-" wallis's misfortune reached Vermont, which suspended the negotiation and finally put an end to it. That Vermont has nothing to gain by entering into a combination to defend the Sea Coasts, on the contrary every thing to lose—their Commerce (through Canada) ruined, their whole Country open to inroads of British Indians "&c."

The 14th of January I called on General J. Allen at Colchester and on Colonel Allen at Fairhaven, both of whom were concerned in the negotiation of 1781 who informed me that Vermont still adhered to their former sentiments with regard to their union.

BEFORE AND AFTER THE BATTLE OF EDGE HILL.

No. 1.—BOUQUET TO GENERAL AMHERST.

Carlisle, 29th June, 1763.

SIR,-The two light Infantry Companies of the 42nd and 77th Regimts arrived here yesterday

Å general Panick has seized this extensive Country and made the Inhabitants abandon their Farms and their mills: The Agent employed by the Contractors could not on that account provide the Carriages and Provisions I had ordered to be ready by the 28th Instant: and I have been obliged to send back to Lancaster for Flour and Waggons, which I expect will be here about the 8th of July when I shall proceed forthwith to Fort Pitt.

I had this day a Letter from that Post dated the 18th containing nothing material. To morrow morning a Party of Two officers and 30 men, with a guide will march for Bedford, from whence they are to proceed with some Woodsmen acquainted with the Country to Fort Ligonier.

There appears to be few Savages yet on these frontiers, but every Tree is become an Indian for the terrified Inhabitants.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

H. B.

His Excellency Sir Jeffry Amherst.

No. 2.—BOUQUET TO GENERAL AMHERST.

CARLISLE, 3d July, 1763.

SIR,-An Express from Fort Pitt brings this moment the fatal account of the loss of our Posts at Presqu'Isle, Le Bœuf, and Venango, your Excellency will see in the inclosed Letters all the Particulars I had of this unexpected disaster.

As the Destruction of the important Post of Presqn' Isle will occasion some alteration in your first Plan, I beg you will favor me with your orders concerning the Troops you have destined for this Department.

By the inclosed Return of Provisions at Fort Pitt, that Post does not stand so immediately in need of a relief, as to make us run great Risks to force a Convoy up, before the Provinces can give us other Assistance.

I doubt if on account of the Harvest Pennsylva can have Troops raised and equipped in less that six weeks or two months, during which time they are incapable of any defence, for want of a Militia Law.

The Savages must soon disperse for want of Provisions and their first Impetuosity cooled, they will be more easily dealt with.

I shall however move forward as soon as I can collect the Horses and Carriages I want which the great consternation and flight of the Inhabitants makes very difficult.

I have required the Governor to send their Arms and Ammunition and proposed to collect the People in this Frontier in a few well stockaded Places inclosing Mills, as a Retreat for themselves, their families & Provisions, to keep possession of the Country, and if the Enemy should penetrate, destroy all kinds of eatables, which could not be secured in these Strong Holds, and might fall in the hands of the Savages, but from the nature of this Government, I suppose nothing will be done in

The Second Compy, of the 42d will be here the 5th and I expect the Remains of the two Regts. on the 6th or Seventh.

I have secured all the Provisions I could get in this Country, 100 Head of Cattle; 200 Sheep and about 3,000 lbs. of Fine Powder from the Indian Traders. I expect the Flour and Waggons from Lancaster by the 8th.

I received your Letter of the 25th June and shall continue in the service the men so timely raised by Mr. Croghan which the Province will I hope take into Philadelphia, 19 July, 1763.

Dear Sir,-By Sir Jeffry Amherst's Order, I waited upon the Governor here, with a letter of Sir Jeffrys, I added to the arguments he used every thing I thought coud tend to induce The Governor and the Commissioners appointed to superintend the raising of 700 men, to put these under your command, and finding these gentlemen were not determined by what they had read or heard, I left them to consult and went and supplicated the aid & influence of Mr. Norris, as I found that the Governor would readily agree to a measure if proposed by them, that he durst not seem otherwise to favor, I tryd to persuade Mr. Norris, that the Indians coud not by any defensive plan be prevented from ravageing the frontiers which they would effectually be by The General's plan of carrying the war into their Country, but, that to effectuate this, it was necessary that the 700 men should be put under Sir Jeffrey's command, in order to defend the forts & set the regulars at liberty to act. I threatened to abandon the forts, and I urged the Illegality of arming men without their being Subject to the Commander in Chief's orders, that this innovation was a personal affront to Sir Jeffrey, whose actions deserved the confidence of the province, but I found all my pleading vain, and believe Ciceros would have been so, I never saw any man so determined in the right, As these people are in their absurdly

I hope you have success with the force you have with you these people don't

CAMP AT BEDFORD,

Sir,-1 recd yesterday your Excellency's Letters of the 16th, with their Inclosures. The Signal for Indian Messengers and all your Directions will be observed. I shall procure & transmit to you Lists of the Persons killed or taken by the Savages this way. Three more have been massacred near Shippensburgh since we left it, but we have not perceived yet any of the villains.

The Troops and Convoy arrived here yesterday, where I must give them two Days Rest to enable them to proceed; the Horses having greatly suffered by the bad

We brought so far all the sick, but one, of the two Regts., to be left by way of Garrisons along the Communication.

We lost some men by Desertion from Carlisle; four of which having been taken up & severly punished, I hope we shall lose no more of them.

The Government of Pensylva having repeatedly refused to Garrison Fort Lyttleton (a Provincial Fort) even with the kind of Troops they have raised, I have stationed some inhabitants of the neighbourhood in it, with some Provisions &

The little Post of Juniata being totally decayed & having no time to repair it, I have evacuated it.

I have at this Post one officer of the 77th and thirty men of both Regts. who are unable to march. They will secure it, with the assistance of the Inhabitants;

Having observed on our march that the Highlanders lose themselves in the Woods as soon as they go out of the Road, & cannot, on that acct., be employed as Flankers; I have commissioned a person to procure me about thirty woodsmen to march with us. Their Services are obvious, & if I can get them to go on, I would send them with the Detachment to Presqu' Isle. This is very irregular in me, but the circumstances render it so absolutely necessary that I hope you will approve of Colonel Robertson has communicated to me the bad success of his Representations to the Gov^r of Pennsylv^a & his Commissioners; The unanswerable arguments in your Letters would have made Impression on any other set of men; I hope that we shall be able to save that infatuated People from Destruction, in spite of all their Indeavors to defeat your vigorous measures.

I meet everywhere with the same Backwardness, even among the most exposed of the Inhabitants, which makes everything move on heavily, & is digusting to the last Degree. I have heard nothing from Ft Pitt since the 26th of June, & several expresses sent from hence must have been interrupted. I have sent one of our two Indian Prisoners from hence to the Ohio for Intelligence, who is to meet me on the way; I know him, & having his Wife & Children as Hostages for his

If I am obliged to make use of that Power, would you have the Sentences transmitted to you for your Approbation.

The Acet, of the Reduction of the 77th & of several offices, of the 2nd Battn. of the 42d Regt. now with me is arrived very unseasonably. We march on the 28th. I shall not write to you before we get to Pittsburgh, unless something

CAMP AT BEDFORD, 26th July, 1763.

DEAR SIR,-I was favoured yesterday with your Letter of the 19th in which you are pleased to inform me of the Deafness of Govern and commissioners to the most urgent Arguments of the Generals Letters & your own warm Pleading to support them. This is no Disappointment to me, as I know their Principles & constant Indifference to the Service. Had I been in Town, I may venture to say. from the confidence Mr. Hamilton seemed to have in me, that I might have prevented his consenting to the absurd vote of his Assembly, the bad consequences of which he was not aware of: and if that had been the case, the cries of the Frontier Inhabitants would soon have obliged their Representatives to raise Troops upon the former Footing.

Tho' I find myself utterly abandoned by the very People I am ordered to proteet, I shall do my best to save them from Destruction, & should I fail in the attempt, it is a satisfaction to me that nothing has been omitted on the General's side or ours, to obtain that necessary aid which might have left nothing to chance.

I think myself sufficiently strong to execute all my orders without them, but I labour under a great Disadvantage for want of men used to the woods, as I cannot send a Highlander out of my sight, without running the Risk of losing the man, which exposes me to a surprise from the Skulking Villains I have to deal with.

I find the last Winter has greatly hurt our Roads & swept off the remainder of our temporary Bridges, which makes me crawl so slowly that I have employed 36 Hours in going 3 miles. I am obliged to halt two Days here to refit my shattered Carriages & tired Horses; We march on the 28th. I have borne, very patiently, the ill usage of this Province; having still hopes that they will do something for us & therefore have avoided to quarrel with them. If they raise Troops at the next meeting of their Assembly, it will be necessary that they be put from the Beginning, under the Inspection of one of the King's Officers; as I know they have no Body able to form them into shape. I am much obliged to you for your good wishes.

I am most sincerely &c.,

CAMP AT EDGE HILL, 26 Miles From FORT PITT, 5th August, 1763.

SIR,-The Second Instant the troops and convoy arrived at Ligonier where I could obtain no Intelligence of the Enemy, the Expresses sent since the beginning of July, having been either killed or obliged to return, all the Passes being occupied by the Enemy. In this Uncertainty, I determined to leave all the Waggons with the Powder, and a Quantity of Stores and Provisions at Ligonier, and on the 4th proceeded with the Troops and about 340 Horses Loaded with Flour. I intended to have halted to day at Bushy Run (a mile beyond this Camp) and after having refresh'd the men and Horses to have marched in the night over Turtle Creek a very dangerous defile of several miles commanded by high and craggy Hills. But at one o'Clock this afternoon, after a march of 17 miles, the Savages suddenly attack'd our

The savages returned to the attack and the Fire being obstinate on our Front and Extending along our Flanks, we made a General charge with the whole line to dislodge the savages from the Heights, in which attempt we succeeded, without obtaining by it any decisive advantage, for as soon as they were driven from one Post they appeared on another till by continued Reinforcements they were at last able to surround us and attack the Convoy left in our rear; This obliged us to march Back to Protect it, The Action then became General & though we were attacked on every side and the Savages exerted themselves with uncommon Resolution they were constantly repulsed with Loss. We also suffered considerably. Capt. Lieut. Graham and Lieut. James McIntosh of the 42d are killed and Capt. Graham wounded of the R. A. R. Lieut. Dow who acted as A. D. Q. M. G. is shot through the Body. Of the 77th Lieut. Donald Campbell and Mr. Peebles, a volunteer are wounded.

Our loss in men, including Rangers and Drivers exceeds sixty killed or wounded. The Action has lasted from one o'Clock till night and we expect to begin again at Daybreak. Whatever our Fate may be I thought it necessary to give your Excellency this Early Information that you may at all events take such measures as you may think proper with the Provinces for their own safety and the Effectual relief of Fort Pitt, as in the case of another Engagement, I fear Insurmountable difficulties in protecting and Transporting our Provisions, being already so much weakened by the losses of this day in men and horses besides the additional necessity of carrying the wounded, whose situation is truly Deplorable.

I cannot sufficiently acknowledge the constant assistance I have received from Major Campbell during this long action nor express my admiration of the cool and steady behaviour of the Troops who did not fire a shot without orders and Drove the Enemy from their Posts with Fixed Bayonets: The conduct of my officers is much

No. 7.—GENERAL AMHERST TO BOUQUET.

NEW YORK, 25th August, 1763.

Sir,—I am to own your Letter of the 5th Instant, which I received the Day before yesterday, and I should have been very glad had it been Dated from Fort Pitt; Altho' I have no Doubt but you will have Reached that Post the Day atter; for the Resolution and steadiness of your Little Army, which you so much Commend, will

I trust, have Enabled you to Baffle any future Attempts of the Savages.

I Regret the Loss of Captain Lt. Graham & Lieut. McIntosh; and Am Extremely Sorry for those that are wounded.—But I hope the Latter will Recover. The Savages, no Doubt, have mustered up all their Strength on the Communication, to Attack you: and their way of Fighting would lead them to fall upon the weakest part; the Rear, when they found they could make no Impression on the Front; your Convoy was too Essential an Article to be Left behind, otherwise the pursuing of the Savages, when once they gave way, would have been the Surest Method of Making the Advantage you had gained Decisive.

Upon this Occasion I have thought proper to appoint Lieut. Balneavis, who altho not the Senior Lieutenant belonging to the Regiment; is the Eldest on Service to the Captain Lieutenancy, and I herewith Enclose you a Commission to him accordingly. The Behavior of Mr. Peebles, on former Occasions, particularly at Newfoundland, and his being wounded now makes me Break thro' the Orders I Have Received from His Majesty respecting the Reduced Officers, that I may provide for him. As I Flatter myself the King will be graciously Pleased to approve thereof: And I Enclose you a Commission Appointing Mr. Peebles to be Ensign in the 42d Regiment, which you will please to Deliver to him: Acquainting both Captain Lt. Balneavis and Ensign Peebles that they have no Fees to pay for those Commissions,-The Infatuated Obstinancy of the People in Power of the Province of Pensylvania Renders any further Application from me unnecessary, as they have not Paid the least regard to the Pressing Instances, I have from time to time Urged to the Governor for exerting themselves like men, in the Defence of the Lives and Propertys of the Back Settlers: But I have a very Different Account from Virginia: for the Lt. Governor, Immediately on the Receipt of my Letter, Desiring him to Concert the properest Methods for the Protection of that Colony, by Virtue of the Militia Law, which happily Subsists there, gave orders for Assembling One Thousand Men, in two Bodys, of 500 Each, giving the Command to Colonel Stephen and Colonel Lewis: The Former, I find by a Letter from Captain Ourry of the 17th Instant and which came to hand with yours, had Reached Fort Cumberland, with about 406 men: And that he had on his March thither, by a Detachment Routed a Party of Indians: Killed and Scalped one; Wounded Several; and Recovered two Prisoners and three Scalps: A Spirit-like this, will soon Intimidate the Villains. And as I am Sensible you will not have men to Spare for Escorting the Provisions &c. When you send forward the troops to Presqu'Isle according to my former orders, I write to Colonel Stephen, desiring him to Employ his men, on the Communication for its Security, and likewise in such Offensive Scouts as may be Judged necessary, for Clearing the Country of Any Partys of Savages that may be lurking for an opportunity to do mischief.

I have also a Letter from Governor Sharpe Informing me that he had furnished the Commanding Officers of the Militia on the Frontiers of Maryland with Arms and Ammunition and likewise sent Instructions to the Commanding Officers for Assembling the Militia; and Acting Offensively against the Indians, as occasion Might Require.

Captain Ourry will Inform you that I have Directed Messrs, Plumste ' & Franks, to Forward what Provisions he may Demand for the Troops with you, Sir John St. Clair has unluckily been Taken Ill, and is at Newton; but I shall Order him to the Communication again, so soon as he is able to go.

I am in hourly Expectation of Receiving good news from the Detroit; as the Reinforcements with Captain Dalyell and Captain Loring must have Reached that Place long ago. And the 46th & 80th with other Detachments, will be at Niagara in a very Short-time; So that I have no Doubt but you will soon find, that the Spirit of the Savages will begin to fail.

I Have only at Present to add, that the Commendations you give to Major Campbell, and all the Officers and Men under your Command, when Attacked by the Indians, and during the whole of that Affair; give me a Sensible pleasure.

And to Assure you that I am, Sir, Your most Obedient Servant,

JEFF. AMHERST.

CAMP AT BUSHY RUN, 6th August, 1763.

SIR,-I had the honour to inform your Excellency in my Letter of yesterday of our first Engagement with the Savages.

We took Post last night on the Hill where our convoy halted when the Front was attacked (a Comodious Piece of Ground and just spacious enough for our purpose) there we encircled the whole and covered our wounded with the Flour Bags.

the t His In the morning the savages surrounded our Camp at the Distance of about 500 yards, and by shouting and yelping quite round that extensive circumference thought to have Terrified us with their numbers. They attacked us early and under favour of an incessant Fire made several bold efforts to penetrate our camp, and the' they failed in the attempt our situation was not the less perplexing having experienced that brisk attacks had Little Effect upon an Enemy who always gave way when pressed and appeared again Immediately: our Troops were besides Extremely fatigued by the long march and as long Action of Preceeding Day, and Distressed to the last Degree by a Total want of water much more Intolerable than the Enemy's Fire.

Tied to our Convoy we could not lose sight of it without Exposing it and our wounded to fall a prey to the Savages, who pressed upon us on every side, and to move it was Impracticable having lost many horses, and most of the Drivers stupified by Fear, hid themselves in the Bushes or were incapable of hearing or obeying any orders.

The Savages growing every moment more Audacious, it was thought proper still to increase their confidence; by that means if possible to Intice them to come close upon us or to stand their Ground when Attacked. With this view two Companies of Light Infantry were ordered within the Circle, and the Troops on their right and left opened their files and filled up the space: that it might seem they were intended to cover the retreat. The third Light Infantry Company, and the Grenadiers of the 42d were ordered to the support of the two first Companies, This manœuvre succeeded to our wish for the few Troops who took Possession of the Ground lately occupied by the two Light Infantry Companies, being brought in nearer to the centre of the Circle, the Barbarians mistaking these motions for a retreat hurried headlong on, and advancing upon us with the most Daring Intrepidity galled us exceedingly with their heavy Fire; but at the very moment that certain of success they thought themselves masters of the Camp, Major Campbell at the head of the two first Companies sallied out from a part of the Hill they could not observe and fell upon their right Flank, they resolutely return'd the fire, but could not stand the Irresistable Shock of our men, who rushing in among them killed many of them, and put the rest to Flight, the orders sent to the other two Companies were delivered so timely by Captain Bassett and executed, with such celerity and spirit that the routed savages, who happed to run that moment before their Front received their full Fire when uncovered by the Trees. The four Companies did not give them time to load a second time, nor even to look behird them, but pursued them till they were totally dispersed. The left of the Savages which had not been attacked were kept in awe by the remains of our Troops posted on the Brow of the Hill for that purpose, nor durst they attempt to support or assist their Right, but being witness to their Defeat followed their Example and Fled.

Our brave men disdained so much as to touch the dead body of a vanquished Enemy that scarce a scalp was taken except by the Rangers and Pack Horse Drivers.

The woods being now cleared, and the pursuit over, the four Companies took Possossion of a Hill in our Front and as soon as Litters could be made for the wounded, the Flour and every thing Destroyed which for want of Horses could not be carried, we marched without molestation to this Camp. After the severe correction we had given the Savages a few hours before, it was natural we should enjoy some rest but we had hardly fixed our Camp when they Fired upon us again. This was very provoking! however the light Infantry dispersed them before they could receive orders for that Purpose. I hope we shall be no more disturbed for if we have another Action, we shall hardly be able to carry our wounded.

The behaviour of the Troops on this Occasion speaks for itself so strongly that for me to attempt their eulogium would but Detract from their merit.

I have the Honor to be most respectfully, Sir,

Your most obedient & most Humble Servant.
P.S.—I have the honor to inclose the Return of killed, wounded and missing, in the two Engagements,

No. 9.—BOUQUET TO GOVERNOR HAMILTON.

FORT PITT, 11th August, 1763.

Sir.—I have the Pleasure to Inform you that on our march to the relief of this Fort we have been attacked by a considerable Body of Indians; composed of the Delawares, Shawanes, Wyandots and Mingoes, and that after two obstinate Engagements on the 5th and 6th Instant, we have obtained a compleat Victory over the Barbarians, by the uncommon resolution of our brave Highlanders, before the Enemy came to meet us they had closely beset and attacked the Fore, and for five days kept an incessant fire upon it.

Captain Basset who has distinguished himself extremely and has been of great service to me carries my Dispatches to the General. I beg leave to refer you to him for the particulars of that Bloody Affair in which the most Warlike of the Savage Tribes have lost their Boasted Claim of being Invincible in the woods. If the Provinces would now enable us to follow this Looky Blow we might drive the Indians over the Lakes or compell them to sue for peace but it cannot be attempted with Prudence with the Troops I have left. And if we give them time to recover of their Pannick we may have the whole to do over again.

It is so evidently true that the only method of protecting our settlements is by carrying the war into the Enemys Country, that I shall dwell no longer upon it.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, Sir,

Your most obedt. & most Humble servt.,

Governor HAMILTON.

FORT PITT, 11th August, 1763.

Dear Sir,-It is with great Pleasure I can Acquaint you that we have been so happy as to Execute the Generals orders in throwing a Supply of Provisions into this Fort, and in Humbling the Savages by the most Complet defeat they ever received in the Woods: Captain Bassett will inform you of the particulars of our two Engagements. Captain Clark finding himself in a bad state of health, and unable to go through more of this hard service, I have at his request Consented he should go to the Nearest Town, for his recovery,

I Lay under so many obligations to Major Campbell for his indefatigable Assistance in the Various Difficulties we have had to Encounter that I wish Extreamely to do him some Service, and I can not do it more Effectualy than by recommending his Case to you; he is now upon half pay employed in a Very Expencive and Disagreeable Service, while the real Major of the 42d Regiment remains at home : Could not a change be brought about and Lieut. Col. Reed be persuaded to take Major Campbell's half pay and his Liberty or be Ordered to relieve him which I suppose Would determine him as with his fortune, Rank is the only Consideration that can weigh with him.

If this Could Succeed, you Would Confer a Great Favour on a very Worthy man,

I have another Request to recommend to your Benevolence: Lieut, Dow of the 1st Battn. R. A. R., who Acted with us as A. D. Q. M. G. being on the day of the first attack with the advanced Guard, found himself in the Midst of the Savages, he Killed two and Wounded a third When he was Unfortunately shot himself through the Body. It is yet doubtful whether he will recover but his greatest Anxiety is for one of his sons a Lieut, in the 1st Battn, who will fall upon half pay,

If you would be so kind at a Proper opportunity to recommend that young man to the Generel to be replaced, I should think myself very happy to give that satisfaction to the Father, Who leaves a Numerous Family without friends or Fortune.

You see how much I press upon your Generosity the Motive can alone Excuse me, I shall never have it in my power to Acquit myself with you, but you will be repaid by the Satisfaction of having assisted men of Merit in Distress'd Circumstances.

FORT PITT, 26th August, 1763.

SIR,—The 22nd Instant Major Campbell and the Detachment under his Command returned here with the Part of the Convoy, we had left at Ligonier, without seeing any Savages.

By the futigue of long Marches and the necessity the Troops have been under to lay without Tents, and upon their Arms, so many men are fallen Sick, that the number fit for duty in the 42nd and 77th is reduced to 245, which to my great Mortification puts it out of my Power without a Reinforcement, to send them to Presqu'Isle, Agreable to your Excellency's orders.

To Save Provisions and disincumber the Fort of useless hands I send to Bedford with the Waggons and Pack Horses, all the sick and Wounded able to go. After furnishing that Escort, The Remains of the two Regiments would not have been in a Condition to force their way to Presqu'Isle, had they met with Opposition.

Another Circumstance equally distressing for me is a Spirit of discontent and desertion which discovers itself among the Royal Americans at this Post. I had the honor to inform you at different times that a number of hem claimed their discharges; having served the time they had inlisted for, The Necessity of the Service has not permitted hitherto to grant them their request, and Occasions those bad dispositions.

The Militia think it equally hard to be detained and they take every opportunity to desert: Not to be obliged to rely Alltogether upon men in that temper, I keep 50 of the Highlanders in the Fort, and send as many Americans with the Major, Chosen among those who are less suspected.

I have disposed for the present the Troops as follows At Fort Pitt...... 200 At Bedford with the Major....

Major Campbell will send back from Bedford 200 Horses with Flour and if he Can, some Cattle to Ligonier, which is in immediate want of Provisions.

The 100 men who Escort the Waggons from Bedford may escort back the Provisions you will please to order for the use of this Garrison and Communication.

I have heard nothing from Major Gladwin or Captain Dalyell. It is impracticable to send any but Indians to Presqu'Isle, and the only one I had employed from Bedford is supposed to be killed having not appeared since he left this Fort on his way back to me,

I have the honor to be, &c.

SIR,-I had the honor to inform your Excellency in my Letter of the 27th of August, that I had sent to Presqu'Isle, the Indian Express, who had brought Major Gladwin's Packett.

He returned after proceeding about half Way with the Intelligence inclosed.

I detain him here till I receive a Letter from you, and send him daily out to be informed of the motions of the Savages. Yesterday he told me that several Parties were about the Fort, watching an opportunity to strike & cut off our grass guard, but as he speaks very little of their Language, he could not know their numbers.

He has met this morning over the River two Wiandots (sent from Sandusky to inquire what has become of him) who have told him that 800 Western Indians in 80 Canoes were gone towards Niagara to take post at the Carrying Place and cut off all communication with ye Detroit where one of our vessels had arrived about 12 days ago, and that the Ottawas & Chipwas who were at Presqu'Isle were not yet come back.

If this war continues, it will not be possible to keep Cattle at the Posts, without exposing too much to guard them.

The Mingoes, Delawares, & Shawanese are now collecting their men at Muskingham, & the Heads of the Scioto, As it is probable that they will attempt to cut off all Communication to this Post; our Parties must be strong to avoid a Check.

The Temporary Consequence of that success to the Inhabitants of the Frontier gives me great satisfaction, having been a witness to their distresses and desolation, and it is particularly on their account that I lament my inability to render their security more permanent, by crushing the Barbarians and disabling them from ever distressing us.

They appear yet stunned by the blow they have reed, but if suffered to recover their Spirits, they will soon, like their Brothren Devils in Milton rear their Heads again and vent their rage upon defenceless Families.

Could sound reason prevail against principled Prejudices, I could not renounce all hopes of assistance from your province, as your unanswerable arguments for an offensive war must convince any men not absolutely determined to act contrary to evidence and their own Interests.

None of the Provinces has so much at stake in an Indian War as Pernsylvania, being exposed naked to sudden attacks, for want of a Militia,

The Enemies must know already, or will now be made sensible that their parties opposed in Maryland and Virginia by a numerous Militia can commit their Depredations almost with impunity on your Government, and since you have not the same means of defence certainly the example of these Provinces in not raising Troops can be no Rule for yours. They remove the Danger from their Borders and direct the torrent upon you.

You are happily able to Protect yourselves, but even without any extraordinary effort, you can give the finishing stroke to this Savage War.

Five Hundred Picked men now added to the King's Troops in this Department would effect it, and obtain great honour to your Government, safety to your People, and force the Savages to respect you ever after. And that at a less Expence than you are actually at to little purpose, as your Troops joining the King's Forces would then be Victualed at the Crown's Expence.

Upwards of 600 Persons already lost in so short a time, evinces the necessity to put speedily a stop to these Barbarities, by taking vigorous measures instead of wasting our strength and mouldering away in an insignificant and endless defencive.

The Repulses the General has met with in his repeated applications to your Province makes me think that he will not make new attempts for which I hope your Assembly will not wait, but exert for their own Preservation the abundant means in their Power.

The Troops actually in this District being not sufficient to act offensively, if not reinforced, must be forwarded to the Detroit, and leave the defence of your extended Frontier to your Assembly.

I shall very readily procure to Mr. Davenport, your Agent for Indian Trade at this Post, all the facilities in my power to send down the skins and Goods remaining here and recommend them particularly to the care of the officer commanding the Escort.

I have the Honor to be with great respect, Sir, Your most obedient and most Humble Servant,

HENRY BOUQUET.

P.S.—If your Province (contrary to my expectation) raises some Troops, Permit me to Recommend you for a Majority, Captain Ecuyer, who has acted with so much spirit in the Defence of this Post He will now be reduced, and would be glad to be employed, I could not ask that favour for a better man. Governor Hamilton.

FORT PITT, 30th September, 1763,

My Dear Sir,-How could I express my sensibility for the great happiness you have imparted to me by the warm & honourable expressions of your Sentiments for me. Indeed my heart is full of gratitude at the generous proceedings of my worthy Friends on the occasion of the little success it has pleased God to give us. For indeed there has been something providential in the disposition & conduct of all that affair. Never found my head so clear as that day & such ready & chearful compliance to all the necessary orders. Such firmness & perseverance in the most horrid prospect of Ruin & distruction have struck me with admiration at so many

I don't think that the Publick accounts of those Engagements have done common Justice to the Troops. I expected it from the General who was the proper channel. But I have long ago been taught not to put my trust in man & the lucky event does not rekindle in me the extinguished flames of ambition.

No. 15.—GENERAL AMHERST TO BOUQUET.

NEW YORK, 3d October, 1763.

Sir,-I am sorry to tell you of a Loss we have had on the Niagara Carrying Place on the 14th September; The Waggons Returning to the Lower Landing under a Convoy of a Sergeant & 28 men of Wilmots, were attacked by some Savages: Their Fire being heard by Lieuts. Campbell & Fraser, who were encamped with two Companies at the Lower Landing, those Gentlemen, Immediately marched out their Companies to reinforce the Convoy; and I conclude imagined it might be a small Body of Indians, & pressed to get to them as fast as Possible, & perhaps were more Huddled together, or less on their Guard, than they would have been on any other Their zeal was very commendable, but the Companys were almost Entirely cut off, by being surrounded by a very Superior Large Body of Savages

As soon as the affair was known at Niagara, Lt. Colonel Browning, sent out Major Wilkins with a Large Reinforcement; but before he could get up, the Mischief was Done, & the Enemy gone; The Oxen, Horses & Waggons that were carryed off, or Destroyed, will be soon Replaced; But I Lament the Loss of so many Officers & Good Men, who Fell in the Discharge of their Duty by the Hands of the Bloody Villains: All the Officers who were there viz: Lieuts Campbell & Fraser of the 80th, Lieut Rosco of the Royal Artillery, Captain Johnson of the Jersey Provincials & Lieut. Dayton of the Yorkers, were killed; and by the Return, we have Lost six Sergeants & 70 Rank & File, besides two servants, who I suppose were waggoners.

I think it is pretty evident that this Body of Savages must have been those whom your Express mentioned; and it is very likely there may have been some Senecas among them; for by the Facts, they went towards the Seneca Country, & their carrying off the Horses is another ground for Suspicion, that there were some of that Nation at the affair. Those of the Western Tribes I conclude, will return over the Lakes; tho some may endeavor to Do more mischief on the Communication: There is one circumstance I think it necessary you should know, that you may be on your Guard, in case the Villains should make any attempt to Deceive your Garrison or the other Posts: I mean by the cloathing of the 80th Regiment, as they stript all the Dead, & carryed of the cloathing, Arms & Accourrements.

I Have made an Exchange in the Officers of the Battalions 60th since I sent you the List; by appointing Lieut. Turnbull to the 2d & Lieut Van Ingen comes into the

THE RESERVATION OF INDIAN LANDS.

No. 1,—COLONEL CRESAP TO BOUQUET.

OLD TOWN, July 24th, 1760.

Sir,-At the request of several of the members of the Ohio Company of which I myself am one, I take the freedom of acquainting your Honour, that they are inclined to let you be Partaker of the Grant which His Majesty has been graciously pleased to give them of five hundred thousand acres of Land lying on and adjacent to the South side of the River Ohio, on the same terms and conditions as they themselves are under, each member's share of said Land being twenty-five thousand acres.

If your Honour should approve of becoming a member of said Company, I should be glad to receive a letter from you, that I might acquaint the Gentlemen (several of whom are of His Majesty's Council in Virginia) with your Determination.

I am, Sir, Your humble Serv.,

THO. CRESAP.

P. S.—The Company proposes, as soon as the Wars are ended, to settle the land with Germans and Switzers, which they shall send for and encourage.

No. 2.—BOUQUET TO COLONEL CRESAP,

Presqu'Isle, 12th September, 1760.

Sir,-It was but lately that I was favoured with your letter of the 24th July' containing an offer from you and some other members of the Ohio Company to let me be Partaker of their Grant for Five Hundred Thousand Acres of Land; on the South Side of the River Ohio, on the same terms and conditions as they themselves are under. Each Member's Share being Twenty-five Thousand Acres.

I think myself much obliged to you, Sir, and the other Centlemen concerned in that offer. But as an Engagement of that extent requires more consideration, I must beg leave to defer giving a positive answer till I can have the Pleasure to see you which I hope may be soon.

I could indeed procure numbers of German and Swiss families to settle upon those Lands. If the Conditions could realy be made advantageous to them. But many things are to be considered before that.

1. You know that by the late Treaty at Easton, Approved and Confirmed by the Ministry at home we have engaged not to settle the Lands beyond the Allegheny, and tho' the Government of Virg" and Maryland did not accede to that Treaty, I conceive that they are equally bound by it, and that no settlement will be permitted upon the Ohio till the Consent of the Indians can be procured.

2. The form of Government for this New Colony ought to be previously fixed, as they would be too remote to be dependent upon either of the Provinces.

I shall not enter in more details till I am better informed of the plan you have formed for the Encouragement of the Settlers, and of the means you have to Carry that scheme in Execution, as I am of opinion that such Settlement would be of great

Col. Cresap having informed some of the members of the Ohio Company that you would be glad to become one of them, they desired me as one of the Body, having the Pleasure of your Acquaintance, to let you know there was a share to be disposed of, and that Col. Bouquet joining them would be very agreeable to the whole Company. As I made no Doubt of meeting with you, I brought up all the Papers relative to the Concern in order to let you know the Terms they hold or expect to hold, their Lands upon. The Company have advanced £500 each, which will entitle you to a 20th Part of 500,000 acres of Land, and as they have some pretty considerable outstanding Debts from the Trade they intended to prosecute, the whole sum will not be entirely sunk; besides there is yet more of their Money in the Hands of the Treasurer amounting with the Debts I imagine to £2,000 or £2,500.

No. 4.—PROCLAMATION AGAINST SETTLING, &c.

PROCLAMATION by Henry Bouquet, Esqr., Colonel of Foot and Commanding at Fort Pitt and Dependencies,

Whereas by a Treaty held at East Town in the year 1758, and since ratified by His Majesty's Ministers, the Country to the West of the Allegany Mountains is allowed to the Indians for their Hunting Ground, and as it is of the Highest Importance to his Majesty's service, the preservation of the peace and a good understanding with the Indians, to avoid giving them any just cause of Complaint, this is therefore to forbid any of His Majesty's subjects to Settle or Hunt to the West of the Allegany Mountains on any Pretence Whatsoever, unless such Persons have obtained leave in Writing from the General or the Governor of their Provinces Respectively and produce the same to the Commanding Officer at Fort Pitt.

And all the officers and non commissioned officers commanding at the several Posts erected in that part of the Country for the Protection of the Trade, are hereby ordered to seize or cause to be seized any of His Majesty's Subjects who without the above Authority should pretend after the Publication hereof to settle or Hunt upon the said Lands, and send them with their Horses and Effects to Fort Pitt, there to be Try'd and Punished according to the nature of their Offence by the Sentence of a Court Martial.

Given under my Hand at Fort Pitt this Thirtieth day of October 1761.

HENRY BOUQUET.

No. 5.—GOVERNOR FAUQUIER TO BOUQUET.

W^{MS}BURG, January 17th, 1762.

SIR,—The Proclamation issued by you concerning the settling and hunting on the Lands to the Westward of the Allegenny Hills, gives Rise to some uneasiness in this Colony (over which His Majesty has been graciously pleased to appoint me to preside as his Lieutenant Governor) as it seems to tend to obstruct the resettling the Lands by the Persons who have taken up Lands by patent under his Majesty,—And have been formerly Settled on them, but driven from their Settlements by the late Disturbance. There are many such belonging to this Colony, who made settlements on Monongahela, Green Bryar, and New River to the Westward of the Allegeney

Mountains, on the Waters of the Ohio

On these Considerations I have been desired to apply to you that you would do me the Favour to make known to me your Intentions in publishing the said Proclamation, and whether the Certificate you require is only to ascertain the Identity of the Persons who are now, or hereafter may be settling to the Westward of those Hills, to prevent any other persons who have no right to settle on the Lands which may be claimed by those who have legally taken them up by patent under the Crown. This is a laudable Intention and may prevent Vagaconds from taking possession of the Just Rights of others.

As for New Settlements his Majesty's pleasure has been Signified to me by Letter from the Right honorable the Lords of Trade and Plantations that I should on no account whatever make any Grants of Lands on the Waters of the Ohio untill his Majesty's further pleasure be known. And the Governor of Pensylvania is, as I am informed under the same Restrictions.

The particular Article relating to the offenders being tried by Court Martial has alarmed the Gentlemen of Consequence in this Colony as they Apprehend no Person is liable to Martial Law, or to tryal by Court Martial who is not in some shape Connected with the Military Department.

These Representations I have made to you by and with the advice of his Majesty's Council and I make no doubt but your Answer will be fully satisfactory to them in Every particular.

I am with great Regard Sir Your most obedient humble Servant.

No. 6.—BOUQUET TO GOVERNOR FAUQUIER.

FORT PITT, 8th February, 1762.

SIR,-I had yesterday the honor of your Excellency's Letter of the 17th Jany, Concerning the orders issued by me to prevent people hunting or settling to the Westward of the Alleghany Hills, unless they had obtained leave from the General or Governors of their Respective Provinces.

I am sorry they should have occasioned any uneasiness in your Government, but I hope to satisfy you that far from intending to invalidate the just rights of any person, or Endeavouring to prevent their taking Possession of them, provided they had a legal Authority for so doing, I took the only Method to secure them till such authority could be obtained,

For two years past these Lands have been over run by a Number of Vagabonds, who under pretence of hunting, were Making Settlements in several parts of them, of which the Indians made grievous and repeated Complaints; as being Contrary to the Treaty made with them at Easton, and since Confirmed by the General at this Post.

In consequence of which General Monckton ordered these People to be driven off and as the Indians still Complained of New Comers, I issued the said orders to prevent in the best manner I could those incroachments.

Notwithstanding what I have done, they still in a less degree, Continue the same Practices, and two days ago an Indian who pretends to be sent by the Six Nations to see whether we settle this Country, Complained to me that he had discovered ten New Hutts in the Woods and many Fields cleared for Corn.

As to such Offenders being liable to be tried by a Court Martial, I conceive that people living out of the Settlements and at such places where there is no form of Civil Judicature in force and acting contrary to the orders of that Department, can be tried by the Martial Law, agreeable to the Articles of War, and that the actual Inhabitants of this and other remote Forts are liable to be tried in the Same manner if they do any injury to Indians or otherwise disobey the orders given by the General or Commanding Officer tho' they are not directly Connected with the

But this can in no manner affect any Settlement that may be made hereafter in this part of the Country which Coming within the Known Limits of one of these Provinces, will consequently fall under its justidiction.

As you are pleased to let me know that Several Persons in your Government had formerly taken up Lands, on the Waters of the Ohio, by Patent under the Crown, I beg leave to observe that Whenever you shall think proper to permit those Persons Either to Survey or take Possession of the said Lands it will be necessary that the Commander in Chief be informed of it; that I may receive his orders thereupon, and I beg you will be persuaded that as soon as it shall be Consistent with my orders to permit Settlements to be made in this Department: I shall take a particular Pleasure in giving the Persons Concerned all the Protection and assistance in my

No. 7.—GENERAL AMHERST TO BOUQUET.

New York, 28th February, 1762.

SIR,—I have lately received a letter from the Lieut. Governor of Virginia, enclosing a copy of a Proclamation issued by you, with a copy of his Letter to you on that occasion, whereby it appears that the said Proclamation has given some uneasiness to that Colony.

I must own, there appears nothing to me, but what seems Calculated for the protection of those who may have a Just Title to the Lands and to prevent others from settling thereon, and I have accordingly acquainted Lt. Governor Fauquier that this was my opinion of your Intentions from the Words of the Proclamation, and that I did not Doubt but your answer to him would be fully satisfactory, which, I flatter myself will be the case, as I would avoid doing anything that can give the Colonies the least room to complain of the Military power.

I am, Sir, Your most obedient Servant,

JEFF. AMHERST.

No. 8.—GOVERNOR FAUQUIER TO BOUQUET.

WMS BURGH, March 12th, 1762.

SIR,-I have the pleasure to Advise you that I Communicated your favour of Inst. to his Majesty's Council who are in Every respect satisfied therewith, and have desired me to make their Sentiments known to you, which Task I undertake with great Satisfaction as they so Entirely Correspond with my own.

You may be assured that I shall give a Certificate in Writing to any one who has a Right by patent to any Lands under Consideration and shall not fail to inform you and his Majesty's Commander in Chief of my having done so.

The Persons who can make any Right appear, will be found I apprehend to claim Lands a great deal to the Southward of Fort Pitt, it having never been ascertained whether the Lands about that Fort are in this Colony or in Pensylvania. Tho' I imagine the Instructions all the Governors on the Continent received by the last Packett will adjust all these Affairs by the absolute Prohibition of all future Settlements on Lands not regularly ceded to the King's Subjects by the Indians, which is to be by Treaty and not by private Purchasers.

I am, with great Regard,

Sir, your most obed hum: Servant,

FRAN: FAUQUIER.

No. 9.—BOUQUET TO GENERAL AMHERST.

FORT PITT, 1st April, 1762.

Sir,—This day, two hours after Col. Eyre had lefft this place, I received your Excellency's letters of the 28th February and 2nd of March, Convinced by my own experience in this inconsiderable Part of your extensive Command, of the multiplicity of affairs that must devolve upon you from the whole, I have avoided troubling you with a minute account of all the triffling events that occur daily here, in which number I must class Mr. Fauquier's letter to me, as I thought it intirely groundless, and expected that my answer would have been fully satisfactory to him.

As I know of no legal Title People can have to settle Indian Lands, but what must be delivered from the powers given by the Crown to the Commander-in-chief, or the Governors of Provinces, I imagined to have obviated all cavils by the exceptions I had made. Neither could I think that the Lieut. Governor of Virginia after desiring me to explain my Intentions in issuing that order, should complain to you, before he had received that explanation. For certainly his letter to me in that case was an unnecessary trouble to himself and his express a useless expence to the Publick. I take the liberty to inclose a copy of the answer I made him at that time.

I never had any design to obstruct any man's Just Rights, or give uneasiness to any body, and much less to a respectable Colony.

After having found every other method insufficient, I thought the fear of Punishment would deter the Outlaws, who were the only Persons I had in view from their vile practices, but the some are since fallen into my hands, they have suffered no other moiestation than to be expelled from their Improvements, and have their Hutts burnt, and they seem at last disgusted from making new attempts as they know, that the I overlook many things, I never do forgive a breach of orders in this

I had yet another reason to make my Intentions publickly known at that time, and which I thought best not to Communicate to Mr. Fauquier. I had been repeatedly informed that one Col. Cresop, who is concerned in one of the Ohio Companies (the favourite scheme of Virginia) was proposing by way of subscription to several familys to remove from the frontiers of that Colony and Mariland to form settlements on the Ohio. I foresaw that these poor people would 'a ruined by that bubble, and I was the more induced to credit that Report from an offer made me by that same Gentleman of a share, or 25,000 acres of these Lands, which did not tempt

In preventing in the district intrusted to me a scandalous breach of a recent Treaty, by the measure complained of, I cannot at least be charged with interested views or having exerted the little power vested in me, to the oppression of the subject or the Indian.

No Trader or Sutter ever paid me a shilling for their Licences, nor other people for the Plantations I was authorized by Gen. Monekton to grant along the Communication and at Red Stone Creek for the support of this Post, and I have constantly observed the same Rule with the Indians in accepting no Presents from them, Divested of all motives of ambition, and without private views of Interest, I flattered myself to be free of any imputation of Partiality or Injustice, and having heard of no complaint from either of the two other Provinces, I must ascribe this Proceeding to the misfortune I had in the Campaign of 1758, to be obliged to differ in opinion with some Persons of Virginia about Roads and Provisions, and I am afraid I remain still obnoxious to them, which can only increase my desire of being removed from this command, if it was consistent with your Pleasure.

The obliging manner in which you are pleased to mention that affair to me, and so very different from Mr. Fauquier's behaviour, required with my most grateful acknowledgments that I should clear myself of an odious Imputation, the effect of a groundless Jealousy and the greediness of ingrossing those Lands, and tho' from the distance of my station, I may be obliged to act sometimes without orders to the best of my Judgment, It shall be my Constant endeavour not to incur your disapprobation, or disoblige any of the Provinces.

I have the honour to be &c.

No. 10.—GENERAL AMHERST TO BOUQUET.

[Extract.]—Soon after my letter to you relative to the Proclamation you had Issued, which had given offence to the Virginians, I had one from Lt. Gov^r Fauquier, wherein he says: "Colonel Bouquet has wrote a very Sensible, Polite and Satis, "factory answer, with which His Majesty's Council seemed very well pleased, and "Desired that I would express their sentiments to him." This I make no doubt but the Lt. Governor has done and therefore I need say nothing more on the subject, as I was convinced your Intentions in publishing that Proclamation was solely for the protection and security of those who had a Just Right to the Lands, and I am very glad to find it appears in its true Light to the Lieut. Governor and Council.

I needed no assurance to be satisfied of your acting with Disinterestedness in the Department where you Command. And I cannot but approve of your never permitting any Trader or Sutler to pay for Licences. This is what I have always prevented.

No. 11.—THE PROCLAMATION OF 1763, REGARDING INDIAN LANDS.

(Collection of Acts, published in 1800.)

[EXTRACT.]—And Whereas it is just and reasonable and essential to our interest, and security of our Colonies, that several nations or tribes of Indians, with whom we are connected, and who live under our protection should not be molested or disturbed in the possession of such parts of our dominions and territories as, not having been ceded to us are reserved to them, as their hunting grounds; We do therefore with advice of our Privy Council declare it to be our royal will and pleasure, that no Governor or Commander in Chief in any of our Colonies of Quebec, East Florida, or West Florida, do presume, upon any pretence whatever, to grant Warrants of survey, or pass any patents, for lands beyond the bounds of their respective governments, as described in their commissions; as also that no Governor or Commander in Chief of our other Colonies or plantations in America do presume, for the present, and until our further pleasure be known, to grant Warrants of survey, or pass any patents, for any lands beyond the heads or sources of any of the rivers which fall into the Atlantic Ocean from the West or North-West, or upon any lands whatever, which not having been ceded to or purchased by us as aforesaid, are reserved to the said Indians or any of them.

And We do further declare it to be our Royal will and pleasure, for the present, as aforesaid, to reserve under our Sovereignty, protection, and dominion, for the use of the said Indians, all the land and territories not included within the limits of our said three New Governments, or within the limits of the territory granted to the Hudson's Bay Company; as also all the land and territories lying to the Westward of the sources of the rivers which fall into the sea from the West and North West as aforesaid; and we do hereby strictly forbid, on pain of our displeasure, all our loving subjects from making any purchases or settlements Whatsoever, or taking possession of any of the lands above reserved, without our especial leave and licence for that purpose first obtained.

m And}$  We do further strictly enjoin and require all persons whatsoever, who have either Wilfully or inadvertently seated themselves upon any lands within the countries above described, or upon any other lands which, not having been ceded to or purchased by us, are still reserved to the said Indians as aforesaid, forthwith to remove themselves from such settlements.

And Whereas great frauds and abuses have been committed in the purchasing lands of the Indians, to the great prejudice of our interests, and to the great dissatisfaction of the said Indians, in order therefore to prevent such irregularities for the future, and to the end that the Indians may be convinced of our justice and determined resolution to remove all reasonable cause of discontent, we do, with the advice of our Privy Council, strictly enjoin and require, that no private person do presume to make any purchase from the said Indians of any lands reserved to the said Indians within those parts of our colonies where we have thought proper to allow settlements; but if at any time any of the said Indians should be inclined to dispose of the sald lands, the same shall be purchased only for us, in our name, in some public meeting or assembly of the said Indians, to be held for that purpose by the Governor or Commander in chief of our colony respectively within which they shall lie; and in case they shall lie within the limits of any proprietaries, conformable to such directions and instructions as We or they shallthink proper to give for that purpose. And we do, by the advice of our Privy Council, declare and enjoin, that the trade with the said Indians shall be free and open to all our subjects whatever; provided that every person who may incline to trade with the said Indians do take out a licence for carrying on such trade from the Governor or Commander in chief of any of our colonies respectively where such person shall reside, and also give security to observe such regulations as We shall at any time think fit by ourselves or commissioners to be appointed for this purpose, to direct and appoint for the benefit of the said trade; and we do hereby authorize, enjoin, and require the Governors and Commanders in chief of all our colonies respectively, as well those under our immediate government, as those under the government and direction of proprietaries, to grant such licences without fee or reward, taking especial care to insert therein a condition that such licence shall be void, and the security torfeited, in case the person to whom the same is granted shall refuse or neglect to observe such regulations as we shall think proper to prescribe as aforesaid.

And we do further expressly enjoin and require all officers whatever, as well military as those employed in management and direction of the Indian affairs within the territories reserved, as aforesaid, for the use of the said Indians, to seize and apprehend all persons whatever, who standing charged with treason, misprision of treason, murder or other felonies or misdemeanors, shall fly from justice and take refuge in the said territory, and to send them under proper gual to the colony where the crime was committed of which they shall stand accused, in order to take the territory and to send they shall stand accused, in order to take

CANAL FROM LAKE CHAMPLAIN TO THE ST. LAWRENCE.

No. 1.—EDWARD BANCROFT TO HON, T. T. TOWNSHEND,

(Archives series, Q, vol. 43-2, p. 681.)

Sir,-According to my promise, I have procured the original draughts of Mr. Deane's observations, respecting a Canal from Lake Champlain &c. and have caused transcripts of them to be made, after some abridgement of which I found them susceptible, and which I ventured to make, to save your time, as well as My Lord Sydney's, which I know the importance of. The observations thus abridged and transcribed I have now the honor of inclosing to you.

Should the plan of making a navigable Canal, from Lake Champlain, appear to deserve the attention of Government, I should suppose the first step to be taken, would be to order a survey to be made, of the distance and perpendicular fall from its two extremities, in order to ascertain the expense and the practicability of the undertaking, if indeed there be any doubt of this last point.

It was Mr. Deane's intention to have gone himself to Lake Champlain this summer, if his observations had in any degree been henored with Lord Sydney's approbation, but I am afraid his health will not allow him to do it, with any prospect of advantage this season. He is going a little way out of Town, but if you should at any time have any commands for him, I will take care that they shall be duly forwarded,

I have the honor to be with great respect, Sir, Your Most Humble & Most Obedient Servant

(Submitted to Lord Dorchester by S. Deane.)

Whether it might be for the interest of Great Britain, that the States of America should return to their former Connection with this Country, is a question on which there are different opinions, but as there is now very little probability of such an event, I shall avoid any discussion thereof.

The American States are at this time but little removed from anarchy and their credit, political as well as Commercial, is reduced almost as low as possible, and yet when their local situations and circumstances are maturely considered, it will appear that collectively, they must eventually become of great importance to every European power, which has possessions either insular or continental, in that quarter of the world. It will hardly be possible for these states to continue long united in one general confederation and whenever a disunion takes place, it will separate the strong from the weak, or the northern from the southern states. By the former I mean the states East and North of the River Delaware. Of these the New England States are, and will continue, the most powerful, their country is naturally strong, and it is already populous, and they are the only States in America in which a maritime and adventurous spirit predominates.

They are acknowledgly but four at present, but will soon be six, Vermont is in fact already independent, and the province of Maine will be so in a few years, by which there will be six States, united by Blood, Manners, Religion and every Tye, which unites and holds men in one common interest. They have sprung from one common stock, from English ancestors, who, first settled in New England, and at this time more than one half of the inhabitants of New York and New Jersey are Emigrants, or descendants of Emigrants from the New England States. When to this circumstance that of the local situation of this Northern Division is added, it is highly probable they will continue for a long time after this separation, united among themselves, and that they will for ever give laws to the rest of the States, who from their situation, Dissonant Manners and Habits, and from the heterogeneous Tempers or materials (as I may say) of which they are composed, have no basis on which they will ever be able to form a lasting union.

In case of a war between Great Britain and France, or Spain, the Friendship of this Northern Division of the American States will be of very great importance. For although they have not at present, and probably will not soon have a Maritime Force of any great strength, yet they can by the number and Hardiness of their Seamen do infinite mischief to the Commerce of that Power, against which they may take part.

During the Late War the American Privateers made a greater number of prizes of British vessels than France, Spain or Holiand together, and this although they fitted out their Cruisers under every disadvantage; and of the armed vessels which made these Depredations in the British trade, four out of five belonged to this Northern Division; This recent instance justifies me in saying that it will be of very great importance whenever the supposed disunion takes place, to secure the Friendship and Alliance of the Northern States, whilst the Southern States, will never be of any consequence, except in point of commerce.

Mutual convenience and interest form the most sure basis for a permanent alliance between nations and in this instance both are to be found, for there is no nation in Europe, with whom an alliance can be so natural and beneficial to the above mentioned States, as with Great Britain. In peace, four fifths of their commerce must centre in this Kingdom, and in war no power can assist, or distress them so much as this can by a Maritime Force at Halifax, or an army at Canada. Their present ill temper will soon subside and pass off, and there is more of it to be met with in newspapers than any where else.

It is not my design to enter on a detail of those measures, which ought to be adopted and pursued on this subject, much less to recommend a treaty with Congress, in their present weak and divided state, in which they must necessarily remain until the above mentioned division takes place (and this is much nearer than is generally apprehended). For in the actual state of things in America, there is in fact no power to treat with, and from the nature of the commerce between the two countries and the present state of it, there is nothing, or next to nothing to treat about.

But when the Northern shall be separated from the Southern States, a more firm and efficient system of Government will be adopted by the former and the Friendship and Alliance of this Division of the States will be infinitely preferable to any Treaty whatever with the whole.

I think therefore that Great Britain will act wisely in looking forward to these events, and being ready to take advantage of them. And this will be most effectually done by being able in case of a future war in which the Northern States may be disposed to join to do them the most essential services on one hand, or the greatest mischiefs on the other, according to the part they may take.

The situation of Halifax is such, that a maritime force stationed there, can with the utmost facility command the whole of the coast, and intercept their commerce and Lake Champlain extending two hundred miles from North to South, from the centre of Canada, to the centre of the frontiers (and far within them) of this Northern Division presents an object of great importance for the above purpose

If the Northern Division and Confederation of the American States are masters of this Lake, they can, if hostile to Great Britain, distress and even destroy the settlements in Canada, on the other hand, if Great Britain at this time takes such measures as will secure the future command of this Lake, her possessions in Canada will, in case of Hostilities be secure, and she may thence carry the war into the heart of the Enemies' Country. By the late Treaty of Peace, nearly the whole of this Lake is included in the Territory of the American States. The country round it, and down the rivers running into it, is already in a great degree settled by emigrants from New England, and will in a few years become as populous as any part of America. But those settlers cannot find a market for the production of their labour, but over this Lake and through Canada, nor can they be supplied with those heavy articles from abroad, without which they cannot exist, but through the same channel, for if they look Southward for markets, the distance and the expences of carriage are intolerable.

This commerce is in many respects an important object to this country; it will of itself create a large and annually increasing demand for coarse and heavy manufactures, in return for which there will be sent into the River St. Lawrence the finest masts and spars of any in America, and in the greatest quantity for the British Navy, and beyond Comparison the best Oak Timber of any in America for Butt, Pipe, Hogshead or Barrel Staves, for the British or West Indian markets. The most material articles wanted in the British West Indies, from the Continent of America, are Flour, Horses, Fish and Lumber, principally staves for Rum and Molasses casks

Other necessaries may be had from other countries, and some may be raised in the Islands, and some articles consumed by them at present may be dispensed with, but Oak Staves cannot. Nova Scotia and Newfoundland can supply Fish, and Canada Flour, in large quantities and some Horses.

Canada also produces many other articles consumed in the West Indies, and were a Trade open'd and encouraged from thence to the Islands, the British possessions on the Continent might soon be brought to supply her Islands with everything, except what may be sent on better terms from Europe.

Canada has little or no Pine fit for masts, and no Oak of any value; These deficiencies may be abundantly supplied by opening a Navigable Canal from Lake Champlain round the Rapids or Falls at St. John's into the navigable waters below them, and by opening a free Trade with Vermont and with the Frontiers of New England and of New York. By this it will at all times be in the power of Great Britain to send a Naval Force into that Lake and command the Navigation of it, and thence whatever may happen it will not be the interest of New England and New York to be on unfriendly terms with the British Government.

By this all the Trade of that extensive country, the Inhabitants of which are rapidly increasing will centre in Canada, which will be of more service and benefit to Great Britain than if all that Country round the Lake had been included in her American Dominions at the Peace.

Whenever the division of the States takes place, it must also necessarily be in the manner I have mention'd, and in all future times subsequent to that Revolution, the Southern States, whether united or not, must have the same friends and the same enemies with the Northern, on account of their inferiority in numbers and strength, and from their Local situation.

No. 3.—ADDITIONAL OBSERVATIONS (No. 2) RESPECTING A NAVIGABLE CANAL FROM LAKE CHAMPLAIN.

(Submitted to Lord Sydney by S. Deane.)

There can, I think, be no doubt of the practicability of cutting a navigable canal from the water of Lake Champlain, round the Rapids into the level of the River below them. To ascertain the expence of doing this, it will be necessary to procure a survey of the ground through which the Canal is to be cut, and an estimate of the distance from the upper to the lower level of the water; and of the perpendicular height of the fall between these points. This survey and estimate might be made by any tolerable engineer in a few hours, and when made the expence of the proposed Canal might be easily calculated with considerable certainty.

But in an undertaking of this kind, the expence must not be rigorously calculated and opposed to its pecuniary advantages, these being but a part of the benefits which it cotainly will produce, for besides the great and continually increasing profit arising from the transportation of bulky and heavy goods and merchandize to and from Lake Champlain by the proposed Canal, and the great extension of British commerce necessarily resulting from it, there are important political considerations which intitle this undertaking to the immediate protection and encouragement of His Majesty's Ministers as it will eventually enable the Klng's remaining American subjects to supply the British West India Islands, with those productions, which Great Britain and Ireland cannot well, if at all afford; and at the same time secure the Province of Quebeck against all danger of future invasion from the United States, should they hereaftar join any power at war with this Kingdom.

The articles wanted in the West Indies are chiefly the following: Horses, Live Stock (such as Cattle, Hogs, &c.), Flour, Lumber of all Kinds, Fish and some others of less importance. Horses are raised in Canada but not equal to the demand in the Islands, and they are a heavy slugg breed, fit only for mills, and carts (for which they answer tolerably well) but for other purposes, the Horses bred in New England and in New York are preferr'd. Fish may be sent from Nova Scotia and Newfoundland; and the manufacture of Flour is encouraged in Canada, which the opening of this Canal, by affording water to erect mills upon will greatly tend to do, the Islands may at all times be supplied from thence at a cheaper rate than from any other country. The Lumber wanted in the West Indies (and which is an article not to be dispensed with) is not to be found in Canada, or Nova Scotia, in any sufficient quantity, but the country round Lake Champlain abounds with Timber of the best quality, for that purpose, and by the proposed Canal it may be procured and sent to the West Indies with the cargoes of Horses, Flour, &c.

But the supplying of the West Indies with what they want is, although the great object, not the only one. Let anyone cast his eye over the map of the country situated and bordering upon Lake Champlain, Lake George and the waters communicating with them and he will see at once, that an immense extent of territory, now rapidly becoming populous, can never be supplied with heavy, coarse and bulky goods by any means so well as through Canada, and that there must be a certain, and for ages to come, an increasing demand for the Sugar, Rum, Salt and other productions of the British West Indies and for the coarse woollens, hardware and other heavy bulky manufactures of Great Britain.

If it be asked how these goods are to be paid for, I answer that this is the business of individuals, and that when Government has removed obstacles which cramp or impede commerce, everything is done which true policy dictates; and there can be no danger but those concerned in trade will do their part and take care of themselves.

But it has been proved that this country, when the proposed communication is opened, will have ample resources to pay for the articles wanted from the West Indies by its lumber and other produce, and for European remittances it will have everything the Northern States have or ever had, Fish and Oil excepted.

It has immense forests of Pine of the largest size and of the best quality in the world for masts, which may be met with on the banks of these waters and floated into the St. Lawrence, and then shipped for Great Britain. The richest and best iron mines in America, or perhaps in the world, are found on the banks of Lake Champlain; and from the low price of coal and the facilities of water carriage, iron may be manufactured and sent to market to great advantage. Potash, Flax Seed, Wheat and other articles may be had in that country and in great quantities as the population increases. Every commercial acquisition or advantage must ultimately prove a political one to this country, if not grossly perverted and misapplied, but besides the commercial advantages resulting from this plan, there is one of great political importance to the future peace and security of the British settlements in Canada, by forming this Canal of such a depth as to float vessels of ten or twelve feet water, from the St. Lawrence into the Lake, and by limiting the commerce on the Lake, except in small or open boats, to British bottoms, the Lake will at all times be under the command of Great Britain, and in case of a war with the American States all danger of an invasion of Canada will be removed. Mcreover, by this intercourse, in which the advantages will be mutual, the Northern parts of New England and of New York with Vermont will become averse to a rupture with Great Britain and it will scarcely be possible for the other States to force them to join in offensive measures, since if ever they should become so infatuated as to fly directly in the face of their own interests, all sources of foreign supplies, except at an intolcrable expence, would be instantly cut off, their trade ruined and their country exposed in every part to be invaded and harassed from Canada, on which, by their having no force on the Lake, it would not be in their power to retaliate.

The above are the outlines of a plan which may be executed at an expence very inconsiderable when compared with the magnitude of the objects in view. I am so fully convinced of the practicability of what I propose, and of the consequences pointed out, that were I in the same situation, in point of fortune, in which the late unhappy contest found me, I would, with the assistance of my friends, undertake it on private account, but in the first part of the late war I suffered great losses by the active part which I took, and in the latter part of it, and since its conclusion much greater by the prejudices and resentment of my countrymen for having pointed out their dangerous situation and the fatal consequences of their independency, and urging for a reconciliation with Great Britain. Although there are individuals of my acquaintance in this country able to advance a Capital equal to the undertaking, yet men of that description have objects at home and cannot be easily prevailed on to embark in distant enterprises. From the best information I have been able to collect, it is my opinion that about £10,000 would be sufficient for the undertaking, and that a moderate toll on goods transported on the Canal would pay the interest and in time refund the capital,

If Lord Dorchester continues to approve of this plan, and if the ultimate expence comes any way near the sum mentioned (£10,000), it cannot, under any circustances, be an object of any consequence with Government to advance it, by installments, as the work advances, under the inspection and control of His Lordship and of his successors in Government,

The lands purchased, the Canal and works of every kind which may be erected, might be pledged to Government as a security for the repayment of the money, at or within some given term, interest on it not to commence until three years after the work shall be completed; and in all future times ships and stores belonging to Government shall pass the canal free of toll, as shall masts and spars for the use of

By this, the only expense to Government will be the interest of the Capital, for a certain term, which will be very inconsiderable when compared with the above mentioned advantages.

In writing my former observations on this subject, I felt myself perfectly disinterested and I am equally so at present, excepting a very natural and I hope justifiable desire of obtaining some useful employment, which might enable me to retrieve a part of my losses, and rise from my present embarrassed situation. Should this plan be approv'd, and should I be employ'd in the execution of it, I flatter myself, I might render services to the Publick, as well as to myself, but being wholly unknown to the King's Ministers, I have perhaps little reason to expect this favour; though having suffered on account of my former endeavours to procure a reconciliation of the American States with Great Britain, it would afford me satisfaction could I benefit myself in a way, whereby I might also be useful to both countries.

No. 4-SILAS DEANE TO EVAN NEPEAN.

Sir,—I take the liberty of sending you herewith some observations and remarks, which I made at different times, as will appear from the perusal of them. A long confinement by illness has prevented my attempting to carry any part of my plan into execution and though at this time I have recovered a good state of health, still I cannot enter on it with propriety, without knowing in some degree, the opinion of His Majesty's Ministers on the subject specially as Lord Dorchester informs me, that he has wrote his opinion of it to Lord Sydney, and has recommended it to his patronage. I am sensible of the importance of public business, which must at this time engage His Lordship's attention, but the advancing season, with other circumstances, render it necessary for me to obtain, if possible, some decision. Lord Dorchester is of opinion that what I propose is both practicable and useful, if Lord Sydney shall agree with him, I wish to enter on the business without further delay. A ship will sail from London early in June, for Quebee, and as I propose to take a passage in her, you will oblige me by giving the enclosed a perusal and to forward the proposed undertaking if it meets with your approbation.

I have the honour to be with much respect, Sir,

Your most obed't

S. DEANE.

No. 5.—OBSERVATIONS AS TO COST &c., OF THE CANAL BY SILAS DEANE.

Supposing the distance to be eight miles to be cut to carry a Canal round the rapids at St. John's, so as to have a navigation from the St. Lawrence, into the Lake Champlain, for boats and for vessels drawing six or seven feet of water, the Canal for this purpose must be twenty feet wide and eight feet deep, this is a large allowance or calculation, one-half will answer for large boats, but when the work is in hand, an addition of width and depth to what is absolutely necessary at the time will cost little to what it will at some future period, when it may be wanted and when a stop must be put to business to effect it; and Lake Champlain being navigable in every part of it for large vessels, renders it the more prudent to make the canal in proportion. Let it be supposed in the first place, in order to form a calculation, that the ground to be cut through is of a sand, loam, or gravel removeable by the spade and pickaxe one mile in length, twenty feet in breadth, and eight feet deep will be equal to 844,800 cubic feet of earth. Suppose a labourer to dig and remove six feet deep and eight feet square in one day or 288 feet of cubic earth, then 2,933 days of labour will dig one mile in length, twenty feet wide and eight feet deep; but allow 2,950 days -2,950 days, diet included at 2s 6d. per diem is £368 15s. but allow for banking &c., £131 5s. in addition and it will be £500 per mile, and eight miles £4,000, interest at 5 per cent £200 per annum, and add for annual repairs of bank and lock £50 per annum, the annual expenses will be £250. It is estimated that at this time there are at least 2,000 cart or waggon load of goods, transported round those falls, or rapids annually. This cannot be done at less than 8s per load, allowing nothing for the starting of hoops, leakage of casks, breaking of bales &c., incident to a land carriage, and not to one by water, deduct £250 from £800, the amount of the land carriage, the e will remain £550 for the transporation on the Canal. At present a vessel below the rapids, must be unloaded, and then waits for earts and waggons to be reloaded with them, a considerable expence, especially if put into store and other ways they must be exposed to the rain and snow, to which they must be at any rate in the waggons and carts. But the boat passing on the Canal into the Lake may go along side of the ship below, and taking the goods on board, there will be but one moving of them by hand instead of five or six in the other case, and the above damages will be avoided. A boat or vessel constructed for the purpose, and navigated by four or five men and a boy, will transport as great a quantity of goods as fifty or sixty waggons or carts, with this material difference, that such a vessel is not obliged to unload, on entering the Lake, but may proceed with her cargo to those ports or creeks to the Lake, nearest to where the goods are wanted for consumption; and may take a freight back of corn, flax seed or such articles of produce, as the inhabitants have to dispose of, and by passing down the waters of the Canal, may deliver the same for any foreign market.

To show how great a profit this is capable of, will select one article which cannot be dispensed with in any country, and for which no substitute can be found, that of salt. The track of country lying between Lake Champlain and Connecticut River is already in a great part settled, and the inhabitants and cultivation are rapidly advancing, and it is the same with the country between the south waters of the Lake and Albany, no part of that extensive territory can find so convenient a market as on Lake Champlain. There are five or six rapids or cataracts on Connecticut River, between the above mentioned inhabitants and Hartford, to which it is barely navigable for sea vessels, as they are called, and in addition to this, the river in all this distance is absolutely unnavigable for more than one-half the year, by ice and freshes. The river Hudson is navigable to Albany and no farther, above that like the Connecticut River it has rapids at every small distance. From this situation of the country it is evident, that a safe navigation opened on Lake Champlain will command the trade of this extensive country, and the proprietor or proprietors of this proposed canal will hold the key to the whole of it, for all heavy and bulky goods, as well as for the article of salt, to which I will now turn my calcu-

The common price of salt in Vermont is, and has been two dollars, or nine shillings sterling per bushel, and the people to this time have had no market for their wheat or flax seed or other produce, except for their cattle, horses and sheep, which may, though at an enormous expense, be drove to the southward. Salt either from Europe or the West Indies may be delivered at the foot of the above canal at 1s. to 1s. 3d. per bushel, and give a good profit, but allow 18d. in calculation. The vessel above described may there receive and carry to market and suppose her to take but one thousand bushels which will be but a moderate cargo, and allow her forty days to go up the lake with it, to unload, and to return, the account of her voyage, making large allowance for each particular, may be thus estimated,-One thousand bushels of salt at 1s. 6d., £75; 40 days wages and victualling £30; wear and tear, as it is called, of the vessel, £15 and allow for contingent expenses £10, total £130 or 2s. 7d. per bushel delivered at any port or creek of the Lake, and if sold at 5s., little more than one-half the present price, the amount will be £250, a profit of £120 on a voyage of forty days. This is allowing the vessel to return empty, but the vessel which carries one thousand bushels of salt will bring back a thousand bushels of wheat or flax seed, or a quantity of other articles in proportion, such as salted provisions, pot and pearl ashes &c. so that at all times as good a freight may be expected back or home, as out, and salt now selling at 9s. sterling per bushel, must command an immediate sale at 5s.

Suppose, for instance, in the way of barter, which must be almost the sole, as it is in this case, the most profitable way of dealing, that two bushels of wheat, or three of flax seed, be given for one of salt, the profit will be more than double the above calculation, which is every way within bounds. The country above described is exceedingly good for wheat and flax, but not for Indian corn and other produce to the southward. At this time there is no market for their wheat and flax seed but their home consumption, but could they be disposed of at a certain market, at the above rates, the cultivation of them would increase beyond what can be easily calculated for, and both those articles must come to the hands of the proprietor, or proprietors, of this canal at one-half, or about one-half, the current price of them in New York or Philadelphia, which towns have formerly almost exclusively supplied Ireland with flax seed, and the West Indies and part of Europe with flour. It is unquestionably the interest of Great Britain to have her islands supplied with flour and lumber, and Ireland with flax seed and timber of all sorts from Canada in preference to any other country. Canada was settled by the French within a few years as early as New England was by the English; the French Government gave no encouragement to anything but to hunting. Furs and peltry were their sole object; the Province had not a single ship belonging to it, in any commerce whatever, during the whole period of its belonging to France, a few fishing vessels for the liver and the banks, mostly employed for fish for their home consumption, excepted. This Province exhibits in its history a striking proof of the necessary connection between agriculture and commerce, and of the aid they mutually afford each other. The Canadians being deprived of commerce, their agticulture remained in so wretched a state that the French troops in the country, and even the inhabitants in and near Quebec, received their flour from France; and with as great advantages for a trade with the West Indies as any part of America, they appear only to have heard, or read, of such a country, for they received the sugars and other productions of these Islands from France, and so extremely ignorant were the inhabitants of the nature of the soil they lived on, that they did not suppose it capable of producing wheat, other than a miserable crop of summer growth, as it is called; But within ten years after its being under the British Government, this Province besides its internal consumption raised wheat for exportation, to the amount of more than three hundred thousand bushels in one year. This digression to mention a fact well known to those who have attended to the history of that Province, is made to soow what improvements have taken place in the Agriculture and Commerce of that country, and thence in some degree to justify the assertion that it is capable of still greater and that the present period, when Great Britain is totally separated from her antient colonies on that Continent, is the most favourable for making them, and I trust it has been demonstrated that this may be done without any expence to or in the carrying of it to market in the best manner in his power, but the variableness of the weather on the sea coast, rain and thaws following close on snow and frost, renders his transportation extremely precarious. But it is different in the parts here mentioned, which being far inland, the weather is steady and uniform, and frost and snow prevail almost without exception from December to March, which is a circumstance of vast importance to inland carriage. Two horses will draw as much in a sleigh, on snow or ice, as six in a waggon or cart, on the best road in summer. It is indeed, not easy to find any situation in any country (there is none in the British Dominions) of which advantages of equal magnitude and extent, to the public as well as to individuals may be acquired with so small a capital and risque as in the above. Let us the state of going round the Falls into the River St. Lawrence by the state of the Sorel (which is a bad navigation) that the Canal be carried directly from the Lake into the River at the foot of the rapids by Montreal, to this point in the River St. Lawrence a frigate of thirty guns can go, consequently there must at all times be water sufficient for the largest merchant ships loaded. Allow the distance to be twice what has been calculated for above or sixteen miles (this is more than the real distance) in a strait line, the fall of the water, or difference between the level of Lake Champlain and that of the River will be the same, the expense of the Lock will of course be the same. But by all accounts the digging will be much easier than in the former, the land being a sand and loam thro the whole distance. But the advantage must exceed the expence to a vast amount beyond what at first can easily be calculated. In the first place the difficult and winding navigation of the Sorel River will be avoided. In the second place the wheat produced above Montreal, or in upper Canada, through the whole extent of it may be brought to the mills by water, at the same expence as it is now brought to be shipped in grain, and the same of other articles, and what is of some consequence, the mills without any land carriage, may supply the town of Montreal, and its vicinity, with flour for home consumption. Equal advantages will arise from other articles, without losing any of those before mentioned on the Lake Champlain.

Allowing the distance to be sixteen miles, and the expence of cutting the Canal to be double, the expence will then amount to twice the sum of the above calculations, as to the digging and the banking, but the lock will be the same. But to take it at an even sum, suppose the cutting the Canal and making the Lock to amount to £2,000, the interest at 5 per cent. to amount to £400 and the repairs as before at £50 and there will still remain a balance of £250 per annum in favour of the Canal, when compared with the expence of carting, without taking into consideration the above mentioned important advantages of its being cut directly to the River, as here

Bryce McCumming, quarter master, 31st Regiment. For a commission to his son, who is the eldest volunteer in the regiment.

Henry Stiles, surgeon's mate. For the ensigney in the 34th, vacant by the promotion of Ensign Arden.

Robert Hoyes, captain, 34th Regiment stating his services with a view to promotion.

Thomas Hollier, lieutenant 29th Regiment. For leave to purchase the vacant company in the 84th Regiment.

Peter Clinch, lieutenant and adjutant Royal Americans. For a commission in the Royal Yorkers.

Gotlieb de Gleissenberg. Praying to be continued in his present allowance till Christmas, and to be procured a passage next fall.

Thomas Garnett, senior captain in a battalion raised by Mr. James Howelson, by order of Governor Tryon, to serve under Sir John Johnson. Encloses journal of his proceedings since February, 1777, and prays for an allowance for his heavy losses and for the heavy expenses he incurred in suppying enlisted soldiers and loyalists who fled to him for safety.

Pierre Roubaud (in French), addressed "Messieurs et amis." They are no doubt acquainted with events of which more than half may be anticipated. Since Gamelin left, Lantingette has arrived. The committee of correspondence with Canada had an audience with Lord Sydney, but the session was too far advanced to bring forward anything respecting the Province. It is not likely that the ministry would accept any bill on the subject passed by Parliament, as it would restrain its powers, and the Quebec Bill had extended the power of the Crown, investing the King with all the powers of the King of France as respects property. It is eighteen years since the Chancellor refused to sign the Patent concerning the Jesuit Estates to Lord Amherst, because they were the fruit of the conquest of Canada, bought at the cost of the blood and money of the people, and, therefore the apparage of the people and not of the sovereign. The Quebec bill set aside this logic by the introduction of the laws of France, according to which it is the Kings and not the people who conquer. The extension of the power of the Crown is the system of the present ministry; it will not destroy this system and the majority in Parliament has never been so submissive. Besides they (to whom the letter is addressed) are divided, which alone would make every thing fail. Let them return to Canada; withdraw the petitions; uniterespecting the needed reforms and entrust their demands not to a large committee, to a Mr. Mazeres or Mr. Powis who are in opposition, but to a wise and fully instructed agent. It would be necessary besides to leave all to Parliament. Lord Sydney and Mr. Nepean are favourable and confidence would gain their A du Calvet would advise other steps, but he is a madman, blinded by his own passions who would rejoice in companions in his misfortunes. He has openly attacked the ministry. General Haldimand has powerful friends; the King is his friend and the ministry as much so. Du Calvet's affair will probably never be settled. The inquiry in the Province will be conducted under Haldimand's eyes, who is to return to his Government. The whole party opposed to him will crumble into dust. As to du Calvet who will supply money? He is now getting into low water. (Details of his difficulties follow.) His blind, headstrong temper has led him to play the Devil with the committee because it would not go as fast as he wanted; he has publicly insulted Adhemar; and there only remains himself (Roubaud) who from his facility of character is always attracted to the unfortunate. Yet the ingratitude of du Calvet may force him also to leave; besides he owes gratitude to Government. Thirteen guineas paid to him by du Calvet appeared to the latter an exorbitant price for more than a year's work, suggestions and services. But for his own goodness of heart he would also have become his (du Calvet's) enemy. Adhemar will sail in the course of next month. Praise of Adhemar follows. Urges them to calm the fears of their friends at the return of Haldimand; whose conduct would satisfy them, and Government is well disposed; the desire for priests and the free admission of French Canadians to public employments will be gratified. Speaks hopefully of his own affairs, and offers to become agent for the Canadians. The rest of the letter discusses the political state of Europe. Page 304

J. B. Magnan. Reports that he has been unable to bring to an agreement the parties interested in the new road from Three Rivers to Pointe du Lac; prays that disinterested persons be sent to settle the question, 23 Madame Beaubassin. Calling attention to a previous petition.

Joseph de Longueuil, seignior of Soulanges, &c. Represents the damage to his property caused by the removal of timber and firewood for the King's service, of which he does not complain, but he understands that an island on the lake is to be taken possession of without consulting him, as if it were not his property, and asks for redress. A report from Twies states that in the primitive title to Soulanges a reserve was mentioned of six arpents, in the most suitable place for building a fort for the King's service, which formed no part of the concession, and that this clause was repeated in the title to the concession extending the land to the Pointe au Baudet.

Same to the same. Sends His Majesty's instructions for the Governor of Quebec. The respective duties of the civil and military authorities towards the loyalists. Economy to be observed in the issue of provisions. In respect to the ecclesiastical policy he had thought it best to allow priests to remain among the Indians and has encouraged the Sominary of St. Sulpice to fill up the vacancies from their older missionaries. He had left the Jesuits on the same footing as he found them, although some of that order had engaged in schemes and correspondence inconsistent with the allegiance and fidelity due to the King. The instructions from the ministry respecting priests from Savoy were left with the other papers; four of these priests may soon be expected, and are to have £200 a year. General recapitulation (in French) of the Province of Quebec for the June 4. Quebec. year 1784. A note (in French) says: At the conquest of Canada in 1760, there were 76,122 souls in the Province, of whom 16,212 might serve in the militia. According to the enumeration which I had made at the end of 1784, which gives an interval of about 24 years, there were 113, 12 souls in the Province, without counting those in Detroit, and the Baie des Chaleurs, or the loyalists, settled since the peace, which shows an increase of 36,890 souls. Another note states that by a return dated the 4th of June, 1785, the number of militia was 28,249 men. (By comparing the two notes it will be seen that the number of militia had increased in nearly 25 years by 12,037, showing the rate for population to be about 67:36 and for militia about 57.39 per cent.) #### 1756-1778.

B.M, 21,889

A collection of rough memoranda on a great variety of subjects. It is not possible to calendar the volume which contains many important facts, mixed with the most trivial affairs. The Memoranda fill 114 pages. On the last are rules for his conduct, apparently at the time of entering on office as Governor of Quebec, the last of which may be given. The originals are in French. "To be always polite and obliging but also to be always watchful." "To ask time to consider things of any importance, but also to make it an inviolable law to do whatever has been promised." "Not to become heated in conversation, rather to leave the room under any pretext, as was the case with a Bishop, who prayed in order to give time for his blood to cool; to return immediately, to listen with patience and take time for deliberation." "To have the respect for the officers which is due them, to associate with them at table and in parties with the Canadians, and to require from them good conduct, and the regulation of their expenses." The short jotting of his transactions will enable his course to be traced from the time he left the command at Boston till he came to Quebec in 1778.

MEMORANDA FOR THE YEAR 1786.

January.

1. My nephew Anthony called and brought my account current, by which he still owes me £50 15s, 3d. At the same time he handed me an acknowledgment for the funds I have placed in his hands, with a memorandum of what they have yielded up till to-day.

Gave my servants a new year's gift. To Tuckfield 5 guineas; to Fred. the same; to the housekeeper, 1 guinea; to each of my other servants, half a guinea.

In the morning visited Baron d'Alvensleben, Sir John Dick, General Robertson. In the evening, Lady York, Mrs Carpenter, Mrs. Morison; returned home at 11.

2. Madame Prevost arrived at my house and entertained me on the subject of her son James, whom she would like to send to Nowfoundland instead of to Jamaica.

Had a visit from Sir Joseph York, to whom I showed the orders left in Canada, with copies of the letters written to the Minister. He read those I had written respecting Cuthbert, du Calvet, &c., with which he seemed satisfied. He told me that if the Ministry continued my allowances as Lieutenant General I should be well satisfied, and rest easy until I should be asked to serve.

Had visits from General Christie, Lieutenant-General Moultry, Major-General Sir F. Smith, Mrs. Amiel. General Durnford advised me to send a power of attorney to Mr. Hodge, at Pensacola, to dispose of my lands in Western Florida. He believes that Levington has sold to Mr. Ward half of a plantation of 2,000 arpents belonging to Mrs. Fairchild. There is still another belonging to her near a market.

There is no doubt that Levington, or his agent, has received the rents of my house in Pensacola, and they should pay me interest for the money.

- 3. Called on Lord Amherst, who had arrived with his family the previous evening Called on General Carpenter, Grant and Major Gunn.
- 4. The hairdresser has begun to fit me. Was at the levée.
- 5. Was at court. Dined at home.
- 6. Visited my nephew. General Budé dined with me. He strongly advised me not to return to America. He spent the evening with me.
- 7. Visited Lord and Lady Sydney, Lord and Lady Amherst, General and Mrs. Robertson, Moultry, Tryon. Dined at home with Major Peto, who told me that the King had refused the arrangement proposed by Lernoult, who will be obliged to sell.

Been to see my nephew, who is better. Dined with Lady Holderness, with Mesers. Dayrolles, General Gordon, Budé, Lord Dampier and his brother. Spent the evening at home.

- 9. Changed my bedroom and had my desk carried to the upper room. Employed all morning with Major Matthews and Tuckfield in verifying my account of expenses which he made for me up to the 31st December last, and have opened another account for the current year.
- at home. The first told me that the Russian envoy had, some time ago, shown him the treaty which the Empress of Russia had proposed to make with England, desiring to make a treaty of trade and alliance which England had refused. The Baron, after havirg spoken to me of the state of the Hanoverian troops serving in India, told me how very satisfactory their conduct had been, and that it had been resolved to increase each battalion (which are only two, with 100 men to a company) by two companies; that the King had agreed to this levy in his German States, and that the work was now going on. These German troops have served with general approbation.

We had a long conversation on the state of affairs as they appear to us at present, from which it appeared to us that we are and shall for a long time, be the dupes of France.

- K Called on Rigaud, who having shown a desire to paint the portrait of Joseph Brant, I invited them to dine. We had a long [conversation], in which Joseph appeared to know the interests of his nation, and to be very reasonable. Spent the evening at home.
- 11. Wednesday. Joseph breakfasted at my house with Claus. He showed me the copy of a speech he made to Lord Sydney, which I found weak, shallow and much below what I expected from him. I don't wish to be any longer mixed up with these people. Dined at Mr. Coore's with Mr. Barner, the doctor. Spent the evening at Mrs. Robertson's, where there were only old women, Mr. Amherst and my Lady came there.

Won two guineas; returned home at half past ten.

- 12. Was at Mr. Rigaud's; returned to dine as home, where I spent the evening.
- 13. Visited the Baron Alvensleben, with whom I had a long conversation on present affairs. He imagines that Rast Indian affairs will be settled more easily than is thought. He tells me that the King will give Greenwich Park to Prince Edward, as he is a sailor.

The Baron assured me that the King proposed to go to Hanover with the Queen; that he would land at Stade, and that in consequence orders were already given. General Budé does not believe that the King, and far less the Queen, would undertake this voyage; in any case, he does not wish to be of the party.

fait visitte à Mr G. Paterson qui ma beaucoup entretenu sur les malheurs de la guerre d'Amétique et sur les dépenses enormes qu'on y avoit faittes. Il croit qu'elles pouvoient bien etre un objet de recherche de la part du Parlemt dans cette cession, Il a tous les contes & papiers pret. Il me dit que le Major André avait un pressentiment de quelque malheur que lui Paterson s'était fortemt opposé au projet de gagner Arnhold, & quant au André auroit pû evitter de s'exposer. Il me dit qu'il étoit present lorsque le Genl dit au Roy (en parlant pr Boston) qu'il avoit asses de Trouppes, pour mettre ces gens à la raison, &c.

Lorsque le Genl Paterson partit pr se rendre à Boston II eut ordre expres du ministre de Lui marquer l'Etat des choses, il le fit sans reserves La Lettre fut montrée au Roi, qui preoccupé de ce que le Gl Gage lui avoit dit, ne fit aucune attention à cette lettre disant que Mr Gage ayant passé si longtemps en Amérique devoit mieux connoître ce Pays la & la Caractère de ses habitants que le Gl Paterson.

Il me parla d'un fourage Commandé par le Gl Grant, qui ayant retrouvé son cordon, sans lui avertir, avoit fally à le faire prendre Prisonnier avec son escorte, s'il n'avait pas eu la présence de parler François à un party de Rebelles, parmis lesquels il s'étoit engagé, contant d'être toujours dans l'enseinte du Cordon.

Il me dit quapprès l'affaire de Bonkershill ou il avoit été envoyé avec une partie de la Brigade, pour renforcer le chevalier How. Il offrit de prendre pocession d'une hauteur (Snow hill) audessus de Cambridge, mais que Hcw n'avait pas voulu ayant reçu ordre exprès du G! Gage de ne pas avancer plus loin.

M. Vinter qui avoit été envoyé du Cap Breton par Des Barres, pour acheter des provisions, a Rhode Island, pr. engager les Quacres, qui y sont établi, de meme qua Nantouquet, (tous fort experts dans la pêche de la Balaine) à aller s'établir au Cap Breton, Il croit q'on pourroit aranger des familles, tous gens à Leurs aise pourva qu'on les Traitte comme des Loyalistes Des Barres lui avait donné un crédit de £800 st. sur son agent Mr. Robert & ayant appris par le gouverneur Paar à Halifax, qu'il n'avoit point d'ordre d'envoyer des Provisions pr. les Loyalistes qui s'établissent au Cap Breton, Vinter prit sur lui d'en faire charger pr. la somme de £1600 st. sur trois vaisseaux. Il suppose que deux sont arrivés à Sydney, pour n'en étant plus qu'a deux Lieues, il fut assayli par une tempête qui le jetta si Loin en mer qu'il fut onfin obligé d'aborder en Angleterre. Il a été fort mal reçu de M. Rose, qui Lui dit de meme que M. Napier, que le gouvernement ne payeroit point les bills, M. Des Barres n'étant point autorisé à faire de telle dépence.

Il fait un raport avantageux de l'établissement dans cet Isle, mais il faut qu'il soyent supportés par le gouvit pendant quelques années.

Il paroit que Skeiler [Cuyler] est un homme turbulent et fachieux qui fait tout ce qu'il peut pour faire de la peine à DesBarres dont cependant il est le secrétaire.

letter from his brother Henry, on which we must think seriously. It will never do for him to vegetate at Turin. After dinner visited Lady Sydney and Lady Amherst. They were not at home, nor was Lady York. From there I went to Mrs. Gage's, where I found Lady Arundel and the young lady with Lord Gage. Returned home at 10.

Visited Lord Amherst, Colonel and Mrs. Williamson, Mrs. Robertson. Returned home, where General F. Smith and Major Jessup dined.

17. Tuesday. Visited General Paterson who entertained me with the misfortunes of the American war, and the enormous expenses it had entailed. He believes that these may be a subject of inquiry by Parliament this session. He has all the accounts and papers ready. He tells me that Major André had a presentiment of some misfortune; that he (Paterson) was strongly opposed to the plan of gaining Arnold, and that André might have avoided exposing himself. He says he was present when the general told the King (speaking of Boston) that he had sufficient troops to bring these people to reason, &c.

When General Paterson set out for Boston, he had express orders from the minister to report the state of things. He did so without reserve. The letter was shown to the King, who, preoccupied with what General Gage had told him, paid no attention to that letter, saying that Mr. Gage having spent so long a time in America must know that country and the character of its inhabitants better than General Paterson.

He spoke to me of a scout commanded by General Grant, who having passed his cordon without teing warned, must, with his escort, have been made a prisoner, if he had not had presence of mind to speak French to a party of rebels, among whom he had got, believing he was still within his own lines.

He says that after the affair of Bunker's Hill, to which he had been sent with a part of the brigade, to reinforce Sir William Howe, he offered to take possession of a height (Snow Hill) above Cambridge, but that Howe would not consent, having received express orders from General Gage not to advance further.

From there to pay a visit to Madame Leland; Mrs. and Miss Tryon came in. I went then to Rigaud's and made him change something in Joseph's portrait, which I hope will be very good.

Spent the evening at home.

18. Wednesday. Mr. Wirter who had been sent by Des Barres from Cape Breton to purchase provisions at Rhode Island, to induce the Quakers, who are settled there, as at Nantucket (all very expert in the whale fishery) to go to settle at Cape Breton; believes that an arrangement can be made with the families, all well-off people, provided they are treated like the loyalists. DesBarres had given him a credit of £800 sterling upon his agent. Mr. Robert, and having been informed by Governor Parr, at Halifax, that he had no order to send provisions to the loyalists settled at Cape Breton, Winter took on himself to ha e three vessels loaded for them at a cost of £1,600 sterling. He supposes that two of these had arrived at Sydney, for being not more than two leagues off, he was met by a gale which drove him so far to sea, that at last he was obliged to land in England. He was very ill received by Mr. Rose, who told him, as did Mr. Napier, that the Government would not pay the bills, Mr. Des Barres not being authorized to incur such an expense.

He makes a favourable report of the settlement on the island, but it must be supported by Government for some years.

It appears that Skeiler (Cuyler is a turbulent and factious man, who does all he can to annoy Des Barres, although he is his secretary.

Was at the levée, which was numerously attended. Returned home, where I learned that Captain Merrick has died at Naples, at which Budé is much distressed; being detained three days at Dover, he made his will there in which he has testified his affection for his friends, &c., &c.

Spent the evening at home.

Il a paru hier & aujourd'huy dans le Morning Herald. Des Lettres adressées au Duc de Richmond et le Marquis de Langdon [Lansdowne?] sur le projet qu'ils ont formé de nomer Sr Guy Carleton general, & Gouverneur en chef de tout ce qui nous reste en Amerique. Ces Lettres sont fort severe contre ces seigneurs et leur protégé.

Je vis hier M. Le Col. 19. Was at Court; the Queen being indisposed did not appear. However she dined at half past four. Budé dined with me and went to spend the evening with Peter Fraser arrived in the evening with dispatches from Quebec for Lord Sydney. He brought letters from Alexander Gray respecting the affairs of Du Calvet and Hay, with a letter for Mr. Coore by which it appears that DuCalvet has done all he could to circumvent me, and that Gray has neglected my business.

20. Friday. I went to Mr. Coore's with Mathews to show him the letters from Durnford on the subject of DuCalvet. He was not at home. Called on my nephew who is better.

I then went to Rigaud's and was pleased with Joseph's portrait. Dined and spent the evening at Baron Alvensleben's. Lost a guinea and a half.

There have appeared yesterday and to-day in the Morning Herald, letters addressed to the Duke of Richmond and the Marquis of Langdon (Lansdowne?) on the plan they have formed to appoint Sir Guy Carleton general and governor-in-chief of all that remains to us in America. The letters are very severe against these lords and their protegé.

Yesterday Isaw Mr. Adair, surgeon general, who told me, with a very frightened air, that he had just learned by letters and a pamphlet he had receive), that all Canada was attacked with small pox. I asked him to show me these letters, and he said he would bring them. I imagine it is a scheme of the lieutenant governor to favour his friend Bowman, whom he had sent to visit the different parishes, at a cost, it is said, of £1,800 for his expenses. I must ascertain the truth of this business, Received a letter from Mabane, who assures me that he will watch that the commission respecting DuCalvet is acting regularly. The Bishop and Lavy (Gravé) are behaving badly. The pension of the former must be considered.

Colonel Butler called on me respecting his subalterns, &c. Ho tells me that Sir Guy Carleton will not interfere with the affairs of Carada till he has received his commission. However, he often goes to Lord Sydney's office and Judge Smith is called every day to the ministers, probably engaged on the changes which it is proposed to make in the Quebec Act.

Butler tells me that Joseph proposed to go to Paris before returning to America. If it take place, there is every appearance that he will be more cordially received than he has been here. He is allowed fifteen shillings a day and ten shillings to Captain Hatton, who is greatly piqued at this difference, &c., &c.

It is surprising that they are not fully aware of the importance of preserving a good understanding with the Indians and the necessity of forming an alliance with them.

- 21. Saturday. Called on Rigaud, received a few visits, dined and spent the evening at home.
- 22. Sunday. There appeared on Thursday and Friday two letters in the Morning Herald, addressed to the Duke of Richmond. A person who was with me this morning might possibly be the writer of them.

Doctor Barr, Major Scott and my nephew dined in my house, where I spent the

My nephew proposed to me to write to his brother Henry, to offer him to form a partnership here with Mr. Long, which he would support with his credit, but that he'did not wish to be in partnership with them. He says he would wish Mr. Long should come to spend some time here to establish his firm; that then he might return to Turin and Henry come here to take his place. He believes that in this way they might form a business between this and Turin, from which they would secure more benefit than they now do.

He tells me that Mr. Long, before leaving, was much in love with the second of the daughters of Mr. Sanders.

Visited General Bough. On my return home Major Mathews told me that Mr. Townshend had come to my house on behalf of his father Lord Sydney to say that probably the commission of Governor General for Sir Guy Carleton would be signed to-day, and that at the same time the order that I should receive the allowances of lieutenant general would also be signed the same day. Dined at Lady Holderness's with Describes and Budé. Lady Holderness appeared more cheerful than usual. My coachman having absented himself I was obliged to return and remain at home, where I spent the evening.

26. Thursday. I went to see Lord Amherst, that I might communicate the message which Mr. Townshend had given me on behalf of Lord Sydney. He said there was an Order in Council to prepare the instructions for General Carleton; that with respect to me I should be satisfied, but that it was essential I should kiss the King's hand at the same time as Carleton.

Went to Lord Sydney's, where I saw his son, who said my Lord was dressing but would be at the office at one o'clock. I met him there and he told me that it was not necessary I should kiss the King's hand; that in regard to my allowances as Lieutenant General they would have to be charged by Mr. Pitt on the war extraordinaries, or otherwise the opposition might make a Loise; that the Act of Parliament respecting foreigners being still in force, I could not be employed in this country and that I was so high in the list of Lieutenant Generals, it would be difficult to send me elsewhere; that I need not trouble myself about what appeared in the newspapers, as I could see that the King himself was interested.

I was so late at the Court that I could not speak to the Queen; the King said only two words to me and seemed much embarrassed. I saw the address presented and returned home, where I passed the evening. Lord Sydney appeared to me to be also embarrassed. I asked to see him next day. He named half past nine.

27. Friday. I went to Lord Sydney's at half past nine in the morning. He was not up, so I waited at Bude's; returned to Lord Sydney's, whom I found at home. He received me very well and as a minister he told me that, with respect to my allowances as Lieutenant General, they would be included in the war estimates, that this would be more convenient to the Ministers; when it was desired to economise I could be given a Government, by which I would lose. He said then that he intended to propose some thing for my benefit and that of Prevost, no doubt complete naturalisation, for which I do not care. I remained to breakfast, at which Lord Bolton was present. The conversation was general. He made me acquainted with the "Star of the morning," the Duke of Montague, and invited me to dinner on Monday next. I went to pay a visit to Scibright and called on Rigaud. I met General Amhorst on my return and told him part of the conversation I had had with Lord Sydney. He advised me to be at the levée when Carleton is to kiss the King's hand, and I believe he is right.

Il me noma un Mr X de Long Island a qui ch: (Sheriff?) avoit l'ait present de quelques piéces d'argenterie, entr'autre un bole d'argent dans lequel il faisoit du pountsh pour regaller les personnes qui venoient le voir, sur ce qui quelques personnes louvient le present de Sh: Il dit qu'il auroit pu Lui on taire un beaucoup plus considérable puisque pour £2000 d'argent qu'il lui avoit envoyé, Il lui avoit procuré des certificats aussi bon qu'il étoit possible d'en faire ou Il auroit £5000 de profit. J'allai le voir à la Comédie avec Robertson, y revins chés moy apres onzo heures.

30 Dimanche, (29)

Le temps paroissant pluvieux je passai la plus grande partie de la matinée chés moy.

Sr George Pocock vint me faire Visite, & me dit que le chev. Carleton lui avoit dit que ses commissions comme Gouver. Général n'étoit point signés.

Je rencontray le Go Trayon à la Promenade revenu chés moy ou le Mr Scott, & Capt. Collin vinrent me voir, le dernier me dit qu'il avoit appris la veille que l'Envoyé de Prusse avoit presenté un memoire au ministre de la part de son maître, par lequel il l'informait que S. M. Prussienne ayant resollu de faire retablir le Prince d'Orange dans tous ses droits en Hollande, Ello souhaittoit de savoir quel parti le Roy et la Nation prendroit à cet égard, la nouvelle me paraît sans fondemt.

Juliai à 8 heures du soir chés le chev. Yorck que je trouvay au logis—mais mylady n'étoit pas visible—J'y restay plus d'une heure. Il ne savoit rien du memoire que le Ministre de Prusse devoit avoir presenté (ce qui me persuade que la rouvelle est fausse). La Conversation roula sur les affaires de la Hollande et il paroit attribuer tous les désagremts que le Prince dorange et essuye à sa foiblesse. Il a souffert des indignités qui l'ont aville et il se relevera difficilemt.

Il me parla beaucoup des desagremts qu'il avoit essuyé au sujet de son Regimt de Dragen, Il en avoit parlé au Roy qui pavoissoit entendre la chose et approuvée sa Conduitte cependant les Ministres ou le Viceroy faisoit tout ce qu'il vouloit, Nous tombames enfin sur mon chapitre et ii me dit que je devois être parfaittem sattisfait qu'ayant obtenu le ruban marque aussi essentielle de la sattisfaction du Roy, et obtenait le paye de Lt Genl Je serois plus heureux que si j'avais continué dans le Gouvernemt que comme Etranger & n'ayant point d'appuy par la en Angleterre, je me verrois toujours exposé à la caballe, &c.

Il blamoit beaucoup les dépenses Enormes que la nation faisoit dans chaque Guerre, qui les mettoit hors d'État de la pousser lorsqu'elle avoit les plus grands avantages. Il espere que l'Examen des Contes occasionera quelques reglements avantageux sur ce sujet,—et il croit comme moy, que quoique nous ne soyons pas fort en etat de faire la guerre, nous nous y verrons cependant forcé, par l'aviditté de nos marchands et de nos marins.

pas-é ches madame Robertson que je ne trouvay pas chés elle, revenu chés moy 104 heures.

La premiere branche de la maison d'Orange a fourny les plus grands Princes qu'il y ny eu en Europe, mais celle de Frise paroit avoir degénéré.

Je crois que l'arrivée imprevue de Prince Guillaume l'avoit inquietté, je le trouvay avec le General Grinvill, & lorsque j'entray je fus surpris de ce qu'il dit à Tuckfield, de le prevenir de ce quelqu'un voutoit entrer. Il me parut de mauvaise humeur, nous allons ensemble voir des chevaux qui ne lui plurent pas.

Dined at home, after which I went to my nephow's, who had gone to Hampstead and to Mr. Coore's who was not in his lodging.

28. Saturday. I took General Robertson to see Joseph's portrait, which he liked; from there we went to General Gage's, who seems to get leaner every day. The business of Sheriff and his accounts came up and he appeared uneasy. Robertson told me in going out that Sir Guy Carleton and Watson had positive information of several maiversations committed in America by the heads of the different departments, of which the Commissioners of Accounts had been informed. He mentioned of Long Island, to whom Cb. (Sheriff?) had made a present of some pieces of silver ware, among them being a silver bowl, in which be made punch to entertain those who came to see him, upon some persons praising Sh. (Sheriff's) present, he said he might have made one of much greater value, since for £2,000 of money he had sent him, he had procured certificates, as good as could possibly be got, by which he had £5,000 profit. In the evening went to the play with Robertson, returning home after 11 o'clock.

29. Sunday. The weather looking rainy, I spent the greater part of the morning at home.

Sir George Pocock came to pay me a visit, and said that Sir Guy Carleton told him that his commission as Governor General was not signed.

Met General Tryon on the promenade. Returned home, where Major Scott and Captain Collin [Cullen?] came to see me. The latter said that he had learned the evening before that the Prussian envoy had presented a memorandum to the Ministry from his master, by which they were informed that His Prussian Majesty having resolved to re-establish the Prince of Orange into all his rights in Holland, desired to know what part the King and the Nation would take in this regard. The news

Went at 8 o'clock in the evening to Sir [Jo eph] Yorke, whom I found in his lodging but my Lady was not visible. I remained more than an hour. He knew nothing of the memorandum which the Prussian Minister was to have presented (which persuades me that the news is false). The conversation turned upon the affairs of Holland and he appears to attribute all the difficulties the Prince of Orange has experienced to his own weakness. He has suffered indignities which have dishonoured him and he will relieve himself with difficulty.

He spoke to me a good deal about the trouble he had met with on account of his regiment of Dragoons; he had spoken about them to the King who appeared to understand the thing. However, the Ministry, or the Viceroy, did all he wanted.

We fell at last on the subject of my affairs, and he told me I should be perfectly satisfied; that having obtained the ribbon, so essential a mark of the King's satisfaction and the pay of Licutenant-General, I would be happier than it I had continued in the Government; that as a foreigner, and therefore without support in England,

I would always be exposed to cabals, &c.

He blamed greatly the enormous expenses incured by the nation in every war, which prevented pushing it when the greatest advantages offered. He hopes that the examination of the accounts will occasion some satisfactory regulations on this subject, and he believes, as I do, that although we are not in a position to make war, yet we may be forced into it by the eagerness of our merchants and sailors.

Called on Mrs. Robertson, who was not at home. Returned home at half past

The elder branch of the house of Orange has furnished the greatest princes there have been in Europe, but that of Friceland appears to have degenerated.

30. Monday. Was at Bude's who was not well. I believe the unexpected arrival of Prince William has disturbed him. I found him with General Grenville, and was surprised when I entered at what he said to Tuckfield, to warn him that some one wished to come in. He seemed to me to be in bad humour. We went together to look at some horses, which did not please him.

Je

I met Lord Amherst, with whom I had a long conversation about the times. He is groaning with all honest men over the swits which the opposition appeared to expose. The King having recommended in his speech that attention should be paid to the fleet, was the cause of Admiral Barrington being maie A imiral of the fleet (?) which gives him an income of £1,600 or £1,700 sterling a year, an office which had been refused to Lord Rolney and to A imiral Payne, as it had been resolved for the sake of economy, to abolish the office.

Visited Sir George Pocock; dined at Lord Sydney's with Lord Morton, Sir W. Hoskin and General Torin (Torrens?), Lady Sydney was very polite towards me. Lady Brudenell and Lady Stopford came after dinner with Lady Chatham, whom I found very pretty. Lady Stopford thanked me for the politeness I had shown to her son when he was at Québec. Lord Morton showed much politeness towards me, and Sir W. Hoskin great friendship. Mr. Townshend handed me, before dinner, a letter from Napier respecting Freeman's promotion, who will have the company in the 24th Regiment, which is very fortunate.

31. Tuesday. Visited General and Mrs. Carpenter and Major Mulcaster. I met Sir John Dick, who was going to the office. He told me on what footing he was entrusted with the direction of the accounts, that is, he warned Mr. Pitt he would make many enemies; however, that in this respect he would do all that was required of him, but that he would not receive any salary or recompense whatever. He told me I must keep my tally, which I would be obliged to produce when asked for, or when my turn came for the examination of my vouchers; that Sir Guy which was done. He told me, I do not know for what reason, that there was no reward to be hoped for in this country, and that one must be content with the satisfaction of having served as an honest man.

Returned home at half past one. Mr. and Mrs. Prevost came a moment after, to tell me that they had resolved to send their son James to Halifax with Commander Gordon. I found the General a little better. He told me that, to satisfy h's wife, he would take a trip to Henod in Burgandy to his father-in-law's, but would return to pass the winter in this country. He complained greatly of the insolence of the agents and especially about his money they have in their hands. They make him pay interest for what he owes for clothing, as these gentlemen, seeing themselves supported by Lord Amherst, take advantage of it.

After the death of his brother, he entrusted Mr. Grant, [Grau] his father in law, to close the account with his sister-in-law, and to avoid difficulties, he relinquished one-third of what should come to him. He said his brother had always managed to get hold of all that belonged to him as well as to his brother Mark.

I must, however, try to get paid what belonged to Bouquet of what was saved from the unfortunate speculation in Carolina, which I believe comes to £500 sterling.

The American Club began to day. I went at five o'clock precisely and found every one at table, which made me hope that in fature the old fashion would be followed, of having dinner served precisely at five ani finished at eight. Every one was cheerful; nothing remarkable passed; paid 17s. and 5s. for not being at the last club. Home at a quarter past nine.

February.

- 1. Wednesday. Visited Lord Adam Gordon. Clark and his son dined with me. Wrote to Genevay and Mr. Fairchild.
- 2 Thursday. Was at Mr. Pitt's levée, which was numerously attended. Was at Court, also numerously attended. Dined at Mr. Desrolles with Budé, Mr. de Salis, Madre, Mr. Blasset, Mrs. Salis. There was an assembly then in the evening, well attended. Played a rubber with Lady Albemarle, Lady Essex and Budé; won two guineas, Returned home at 11 Lord Amhorst told me that a half pay captain of the second battalion had been put into mine instead of Kelly who died in Jamaica. I told him they did not give up ill using us. He acknowledged it, but will never do anything in our favour. Returned home at half past one, very tired.

Eté ches Rigaud, au sujet de la gravure du portrait de Joseph, j'allay ensuitte à Hamped & rencontray mon neveux à mon retour le Brig. McLean me dit le matin que la Personne qui avoit ecrit les deux prenierres Lettres dans le Morning Herald contre le Duc de Richemd & le Chv. Carleton avoit été ches Lui ce matin & lui avoit dit quayant voulu répondre à la Lettre que les amis de Carleton avoit ecrit, il l'avoit porté à l'imprimeur qui lui avoit dit qu'il ne pourrait pas l'imprimer à moins qu'on ne lui donnat audela de 5 guir ées que ceux qui avoient répondu aux premières Lettres lui avoient donné cette somme, et qu'il ne pourroit rien insever dans son papier à moins qu'on ne lui donnat davantage. Ccey pourroit faire soupçonner par quels moyens tous les exemplaires (qui faisoient une relation de la guerre d'Amérique & particullieremt de l'Invasion du Canada) ont disparu on n'en trouve plus aujourd'huy.

5. Dimarche.

Promené le matin en voiture. Lord Gage & Ld Dartmouth me firent visitte, passé la journée à lire des lettres de Bq. [Bouquet?] & Prevost de 1755 & 56, & quelques unes de Momtt [Monette?] qui ont réveillé mon anciene amitié pour Elle. Je devois lui écrire ou la voir à mon passage au Continent. Le Brigdr McLean me dit hier que le chef de justice Livius étoit soubconné, avec raison, d'avoir écrit les deux Lettres adressées il y a quelques jours au Duc de Richemend, Le Major Mathews me fit voir une Lettre qu'il avoit reçue du Brigdr Hope, avec une incluse au Ld Sydney pour le recommender pour succéder au Major Carleton (qu'on croyoit mort) comme ranger of the woods. Je crains qu'il n'y aye beaucoup d'artifice dans la condui te de Hope.

leton comme Jénéral étoit signée; mais non pas celle comme Gouverneur.

Le Capte Twiss vint me faire visitte, et me dit que le bord de L'ordonnance ne vouloit point le payer comme Commandant Ingénieur en Canada et que s'il n'avoit pas une fortune lui nême Il seroit fort à l'étroit, Carleton lui demandat s'il soubaittoit de retourner en Canada Il lui dit que non, et parceque je pus comprendre, Il quittera plutôt le service que de quitter Langleterre. Il n'aprouve pas l'économie que le Duc [de Richmond] à étably à l'égard des officiers Ingénieurs quicommandent dans des endroits ou en construit des cuvrages et ou par concequent les officiers qui commande, sont responsables pour les depenses.

Le qui commande le genie en Canada, propose de finir les ouvrages qui ont été commencés il croit qu'il en contera environ 16,000 L. St. pour mettre tout en état; et le Duc se persuade qu'il ne sera pas difficile d'obtenir cette

3. Friday. Sent some gensing to Lord Dartmouth and the first volume of the Abbé Winkelman to Sir John Dick. Visited Baron Alvensleben. Walked a great deal, and returned home, where I found a letter from Baby and Gugy.

Gave two guineas to Mr. Emery for the subscription for the poor Swiss. He spoke to me of a certain Maigro who might suit me as a servant. Spent the evening

- 4. Saturday. Was at Rigaud's respecting the engraving of Joseph's portrait, then went to Hampstead and met my nephew. On my return, Brigadier McLean told me that the person who had written the two first letters in the Morning Herald against the Duke of Richmond and Sir Guy Carleton had been at his house that morning and told him that wishing to answer the letter written by Carleton's friends, he had carried the answer to the printer, who told him he could not print it unless he was given upwards of five guineas; that those who had answered the first letters had given him that sum and that he could insert nothing in his paper unless he was given more than that. This raises suspicion as to the means by which all the copies (which gave a relation of the war in America and particularly of the Invasion of Canada) have disappeared, as none can now be found.
- 5. Sunday. Took a drive in the morning. Lord Gage and Lord Dartmouth paid me a visit. Spent the day in reading letters from B4. (Bouquet) and Prevost of 1755 and .56 and some from Monette (?) which reawakened my old friendship to her. I must write her, or see her on my way to the continent. Brigadier McLean told me yesterday, that Chief Justice Livius was suspected, with reason. of having written the two letters addressed some days ago to the Dake of Richmond. Major Mathews showed me a letter he had received from Brigadier Hope, with an enclosure to Lord Sydney, recommending him to succeed Major Carleton (believed to be dead) as Ranger of the Woods. I fear there is a good deal of trickery in Hope's conduct.
- 6. Monday. Took a ride and got sonking wet. Budé dined with me. Went to the Baron's concert which was well attended. From there we went to Lady Amherst's; home at half past 11. I did not play.

Major Mathews was this morning at Nepean's to show him Hope's letter. He told him that Carleton was not dead, but he was not to burn the letter to Lord Sydney; that he should make the acquaintance of Carleton as every thing in Canada would by and bye depend on him. James Grant, whom he met, told him that Carleton's commission as General was signed but not that as Governor.

Captain Twiss called and told me that the Board of Ordnance would not pay him as commanding engineer in Canada, and that if he had not a fortune himself he would be very ill off. Carleton asked him if he wished to return to Canada; he said no, and by what I understand he will sooner quit the service than leave England. He does not approve of the economy the Duke [of Richmond] has established in respect to engineer officers who command in places where works are under construction, and where, consequently, the officers commanding are responsible for the

The who commands the engineers in Canada proposes to finish the works which have been began. He believes it will cost about £16,000 sterling to put them all in condition and the Duke is convinced that it will not be difficult to obtain that sum.

General Badé appears to be interested in Mathews; I will try to draw some advantage from it.

7. Tuesday. Rode out; came home where I spent the evening. I read with pleasure the last campaign of the King of Prussia.

8. Wednesday. Drove to Hampstead. My nephow came to my house and showed me a letter from his father who is drawing upon him for the purchase he made on my account of Madame Lavie de Clindy's meadow, for the sum of £385 sterling, which I think very dear.

I desired him to write Mr. Mandrot to ascertain the character of the son of DelVotz (Devos?).

My nephew appears to intend doing something for his brother Henry and the Turin firm in general.

Received a letter from Mr. Williams from New York; he has not been able to see Livingstone, but has handed a letter to his father.

Captain Hutchins, to whom he sent my letter, promised to do all that he could for my interest in the Province of Pennsylvania; spent the evening at home.

9. Thursday. Was at court where I was very late. It is said that when their Majestics arrived scarcely any one was in the room. The Queen asked me at what time I arrived. I answered that I had been more than an hour and a half on the road and that at last I had been obliged to leave my carriage in the middle of St. James street and take a sedan chair. That in spite of this, it was with great difficulty I had reached St. James' at three o'clock. The court was crowded, and it seemed to me that I had never seen so many beautiful women there.

Dined at Lord Amherst's, where there was a large company, Sir George Yonge, to whom I sat next, spoke to me a good deal, as did General Fosset (Fawcett), who told me he had written a long letter in answer to one which Brigadier Hope had written him respecting the mance eves of the troops, as it appeared that all those who had served in America were for rapid movements without thinking it necessary to have a solid body behind which the light infantry might rally. I approved of his advice. He told me that he had dissuaded the King from taking the advice of some of the old generals and I believe that he is engaged in drawing up a kind of regulation on the subject. I told him that all his trouble would be useless unless care were taken that it should be followed exactly and that every commander of a corps, without exception, should be forbidden under penalty from executing any other manœuvres. Went home at nine o'clock.

- 10. Friday. Took a walk. Budé dined with me, and we went to spend the evening at Mrs. Morrison's, where I lost a guinea.
- 11. Saturday, Took a long ride. My nephew sent me my Madeira, 11 cases of 12 large bottles each, and a pipe well filled. I put the whole (except one case) in my cellar under the church. Colonel Small has arrived, still full of compliments. Took a long ride. Dined at home; passed the evening at General Robertson's.
- 12. Sunday. Pail a visit with General Robert on to General Provost, who is no better. His wife showed me a letter from her father inviting them to come to France next spring to go together to the Bourbon waters. Dined with General Robertson and went home early, we had a good deal of conversation on the affairs of America. He is very well informed for what took place in the South. He said I should make up an account of the rations and wood which the other commanders-inchief had received in the South during the war and show it to the commissioners of accounts. Howe and Clinton have always drawn upwards of 100 rations a day and as much wood as they could burn.

Mrs. Morrison told me the day before yesterday that she had learned from Sir John Boyd there would be an installation in spring and begged me to invite them to Rode in the park. Messrs. Watts, Sir James Napier, Dr. Baker, and Dr. Brown dined with me.

Spont the evening at Colonel Leland's, with General Paterson, Rainsforth, Capof the Royal Navy, his wife and daughter, Tryon, his wife and daughter, and

The company believed that the Prince of Wales is married to Mrs. Fitzherbert and anticipated from it the most fatal consequences to the State.

- 14. Tuesday. Was at the Club. Lord Shuldham presided, who has named me as his successor. We were 18 persons. Spent the evening at home, to which I had returned at 10 o'clock. The dinner and company were good.
- 15. Wednesday. I met Lord Amheret in the Park and handed him Captain Hanzard's letter. I then met General Cton (Carleton) who told me that not having gone to Windsor, he had not seen the King for some time, but that he could assure me that the Chevr. Ctn. (Sir Henry Clinton) was not one of his favourites, that the King was not satisfied with his enormous pretentions, that he believed him to be a man of probity, but could not conceive how he could have such ideas. The General told me also that Sir Henry was at variance with his brother, as the latter had flattered himself with being Governor of Quebec. He asked if my own business was settled, I said no; on which he said I was to have the allowances of a Lieut. General, He imagined that I had saved money, because Clinton had brought back a large amount from 4 merica. I made him understand that our pay had been very different; that, besides, Clinton had drawn all his provisions from the King's magazines and all his supplies from the Barrack Master General's stores, and pechaps from the Quartermaster General. He appeared to understand the difference of our positions. He mude me acquainted with Clinton's odd character, his conduct towards the Duke of New-den (?) My handkerchief was stolen.

- Spent the evening at Mrs. Robertson's, where there was a large number of people. Played three rubbers and won three guineas.
- 16. Thursday. Was at Court, which was very brilliant. I found Sir Guy Carleton there, and told him that when he should go to Carada, he would find there my carriages, post chaise and twelve horses, which would be much at his service. He asked who was my agent and I named Chandler; he said he would name Dunn, who would appraise the articles, upon which I offered him the house at Montmorency, but he said Lady Carleton would not take it at any price, on account of her children.

Davison, who dired with me, said that Moliesard had told him that he would be appointed to recover Cochrane's debts; that the Drummonds had gained great interest with the Ministers on account of the marriage of the son with

He said he had orders to send to the amount of £8,000 sterling in presents for the Indians (which is absolutely useless), and also that he had obtained the contract to supply provisions for Nova Scotia, and that he is to give an order to send 200 pipes of Madeira to Canada.

He seems to be a great enemy to Dunn, Twiss and Schanks.

General Murray visited and breakfasted with me. He complimented me on the ribton, and told me how greatly interested he was in Matieu (Mathews) and would make use of my name with Lord Sydney.

17. Friday. February 1786. Visited General Murray, Lady Holderness, Dr. Munster, Lord Hopeton, Captain Twiss. Met Mr. Townshend, who told me that the advocate and solicitor general were making difficulties, in respect that Sir Guy Carleton could not command out of his province in the others. I suppose that what he heard was in regard to civil matters only, for he does not understand anything

18. Saturday. Took Lieutenant Wolfe to Lord Amherst's, who promised to recommend him to Carleton and to Colonel Davis, who will command in Canada. Called on my nephew, who said that he had written to his father and brother respecting young Devos and the family.

Brigadier Maclean, Small and Colonel Hunter dined with me. Small tells marvels about Shipody, and believes I could regain possession of it. Remained at Left Quebec on the 16th November, 1784, in the Atalanta, Captain Frelyn. Anchored at Spithead on the 8th January, '85. Arrived at Lordon on the evening of the 9th, 10th saw G., dined at Lord Sydney's, saw General Lord Amherst. Tuesday 11. Brigadier McLean, Captain Cullen came to see me and Davison. Was presented to the King on Wednesday. On Thursday invited and presented to the Queen.

- 19. Sunday, February, 1786. Rode out. Dined at Baron Linda's with Lord Holderness, Mr., Mrs. and Miss Dayrolles, Miss Hope, the Austrian and Russian Ambassadors, and the Count a Pole. Was a good deal amused. Thence to Mrs. Robertson's and home.
- 20. Monday. Took a walk; called at Rigaud's. Dined at Lady Holderness's with Mr. and Mrs. Bentinck, son of my Lord Athlone, a Mr. Bentinck, Mr. Bartelemy and Bude. From there to Baron Alvensleben's concert, and home at ten o'clock.

Received a letter from Mr. Rose concerning the reduction I had made of the commissaries, and a letter from M. de Ricdesel, of the 10th current,

21. Tuesday. Went with Mr. Dayrolles to pay a visit to Count Adhemar. Thence to Mrs. Munster's, Lord Amherst's, General Roy's and Colonel Monk's. Captain Twiss came to pay me a visit, and complained that all the officers, good and bad, were treated equally. Colonel Cammel (who was with me at Pensacola), having accounts to render to Colonel , he would not receive them. Things of this sort serve no perpose and discourage good officers. Twiss, being commanding engineer, drew his pay as such for seven years, without any objection being made. Now his accounts containing it will not be passed, and he must repay the excess. This negligence wrongs the service and dishonours those who manage its affairs.

Answered Mr. Rose, of the Treasury; dined and spent the evening at home.

22. Wednesday. Took Mr. Dayrolles to Rigaud's; he seems well pleased with Joseph's portrait. Took him to Lady Holderness's, and I went to visit Mrs. Munster, who seemed much distressed that Lieutenant Wolfe was to go to the West Indies. Then went to Lord Amherst's, who told me there was to be a council that day to settle the instructions for Carleton, and that he did not wish to be there.

Spent the evening at Mrs. Dayrolles'. Played with Lady Shand and two of the ladies; lost a crown. Home at 11 o'clock.

- 23. Thursday. Spent the morning in arranging my affairs. Captain Twiss, the two Grants, G. Davison and Lieut. Wolfe dined with me. Alexander D. (Davison) excused himself. Spent the evening in the house.
- 24. Friday. Called on Budé and Lord Amherst, neither of whom was at home-Captain Kendy (Kennedy), Colonel Marsh and Captain Watts dined with me. Drew £300 at my banker's. Spent the evening at home.

N.B. Les fortifications sont immobiles au lieu, que les vaisseaux de guerre peuvent protéger un Etat et etre transportés partout où l'enemis est accessible par mer et par la s'est offencément et deffencivement.

Le Col. Marsh me dit que le Ministère avoit dessein de faire passer nos Batt: dans la Grande Bretagne, et quallors on en formeroit deux Regimts, que mon Batt: seroit le 60° et celuy de Prevost le 61 me. Je luis dis que je ne voyois pas qu'on nous fit (par là) une grande faveur, que tout au plus cet hon neur seroit au dépend de nos revenus. Il ne me parut pas le comprendre de cette façon là et croyoit que ce seroit un grand avantage pour nous. (Efford de l'orgueil de la nation).

25. Samedy.

Promené le matin à pied, diné et passé la journée chés moy; fait visitte à M. le G1 Murray qui me montra les contes du Col. Caldwell. Il me fit beaucoup de protestations d'amitié mais je le trouvay toujours le même. On me dit que les commissions du chevallier Carleton devoient etre signées aujourdhuy.

26. Dimanche.

Il neige et fait mauvais temps, passé chés le Gi Robertson, qui a diné chés moy avec Bude et le Baron de Reigenstiern. Nous avens joués au Wist jusqu'à dix heures. Robertson me dit que 37 des membres du Parlemt qui etcient du party de M. Pitt vôteroient contre lui demain, sur l'affaire des Fortifications. On croit cependant qu'il emportera la question au moins en partie.

27. Lundy.

Ar Davison passa chés moy et me dit qu'il frêteroit 10 vaisseaux pour aller chargée de la farine et du Bisquit en Canada pour Terre-Neuve.

Il me priat de le recommander à M. Molefrou [Molesson] qui souhaitte qu'il soit recouvrement des sommes qui sont dues en Canada à la Tresorerie. Il se plaint beaucoup de Dunn, & le croit dangereuz en Canada. It me dit que Gambell devoit y passer. La neige & le mauvais temps m'empêche de sortir. Budé vint diner chés moy, & me dit apprès ça le projet que le Sr Grenville avoit formé de la plasser dans la famille du Duc de York, apprès lui avoir offert tout son appuy auprès de M. Pitt duquel il (est) Germain. Cette ouverture une longue conversation, où j'eus lieu de m'assurer combien il est dangereux d'etre auprès des princes; & combien il fant de prudence pour gagner & se conserver leur confiance, &c. Il se retira à 10 heures.

Je présiday au clob américain où il se trouva 19 membres tout s'y passa très bien et je nommay le Cape Kenedy pour mon successeur.

Le Gi Murray passa chès moy le matin et m'apprit que le Bill pour fortifier Portsmouth & Plimouth avait été rejetté. Lord A. & plusieurs autres personnes m'en parurent fort content; & en général on put remarquer que le Duc n'a pas des amis, mais qu'il est crain & on le croit si perseverant dans ce qu'il entreprend qu'on suppose qu'il renouvellera sa proposition par quelqu'autre moyen.

1 Mars.

Twiss passa chés moy & je lui signay un certificat par lequel je fais connaître qu'il a souvent eu besoin de Batteaux pour mettre mes ordres en execution, & que je ne luy ay jamais rien payé pour les dépenses qu'il a eu à cet égard.

Le Baron Riegelfelt m'a fait visitte.

Diné et passé la soirée chés moy. Il a fait mauvais temps toute la journée.

2 Mars Jeudy.

Le procès que Messers Ellis & M. m'avoit intenté pour etre payé des Lettres de changes que le L'Gove St. Clair avoit tiré sur moy de Missillimackinak (pour le comte du gouvernement) a été dessidé aujourdhuy, & ces messieurs ont été renvoyé avec depend.

Le Majr Matthews apprès m'avoir anoncé cette nouvelle, me dit que n'ayant plus rien à faire pour moy et ne pouvant plus m'etre utille, Il se proposoit de repasser en Canada le plustost qu'il pourroit, son Regim' devant aller à Niagara, que si je pouvois faire quelque chose pr lui je l'aurois sans doute fait, et que s'il ne pouvoit

'ayant repasue si je oouvoit N.B.—Fortifications are immovable, whereas ships of war can protect a State and be transported wherever the enemy is accessible by sea, and thus act offensively.

Colonel Marsh told me that the ministry had the intention of bringing our battalions into Great Britain, and that two regiments would be formed from them; that my battalion would be the 60th and Prevost's the 61st. I told him that I did not see that (by this step) any great favour was done to us, and that at the best it would be at the expense of our income. He did not appear to understand it in that light, and believed it would be a great advantage for us. (Effect of national vanity.)

- 25. Saturday. Took a walk in the morning. Dined and spent the day at home. Visited General Murray, who showed me Colonel Caldwell's accounts. He made great protestations of friend-hip for me, but I found him still the same. I am told that Sir Gny Carleton's commissions are to be signed to-day.
- 26. Sunday. Snowing and bad weather. Called at General Robertson's, who dined with me, along with Budé and the Baron de Reigenstiern. We played at whist till ten o'clock. Robertson told me that 37 of the members of Parliament who were of Pitt's party will vote against him to morrow on the question of the fortifications. It is, however, believed, that he will carry the vote, at least partly.

27. Monday. Alexander Davison called and said that he would charter ten vessels to go loaded with flour and biscuits to Canada for Newfoundland.

He begged me to recommend him to Mr. Molesson who wishes to be entrusted with the recovery of the sums which are due in Canada to the Treasury. He complains much of Dunn, and believes him to be dangerous in Canada, and says that Gamble is to go there. The snow and bad weather prevented me from going out. Bude came to dine with me, and told me afterwards of the plan which Lord Grenville bad formed, of placing him in the family of the Duke of York, after having offered bim all his support with Mr. Pitt, to whom he is related. This opened a long conversation, during which I had reason to be convinced how dangerous it is to be beside Princes and how necessary is prudence to gain and preserve their confidence. He left at ten o'clock.

28. Tuesday. I presided at the American Club, where there were 19 members. All passed well, and I named Captain Konnedy as my successor.

General Murray called in the morning and told me that the bill to fortify Portsmouth and Plymouth had been defeated. Lord A. [Amherst] and several others appeared to be well satisfied, and in general it is remarked that the Duke [of Richmond] has no friends, but he is hotheaded and is believed to be so persevering in what he undertakes, that it is supposed he will renew his proposition by some other means.

1. March. Twiss called, and I signed a certificate showing that he often required bateaux to execute my orders, and that I had never paid him for his expenses on this account.

Baron Riegelfelt paid me a visit.

Dined and passed the evening at home. The weather has been bad all day.

Je fus voir ensuite le G' Christie qui me dit que le G' Chancellier n'avoit pas voulu apposer les sceaux à la Commission de Carleton, qu'il ne trouvoit pas constitutionale, que l'affaire en restoit là, mais que Carleton accepteroit à tout prix, persuadé que ses l'atrons obtindroient tout avec le temps. Il croit que le Juge, Smith, est la personne la plus impropre qu'on auroit pu choisir pre envoyer en Canada, le croyant rebelle dans l'âme & capable de préparer l'esprit des Canadiens à un changem de constitution, qui causeroit leur ruine avec celui du bill de Quebec & par là la perte du Canada pour la Grande Bretagne.

Je fus au Levé cù j'ai lieu de m'apercevoir que le Duc de Richmond n'avoit pas beaucoup d'amys. Il paroit qu'on ne l'aime pas quoy qu'on croît qu'il a quelques connoissances dans le Génie, on se flatoit qu'il resigneroit son employ, mais il n'en fera rien. On me dit qu'il y avoit quelques officiers qui n'atendoient que ce moment là pour lui faire rendre conte de sa conduitte dans plusieurs occasions, et on croît que pour évitter les desagremts il conservera son poste aussi longtemps qu'il pourra. Je fus à la cour cù le roy me fit l'honneur de me parler longtemps, en présence de La Sydney.

Le Duc d'Amilton devoit être crée chevallier de l'ordre du chardier [chardon] je restay pour voir la sérémonie, & fus extremement surpris du peu d'ordre qui est observé dans une occasion qui devroit etre solennelle! Il n'y avoit point de ruban preparé, & le Roy fut obligé d'entrer dans son cabinet pour le trouver lui même.

Ces sortes de négligences ne sont pas pardonables, & quoy que tout le monde en parut surpris je crois devoir doutter qu'on agisse avec plus de dessence dans la suitte. Lorsque j'eus l'honneur de recevoir l'ordre du Bain les choses se passèrent avec beaucoup plus de dessence, & j'ay lieu de croire qu'il y avoit des ordres pour qu'elles fussent faittes d'une façon qui puisse me flatter. Le Roy en me passant le Ruban, me dit qu'il ne pouvoit le donner à personne qui lui fit plus de plaisir, & lorsque je baisay la main du Roy il me la tendoit avec affection. Tous les chevalliers qui parurent à ma reception parurent dans le manteau de l'ordre, et toute la seremonie en general se passa avec beaucoup de dessence &c. &c.

I went to General Robertson's and Budé's, intending to ascertain their sentiments, but they were not at home.

I then went to General Christie's, who told me that the Lord Chancellor had refused to affix the scale to Carleton's commission, not believing it to be constitutional; that the business remained in that state, but that Carleton would accept at any cost, persuaded that his patrons would obtain every thing with time. He believes that Judge Smith is the most unsuitable person that could have been chosen to send to Canada, convinced that he is a rebel at heart and capable of preparing the mind of the Canadians for a change of constitution, which would cause their ruin with that of the Quebcc bill and cause the loss of Canada to Great Britain.

3rd March, Friday. Was at the levee, where I had reason to notice that the Duke of Richmond had not many friends. It seems that he is not liked, although it is believed he has some knowledge of engineering. People flatter themselves that he will resign his office but he will do nothing of the kind. I was told that some officers were only waiting that moment to call him to account for his conduct on several occasions, and it is believed that to avoid annoyance he will keep his post as long as he can. Was at the Court, where the King did me the honour of speaking to me for a long time in presence of Lord Sydney.

The Duke of Hamilton was to be created Knight of the Thistle I remained to see the ceremony and was extremely surprised at the little order observed on an occasion which should be solemn! No ribbon was prepared, and the King was obliged to enter his cabinet to find it himself.

Negligence of this kind is unpardonable, and although every one seemed surprised at it, I believe I may fairly doubt if there will be any future improvement. When I had the honour of receiving the order of the Bath, every thing passed with much more decorum, and I have reason to believe that orders had been given that the ceremony might be conducted in such a manner as to flatter me. The King in handing me the ribbon, told me that he could not give it to any one with more pleasure and when I kissed the King's hand he held it to me with affection. All the Knights who were at my reception appeared in the robe of the Order, and all the ceremony in general passed with much propriety, &c., &c.

The conversation turned upon the affairs of America and on the difficulties Lord Cornwallis would meet with on his arrival in the East Indies.

The company having retired, except General Robertson, he told me that Burgeyne's regiment of Dragoons being vacant, no one had more right than I to ask for it, and that if I did not intend to do so, he would ask for it himself. I greatly encouraged bim to do so, telling him that if I were granted what had been promised me, that is, the pay of Licutenant General, I would be perfectly pleased. Returned

Je fus à la cour avec Majr Matthews. Il y avoit fort peu de monde, & le Roy se retira à trois heures. Le Roy ni la Reine ne parlerent point à Matthews, on me dit que auivant l'Etiquette, ils ne parloient pas à des Majors. Je vis le chevallier Duglas, que je ne reconneis pas. Il me dit qu'il avait chassé tous les Américaine de nos Postes. C'est à dire qu'il leurs avoit ampéché de couper du bois prendent la Larddes Balains qu'ils prencient dans le Golphe, que n'ayant reçu aucune instruction à cette égard il avoit cru que le seul moyen de s'en procurer était d'être extrement exact à observer le traitté de Paix, que sa conduitte lui avoit procuré un complimt de la part du Roi, & et que si ses successeurs voulcient suivre le même exemple, on géneroit considérablemt la Peche des Américains.

Je fus consulter le Gl Fosset au sujet de la demande du Capt Glaisenberg. Il me conscilla d'en parler au Ch: Yong, qui vraysemblablemt me renvoyeroit à la Tresorerie. Il me dit aussi que je ferois bien de parler à My Lord Howe au sujet du fils de Glaisenberg.

Fosset me dit que L G. de Dragon legers avoient demandé le Regimt du chev. John Bourgoin, qu'on dit etre mort aux Indes.

Il me dit ensuitte qu'il souhaitteroit que le Roy prit l'habillemt des Regimts, & donna 1000 l. st. par année à chaque Colonel, que la Nation gagneroit par là, & que les chefs des Regimts auroient de quoy vivre honnetemt. Il paroit que les commissaires pour les contes approuvèrent fort ce projet. De mon côté j'encourageay beaucoup le Gl de le faire approuver. Je passay chés Ld Amherst à qui je fis part de ce que j'avois appris chés Fosset. Il me dit que M. Dundas avoit parlé à M. Pitt en faveur du G. Cammel, qui est allé aux Indes sous l'espérance que s'il y avoit quelque promotion dans ce Pays il y succéderoit, que Lord Cornwallis ayant été nommé Gouverneur Général étoit un pas adroit qu'on faisoit à Cammel, & qu'ainey on ne pouvoit plus s'en dispenser de lui donner le Regimt et il y a toute apparence qu'il réussira.

Je passay chés Robertson à qui je dis tout ce que j'avois appris. Il alla à la Cour & je restay avec Madame qui se plaignoit beaucoup de ce qu'on ne faisoit rien pour son mary, & que s'il n'obtenoit pas quelque chose il ne pouvoit pas soutenir la dépence de Londres. Enfin elle m'avoua que la seule chose qu'elle souhaittoit le plus au monde que son mary obtint le ruban, mais que si je disois ça à personne elle ne me le pardonneroit de sa vie. Je badinay beaucoup avec elle sur ce sujet. George Davison passa chés moy, & me fit voir une lettre de M. Townshend à Nopean par laquelle le roi avoit approuvé le Bail des Postes du Labrador en faveur de son frère, &c. mais que la chose étoit aretée par l'interposition de M. Pitt qui disoit que le Bail étoit trop long. Il me pria d'en parler à M. Rose qu'il croit être le seul qui s'y oppose. Il m'apprit la dessus que Rose & Nopean n'étoient pas bien ensemble. Je lui conseillay de faire agir Lord Algernon Percy, & de faire un memoire que je présenterais avec Lord Percy. Il me parut fort affecté, & craindre que si l'affaire venoit à manquer ça ne leur fit perdre tout leur crédit en Canada. Il soubçonne le juge Day, Grant, Dunn & surtout le ch. Carleton de faire tous leurs efforts pour faire manquer cet affaire, & je croit qu'il pourrait y joindre Nepean, &c.

Je sus peusser des cartes chés l'Admiral Barrington, le capitaine Vonder Put que je ne trouvay pas chés eux. Cherche en vain le chev. Ch. Douglas.

Mardy le 7.

Fait visitte à Budé qui a diné chés moy avec le Major Gunn.

Je passay chés Lord Sydney que je ne trouvay pas, de la chés le Baron Regenfeld qui n'étoit pas au Logis, ensuitte chés M. Rigaud que je trouvay occupé du portrait de Joseph Brant. Il me dit qu'il le vendroit pour 50 guirées & que Joseph lui avoit dit que s'il ne le vendroit pas il le feroit achetter lui même pour le faire aller en Amérique.

5. Sunday. Was at the Court with Major Mathews. There were very few present and the King retired at three o'clock. Neither the King nor Queen spoke to Mathews, I was told that according to etiquette they did not speak to majors.

I met Sir Charles Douglas, whom I did not recognise. He told me that he had driven all the Americans from our posts, that is, that he had prevented them from cutting wood to melt the blubber of the whales they took in the Gulph; that having received no instructions on the subject, he believed that the only means of proceeding was to be extremely exact in observing the Treaty of Peace; that his conduct had obtained him a compliment from the King and that if his successors would follow the example, American fisheries would be considerably embarrassed.

Majors Potts and Scott dined with me; passed the evening at home. Lord Amherst told me that the chancellor had refused to affix the scal to Car-leton's commission.

6. Monday. Went to consult General Fawcett respecting Captain Gleisenberg's demand. He advised me to speak to Sir George Yonge, who would probably refer it to the Treasury. He told me also that I would do well to speak to Lord Howe respecting Gleisenberg's son.

Fawcett told me that the lieutenant colonel of the Light Dragoons had asked for Sir John Burgoyne's Regiment, it being reported that he has died in India.

He then said that he wished the King would take the clothing of the regiments and give £1,000 sterling a year to each colonel; that the nation would gain by it and that the commanders of the regiments would have wherewith to live at case. It appears that the commissioners of accounts strongly approve of this plan. For my part, I greatly encouraged the General in having it approved of. Called at Lord Amherst's whom I informed of what I had learned from Fawcett. He told me that Mr. Dundas had spoken to Mr. Pitt in favour of General Cammel, who has gone to India, in the hope that if there should be any promotion in that country he might succeed in it; that Lord Cornwallis having been appointed Governor General was a neat stroke done for Cammel, that thus the giving him the regiment could no longer be avoided and there is every appearance that he will be successful.

Called at Robertson's, to whom I told all that I had heard. He went to the court and I remained with his wife, who complained very much that nothing was done for her husband and that if he did not obtain anything he could not support the expense of London. At last she acknowledge! that what she most wished for in the world was that her husband should obtain the ribbon, but if I told any one this she would never forgive me. I joked a good deal with her on the subject. George Davison called and showed me a letter from Mr. Townshond to Nepean, that the King had approved of the lease of the Labrador posts to his brother, &c., but that the business was stopped by the interposition of Mr. Pitt, who said that the lease was too long. He begged of me to speak of it to Mr. Rose, who he believed to be the only one opposed to it, and told me, thereupon, that Rose and Nepeau were at variance. I advised him to get Lord Algernon Percy to act and to prepare a memorial which I would present to Lord Percy. He appeared much affected and to fear that if the busines failed it would destroy their credit in Canada. He suspects Judge Day, Grant, Dann and especially Sir Guy Carleton with using every effort to cause a failure in the business and I believe he might to these add Nepean, &c.

I lett cards at Admiral Barrington's and Captain Van der Put's, neither of whom was at home. Looked in vain for Sir Charles Douglas.

7. Tuesday. Visited Budé, who, with Major Gunn (Green?) dined with me.

Called at Lord Sydney's, whom I did not find; thence to Baron Regenfeld's, who was not at home; thence to Mr. Rigaud's, whom I found engaged on Joseph Brant's portrait. He told me he would sell it for fifty guineas, and that Joseph told him if he did not sell it, that he would have it purchased himself to be taken to La conversation pendant le diner roulla sur l'Hanovre, & apprès être montédans ma chambre Bude me fit le detail de toute sa Famille & de son etat actuel, & de la conduitte de son frère, &c. que j'approuvay beaucoup. Il espère d'entrer dans la famille du Duc de York par le moyen du Gen! Grenville, & il paroit que c'est tout ce qu'il ambitionne, & je crois qu'il a raison.

Mercredy, le &e

Je reçus ce matin une lettre de M. Nepean, qui renfermoit un papier concernant l'état du clergé Protestant en Canada, et me demandant mon sentim^t là dessus, de la part de Ld Sydney, qui ne vouloit donner aucune réponce avant de savoir ce que j'en

Je répondis qu'il peut y avoir quelque chose de vray dans le memoire, qu'il étoit extrement exagérée, que j'avais laissé les choses dans ce pays là comme je les avois trouvées et que mon sentimt étoit qu'il conviendroit de l'envoyer au Brigt Hope pour avoir des éclaircissemt &c. &c. Je suis fort surpris de ce qu'après avoir été plus d'une année pendant laquelle on ne m'a jamais rien communiqué, qu'on veuille me consulter aujourd'hui, sans doute affin de jetter sur moy tout les changemes qu'on propose de faire. Au reste je crois que ce memoire a été fait par M. le ministre Dauté [ Doty | sous l'avis et l'assistance d'Hamilton & de Caldwell.

Diné chés Lady Holdernesse avec Mr Dayrolles & Budé. La conversation fut en général sur la vieille cour, & apprès que Dayrolles fut party elle roula sur la nouvelle. Revenu chés moy à 91.

Joudy 9.

Je fus au Levé de M. Pitt qui fut fort gratieux. Il me dit que Joseph se proposoit de partir dans J'allay de là à la cour.

Le Chevallier John Caldwell, le Brige MacLean le Col. Class & son fils et Steadman dinèrent chés moy, le Brigr me fit voir un article qu'il avoit dans le Morning Advertiser du & au sujet du gouvernemt général proposé pour Carleton cù il y a des raisons très solides pour prouver que le projet est des plus mal conçu; cependant il passera.

Vendredy, 10.

Je fus chés Pollock pour le consulter au sujet des pretentions du Capitaine Glaisenberg. Il me fit un détail de l'office me dit que Nepean étoit chargé de tout l'ouvrage, qu'il auroit besoin de secour, & que Townshend ne faisoit rien. En sortant je rencontray M. Dunn dans l'enty chambre. Promené et revenu chés moi. Je dinay chés Sr George Yong avec Ld Sydney le Gl Johnson, le Gl Robertson, le général Voignard, le Gouverne Thony, Rainsford, Fosset, & le chev. Carleton à cotté de qui j'étois plassé. Nous parlames fort amicalemt, & il me parat qu'il y auroit quelques personnes qui pourroit se charger de ma maison de Montmorency. Le diné était fort bon, & le vin encore meilleur, & nous restames assez tard. Le Gl Morrison étoit de la partie.

Samedy le 11.

J'avois proposé hier au chev. Carleton de prendre mon domestique James avec lui en Canada comme coché & domestique. Je le lui envoyay ce matin apprès lui avoir donné son congé & l'avoir payé pour les trois mois qu'il me servy jusqu'au 12 courant inclusif.

Diné chés Lord Sydney avec Lady ..... sœur de M. Pitt, Lord Morton & la famille. Je remet à My La Sydney le mémoire de Glaisenberg, qu'il me promit d'expedier. Je lui demanday si l'affaire des Postes étoit finie, il me dit que oui, que cette affaire étoit arrangée en faveur de Davisson.

Dimanche le 12.

donné é des ut un The conversation at dinner turned on Hanover, and after having gone to my room, Budé give me the details regarding his whole family; of his present conditions, of his brother's conduct, &3, of which I greatly approved. He hopes to enter the Duke of York's family by the intervention of General Grenville. It appears that would satisfy his ambition and I think he is right.

8. Wednesday. Received this morning a letter from Mr. Nepean, enclosing a letter respecting the state of the Protestant Clergy in Canada, and asking on behalf of Lord Sydney my opinions thereon, as His Lordship wished to give no reply before knowing what I thought of it.

I answered that whilst there might be some truth in the memorial, it was extremely exaggerated; that I had loft affairs in that country as I had found them and that my feeling was that it would be more suitable to send it to Brigadier Hope to obtain information, &o., &c. I was much surprised that having been here for more than a year, during which nothing has ever been communicated to me, they should the changes it is proposed to make. Besides, I believe that this memorial has been drawn up by the Minister Dauté (Doty) with the alvice and assistance of Hamilton and Caldwell.

Dined at Lady Holderness's with Mr. Dayrolles and Budé. The conversation was chiefly upon the old Court; after Dayrolles left it turned on the new. Returned home at half past nine.

9. Thursday. Was at Mr. Pitt's lévée, who was very gracious. He told me that Joseph proposed to set out in Went from there to the Court.

Sir John Caldwell, Brigadier Maclean, Colonel Claus and his son and Stedman dined with me. The Brigadier showed me an article which he had in the Morning Advertiser of the 8th, on the subject of the general government proposed for Carleton, in which there are solid reasons to prove that the scheme is ill conceived in the highest degree; yet it will pass.

- 10. Friday. Went to Pollock's to consult him respecting Captain Gleisenberg's claims. He gave me a detailed account of the office; said that all the work of the office was thrown on Nepean; that he needed assistance and that Townshend did nothing. On leaving I met Dunn in the antechamber. Took a walk and returned home. Dined at Sir George Yonge's with Lord Sydney, General Johnson, General Robertson, General Voignard, Governor Thony (?) Rainsford, Fawcett, and Sir Gny Carleton, beside whom I was placed. We talked amicably; it appears to me that there might be some people who would take my house at Montmorency. The dinner was very good; the wine still better and we all stayed pretty late. General Morrison was of the party.
- 11. Salurday. I had yesterday proposed to Sir Guy Carleton to take my servant James with him to Canada as coachman and servant and I sent him this morning after dismissing him and paying him for the three months he has been in my service, to the 12th inclusive.

Dined at Lord Sydney's with Lady and the family. I handed Lord Sydney Gleisenberg's memorial which he promised to forward. I asked him if the business of the posts was finished. He answered yes, the matter had been settled in favour of Davison.

12. Sunday. Visited General Robertson, who told me how he had presented his memorial to the King to obtain Burgoyne's regiment of Dragoons. He had given a copy of it to Mr. Pitt and one to the Secretary of War, who both hai given him favourable answers, without promising anything. Harry Wheright came, who peu piqué de ce que je l'avois négligé. Il me parut qu'il avoit quelque dessein de passer en Canada. Il s'en alia & le Gl Murray vint ensuitte, qui fit le Don Quichote sur le conte de Maban, & pria Robertson de l'invitter avec le juge Smith afin d'avoir occasion de recommander Maban, qui est le moyen le plus sur de lui faire du tort dans l'esprit de Carleton &c. Revenant chés moy pr m'abiller, Matthews me dit avoir vu Madame Murray, qui lui avoit dit que Alexandre Davisson jouoit un rolle ridiculle qui pouvoit faire du tort à Caldwell, au sujet de l'arrangemt qu'il avoit fait avec le Gl Murray pour ces possessions en Canada. Enfin je pus conclure que D. est bavard et M. un mauvais sujet sur lequel on ne peut pas compter, & qu'il est très nécessaire d'être sur ces gardes avec eux.

Diné chés le chevallier John Dick, avec Lord Achburnam, Ld St. Assof & son fils, Ld Brudnell, Mr Scott et son fils & Budé, fait visitte à Lady Yorck, qui n'étoit pas chés elle. Revenu chés moy à 9 heures.

Lundy 13.

Promené à pied, rencontré Lord Amherst dans le Parc. Je lui remis la Requette du chirurgien Davenish. Il me dit qu'il en parleroit au Gl Fosset &c.

Je montay ensuitte à cheval ou je rencontrai Lord Morton avec lequel je fis quelques tours du Parck. Il me fait toujours beaucoup d'accœuil.

Budé diné chés moy. Je fus ensuitte au concert du Biron ou il y avoit beauced de monde. L'Eveque chevr Barrington me dit que le 8º Regmt se louoit beaucoup de la façon dont j'en avoit agy avec eux pendant qu'ils étoient sous mes ordres & que le Colonel de Peister lui avoit dit que la seule faute que j'avois commise étoit de n'avoir pas fait pendre DuCalvet, &c.

J'eus une longue conversation avec le G1 Grenville qui espère d'avoir le 3e Regmt qui se trouva vacant. Revenu chés moy à 10 heures.

Mardy 14.

M. et Made Prevost arrivèrent chés moy à 11 heures pour consulter Adair sur une oppression qui lui survint tous les mois. Il lui a donné quelques drogues qui l'ont tranquilisées. Ils ont diné chés moy & sont party à 4 heures.

Diné au Club, où il y avoit 15 Persons. Le G. Robertson sera Président.

Eté à la cour cù la Rene me parla du diner du Baron de Loudun & Lady Holdernesse de la Maladie de M. Dayrolles. Le duc de Richemond me parla plus gratieusement qu'il avoit jamais fait. Robeau vint chés moy me dire qu'on lui avoit donné une guinés &c. je passay la soirée chés Lady Yong ou il avoit beaucoup de monde, je jouay deux Robbers gagné 2 guinés dans le premier & perdu l½ dans la second, revenu chés moy apprès 11 heures,

Vendredy, 170

Je fus chés M. Corre avec Matthews pour le consulter sur les affaires de DuCalvet, qu'il me paroit avoir un peu negligé par la multiplicité des affaires dont il est chargé. Fait visitte à Made Corre & passé chés mon neveux qui me fit voir une lettre de M. Wildermet à laquelle je lui conscilla? de répondre rondemt et une de son père à laquelle je lui conscillay de faire para: tre l'embaras dans laquelle M. Wildermet fils pourrait nous jetter.

Diné chés le Gl Robertson avec le Gl Murray, Sir John Anderson, Mr White, Sr James Napier, & M. Smith. Murray se conduisit avec plus de prudence (au sujet de Maben) que je ne l'avois espéré.

Mon nouveau Domestique Francis Smith est entré à mon service aujourd'huy, comme footman et groom, à raison de 20 guinées par année & l'habillement usitié. Mais il doit lui même se pourvoir de Bottes et culottes de Peau.

Samdy, 18e

Le Gl Murray vint déjeuner ches moi pour avoir occasion de parler au Maj. Mathews au sujet de Davisson. Le Major Gann passa chez moi avec le joune Har.

appeared a little piqued that I had neglected him. It seemed to me that he had some intention of going to Canada. He went away and afterwards General Murray came, who played Don Quixote on Mabane's account, and begged Robertson to invite him along with Judge Smith, to give him an opportunity to recommend Mabane, which is the surest way to prejudice Carleton against him, &c. Returning home to dress, Mathews told me that he had seen Mrs. Murray, who said that Alexander Davison was playing a ridiculous part which would hurt Caldwell, in regard to the arrangements which he had made with General Murray for his properties in Canada. Indeed I must conclude that D. (Davison) is a prater and M (Murray) a bad fellow, who cannot be trusted, and that it is necessary to be careful with them.

Dined at Sir John Dick's with Lord Ashburnham, Lord St Asaph and his son, Lord Brudenell, Mr. Scott and his son and Budé. Paid a visit to Lady

York who was not at home. Returned home at 9 o'clock.

13. Monday. Took a walk. Met Lord Amherst in the Park, and handed him Surgeon Davenish's petition. He said he would speak about it to General Fawcett. I then went on horseback, and met Lord Morton, with whom I took a few turns in the Park. He always receives me well.

Bu'é dined with me. I afterwards went to the Baron's concert, which was well attended. Bishop Barrington told me that the 8th Regiment was greatly pleased with the manner in which I had behaved to it whilst it was under my orders, and that C lonel de Peyster told him the only fault I had committed was in not having du Calvet, &c., hung.

Had a long conversation with General Gronville who is hoping to have the 3rd Regiment, now vacant. Returned home at 10 o'clock.

14. Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Prevost arrived at my house at eleven o'clock, to consult Adair about an oppression which attacked him every month. He gave him some drugs which relieved him. They dined with me and left at 4 o'clock.

The Duke of Richmond spoke to me more graciously than he had ever done. Roubaud called to tell me that he had been given a guinea, &c. Spent the evening at Lady Yonge's, where there was a large company. Played two rubbers; won two guineas in the first and lost one and a half in the second. Returned home after 11 o'clock.
- 17. Friday. Went to Mr. Coore's with Mathews to consult him about the du Calvot affair, as he seemed to have neglected it a little owing to the multiplicity of his engagements. Visited Mrs. Coore and called on my nephew, who showed me a letter from Mr. Wildermet, which I advised him to answer sharply, and one from his father, to which I advised him to answer, showing the embarrassment into which Mr. Wildermet, junior, might throw us,

Dined at General Robertson's with General Murray, Sir John Anderson, Mr. White, Sir James Napier and Mr. Smith. Murray behaved with more prudence (respecting Mabane) than I had hoped for.

My new servant, Francis Smith, entered my service to-day, as footman and groom, at 20 guineas a year and ordinary clothing, but he is to provide himself with boo's and buckskins.

Promené à pied & à cheval, diné chés moy & pasé la soirés chés Lady Gedeon où il y avoit beaucoup de monde & où on dansa dans deux appartemt. Joué au whist avec la Duchesse de Grafton, qui me remercia beaucoup des civilités que j'avois thémoignés à son fils, Lord Auguste, en Canada. Elle me dit qu'il lui en avait parlé souvent avec reconnaissance, & Joué à la Guinée et perdu 3 parties.

J'eus une longue conversation avec Lord Southampton qui se plaignit de ce qu'on n'avoit pas voulu l'employer dans la dernière guerre, en me disant que c'étoit la faute de Ld Amhorst, & Nous parlames de la façon d'equiper les Dragons & du service qu'il faudroit qu'ils fissent comme Infanterie. Promené beaucoup à pied, fait visitte à Lady Holdernesse qui me parû fort sffligée de la mort de M. Dayrolles, elle m'a fait une histoire de sa famille & de la maison. Le Prince de Galles doit dinner chés elle vendredy. Il fait heaucoup sa cour à la Princesse Emilie parceque celle-cy trouve toujours quelque chose à redire à la conduite du Roy, & qu'elle trouve le Prince de Galles polly. Le R. ne corige point ses enfants & lorsque La Roine sort de l'appartement ils se conduisent fort indessamment. Madame Fitzherbert a des beaux yeux mais un air fort commun elle a eu un enfant mort en naissant. Rencontré le chev. John Dick, qui m'a thémoigné beaucoup d'amitié. Diné chés Ld Amherst avec Budé, Robertson, & le juge Smith. Lady Amherst a été assez pollie. Smith nous dit que les Américains cherchait à vendre les Terres qui se trouvait audelà des Allegany Mountains aux Anglois & aux Hollandois, qu'ils avoient des agents icy qui avoient déjà reçu beaucoup d'argent, & qu'ils trouvoient tous les jours des Duppes; Budé me parut épris de Smith, & lui trouvoit quelque chose de séduisant. Je crois devoir lui dire le rolle que Smith avoit joué dans le commencemt de la Rebellion. Revenu chés moi à  $9\frac{1}{4}$ .

rleton, royant from Doyly's, who still objects to his entering the service unless the King gives him a cornetcy of dragoons. I advised him to purchate into the infantry. He agreed and was to go and see Mr. Gravence, his tutor, to obtain his consent. He seems to me a weak lad, who will never play a great part.

Have just learned that Mr. Dayrolles died the day before yesterday.

Dined at Mr. Coore's, with Messrs. Louis Tessier, Dr.. Mathews and Fraser. Returned home at half past nine. Gave five guineas to Father Roubaud; it is astonishing that nothing is done for him.

19. Sunday. Walked and rede. A heavy wind sprang up with hail and I was soaked before getting home. Sudé, Baron Regenfeld, Major Gunn and Major Mulcaster dined with me.

20. Monday. Walked and rode; dined at home. Passed the evening at Lady Gedeon's; there was a numerous company and dancing in two of the rooms. Played at whist with the Duchess of Grafton, who thanked me much for the civilities I had paid in Canada to her son, Lord Augustus, and told me he had often spoken of it with gratitude, &c. Played for guineas and lost three games.

Had a long conversation with Lord Southampton, who complained that he had not been employed during the last war, saying that it was Lord Amherst's fault, &c. We spoke of the manner of equipping the dragoons and of the service that would be required of them as infantry. I said it would be better to train a part of the militia as horsemen, so that they could be carried with greater facility wherever the enemy might make a landing. Returned home at half past twelve.

21. Tuesday. Took a long walk. Visited Lady Holderness, who seemed deeply grieved at the death of Mr. Dayrolles; she gave me some account of his family and extraction. The Prince of Wales is to dine with her on Friday. He paid much attention to the Princess Emdie (Amelia?) because she had always something to criticise on the King's conduct, and likes the politeness of the Prince of Wales. The King does not correct his children and when the Queen leaves the room they behave most improperly. Mrs Fitzherbert has fine eyes, but a very common air; she has had a child still born. Met Sir John Dick, who testified great friendship. Dined at Lord Amherst's, with Budé, Robertson and Judge Smith. Lady Amherst was polite enough. Smith told as that the Americans were trying to sell the lands beyond the Alleghany Mountains to the English and Dutch; that they had agents here, who had already received large sums and that they were finding dupes every day. Budé seemed to be taken with Smith and found something attractive about him. I think I should tell him the part that Smith played at the beginning of the rebellion. Home at half past nine.

22. Wednesday. Adair who breakfasted with me, says that he believes General Prevost to be in a dangerous state. Joseph Brant came to tell me the he was surprised his balf pay had not been secured to him, and saying that I had led him to expect it. He seems displeased that his speech was not answered. Nepean always puts it off.

Went to the Court, where Lord Lucy accosted me familiarly. We talked some time together with Lord Cornwallis, who leaves in three weeks for India.

Paid to-day and gave his discharge to Frederick who has served me for eleven years. I paid him for two months more than I owed him and made him a present of a silver watch. He seemed to be extremely satisfied and grateful.

Robertson told me at Court that the instructions had been sent to Sir Guy Carleton, but that he would not open them before receiving his commission, thinking que si elle n'étoit pas conçue qu'il souhaittoit et qu'il ne voulut pas l'accepter il ne convensit pas qu'il vit les Instructions. Le Major Matthews me montra le conte de son office qu'il voulait remettre à M. Whiglesworth. Je lui conseillay de la faire voir à M. Dunn, premièrement nous fâmes chés luy, ne l'y trouvant pas nous fâmes visitte à Madame qui me reçut fort bien, et me parut aimer Londres. N'y ayant point de Levée chés M. Pitt je fus faire visit e au Gl Green des Ingenieurs qui me fit comprendre que le Gl Elliot aimé le commandemt et peuthetre l'argent. Il vit très bien mais il est si exact dans le service & il le fait executter avec tant de hauteur qu'il s'est fait beaucoup d'enemics, mais Giberaltar est fort en sûreté entre ses mains.

Fait visible à Lady Yong et Lady Gedeon, revenu chés moy où j'ay diaé seul, passée la soirée chés le G¹ Robertson où je trouvay Lady Anstruder qui doit avoir été belle femme et fort dessidée Elle approuvait la conduitte du Mme Fizherbert.

Le G1 me dit qu'il me ferait voir ce que le chev. Clinton avoir reçu en Amérique comme commandant en chef pendant qu'il y commandait, et me fit comprendre que j'avais été une Dappe de ne pas prendre tous les emoluments qui me revenoit.

Il a lui-même demandé la dépence qu'il a été obligé de faire dans les voyages qu'il a fait comme cartier maître genl et Baraque Master G: On lui a demandé un ordre du Gl en chef, et il a écrit en conséquence au Gl Gage qui lui donne un certificat ce qui lui asscurera le naym.

m. lil rd that if it was not expressed as he wished and that he would not accept it, it was not proper that he should see the instructions. There are people who believe he will not go to Canada.

Dined at Lady Holderness's, with Mrs. Bentinek and her family, at which I learned that the eldest of these young ladies is married to Mr. Mills, an officer of the Horse Guards Blue, who will have a handsome enough fortune, though he have been disinherited by his father. Mr. Mills was there, as was Mr. Bentinek, son of Charles, who is believed to be after the youngest of the young ladies. Bude was of the party. After the company had left, we remained for some time with Lady Holderness, and it was agreed, from various indications in the conduct of the Prince of Wales, that he was married to Mrs. Fitzherbert. Passed the whole family in review and can only anticipate a thousand disagreeable things.

23. Thursday. Major Mathews showed me the account of his office, which he wished to send to Mr. Wigglesworth. I advised him to show it to Mr. Dunn. Firstly we went to his house, but not finding him there, we paid a visit-to his wife, who received me well, and seems to like London. Mr. Pitt having no levée I paid a visit to General Green of the Engineers, who led me to understand that General Elliot liked command and perhaps money. He lives well, but is so exact himself in the service and insists with so much severity on its being executed, that he has made many enemies; but Gibraltar is safe in his hands.

Visited Lady Yonge and Lady Gedeon; returned home, where I dined alone. Spent the evening at General Robertson's, where I found Ludy Anstruther, who must have been a beautiful woman and very determined. She approved of the enduct of Mrs. Fitzherbert.

The General told me he would show me what Sir Henry Clinton received in America as Commander in chief, whilst in command there and made me understand what a fool I was not to have taken all the emoluments which should have come to me. He himself has asked for his travelling experses as Quartermaster General and Barrack Master General. He was asked for an order from the General in chief and wrote in consequence to General Gage who is giving him a certificate which shall

The more. I know of this country, the more I see that it is the height of folly to trust to the generosity of the nation. Services are forgotten the moment there is no longer need of us.

- 24. Friday. Major Mathews carried the account of his office, with the vouchers, to Mr. Wigglesworth, and left the same evening at 10 o'clock in the coach for Scotland. He was not well.
- 25. Saturday. Rode out and met General Smith, who gave me a detail of the mutiny among the troops in '82, in relation to soldiers who had been engaged only during the war or for three years, and a Scotch regiment which was desired to embark for India. There was great trouble to pacing them, and they had to be disbanded. The same spirit of sedition was in the fleet, and it is believed that these mutineers were corresponding with Lord George Gordon. Met Budé, who advised me to have my horse trained to stand fire.

Dined at General Morrison's, with the Baron Alvensleben, Sir George Yonge and his wife, Budé, Grenville, Roy, Colonel Williamson, Mr. Louys (Lewis). Spent the evening there and lost a guinea and a half.

Joseph Brant had been at my house on Friday, and appeared much dissatisfied that no reply had been made to him. I advised him to go to Sir Guy Carleton, who went with him to Nepean's, and I learned this morning that the Privy Council had met to prepare an answer to him, which is to be made to-morrow.

Sir Charles Donglas, who called, told me that he hoped the difference between Commodore Sauviers (Sawyers?) and Captain Bentinck would be arranged, and that he would do all in his power to that end. Was at Court, where very few were pre-

He told me he hoped to be employed by the Prince of Wales. From there to James Grant's, where I found La Naudière, to whom I gave a cold reception.

Visited the Archbishop of York, who received me well. The conversation turned on Canada, and on the resources of that country. He seemed well informed.

Called on my neighbour, Mr. Anderson, who was not at home.

Dined at Captain Kennedy's with General and Mrs. Robertson, General Bruce,

General Grenville came to pay me a visit, and told me that he would leave for Hanover about the end of May; that the Prince proposed to take a journey to Strasbourg and Nancy to see the troops, but that he would not be long on the trip, that if he went to Switzerland it would only be a flying visit.

The King, when inscribing (with his own hands) the remonstrances of Parliament, which he had been obliged to register, showed a bad temper of which the nation did not believe him capable. Finally, it is in France as with us, everything is done by party spirit and by the influence of a few persons in power. Davison came to me at nine o'clock in the evening and told me that General Carleton's departure was very uncertain (be ), and said that Lord Adam Gordon wished to have the command in Canada, but the stubborness of Carleton, and the necessity of providing for the numerous family he has, will make him accept everything that Je sus à l'offi e de Lord Sydney, à qui je parlay sur l'affaire des Postes, qu'il me promit de finir avec M Pitt. Je lui dis qu'il paroissit que M. Pitt avoit sait des reflexions sur mon comte à l'égard de l'économie en faisant des eloges du ch. Carleton, il m'asseure du contraire et me dit qu'il n'avoit jamais vû que M. Pitt fit des reflections sur ce sujet à mon préjadice, &c., &c.

Il me dit ensuite qu'il avoit reçu un memoire de Mathews qui demandoit quelque chose, qu'il étoit fort embarrassé & qu'il s'étoit fait une loix lorsqu'on à annoit un commandemt à quelqu'un de lui laissor choisir lui-même les offil qui devoient l'accompagner—que cependant il parleroit au chev. Carleton. Je lui dis que j'aurois pû lui donner le poste de Qr Mr G. mais que je n'avois pas voulu le faire dès que je m'etois aperçu qu'on souhaitoit d'envoyer le chev : Carleton en Canada, que capendant s'étoit le seul poste qui put convenir à Mathews. Je lui dis que le Lt G. du Détroit étant mort, si on pouvoit y joindre quelqu'autre chose, pouroit aussi convenir. Il me dit là dessus que je lui avois thémoigné cy dessus qu'on devoit abolir les Postes du Lt Gouverneur.

Budé dina chés moy je lui demanday son avis sur ce qu'on pouvoit faire pr Mathews. Il me conseilla de demander le Poste d'Adjudant General en Ecosse qui devenoit vacant par le Col. Rosse qui passoit aux Indes avec le G. Lord Cornwallis.

Vendredy, 31.

Fait visitte aux Mess. Pollen pour les invitter à diner Dimanche. Je fus à la cour pour y rencontrer Lord Sydney que je n'y trouvay pas. Je reçus le matin la liste de l'armée où je trouvai que de nos deux Batt: on n'avoit fait qu'un Regimt. Je trouvay Lord Amberst à la cour qui me dit que le Qr Maitre de mon Batt: étoit mort. Il ne me fit aucune mention du changemt qui s'étoit fait aux Batt, en le reduisant en un seul Regimt &c. &c.

Budé & le Major Gunn ont diné chés moy.

Samedi, 1 Avril.

Je fus chés Robertson pr savoir s'il avoit obtenu le Regimt des Dragons. Il me dit qu'il n'en avoit rien appris. Nous fumes ensemble chés Lord Amherst qui me parut un embarassé, mais nous dit qu'il ne croyoit pas qu'il y cût rien de dessidé encore. Je lui parlay du changemt que j'avois trouvé dans l'armée à régard de rôtre Regimt. Il me répondit qu'il n'avoit pas encore vu la Liste, & sur ce que je lui demanday si on l'avoit consulté sur le changemt. Il me repondit qu'on en avoit parlé il y avoit quelque temps, que lorsque les Batt: du même Regimt se trouveroient ensemble, les officiers de ces deux Batt: devoient avancer ensemble, mais que lorsqu'ils se trouveroient dans differents pays les promotions se feroient dans chaque Batt: separement, mais que ça ne devoit faire aucune différence pour les colonies. Je m'apper çois qu'il y a quelque chose de caché là dedans qui éclora dans peu, & que le chev. Carleton aura le Regimt un jour afin d'y pouvoir incorporer les Canadiens. Un projet que j'ai donné et dont je seray peut hetre le duppe.

Je fus chés Lord Sydney pour lui demander l'employ d'adjutant general pr Ecosse vacante par le Col: Rosse qui passe aux Indes avec lord Cornwellis. Il me dit que la chose etoit impossible, qu'il y avoit des applications de plusieurs personnes & que les Ecossais en general ne lesseroient pas passer les occasions d'avancer leurs anvis.

Promené avec Robertson qui me dit que le Gl Mack v avoit obtenu le Generalat d'Ecosse afin de le mettre en etat de payer l'argent qu'il voit perdu au jeu à Mr Rigby, à qui il payoit chaque année tout ce qu'il pouvoit epargner, que d'ailleurs c'etoit un homme fantasque et avec lequel il etoit très difficile de vivre. Lord Sydney me fit comprendre qu'il ne croyoit pas que Robertson eût les Dragens. Il me parla du Lord Cornwallis & my Lady me dit que Sr John Bourgoin laissoit une veulve & 6 enfants avec sculemt £100 de rente et par consequent dans le misère & je crus m'appercevoir qu'on vouloit faire quelque chose pour cette famille au depens de celui q ni obtiendroit le Regim[‡].

Je fus bien requ de my Lord et my Lady & dinay fort agreablemt. Son fils me parut avoir fort peu d'esprit—revenu chée moy à 84.

Was at Lord Sydney's office, to whom I spoke of the business of the posts, which he promised to conclude with Mr. Pitt. I told him that it appeared Mr. Pitt had made reflections on me in respect to economy in his praises of Sir Guy Carleton. He assured me it was the contrary and that he had never heard that Mr. Pitt had made reflections on that subject to my prejudice, &c., &c.

He told me then that he had received a memorial from Mathews asking for comething that had much embarrassed him; that he had laid down a rule when a command was given to anyone to let him choose himself the officers who were to accompany him; that, however, he would speak to Sir Guy Carleton. I told him that I might have given him the post of Quarter master General, but that I did not wish to do so when I saw that it was desired to send Sir Guy Carleton to Canada; but that it was the only post that would suit Mathews. I told him that the Lieutenant Governor of Detroit being dead, if something else could be added to it, that might also suit. He told me thereupon that I had showed that the office of Lieutenant Governor should be abol'shed.

Budé dined with mc. I asked his advice as to what could be done for Mathews. He advised me to ask the post of Adjutant General in Scotland, which was becoming vacant by Colonel Ross going to India with Lord Cornwallis.

31. Friday Paid a visit to the Messrs. Pollen to invite them to dinner on Sunday. Went to the Court to meet Lord Sydney, but did not find him there. I received the Army List in the morning, in which I found that our two battalions were made only one regiment. Found Lord Amherst at Court, who told me that the Quarter master of my battalion was dead, but did not mention the change made in the battalions by reducing them to one regiment, &c., &c.

Bude and Major Gunn dined with me.

April.

1. Saturday. Went to Robertson's to hear if he had obtained the Regiment of Dragoons. He said he had learned nothing about it. We went together to Lord Amherst's who seemed embarrassed, but told as he believed nothing had been yet decided. I spoke to him of the change that I had found in the army in respect to our regiment. He answered that he had not yet seen the List, on which I asked him if he had been consulted on the change. He said he had been spoken to about it some time ago; that when the battalions of the same regiment were together, the officers of these two battalions would advance together, but when in different countries the promotions would be made in each battalion separated, but that this would make no difference for the Colonies. I can perceive that there is something concealed, which will come to light shortly, and that Sir Guy Carleton will one day have the regiment, to be able to incorporate in it the Canadians, a plan which I gave, and of which I shall perhaps be the victim.

Went to Lord Sydney's to ask him for the post of Adjutant General in Scotland, vacant on account of Colonel Ross going to India with Lord Cornwallis. He said the thing was impossible; that there were applications from several persons, and that the Scotch in general would not let the opportunity ship of advancing their friends.

Walked with Robertson, who told me that General Mackay had obtained the Generalship of Scotland, in order to put him in a position to pay the money he had lost at play to Mr. Rigby, to whom he was paying every year all that he could spare, that, besides, he was a capricious man, with whom it was difficult to live. Lord Sydney led me to understand that he did not believe Robertson had got the Dragoons. He spoke to me of Lord Cornwallis, and my lady told me that Sir John Burgoyne had lett a widow and six children with an income of only £400 and consequently in wretchedness, and I believe I can perceive that it is desired to do something for that family at the expense of whoever shall get the regiment.

I was well received by My Lord and My Lady and dined very agreeably. His son seemed to me to have very little sense. Home at half past eight,

Mon neveux vint déjeunér chés moy et me proposa d'acquerir £6000 dans les fonds des Indez afin d'avoir trois vottes dans leurs déliberations ce qui me donneroit le moyen de servir quelques Personnes; j'y consentis.

Je l'accompagnay jusqu'à la citté & fis visitte à M. Corre qui nous dit que sa femme avait une fièvre de lait qui nous empecha de la voir. Diné chés moy et passé la soirée chés Md Munster où il y avoit nombre de personnes, joué trois Roberts que je perdis en tout 11 guirée.

Mercredy 5e.

Fait visitte à Made Prevost, le Gen! Christie et promené en ville. Mad. Prevost, son mary, les Gl Robertson et Budé avec St Ours ont diné chés moy. Madame P. me dit qu'elle souhaittoit d'avoir une conversation particulière sur des objets qu'elle ne pouvait confier qu'à moy.

Jeudy le 6e.

Diné chès le G1 Paterson avec le duc de St. Albans Lady Lang & le chev. son mary, Lady George Beauclair Mile le G! Murray, le Gi Paterson. Jejouay deux Roberts & y vis pr la première fois le Gl Clarck nous nous fûmes une révérence reciproque sans nous parler.

J'allay de la chés Madame Robertson où il y avoit beaucoup de jolies femmes, joué un Robert gagné deux guinées et revenu chés moy à 111/2.

Vendredy 7.

Je rencontray Lord Amherst au Park qui m'asseura que la commission de Carleton n'eto:t pas signée, que la plus grande difficulté qui s'y rencontroit provenoit de ce qu'il demandoit à pouvoir donner des ordres (depuis Quebec) aux autres gouvernours ce qui le chancelier pretend être contre la constitution. My Lord me dit qu'il devoit se rencontrer ce jour là au conseil, que Robertson par l'assistance du chef: Smith avoit préparé un papier dont il feroit usage pr s'assurer la pocession des biens des Jesuittes que le Roy lui avoit donné il y avoit longtemps, & dont il avoit payé la patente quoyque le chancelier n'eût pas voulu alors y apposer le grand sceau. Je lui avovay que si j'étois à sa place je ne ferois encorre aucune demarche, jusque à ce qu'il se trouvat une administration qui pût lui etre plus favorable. Resté chés moy sans avoir pû obtenir sur moy d'écrire à Quebec inexcusable. & paresse

Fait visitte au G1 Robertson qui est fort impassion d'avoir le R: de diagons

Diné chés le Baron Alvensleben avec Ld Barrington, Lord Hyde, Lord sa femme & sa fille, son fils Lord avec sa femme un des plus joli visage que j'ay vu en Angleterre. Les deux Mess. de Malzan, du Marchenbourg, le Gl Calliot, sa femme, Madame Pitchel Budé et un officier qui m'a connu à Boston & a vendu.

- 2. Sunday. Went with General Robertson to pay a visit to General Prevost who is better than I expected. We returned to town at 4 o'clock. Messrs. Pollon, Baron Ragenfeld and St. Ours dined with me. Budé remained till ten and prevented me from going to the French Ambassador's. I stayed at home.
- 8. Monday. Paid some visits: Bude dired with me and we went together to Baron Alvensleben's concert, where I found Sir Robert Hamilton, who said something about the politeness I had shown to his wife, which I did not understand, but suppose he is piqued that I have not shown the attention I should have done, and he is certainly light and I must make up for my neglect. From there, we went to Ledy Amherst's, where there were many people, who all looked bored. His Lordship had not left the House of Lords at half past eleven, the time I went home.
- 4. Tuesday. My nephew came to breakfast with me and proposed that I should purchase £6,000 in Indian stock, so as to have three votes in their meetings, which would enable me to serve some persons. I consented.

I accompanied him as far as the city and paid a visit to Mr. Coore, who told us his wife had a milk fever, which prevented her from seeing us. Dined at home and spent the evening at Mrs. Munster's, where were a number of persons. Played three rubbers, which I lost, in all a guinea and a half.

- 5. Wednesday. Paid a visit to Mrs. Prevost, and General Christie; walked into town. Mrs. Prevost, her husband, General Robertson and Bulé with St. Ours dined with me. Mrs. Prevost told me she wished to have a private conversation on subjects which she could confide only to me.
- 6. Thursday. Dined at General Pattison's, with the Duke of St. Alban's, Lady Lang, her hust and, Lady George Beauclair, Miss , General Murray, General Paterson. I played two rubbers. I saw General Clark there for the first time. We bowed to each other, without speaking.

Went to Mrs. Robertson's, where were many pretty women. Flayed a rubber, won two guineas and went home at half past eleven.

- 7. Friday. Met Lord Amherst, in the Park, who assured me that Carleton's commission was not signed. That the greatest difficulty arose from his demand for power to give orders (from Quebec) to the other governors, which the Chancellor alleges to be against the Constitution. His Lordship told me he was to be that day at the Council; that Robertson, with the assistance of Chief Justice Smith, had prepared a paper, which he would use, to secure possession of the Jesuits' Estates which the Kirg had given him long ago, and for which he had paid the patent, although the Chancellor would not effix the Great Seal. I acknowledged that were I in his place I would have taken no further step, till he found an administration more favourable to him. Remained at home, without being able to use the exertion to write to Quebec and inexcusable laziness.
- 8. Saturday. Called on General Robertson, who is very eager to have the vacant regiment of dragoons.

Dined at Baron Alversleben's, with Lord Barrington, Lord Hyde, Lord his wife and daughter, his son, Lord with his wife, one of the prettiest faces I have seen in England; the two Messrs, de Malzan of Marchenbourg, General Calliot, his wife, Mrs. Pechell, Budé and an officer who knew me at Boston and has sold out,

Le temps froid & vent d'Este très desagreable. J'ay été à la cour ou il y avoit peu de monde, revenu à 35 heures.

Le Baron Regenfeld, Budé & le Cl Small ont diné chés moy & se sont retirés à 9

Lundy, 10e

Fait visitte à Mess. Davisson, M. & Mad. Corre & mon neveux.

Davison passa chés moy pour me dire que Ld Sydney l'avoit envoyé porter les dépêches à bord des vaisseaux pr le Canada; qu'on a tout accordé à Joseph qui a recu £1400 pr les pertes qu'il a faites qu'il a emporté au dela de la valeur de £800 en Marchandises entre lui & sa sœur, & Davisson lui a donné un traitte pr le reste sur Quebec & lui a outre ca payé son passage.

Il me dit de plus que Robeau avoit été chés lui pr le prier de Lui avancer de l'argent sur ce qu'il doit recevoir des Jésuittes. Que la personne dans l'office qui lui en offre lui demande 15 pr cent d'interest. Enfin il me paroit qu'on le joue, et que la conduitte de cet office est abominable. Je crains bien d'en etre aussi la duppe. Il me parlet de l'affaire des Postes et voudroit que j'en parlasse à M. Pitt & à M. Rose, ce qui seroit une courvée fort desagreable pour moy.

Il est certain par la conduitte qu'on a tenu envers moy qu'on ne fera rien sans l'aveu de Carleton. Davisson me dit qu'il ne partiroit pas avant les couches de Lady Carleton ce qui le retiendroit jusques en juillet.

Mardy le 11e.

Je fus faire visitte au Gl Frovost, revenu p diner au club qui fut nombreu. Sir Edmund Afflick president. Je reconduisis Robertson ches Lui où je restay jusqu'à 10 heures.

Je me plaignis à Lord Amherst de ce qu'on n'avoit aucun egard pour nous et nos services, que nous contions sur la protection que nous avions méritté à tous égard, mais qu'il ne nous protegeoit point. Il ne me repondit jamais que dans l'évasive. C'est un homme qui n'employera jamais son credit pr personne, et qui certainement m'aime pas les étrangers.

Mercredy 12.

M. & Madame Prevost vinrent chés moy pour consulter le Docteur Adair, qui me dit après leur départ qu'il trouve Prevost plus mal qu'il ne pensoit. Ils doivent revenir Lundy pour avoir une consulte de docteurs.

Madame me dit qu'elle souhaitteroit de pouvoir vendre leur Campagne si non la louer. Elle me dit aussi qu'elle soubaitteroit que le General put obtenir une lettre de recommandation du ministre auprès de l'ambassadeur à Paris, ce qui me paroit foisable par le moyen de Budé. Eté au Levée où Ld Cornwallis prit congé. la soirée chés Madame Morisson ou il y avoit beaucoup de monde, perdu ½ guinée revenu chés moy à 111 heures. Je reçus la visitte de l'eveque d'Oxford.

Jeudy 13e. Eté au Levé du chev. George Yong, où il n'y avait pas beaucoup de monde. Fait visitte à Lady Holdernesse, Md Munster, en blanc, et au chev. Archibald Hamilton & my Lady que je ne trouvay pas. fait visitte à l'eveque d'Oxford qui me reçut parfaittement, Il me parla de Lord North comme d'un très honethomme &c. Le दी Taylor, St. Ours, Brown & mon neveux ont diné chés moy & se sont retiré à 9 है.

Vendredy 14e. Je fus prendre le Gl Robertson pour faire une promenade à cheval, nous avons visitté la maison qui fut batie par M. Adams l'architecte pour y loger une fille qu'il entretenoit et qui lui a coutté £6,000 St. et elle fut vendu apprès sa mort à un C. Clarck pr £2000, et elle appartient aujourd'huy à M. Gordon, celui qui fut envoyé en Canada pour suplanter Cockran; tout le terrain ne contient que deux arpents qui payent £36 St. de rente foncière par année, le Lice est encorre pour près de 80 années. Le front de la maison est d'une très belle architecture, tous les appartements extremement bien distribues avec toutes les commodittés possibles. Mais le tout est très petit & par la n'est propre que comme une guinguette. Il y a une serre bien

9. Saturday. Cold, with a very disagreable east wind. Was at Court; a small attendance. Returned at half past three. Baron Regenfeld, Budé and Colonel Small dined with me and left at nine o'clock.

10. Monday. Visited the Messrs. Davison, Mr. and Mrs. Core and my nephew. Davison called to tell me that Lord Sydney had sent for him to carry the dispatches on board the ships for Canada; that every thing had been granted to Joseph who has received £1,400 for the losses he has sustained, that he has taken merchandies to the value of upwards of £300 between him and his sister and Davison has given him a bill for the rest on Quebec and has besides paid his passage.

He told me further, that Roubaud had been at his house to beg him to advance money on what he was to receive from the Jesuite; that the person in the office who is offering it to him asks 15 per cent, interest. In fact, it appeared to me that they were playing with him and that the conduct of that office is a cominable. I am much afraid of being also its dupe. He spoke to me about the business of the Posts and would like that I should speak to Mr. Pitt and Mr. Rose, which would be a very

It is certain from the course of conduct towards me, that nothing will be done without Carleton's cousent. Davison tells me he will not sail before Lady Carleton has lain in, which will detain him till sometime in July.

11. Tuesday. Went to visit General Prevost, and returned to dinner at the Club. which was well attended. Sir Edmond Affleck president. Went with Robertson to his house, where I stayed till ten o'clock.

I complained to Lord Amherst, that no regard had been paid to us and our services, that we relied on the protection we had deserved in every respect, but that he did not protect us. He only made an evasive answer. He is a man who never uses his credit for any one, and who certainly does not like foreigners,

12. Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Prevost came to my house to consult Dr. Adair who told me after they left, that he found Prevost worse than he had thought. They are to return on Monday to have a medical consultation.

Mrs. Prevost told me that she would like to sell their place in the country or to let it. She also told me that she wished the General could obtain a letter of recommendation from the Ministry to the Ambassador at Paris, which appeared, by means

Was at the levee, where Lord Cornwallis took leave. Spent the evening at Mrs. Morrison's, where was a numerous company, lost half a guinea and went home at half past 11. Had a visit from the Bishop of Oxford.

13. Thursday. Was at Sir George Yonge's levée; not many there. Paid visits to Lady Holderness, Mrs. Munster, neither was in; to Sir Archibald Hamilton, and to My Lady, whom I did not find. Called on the Bishop of Oxford, who received me perfeetly. He spoke of Lord North as a very honest min, &c., General Taylor, St. Ours, Brown and my nephew dined with me and left at half past nine.

14. Friday. Went to take General Robertson for a ride. We visited the house built by Mr. Adam the Architect, to lodge a girl whom he kept which cost him £6,000 sterling and was sold after his death to C Clark for £2,000. It now belongs to Mr. Gordon, he who was sent to Canada to supplant Cochrane. The whole ground contains only two acres, for which the sum of £36 a year is paid for ground rent. The lease has still nearly 80 years to run. The front of the house is of very fine architecture, all the rooms well distributed with every possible convenience. But the whole is small and suitable only for a toy house. There is a green house wel plassé au fond du jardin, qui est entouré de murailles, garnis d'espalliers, avec une promenade dans le milieu & en croix; de treillage converte de chevreseuille &c. cette maison contient des bains chands & froids. Il y a de très bonne caves et toutte sorte de commoditté en mignature, Ecuries pr 5 chevaux & remises pr deux voitures, mais il n'y a aucune vue de la maison, & les murailles étant fort hautes, la challeur doit y etre etcuffée & dessgréable, en un mot ce n'est qu'une très jolie guinguette. Diné & passé la soirée chés moy.

Robertson me dit que le Col. Carleton proit certainement en Canada comme

Samedy 15e.

Je fus chés La Amberst qui me conseilla de parler à Polock pr qu'il m'avertit du mement que la commission de Carleton comme Gouverneur Géréral seroit signée. afin que je puisse immediatement parler à Loid Sydney & qu'il fit expédier l'ordre

Dimanche le 16e

Je suis allé avec Robertson faire visitte au General Prevost, & revenu par Hampsted cù j'ay vu mon neveux & sa famille. Revenu à 31 & diné chés moi, le Major Mathews est arrivé à 9 heures du soir bien portant et fort sattisfait de son Voyage.

placed at the end of the garden, surrounded by walls, fitted with espaliers, with a walk in the middle cross shaped, and trellises covered with honey suckle. The house contains hot and cold baths, very good collars and every sort of convenience, &c.; stables for five horses and coach house for two carriages, but there is no view from the house and the walls being very high the heat must be stifling and disagrepable. In a word it is only a very pretty box. Dined and spent the evening at h) ne.

Robertson told me that Colonel Carleton was certainly going to Canada as Governor.

15. Saturday. I had received the day before a letter from Mr. Hill, of the Treasury, that I should pay to the Exchequer the £2,643, which by my account I had acknowledged I owed to the public. I met Captain Le Maistre at Pollock's, who offered me his services in Carada, and said that the frigate that was to convey Sir Guy Carleton would not be ready to sail for a month and I learned from General Robertson that Carleton was to go in the first place to Halifax and from there to Quebec.

16. Sunday. Went with Robertson to pay a visit to General Prevost and returned by Hampstead, where I saw my nephow and his family. Returned at half past three and dined at home. Major Mathews arrived at 9 o'clock in the evening, looking well and much pleased with his trip.

Returned home, where I found Mr. and Mrs. Prevost. There had been a consultation between Sir Richard Jebb and Adair on the condition of the General, which they found very bad and advised him to leave for the continent as soon as possible.

They dined with me along with Robertson and Adair. Sir Richard Jebb told me he did not believe that Prevost would recover or go on long.

Mrs. Prevost showed some uneasiness. I advise I her to arrange all her affairs in this country, so that if she could not return in the autumn nothing would be in danger. I also advised her to advertise her country house in the papers for sale, &c., &c. She wished very much she could come to town without her husband in order to pay visits to the ladies who had shown her polite attractions.

La Commission du G. en chef du G. Carleton dattée du 21 Jany. 86.

Le 18e Avril 1786.

Jo passay chés Lª Sydney pr le faire ressenvenir du Major Mathews, il me dit qu'il verroit le cheve Carleton demain & qu'il verroit co qu'on pourroit faire pelui. Je lui dit ensuitte qu'ayant vu par la Gazette que les affaires du chevi Carleton etoient arrangées j'esperoit qu'il auroit pensé à moy, il me dit que mon affaire etoit faitte. & sen fils me dit que l'erdre etoit signé pour me continuer les appointements de L'G'. Je lui fis voir ensuitte la lettre de Lord Barrington du m'apprend que cavoit toujours été l'intention de SaM, que les appointemts qu'elle m'accordoit allois comme Irspecteur Gen-me fussent asseuré de la treen la plus solide, & je lui dis que je scrois charmé d'avoir une Lettre de sa part qui m'asseurat la mâme chose. Il me dit que en n'etoit pas récessaire mais qu'il souhaittoit fort qu'on nous accordat à Prevest & à mey la Naturalisation complette afin que nous pussions servir partout. Je lui dis que Prevest etoit fort mal & ne seret jamais en etat de servir, que par raport à mey je me flatteis lien que s'il y avoit une guerre on se cappelleroit mes services passés, & que si ma santé vouloit le permettre j'esperois qu'on voudroit bien m'employer. Il me dit que la grande Naturalisation etcit, une chose qui devoit nous etre spresble, & que par la on poutoit me donver un geuvernem afin d'epsegner ma paye. Je lui dis que si on me donneit un gouvernem'il faudroit que les appoinments fussent aussi bons que ma paye, & nême mieux. Qu'en devroit dans le cas ou je suis alle en augmentant plustet que de diminuer de revenu.

J'allsy de là chès l'elleck qui me paroit fort serieux, & en lui montrant la lettre de Lord Barrington il me dit qu'il s'en souvenoit très bien, de même que celle de Lord Geo. Germaire. Je resconting to chefice justice Smith en descendant Pescullier. H me dit que les commissions du G' Carleton n'etoient pas encorre signées & qu'il no partiroit pas avant un n.c.is. Je fus chés le G! Robertson vint chés moy pour me faire voir une lettre qu'il avoit reçu d'Ogilvy concernant les pretertiers de 1d Amberst à l'égaid du bien des Jesuittes en Carada. Il demardant des celaireissements sur l'établissements de cette société &c. lui marquant que je penyeis les cerrer. Je lui dis que le Père Relau etoit la personne la plus propre pr l'eclaireir sur tent ce qu'il senhaittereit de savoir & il mo pria beaucoup de lui faire faire con consarce avec lui. Sur ce que je dis à Robertson que je ne ercyois pas que le temps fussent propre pour demander à être mis en pecessien de ces liers. Il mo dit qu'il en rvoit parlé au juge Smith qui creyoit que La Amherst avoit des droits ir contestables & qu'il devroit les avoir. Il me parut croire que je ne m'y intéressois pas assés. Nous curres ure longue conversation sur ce sujet, cu je pus comprendre qu'il fait le bon vallet avec Le Amherst, & quo celui cy (qui re rerest gamais service à personne) veulait se servir de nous, sans parcitre lui même. Lord Amberst passant devant ma maison rous le suivimes et revintent ches moy, ou tous sgittames la chese. J'avois eru jusques allors que la Patente du roy (pour mettre Loid Amherst en pecession de tout les biens des jesuittes) avait été faitte & signée, & no demardoit que le grand scenu, que le chancelier avait reines d'y at poser. Mais je compris qu'il n'y avoit en qu'un ordre du Roy dans son conseil pour ordenner au solheiteur & advocat géréral &c. de former cette Patente ce qu'ils avoient refusé de faire jusqu'à ce qu'ils cussent plus d'éclairciscements de enfin La Amberst en se retirent neus dit qu'il reus laissoit le soin de mérager ses interets que pr l'uy il ne s'en monteroit point Cet affaire est très desagreable pour moy, & peut me faire du tort vis à vis du Ministère & de Carloton.

Ditto of what he owes the agent on his batt and forage, which the agent has carried to my account.

King, wheelmaker, Dariel street.

General Carleton's commission as General-in-Chief, dated 24th Jany. '86

18 April, 1793. Called on Lord Sydney to remind him of Major Mathews. He told me he would see Sir Guy Carleton to-morrow and see what could be done for him.

I then said, that having seen by the papers that Sir Gny Carleton's affairs had been settled, I hoped that he had thought on me. He said my business was settled, and his son told me that the order was signed to continue to me the allowances of Beutenant-general. I then showed him Lord Barrington's letter of the he informed me that it had always been His Majesty's intention, that the allowances granted me as inspector general should be secured to me in the firmest manner, and told him that I would be charmed to have a latter from him which would assure me of the same thing. Be said it was not necessary, but that he wished very much that complete naturalisation was granted to Provost and me in order that we might serve any where. I told him that Prevest was very ill and would never be able to serve; as to me, I flattered myself that if there were a war, my past services would be recalled, and that, if my health permitted, I hoped to be employed. He told me that full naturalisation was a thing which should be agreeable to us and that by it he could give me a government in order to save my pay. I told him that if a government were given the allowances must be as good as my pay and even better. government were given the anowances my income should be increasing rather than

From there I went to Pollock's, who appeared very periods. On showing him Lord Barrington's letter, he said he remembered it very well, as well as that from Lord George Germaine. In going down stairs I met Chief Justice Smith. He said that General Carleton's commissions were not yet signed and that he would not leave Paid several visits. Dined at Lord Sydney's with Lord Stopford, and Mr. Brodrick-Dormy, father and son.

19, Wednesday. Robertson called to show me a letter he had received from Ogilvy respecting Lord Amberst's claims in regard to the Jesuits' Estatos in Canada. He wanted information on the establishments of this society, &c., stating that I could give it. I told him that Pather Roubaud was the most suitable person to only iten him on all he wished to know, and he was urgent that I should introduce him. On this I told Robertson that I did not believe that it was a fit time to be put in possession of the estates. He told me that he had spoken about it to Judge Smith who believed that Lord Amberst had incontestable rights and that he should have them. He seemed to believe that I did not take enough of interest in the matter. We had a long conversation on this subject, by which I could see that he was playing the flunky to Lord Amberst, and that the latter (who never does a good turn to anyone) wanted to make use of us without himself appearing. Lord Amherst passing in front of my house, we followed him and returned to it where we discussed the matter. Till then I had believed that the King's patent (to put Lord Amherst in possession of all the Jesuits' Estates) had been drawn up and signed, only requiring the Great Seal, which the Chancellor had refused to affix, but now I understood that there was only an Order in Council, instructing the Solicitor and Advocate General, &c., to frame this patent, which they had refused to do until they had clearer information, &c. At last, Lord Amherst, on leaving, told us that he left the care of looking after his interests to us, and he would not get excited over the matter. The affair is very disagreeable for me and may do me mischief with the Ministry and Carleton.

Le cap: Foley, le B. McLean & le Cl Cuilin dinèrent chès moy & nous restames plus tard a table que je ne l'aurois souhaitté. Nous conclumes que Cullin ne pouvoit pas obtenir l'agence du 60e Régiment, Ogilvy est trop necessaire à Le Amherst, & par la il commanda le Regimt protonce pr faire mieux par la suitte.

Jeudy le 20e

Mon neveux vint déjeuner chés moy. J'allay à la citté pr prendre £200 sur mon Banquier de la chés le chev. J. Seberight & le Baron Alvensleben où je restay jusqu'à près de 5 heures. St-Ours dina ches moy ou je passay la soirée.

Vendredy, 21e

Le G! Robertson vint chés moy pour me dire que le chev. Howe devoit avoir le Régiment de Dragon. Il en était fort piqué & croyoit que ç i ne pouvoit provenir que de la haine que les Howe lui portoit depuis qu'il avoit été obligé de dire devant de parlement ce qu'il pensoit au sujet de ce que nos Trouppes en auroient pu faire, etant persuade qu'elles etoient assez nombreuses pour avoir pu mettre les Robelles à la raison. Il me dit ensuitte que lorsqu'il fut à la cour après avoir suby tous les examens, le roy parut le recevoir avec beaucoup de bonté, de même que tous ceux qui souhaitteroiont le bien, mais qu'il voyoit bien aujourd'huy que touttes ces marques de sati-faction ne signifient rien, & que tout dépend des Ministres &c &c.

Je fus voir l'exibition de Mr des Enfants et le Museum de la Duchesse de Portland. Diné chez moy avec St Ours. Passé chés Mad. Trayen & de la au bal de Mad. Sydney ou je trouvay 22 couples d'enfants les plus jolis qu'on puisse examiner. Le Duc de le Comte de Merton &c., &c., Mr Georges Selvin s'y trouverent, revenu chés moy a 11 heure du matin.

Je fus à la citté avec le Major Mathews, fait visitte à Lady Holdernesse qui n'etoit pas chés elle, été au Museum et revenu chés moy à 4 heures, diné à la Maison et fait un tour à Hampstead.

Le Gl Bruce que je recontray me dit qu'il avoit vu dans le M : Herald, ou le Cronicle, une lettre contre moy écritte au Roy par le Docteur Blake, se plaignant de je ne sais quoy. J'allay diner à Hampstead avec le Gl. Robertson, le Dr Brown, Mathows & Friman. Revenu à 9 heures.

Lundy 24e

Je reçus un Billet de Robertson qui vouloit que je fisse venir le P. Robeau chés moy ou il le rencontreroit comme par hasard. Je fus chés lui pr lui porter l'adresse de Robeau & lui conseillay de traitter avec luy d'une façon ouverte, concevant qu'il est dangereux pr moy de paroitre dans cette négotiation.

Je vis le Col: Spray des Ingenieurs que je presentay ensuite au Colonel Taillon, dans le Regimt duquel il souhaitte plasser son fils. Je fus chés L4 Amherst que je ne trouvay pas, Voyant que le Major Mathews etoit fort embarassé pr sattisfaire les parsonnes qui lui ont avancé l'argent pour achetter sa Majoritté, & qu'il etoit obligé de faire assurer sa vie a raison de 5 guinées pour £100 par année, outre l'interest de £1400 au 5 pr cent, je chargeay mon neveux de lui pretter £1400 at à quattre pr cent dont je me rend responsable au cas que Mathews vint à mourir avant que d'avoir payé cette somme. Mon neveux en a pris un simple billet sur papier timbré qu'il gardera pour sa sureté, avec un ordre du Major sur l'agent de son Regimt pour payer obsque

Captain Foley, Brigadier McLean and Colonel Cullen dined with me and we sat longer at table than I could have wished. We concluded that Cullen could not obtain the agency of the 60th Regiment; Ogilvy is too necessary to Lord Amherst, and thus he commands the regiment—a pretense to do better hereafter.

- 20. Thursday, My nephew breakfasted with me. Went to the city to draw £200 from my bank account. From there to Sir J. Seberight and Baron Alvensleben's where I stayed till nearly 5 o'clock. St. Ours dined with me and I spent the evening at home.
- 21. Friday General Robertson came to tell me that Sir William Howe was to have the regiment of dragoons. He was much annoyed at it, and behaves that it could only proceed from the hatred of the Howes towards him, since he had been obliged to say before Parliament what he thought on the subject of what our troops might have done, being persuaded that they were numerous enough to have brought the rebels to reason. He told me then that when he was at Court, after having undergone all the examinations, the King appeared to receive him with much goodness, as did all those who wished well, but that he saw now that all these marks of satisfaction signified nothing and that everything depends on the Ministers, &c., &c.

Went to the exhibition of M. des Enlans and the Duchess of Portland's Museum. Dined at home with St. Ours. Called on Mrs. Tryon and from there to Lady Sydney's bal lwhere I found 22 couples of children, the prettiest imaginable. The Duke of Lord Morton, &c., &s., Mr. George Selwyn was there. Returned home at half-past one in the morning.

22. Saturday. Went to the city with Major Mathews. Pail a visit to Lady Holderness, who was not at home. Was at the museum and returned home at four; dined there and took a turn to Hampstead.

General Bruce, whom I met, told me that he had seen in the Morning Herald or Chronicle, a letter against me, written to the King by Dr. Blake, complaining of I know not what. Told Freeman to look for the paper, hoping by means of Colonel Hoyes to answer the letter. Dined at home, after which I went to Hampstead.

23. Sunday. Sent Sir Guy Carleton the plan of the new building I had put up at the Chateau St. Louis. I went to visit him but he had gone out. I found her Ladyship, who was getting out of her carriage. I went into the house with her, but remained only a moment. She told me Sir Guy would purchase no furniture, nor incur any expense.

I went to dine at Hampstead with General Robertson, Dr. Brown, Mathews and Freeman; returned at 9 o'clock.

24. Monday. Had a note from Robertson, who wished me to get Father Roubaud to my house; where he could meet him as if by chance. I went to his house, taking Roubaud's address, with whom I advised him to deal openly, believing that it is dangerous for me to appear in this negotiation.

Saw Colonel Spry of the engineers, whom I afterwards presented to Colonel Tailion, in whose regiment he wishes to place his son. Went then to Lord Amherst's, but he was out.

Seeing that Major Mathews had great difficulty in satisfying the person who advanced him the money to purchase his majority, and that he was obliged to assure his life at five gaineas per cent a year, besides the interest on £1400 at five per cent. I directed my nephew to lend him £1,400 at four per cent., for which I would become responsible in case Mathews should die before having paid that amount. My nephew has taken a simple note on stamped paper, which he will keep for his security, with an order from the major on the agent of his regiment to pay annually the interest of this amount at four per cent.

Diné chés moy et allé ensuitte à Hampstead ou je fus surpris d'apprendre que mon neveux avoit resollu de partir pour Suisse Samedy prochain & de prendre ses deux filles avec luy. Je lui proposay le Docteur Brown ou Pitchy pour les accompagner, mais il me parut qu'il souhaitteroit plustot une fille de chambre pour ses filles & un bon Domestique au fait de voyager. Il me dit qu'il avoit vendu £2000 de mes fonds au 5 pr cent à 106 pour avoir l'argent qu'il a pretté à Mathews & pour satisfaire à ce que je lui redois,

Mardy 25e

J'allay chés M. Corre avec Mathews et neus convinmes que je dinerais chés lui samedy pour arrager toute choses. Je revins chés Ld Amherst qui me fit voir une lettre que le Gl Roterteon lui a écrit lorsqu'il apprit que le Gl Howe avait obtenu le Regiment de Dragons. Elle est courte et une des Lettres les mieux écritte que j'ay vue. My Lord l'admiroit beaucoup & je pus m'appercevoir qu'il se proposait de la faire voir au Roy. Il trouvoit bien malheureux de voir que le Roi se voyoit souvent obligé de sacrifier ses inclirations à celles de ses ministres.

My Lord me dit que Lord Sydney lui avoit parlé il y avoit deux jours & lui demanda s'il corvercit qu'avec la pryc de Lt Genera! on m'accorda mes aides de camp. Lord Amherst lui dit que cui, que puisqu'en m'avoit accordé un aide de camp comme Major General on devait m'en accorder deux aujourd'huy. Il eroit que Lord Sydrey lui avoit parlé la dessus seulement par manière d'information, mais il fut extremement surprise de s'appercevoir par la que la chose n'était pas encore terminée. Il me conseilla d'en parler à Lord Sydney, mais de supposer que la chose étoit faitte, mais en lui faisant sentir qu'il étoit récessaire que je reçusse une Lettre à ce sujet afin de pouvoir en informer mes amis.

Je revins chés moy cù je rencontray Madame Prevost. Elle alla faire des visittes à je sortis praffaire. En revenant je rercontray Lord Sydney avec le Chev. Howe que je felicittay. My I ord me dit ensuitte qu'il avoit passé chés moi pour me dire qu'il avait parlé à Carleton qui lui avoit dit qu'il avait réservé une plasse d'aide e camp pour le Major Mathews que par raport à moy mon affaire était faite & il me qu'elle avoit été approuvée du Roy. Il me fit ensuitte plusieurs protestations d'ami tié disant qu'en devoit avoir toute sorte d'attention à mes services, & qu'il seroit tié disant qu'en devoit avoir toute sorte d'attention à mes services, & qu'il seroit toujours chaimé de rerdre service à tous coux pour qui je m'intéressais. Je pris occasion de parler du Docteur Maben & de la fiçon dont j'en avois agis avec Carleton, loisque j'allay à Quebec, en prerant toute sa famille & son Etat Major, & en achettant tous ses meubles. Il tronve que l'avois agy trèspenerensement. Le achettant trus see meubles. Il truve que j'avois agy trèsgenereusement, &c.

En reverant chés mei M. & Mad. Prevest avec Mme Ashton qui demeure à Walton on the Tames, environ 18 milles de Londres, son nom de famille etoit Sher nighan. C'est une tres aimable [dame] Elle dina chés moy & m'invitta beaucoup à Lui faire une visitte à la campagne.

Mathews me parut extremement contant de l'offre & de la Poste que Carleton lui destinoit. J'en suis moi-n ême fort charné parce qu'il pour a veiller sur la conduitte du Docteur, et prévenir ses fougues politiques.

Mercredy 260

Je fus avec Mathews faire visitte à Ld Sydney & de la chés Nepean, qui m'asseura beaucoup que je pouvois center sur Lui dans tout ce qu'il pouroit faire pr moy & mes amis. Il dit à Mathews qu'il avoit appris que j'etois faché contre Lui, et Mathews chercha à le persuader du contraire. Cccy vient de Davisson auquel il ne faut pas trop se fier.

Je priay Pollock de voulloir bien continuer à assister mon neveux a recouvrir mes payes comme auparavant, c'est à dire en lui payant 5 guinees pr année. Il me parut voulloir le faire avec plaisir & en fait notte.

Je fus faire visitte au chev. Carleton que je ne trouvay pas & de la chés mon neveux. Budé & Davisson dinèrent chès moy, le dernier me fit voir la copie de la Lettre ecritte au Col. Hope au sujet des Postes, on ne peut rien de plus positif, &

Direct at home and then went to Hampstead, where I was surprised to learn that my nephew had resolved to leave for Switzerland on Saturday next, and to take his two daughters with him. I proposed that Dr. Brown or Pitchy (Peechy?) should accompany them, but it appeared that he preferred a waiting maid for his daughters and a good servant acquainted with travelling. He told me that he bad sold £2,000 of my five per cent. stock at 106, to get the money he has lent to Mathews, and to discharge what I owed him.

25. Tuesday. Went to Mr. Coore's with Mathews, and we agreed that I should dine with him on Saturday to settle everything. I returned to Lord Amherst's, who showed me a letter which General Robertson had written, when he learned that General Howe had obtained the regiment of Dragoons. It is short and one of the best written letters that I have seen. His Lordship greatly admired it, and I could see that he intended to show it to the King. He thought it very unfortunate that the King saw himself often obliged to sacrifice his inclinations to those of his ministers.

His Lordship told me that Lord Sydney had spoken to him two days before and asked if it were necessary with the pay of Lieutenant-General I should be given aidesde-camp. Lord Amherst said yes, that as I had been granted one aide-de-camp as Major General, I should now be granted two. He believes that Lord Sydney had spoken to him on the subject only by way of information, but was extremely surprised to see by it that the matter was not yet settled. He advised me to speak about it to Lord Sydney, but on the supposition that the matter was settled, making him feel, however, that it was necessary I should receive a letter on the subject, to enable me to inform my friends of it.

I returned home, where I met Mrs. Prevost. She was going to ray visits and I went out on business. In returning I met Lord Sydney, with Sir William Howe, whom I congratulated. His Lordship then told me that he had called to say that he had spoken to Carleton, who said that he had reserved a place as aide-de-camp for Mathews; that with respect to myself my business was done, and asked me if I had not received a letter from the Secretary of War saying that every kind of attention was to be paid to my services and that he would always be delighted to render service to all those for whom I interested myself. I took the opportunity of speaking to him of Doctor Mabane, and of the manner in which I had acted with Carleton, when I went to Quebec, by taking all his family and his staff and purchasing all his furniture. He considered that I had acted very generously, &c.

On returning home [I found] Mr. and Mrs. Prevost with Mrs. Ashton, who lives at Walton-on-the-Thames about 18 miles from London; her family name was Shernighan. She is very amiable. She dined with me and pressed me to visit her in the country.

Mathews appears extremely satisfied with the offer of the post which Carleton intends for him. I am myself delighted, because he may watch over the Doctor's (Mahane) conduct and present his headstrong politics.

26. Wednesday. Went with Mathews to pay a visit to Lord Sydney, and from there to Nepean, who assured me that I could rely on him in anything he could do for me and my friends. He told Mathews that he had been informed I was annoyed with him, and Mathews tried to convince him to the contrary. It came from Davison who cannot be trusted too much.

I begged Pollock to continue to assist my nephew to recover my pay as formerly, that is, on paying him five guiness a year. He appeared to be willing to do so with pleasure, and made a note of it.

I went to pay a visit to Sir Guy Carleton, whom I did not find and from there to my repress's. Budé and Davidson dined with me, the latter showed me a copy of the letter written to Colonel Hope respecting the Posts; there could be nothing:

une autre lettre de M. Rose par où je vois pleinement que c'est par l'interest seule de la maison de Comberland qu'il les a enfin obtenu.

Mes agents ont payé à mon neveux £1833 St. pour mon conte.

Le 270 Jande

Mon neveux vint déjeuner ches moy par me dire qu'on lui avoit conseillé de louer une chaise à Poste à Calais pour evicter tous les embaras qu'il rencontreroit dans la route s'il prenoit une voiture anglaise.

Je fus voir Robertson & Rigaul & de la ches le Secretaire de la Guerre, qui me fit appeller dans son cabinet pour me dire que le Roy m'avait accordé fort gratieusement la continuation de mes appointemt de L.G. en y ajoutant des termes les plus gratieux sur mon sujet. Qu'il s'en alloit à l'office pour m'énrire une Lettre à ce sujet et que je devois me trouver demain au Levé pour baisor la main du Roi.

Le Major Mathews qui revenoit de ches Ogilvy lui dit que d'étoit moy qui lui avait pretté l'argent qu'il devoit à Frazier pour sa commission de Major, et il m'ajatta la dessus qu'il se feroit un devoir de le dire à plusieurs Personnes, qu'il y mouvement que Carleton l'avait nommé un de ses Aide de Camp et que je n'y avoit aucune parte.

Vendredy 28e

Je fus chés Lord Amherst auquel je rendis conte de la conversation que j'avois eu la veille avec le chev. Yong. Il eut la complaisance d'envoyer à l'office des Guerres pour voir s'il n'y avoit point de Lettre pour moy, on Lui dit que non. J'allay de la à la Cour, et par son advis je demanday à Lord Dambe si je devois baiser la main. Il consulta Lord Lowthian qui lui dit que non. Lord Sydney, qui entra peu apprès, me dit qu'il n'étoit pas necessaire que je baisasse la main, qu'il avoit communiqué et qu'il l'avoit trouvé. fort convenable. Le Levé nombreux, et commença tard, Lorsque le Roy m'approcha je le remercia de la grâce qu'elle avait bien voulu m'accorder. Il me repondit qu'il n'avait fait que de me rendre justice, et le repeta deux ou trois tois et me dit qu'il n'avoit qu'une seule façon de penser sur mon conte. Il le repeta en haussant la voix en ajoutant qu'il ne changeroit jamais de façon de peaser sur mon sujet. Je l'asseura que je negligeray aucune occasion de me rendre digne de ses bontés, (je le sais bien, je le sais bien me dit-il), et il passa à un autre Personne qui se trouvait entre le chev. York et moy. Lorsque celuicy sortit je lui dit que le roy avait été fort gratieux. Il me dit qu'il avait tout entendu, que le Roy etoit j' et bon, et que s'il vouloit seulement agir par luy meme tout en yroit mieux.

Samedy, 29e

J'allay à la Secréterie des Guerres. Mr March me fit voir la minutte de la Lettre que le chev. Yong m'a cerit. Je remarquay qu'on avoit ratturé l'endroit ou il étoit fait mention de mes aides de camp, qu'on avoit certainement eu l'intention de me les accorder. Quoyque la Lettre ne fut pas entrée. Il me la remiroit disant qu'on l'entreroit sur la minutte. (N.B. Il sera très necessaire de s'informer si elle est entrée craînte d'accident.) J'allay diner ches M. Corre ou je passay la soirée avec les Dles Daschwood.

Dimanche 30e

Je fus avec le docteur Adair voir G! Prevost que nons trouvons plus mal, & qui sera obligé de renvoyer son depart. Sr John Caldwell & le G! McLoan dinèrent ches moy, le premier se propose à faire un voyage dans le Levant.

Lundy 10 May.

Je rencontray Ld Amherst au Park à qui je fis voir La lettre que j'avois requ du chev. Yong. Il fut surpris de voir qu'on m'avoit refusé les 2 aide de camp. Il me dit que lorsque Lord Sydney luy en parla Il lui avoit dit que certainement on devoit me les accorder—cecy est quelque tour que les sous secretaires m'ont joué. Je soub-conne Louys. Diné ches moy.

more positive and another from Mr. Rose, by which I saw that it is only by the influence of Cumberland's firm that he had at last obtained them.

My agents have paid to my nephew £1,883 sterling on my account.

27. Thursday. My nephew breakfasted with me, to tell me that he had been advised to hire a jost chaise at Calais, to avoid all the annoyances he would meet on the road, if he took an English carriage.

I went to see Robertson and Rigaud, and from there to the Secretary of War, who called me into his private effice to tell me that the King had very graciously granted the centinuance of my allowances of Lieutenant-General, adding the most gracious terms with respect to me. That he was going to the office to write me a letter on the subject, and that I was to be to morrow at the levée to kiss the King's hand.

Major Mathews, who returned from Ogilvie's, told him that it was I who had lent him the morey he ewed to Frazer for his commission as major; and he added to me thereupen, that he would make it a duty to say the same to several persons who would be delighted to make the public believe that it was from his own motion that Carleton had appointed him one of his aides de-camps, and that I had had no share in it.

- 28. Friday. I want to Lord Amberst's, to whom I gave an account of the conversation I had had the evening before with Sir George Yonge. He had the politeness to send to the West Office to see if there was no letter for me, and was told "No." I went from there to the Court, and by his advice asked Lord Danby if I were to kiss bards. He consulted Lord Lothian, who said no. Lord Sycitey, who ertered shortly after, said it was not necessary I should kiss bands; that he was surprised I had not yet received the letter from Sir George Yenge; that he had communicated it to him, who and considered it very proper. The levee was well attended, and began late. When the King approached me I thanked him for the favour he had granted me. He answered he had only done it to render me justice, and repeated it two or three times, telling me he had only one manner of thinking with respect to me. He repeated it, raising his voice in adding that he would never change his manner of thinking of me. I assured him that I would neglect no opportunity of rendering myself worthy of his goodness- (I know it well, I know it well, he said), and he passed to another person who was beside Sir Joseph Yorke and me. When that person left, I said that the King had been very gracious. He told me that he had heard everything; that the King was just and good, and that if he would only act by himself everything would go better.
- 29. Saturday. I went to the War Office. Mr. Marks he wed me the minute of the letter which Sir George Yonge had written me. I remarked that the place was erased where mention was made of my aides-de-camp, and that it had certainly been the intention to grant me them. Although the letter was not entered, he handed it to me, saying that it would be entered on the minutes. (N.B.—It is very necessary to inquire if it is stered, for fear of accidents.) I went to dine with Mr. Coore, where I spent the evening with the Misses Pashwood.
- 30. Sunday. Went with Dr. Adair to see General Prevost, whom we fund worse, and who will be obliged to defer his departure. Sir John Caldwell and a neral McLean dined with me. The former is proposing to make a voyage to the Levant.

May.

1. Monday. Met Lord Amherst in the park, and showed him the letter I had received from Sir George Yenge. He was surprised to see that I had been refused the two aides decamp. He said that when Lord Sydney spoke to him of it, he had told him that certainly they ought to have been unted me. It is some trick played by the under secretarics; I suspect Lewis. Dine at home.

Mardy 2 May.

Je fus avec le Docteur Brown voir le G! Prevost que nous trouvames encorre plus mal. Je pris cet occasion pour domander à Madame Prevest si le Genl avoit fait un Testament. Elle me dit qu'elle l'ignoroit entièrement-qu'il ne Lui en avoit jamais parlé. Je lui proposay de Lui en parler, & de lui en faire parler par M. Adair. Elle me priat de n'en rien faire, crainte de l'allarmer. Je luy dis que si le GI n'avoit pas fait de testament que tous les biens fonds iroient à l'ainé de ses fils, & que les autres en souffriroient. Elle me repondit que si la chose avoit lieu elle ne doutat pas que son Père ne favorisoit les autres Enfants, & Elle me print encorre de ne point parler la dessus à Mr Prevest ny même à M. Adair. Je revins en ville avec Adair & passay la soirée ches le chev. Robert Hamilton ou je gagnay 5 Robers.

Mercredy 3e

Je fus à la cour ou je trouvay le chev. G. Yong que je remerciay. Il me dit assis froidement qu'il espéroit qu'il avoit rempli mes vues. Diné ches moy.

Joudy 40 May.

Je partis à 7. heures du Matin avec M. Adair voir Prevest, mais malheureusement il étoit mort a 3 heures du Matin. Je vis Madame et toute la maison dans une grande affliction, après les premiers moments elle me donna la clet du Bureau de son Mary me priant de voir si nous y trouverions un Testament. J'examinay ses papiers en présence de M. Durade, Moultry, Brown & Adair mais nous ne trouvames rien, pas même son contrat de Mariage. Comme il avoit laissé une casette ches Mr à la cittée nous crumes que le Testament pourroit sy trouver. Elle m'en donna sa clef et je m'y rendis avec M. Tessier. Nous ouvrimos la casette dans laquelle nous ne trouvames que ses commissions, quelques Medailles et d'autres Bagatelles. Je dinay chés M. Tessier qui après avoir parlé à M. Corre pour prendre son avis partit avec Madame Tessier pour se rendre chés Madame Prevost. A mon arrivée en ville je fus d'abord ches Lord Amherst pour lui annoncer la mort de Prevost le priant de se ressouvenir de Christie. Je lui dis en même temps que Prevost n'avoit pas laissé de bien et que sa veufve se trouvoit charge de cinq jeunes enfants & que j'osois esperer que le Roy leurs accordoient quelque faveurs. Il me répondit qu'il faudra voir dans quel etat il avoit laissé ses affaires. Je passay ches Christie en revenant ches moy. Il me parut sensible à mon attention pr Lui.

Je vis Lord Sydney à l'office, qui me parut sensible à la mort de Prevost ... m'assura qu'il feroit tout ce qu'il pouvoit pour le veufve, & que je pouvois l'en assurer de sa part. Il me dit qu'il avoit connu Grau le banquier & sa femme qui etoit fort belle. Je passay chés M. Tessier le Vendredy 5 qui me fit voir la copie du Contrat de Mariage de Madame Prevost & la copie de la lettre qu'il écrivoit à Grau, où il lui marquoit l'état dans lequel Prevost avoit laissé ses affaires J'allay de là à Green Hill Grove ou je trouvay Mad Prevost mieux que je ne l'esperois. Elle me parut consentir facilement à rester dans ce Pays, afin d'y établir ses Enfants, & elle m'avoua qu'elle y avoit plus de connoissance, que chés elle. Il n'y avoit que l'amitié qu'elle avoit pr son père qui lui faisoit souhaitter de passer en France. Je demanday a Lord Sydney le poste de Lt. Gov. d'Antigue pr Mathews sans rien dessider il me paru porté à me rendre service. Passay chés Moultry en revenant.

2. Tuesday. Went with Dr. Brown to see General Prevost whom we found still worse. I took that opportunity to ask Mrs. Prevost if the General halmade a will. She said she was entirely ignorant of it, that he had never spoken to her about it. I proposed to speak to him of it and to get Mr. Adair to speak of it. She begged me to do nothing, for fear of alarming him. I told her, that if the General had not made a will all his heritable property would go to the eldest of his sons, and that the others would suffer. She answered me that if that took place she did not doubt that her father would favour the other children and she begged me again not to speak to Mr. Prevost on the subject nor even to Mr. Adair. I returned to town with Adair and spent the evening at Sir Robert Hamilton's, where I gained five rubbers.

3. Wednesday. Went to the Court, where I found Sir George Yonge, whom I thanked. He said, coldly enough, that he hoped that he had fully met my views.

4. Thursday. Went at seven in the morning with Mr. Adair to see Prevost, but unfortunately he had died at three in the morning. I saw Mrs. Prevost and the whole house in great affliction. After the first moments, she gave me the key of her husband's desk to see if we could find a will. I examined the papers in presence of Messrs. Durade, Moultry, Brown and Adair, but we found nothing, not even his contract of marriage. As he had left a box with Mr. believed that the will might be found there. She gave me the key to it. I went there with Mr. Tessier. We opened the box in which we found only his comin the city we missions, some medals and other trifles. I dined with Mr. Tessier, who after having spoken to Mr Coore, to get his opinion, left with Mrs. Tessier for Mrs. Prevost. On my arrival in town I went first to Lord Amherst's to aunounce the death of Prevost, begging him to remember Christie. I told him, at the same time, that Prevost had not left any property and that his widow had to provide for five young children and that I ventured to hope that the King would grant them some favour. He answered, that it must be seen in what state he had left his affairs. I called on Christie in returning home. He seemed sensible of my attention.

I saw Lord Sydney at the office, who seemed to feel the death of Prevost and assured me that he would do all he could for his widow and that I might, on his behalf, assure her of this. He told me that he had known Grau the banker and his wife, who was very beautiful. I called on Mr. Tessier on Friday the 5th, who showed me the copy of Mrs. Prevost's marriage contract and the copy of a letter to Mr. Grau, in which he had told him the state in which Prevost had left his affairs. From there I went to Green Hill Grove, where I found Mrs. Prevost better than I had hoped for. She appeared to consent easily to remain in this country in order to settle her children there and acknowledged that she had more acquaintances there wish to go to France. I asked Lord Sydney for the post of Lieut. Governor of Antigua for Mathews; without deciding anything, he seemed disposed to render me service. Called on Moultry in returning.

6. Saturday. Went to see the Guards exercised and dined at Lord Amherst's with Robertson, Ross, Ogilvy and Watts. Returned home very little satisfied with the "Highress." I noticed that Robertson and Ogilvy took every opportunity to flatter His Lordship and that he [accepted it] willingly.

7. Sunday. I took Mr. and Mrs. Moultry to Green Hill Grove, where I found Mr. and Mrs. Tessier, Mr. and Mrs. Shew | Shaw? |, Mrs. Burton and Mrs. Gardner. I found Mrs. Prevost pretty well, but each person who entered renewed her grief; she wished that the funeral should be deferred as long as possible. Mr. Tessier, who had been consulting Judge Wills, was afraid that recourse must be had to Chancery

Il me dit qu'après avoir examiré toutes les affaires il croyoit que le bien se monoitter à ce qui produiroit environ de rente annuelle. Mais M. Le capt³ St. Ours vint environ les 11 heures du matin m'apporter une lettre de Graff qui etoit arivé. Il m'apportoit une lettre du G. de Riedesel qui me disoit que Graff etoit dans l'intention de passer aux Indes Orientales, qu'il etoit muny des lettres de recommandation du Duc de York & de Prince Ferdinand pour Lord Cornwallis. Ce qu'il y a de singulier c'est que pour complaire à son Père et sa Mère il a retardé son voyage d'unne 15e de jours, & que pour sa commodité il a demeuré un mois en chemin, de sorte que si Lord Cornwallis n'avoit pas été obligé de rei trer dans le Port à cause du vent contraire il seroit arrivé icy 8 jours trop tard, encorre est il ir certain s'il treuvera my Lord à Portsmouth, & encorre plus s'il poura le prendre avec lui.

Mardy, 9º

Le Cap' Graff vint chés moy & me dit que le G' de Riedesel lui avoit conseilé de voyager avec quelque jeune Personne riche qui peut dans la suitte lui faire une pansion. Il me citta là dessus l'exemple du Major Green. Je lui fis naitre quelques difficultés qu'il ne vouloit pas concevoir, voulant me faire croire que mon credit seule pouvoit lui faire obtenir tout ce que je voudrois &c.

Il me parla ensuitte du fils de Glaisenberg. Ces allemands croyent que quand ils recomandent une personne on doit se charger d'eux, fournir à leur dépence et a leurs Education. Je ne pus pas m'empecher de lui faire concevoir combien la chose etoit extraordinaire. Je lui conseillay d'envoyer la Lettre qu'il avoit de M. de Riedesel pr le jeune Glaisenberg avant que de l'envoyer à Portsmouth. Graff est chargé de heaucoup de lettres de recommandation particulièrement du Gen' de Riedesel et de quelques jeunes Anglois qui sont à Bronswick. Il me dit que jeune Lord Fitzroy n'est pas assez riche pour qu'il puisse esperer à voyager avec lui avec avantage.

Diré chés Budé avec le Gen' Grenville, le Major Gunn & le Colonel Wongenheim. La conversation que nous eumes au sujet du Gouverneur Hastings me fit subconner qu'il porte le Matras sur les deux epolles. Je lui demanday la permission de lui presenter Graff & le priay de lui parler tout sur le projet qu'il avoit de passer aux Indes. Je sus fort content du General Grenville au sujet de la conversation que nous avons sur le militaire, & la difference qu'il y a entre les troupes d'Autriche & les Prussiens.

Mercredy 11e

Je fus voir Madame Prevost qui me communique le dessein qu'elle avoit d'offrir sa campagne à M. Tessier & la réflextion qu'elle avoit faitte sur l'idée de Tessier d'y aller vivre en famille avec elle. L'idée de paroitre le Housekceper de Tessi le choquoit & la détermina à lui offrir sa campagne et à venir s'établir en ville. Elle me fit voir l'obligation en parchemin que M. Grau son père lui avoit faitte pour sa dotte, qui est de £100,000 tournois à 5% sur la maison d'Orneca à Ameterdam pour 4 année & dont elle retire £500 St. par année. Revenu en ville pour aller au Levé où Lord Sydney m'annonca de la part du roi que S. M. avoit accordé le L. Gouv. d'Antigna au Major Mathews & le chargea de me dire que c'étoit entierement à maconsideration. Le Roi me demanda comment se portoit Madame Prevost & Lord Sydney m'assarat qu'on feroit quelque chose pour elle.

Je vis à la cour le Gl Stoken, ancien conoissance du service d'Hollande, & le-Conte Ivan de Galafkin qui me reconnut d'abord.

Budé, le Baron, St. Curs, & Graff dinèrent chés moy. Graff sortit de bonne heure pour tacher de voir le Baron ou Genl de Vangenheim.

to settle the General's estate. He told me that after having examined all the affairs be helieves that the property would amount to which would yield stout of yearly income. But Mr. Davison pointed out to me, that Tessier had valued the country seat at only £8,000, and from the different questions he put, supposes that he wishes to purchase it himself.

Returned home with Moultry and remained at table till 10 o'clook,

8. Monday. Captain St. Ours came about 11 o'clock in the morning to bring me a letter from Graff who had arrived. He brought me a letter from General de Riedesel, telling me that Graff intended to go to the East Indies, that he was turnished with letters of introduction from the Duke of York and Prince Ferdinand to Lord Cornwallis. What is singular is that to please his father and mother he delayed his journey for a fortnight, and for his own convenience spent a month on the road, so that if Lord Cornwallis had not been obliged to return to port, on account of contrary winds, he would have arrived eight days too late. It is even uncertain if he will find His Lordship at Portsmouth, and still more so if he can take him with him.

9. Tuesday. Captain Graff called, and told me that General de Riedesel had advised him to travel with some rich young man, who could afterwards give him a pension. He quoted the example of Major Green on this point. I started some difficulties which he would not conceive of, wishing to make me believe that my credit alone could obtain for him all be wanted, &c.

He then spoke to me of de Gleisenberg's son. These Germans believe that when they recommend any one, one ought to undertake to furnish their expenses and education. I could not help making him understand how extraordinary this was. I advised him to send the letter he had from M. de Riedesel for young Gleisenberg, before sending it to Portsmouth. Graff has a large number of letters of recommendation, particularly from General de Riedesel and from some young English people who are in Brunswick. He told me that young Lord Fitzroy was not rich enough, to make him hope to travel with him to advantage.

Dined at Budé's with General Grénville, Major Gunn and Colonel Wingenheim. The conversation we had respecting Governor Hastings made me suspect that he has two strings to his bow. I asked leave to present Graff and begged him to speak plainly to him respecting his plan of going to India. I was well pleased with General Grenville with regard to our conversation on military affairs, and the difference there is between Austrian and Prussian troops.

11. Wednesday. I went to see Mrs. Prevost, who communicated to me her intention of offering her country house to Mr. Tessier, and the reflection she had made on Tessier's idea of taking up house there with her. The idea of appearing as Tessier's housekeeper shocked her, and determined her to offer him the house and to settle in the town. She showed me the obligation, on parchment, which Mr. Grau, her father, firm of Orneca, of Amsterdam, for four years, of which she drew £5 10 sterling a year. Returned to town to go to the levée, at which Lord Sydney informed me, on behalf to Major Mathews and had charged him to tell me that it was entirely on my account. The King asked me how Mrs. Prevost was, and Lord Sydney assured me that something would be done for her.

I saw at Court General Stoken, an old acquaintance in the Dutch service and Count Ivan de Galaikin, who recognised me at once.

Budé, the Baron, St. Ours and Graff dined with me. Graff left early to try to 6b-9

Je me suis réveillé avec un gros Rhume qui m'a obligé à garder la chambre. Le G. Robertson qui vint me voir me dit qu'il avait appris du Gl Gage que le Colonel Kemball trouvoit fort mauvais qu'on l'eut rappellé pr faire plasse au Col: Hope qui est son Cadet. Etherington doit être dans le même cas pr faire place au Col. Carleton qui certainement ne meritte pas de faveur.

Rson me dit que le Gl Pattison n'avoit jamais de Regimt parce qu'il doit avoir parlé au Roy d'une façon peu respectueuses ça peut l'etre mais au moins l'est-il mieux.

12. Thursday. Visited General Stoken and Count de Galafkin, but did not find them at home. I went to the Court, which was not numerously attended. Lord Sydney accosted me and said that he had a particular order from the King to tell me that it was only on my recommendation that he had given the post of Lieutenant Governor to Mathews, but that in no respect detracted from the merit of Mathews. His Lordship appeared franker and more cheerful with me than formerly. No doubt he supposes that he has discharged the promises he made me. (It must be believed that one is persuaded of it and will ask nothing). I had been at Sir George Yonge's levée, who appeared pretty cold; few there. Brought back General Annesley who dined with me. Called in the evening on General Christie, who has got the second battalion. He made a thousand protestations of friendship and gratitude for what I had done for him. Went to pay a visit to General and Mrs. Robertson, who were not at home. Lord Amherst and Lord Southampton told me that Graff had brought letters of recommendation from Duke Fordinand and General Redesel to procure him a passage with Lord Cornwallis, and said that even if he had arrived sooner, Lord Cornwallis could not have taken him; that the East Indian ships (according to the latest regulations) could take no passenger, unless it was some one employed by the Friday. Dined at Mr. Ross' with Lord Amherst, General Robertson, General Pattison, General , Mr. Watts, Colonel Went in the evening to Bude's, who handed me the seal for his brother M. deBoisy. and Mathews. He told me I must take B. as he was.

Saturday. Paid a visit to Mrs. Prevost, whom I found dressed in mourning. She was long in making her appearance. I found her very reasonable, and hopeful that her affairs would be settled satisfactorily. She had been a sured that the contract of marriage would be carried out according to its interpretation in Switzerland. Mr. Ducadon arrived and I returned to town. Captain Douglas, Lieutenant Hans Douglas, Brigadier Mathews and Dr. Brown dine! with me. Dr. Brown was engaged to accompany Colonel Clerk to the country and to remain sometime with him as his medical attendant.

I gave 20 guineas to Dr. Adair on behalf of Mrs. Prevost for his attendance on the General. He objected strongly to accept them.

Sunday. St. Ours and Graff dined with me. The latter said that every one assured him that even if he had met Lord Cornwallis here, he could not have taken him. He appears inclined to give up his scheme.

15 (16). Monday. Was at Lord Amherst's and told him of the conversation I

1787—January.

1. The barometer since yesterday has been at 303 inches; higher than I have seen it since I have been in this country.

Went to pay a visit to Lady Sydney at Frogmore, who received me well, as did the family. I left at two o'clock and arrived home at four; after having been obliged to walk more than five miles before my carriage could join me, my servants having gone to breakfast in a tavern.

2. Tuesday. Awoke with a bad cold, which obliged me to keep my room. General Robertson, who came to see me, told me that he had learned from General Gage, that Colonel Kembali (Kemble?) was much annoyed that he was recalled to make room for Colonel Hope, who is his junior. Etherington was to be in the same situation, to make room for Colonel Carloton, who certainly does not deserve favours.

Robertson told me that General Pattison had never had a regiment because he must have spoken to the King in terms wanting in respect. This perhaps, but at least he served him better than Carleton.

Joudy 40 J'ay pris du petit let en me couchant, mais il etoit si fort que j'en ay eu la fièvre toute la nuit, sans pouvoir transpirer n'y dormir, j'ay envoyé chercher le Docteur Adair qui m'a fit préparer une mixture qui doit me soulager. Mon neveux qui vient déjouner chés moy, m'amena le jeune Bourgeois qui me paroit un très joly garçon et qui j'espère fera très bien.

Reçu une lettre de Major Prevort du Philadelphia du 20e septembre, qui chante des jeremiads, il faudra que je me charge de son fils qui est lieutenant dans le Regiment. Il ne me fait pas esperer que je puisse tirer grand party des terres que l'ay en P.

J'ay passé une assez bonne nuit et sans fièvre, transpira un peu ce qui a fait passer le mal de tête mais le rhume presque aussi fort qu'hier.

Adair a passé chés moy, et m'a ordonné une autre emultion qui doit exciter l'expectoration avec le secours du thé de son, avec de la grain de lin.

Le Col. Goldsworthy et Budé m'ont fait visitte. Lord Amherst qui a passé icy après la cour m'a thémoigné de l'empressement comme à son ordinaire, et m'a fait les compliments de my Lady qui doit m'envoyer une carte pour Mercredy prochain.

Le fils du Major Prevost Lt dans le 'le Regiment m'est venu veir et m'a fait lire une lettre qu'il a reçue de son Père, qui m'a paru bien ecritte. Il depeint les raisons qui l'avoient déterminé de quitter le service content sur les terres considérables qu'il avoit héritté de son beau Pôre, et que le congrès a cédé à la Province de Virginie et qui ne veut accorder aucun dedomagement à Prevost de sorte qu'il se voit hors d'état de lui donner aucun secours pécuniaire, de sorte que le jeune homme ayant perdu le Gnl. P. son grand père se trouve fort embarrassé. Il faudra que j'en prene soin.

J'ay reçu ma pendulle de Quebec qui ctoit toute en pièce, faute d'avoir été bien empaquetté. N.B. Louque on doit quitter un endroit pour n'y plus retourner on ne doit rien laisser en arrière n'y se fier à personne. Donné un Billet de £20 st. au Cap. Freeman à conte.

Colonel Goldsworthy and Budé paid me a visit. Lord Amherst, who called after the Court, exhibited his usual fussiness, and gave me Her Ladyship's compliments, who is to send me a card tor Wednesday next.

Major Prevost's son, lieutenant in the 7th Regiment came to see me, and made me read a letter he had received from his father which seems well written. He pointed out the reasons which had determined him to leave the service; relying on the considerable property he had in the set from his father in law and which Prevost, so that he is not in a position to give him any pecuniary assistance; the young man having lost General Prevost, his grandfather, is much embarrassel. I must look after his interest.

I have received my clock from Quebec, which was in pieces, for want of being properly packed. N.B. When leading a place not to return, nothing should be left behind, nor should any one be trusted. Gave a note of £2 sterling to Captain Freeman, on account.

Dimanche le 7e.

J'ay pris une once de sel, mais qui n'a pas produit beaucoup d'effet, la dose etoit peut-hetre trop petite. J'ay assés bien dormy & un peu transpiré sur le matin, et je me trouve beaucoup mieux et le rhume diminué.

Lord Amherst vint me faire visitte, je consenty que le Mate que le Col. Ethe-

Le G1 Koninghame [Cunningham] me dit que tout le monde trouvoit extrahordinaire que my Lord Carmarthen eut invité toute l'opposition à diner chés luy le jour de Naissance, on doit luy avoir entendu dire qu'on ne l'avoit pas corsulté sur le Traité de Comerce. Le Cape Shaw et mon neveux vinrent me voir, le premier me dit qu'il avoit examiné les contes et les finances du Lt Prevo-t du 7e Regmt. Il me dit que toutes les dettes pouvoient monter à £130 st, qu'elles provenoient principalement pour avoir été envoyé en recrue à l'âge de 15 années et pour avoir été vollé par son domestique qui lui avoit prit tout ce qu'il avoit.

Je donnay au Cape Shaw, en présence de mon neveux un traitte de £100 St. (sur mon Banquier) en le priant de les employer à arranger les affaires de Prevost mieux qu'il pouvoit. Que je lui faiscis présent de cette somme. Le B. McLean passa chés moy. Il me dit qu'il avoit lu en manuscript l'histoire de la Grande Armée par Hall, qu'ayant vu qu'il avoit fait plusieurs changements dans l'Impression il lui en parla et Hall lui dit que le Major McKenzie secretaire du Gen. How, & fort son amy etant passe ches luy avoit fait changer plusieurs choses, lui disant qu'ii devoit savoir les affaires mieux que luy. McLean croit qu'on là gagné parceque peu de temps après Il a obtenu un employ à Dublin qui lui vaut une guinée par jour. Small avec les officiers du 2º Btt. des Emigrants avoient suscrit pour un certain nombre d'exemplaires & ont payé 80 piastres sans jamais en avoir pu en recevoir un, l'imprimeur disant qu'il les avoit tous vendus, ce qui fait soubconner qu'ils ont été tous achetés par des Personnes intéressés.

Il me communiquat une correspondance qu'il avoit eue avec Lord Amherst & Ross & Ogilvy au sujet de l'habillemt du 3e Btt qui fut perdue pendant la guerre. Il m'a toujours paru que Lord Amherst n'agissoit pas bien dans cette affaire, & que les agents n'en agissoit pas honnetemt. Je lui ay conseillé d'offrir à my Lord de nommer des efficiers generaux pour arbittrer, afin d'evitter la dépence des Loix, &c.

Paid to-day the bill Major Edward Ward, of Philadelphia, drew on me in favour of Richard Vaux, or order, for £148. 2. 5 sterling, dated 1st October, 1786. This sum s certainly an extortion, which I must stand, in case the miserable fellow should acize on the lands I have in Pennsylvania.

7. Sunday. I took an ounce of salt, which did not produce much effect; perhaps the dose was too small. Slept pretty well, and perspired a little towards morning; found myself much better and the cold lessened.

Lord Amherst made a visit; I consented that the mate whom Colonel Etherington has nominated to my battalion should be appointed.

General Koninghame (Cunningham) told me that every one thought it extraordinary that Lord Carmarthen had invited the whole of the Opposition to dine with him on the birthday; he might have been heard to say that he was not consulted on the Treaty of Commerce. Captain Shaw and my nephew came to see me. The former told me that he had examined the accounts of Liout. Prevost of the 7th Regiment. He said that all the debts might amount to £130 sterling; that they arose chiefly from his having been sent on recruiting service at the age of 15, and from having been robbed by his servant, who had taken all that he had.

I gave Captain Shaw, in presence of my nephew, a cheque for £100 sterling (on my banker) requesting him to employ the money in settling Prevost's affairs the best way he could; that I made him a present of the amount.

Brigadier McLean called and said that he had read in manuscript the history of Grand Army by Hall; that having seen that he had made reveral changes in the course of printing, he spoke to him of them and Hall said that Major McKenzie, General Howe's secretary, and very much his friend, had called and made him change several things, telling him that he must know affairs better than he. McLean believes he had made by it, because shortly after he obtained an office in Dublin, with a guinea a day. Small, with the officers of the second Battalion of Emigrants, subscribed for a certain number of copies and paid $80, without being able to get one, the printer saying that he had sold them all, which leads to the suspicion that they have all been purchased by people interested.

8. Monday. Greatly troubled with a cough for part of the night, without much expectoration. My legs being swollen I went to bed very ill at ease. A perspiration which broke out towards morning quieted me, and I had some hours of a pretty quiet sleep, and on rising in the morning I found that the swelling around the ankle was entirely dissipated, which I attributed to the medicine I had taken

I left cards on Lord and Lady Amherst and called on Christic, whom I found in bed with gout. He communicated to me a correspondence he had had with Lord Amherst and Ross and Ogilvy respecting the clothing of the 3rd Battalion which was lost during the war. It has always seemed to me that Lord Amherst did not act well in this affair and that the agents did not act honestly about it. I advised him to offer His Lodship to name general officers to arbitrate, so as to avoid legal expenses, &c.

Return home at three, my chest still much loaded.

Major Gunn came to tell me the remedy which Lady Fawcett proposed for my cold. Bude and Gunn dined with me.

9. Tuesday. Slept little; perspired and rested a little towards morning.

My nephew breakfasted with me and told me that his daughters were to learn Italian in hope of travelling in Italy. Lady Holderness sent to ask how I was. Captain Konnedy received letters from his son; he appears to be well satisfied.

Mme Fairchild me fit lire deux Lettres qu'elle avoit recu de sa nièce de Geneve, qui a fort envie de venir la voir, mais il me paroit qu'elle n'a pas envie de l'avoir avec elle, et je trouve qu'elle a raison Elle me montrat une lettre de Louys Emmas, mon ancien cuisinier qui s'est aujourdhuy chés M. Borell, beau frere de M. de Solgas. Cette Lettre m'a fait plaisir parcequ'elle thémoigne le bon cœur de cet homme la, & je suis persuadé qu'il me procureroit un bon cuisinier si j'en avois besoin.

J'ay payé pour des papiers de Leyden & pr L'esprit des journaux pendant une année finie le 31 Xbre : 6.

Bude & le b. Regensfelt ont diné chés moy. Le premier est allé au concert du Baron Alvensleben & de la chés Lady Amherst, ou j'ay envoyé une excuse.

Jeudy le 11e

J'ay passé une assés bonne nuit, sans cependant dormir qu'après deux heures, mais je n'ay presque pas toussé. Adair qui est venu déjeuner chés moy m'a conseillé de continuer les emultions.

Reçu une carte d'invitation de Lady Holdernesse pour diner demain chés elle.

Je me suis excusé.

Fait quelque tour du Parc en chaise. Ma cuisiniere m'a fait anvoncer ce matin quelle me quitteroit dans un mois. Je perdray une bonne cuisinière mais aussy je serais débarassé d'un très mauvais sujet.

M. le Dr Adeir m'a parlé d'un nomé Postule un treitteur à Spe, il tient le Grand Monarque, mais comme il n'y trouve pas son conte il seroit chaimé d'entrer comme cuisinier dans une bonne maison.

Me trouvant mieux j'allay diné chés le Chev Yorg, cù je trouvay le chevalier & Lady Fosset, le G. Morisson, & Madame Louys & le GI Koningham. Nous jouames deux robbers après diner que je perdis, revenu à 112.

Vendredy 12e

Passé une assés bonne nuit, mais j'ay beaucoup toussé sans expectorer. Mon neveux vint de jeuner avec moy. Il me dit que l'argent que je devois recevoir de Guinand été payé et que je recevrai ce qui m'en revins au printemps proclain. J'eus la visitte du Capt Vandeput qui me dit que nous yrons ensemble un jour à Depfort où je verrois toute serte de Yachts et où nous pourions choisir celui qui conviet droit pour le Lac d'Yverdun. Le G! Robertson vint me communiquer une Lettre qu'il avoit reçue du Capt Walter Rutherford qui fait voir qu'il y a beaucoup de confience en Amérique. Il me conseilla de lui ecrire au sujet de ce que Philip Levingston me doit. Il se charge de lui faire tenir ma Lettre. C'est le meilleur party que je puisse

J'ay fait une promenade en voiture. Lt Gl Robertson, Adair, Barr, et le Lt Hunter on diné chés moy, ou Budé est venu apprès avoir diné chés Lady Holdernesse.

Samedy 13e

J'ay été plus tranquille & j'ay mieux dormy que la nuit passé, aussi la tou est beaucoup diminué, fait un tour en voiture visitté le Gl & Mad. Carpenter, le Maj. Gurs & le Gl Koningham. A mon retour chés moy je me suis apperça que Ernst avan pleuré. J'en demanday la cause à Mad. Fairchild, qui me dit qu'elle l'avoit vu pleurer dans sa chambre mais qu'il ne lui avoit pas dit le sujet, seulemt qu'il étoit toujours malheureux un peu de patience en decouvrira la raison.

Le G1 Budé vint diner chés moy & me conseilla fortemt de prendre une menagère Anglaise, pour avoir soin de mon ménage, d'avoir outre ça un premier dometique qui auroit soin de l'argentiri, & de soigner la table et de la l'orte. Une fille de chambre pour tenir la maison propre, & une cuisimère, ces quattres personnes devroient toujours rester dans ma maison à Londres quelle absence que je fis. Il me Licut. Prevost came to thank me and to assure me that I had not obliged an ingrate, &c., &c.

10. Wednesday. Passed rather an easy night, perspired a little, but the cough continues and will provent me from going to Lady Amhorst's assembly.

Mrs. Fairchild made me read two letters she had received from her niece in Geneva, who has a great wish to come to see her, but it seemed to me that she did not want to have her and I think she is right. Sne showed me a letter from Louys letter pleased me, because it showed this man's good heart, and I am persuaded that he would get me a good cook if I needed one.

Paid for Leyden papers and for L'Esprit des journaux for the year ended 31st

Budé and Baron Regenfelt dined with me. The former went to Baron Alvensieben's concert and then to Lady Amherst's, to whom I sent an excuse.

11. Thursday. Passed a fairly good night, although I did not sleep till after two o'clock, but scarcely coughed. Adair, who came to breakfast, advised me to continue the emulsions.

Received an invitation from Lady Holderness to dine with her to-morrow. Sint

Had some turns in the Park in a chaise. My cook intimated this morning that she is leaving in a month. I shall lose a good cook, but shall at the same time get rid of a bad lot.

Dr. Adair spoke to me of a man named Postule, a restaurateur at Spa, he keeps the Grand Monarque, but as it does not pay, he would be delighted to enter a good house as cook.

Feeling better, I went to dinner at Sir George Yonge's, where I found Sir and Lady Fawcett, General Morrison, Mrs. Lewis and General Cunningham. We played two rubbers after dinner, which I lost; home at half past 11.

12. Friday. Passed a good enough night but coughed a good deal without expectorating. My nephew came to breakfast and said that the money I was to receive from Guinand was paid and that I would receive my share next spring. I had a visit from Captain Vandeput, who said we might go to perford together one of these days, where I would see all sorts of yachts and could choose one suitable for the Lake of Yverdun. General Robertson came to communicate a letter he had received from Captain Walter Rutherford, which shows he has great confidence in America. He advised me to write him about what Philip Livingston owes. He undertakes to get the letter to him. It is the best thing I can do.

Took a drive. Lieut. General Robertson, Adair, Barr and Lieut. Hunter dined with me. Budé came after, having dined at Laly Holderness's.

13. Saturday. Was easier and slept better than on the previous night, and the cough is greatly lessened. Took a turn in a carriage; visited General and Mrs. Carpenter, Major Gunn and General Conningham. On my return found that Ernest had been crying. I asked Mrs. Fairchild the cause, who said she had seen him crying in his room, but he said nothing on the subject, except that he was always unhappy. A little patience will find out the reason.

General Budé dined with me and advised me strongly to take an English house-keeper, to take care of the housekeeping; to have in addition a chief servant who would take care of the silver plate, the table and the door, a chamber mad to keep the house tidy and a cook. These four persons would always remain in my house

Fait un tour en voiture, visitté les Mrs Pollen qui n'étoient pas au Logis, et chés Ld Amherst. Mj. Gunn vint me voir et me dit que Lady Fosset etoit surprise que je lui eusse pas parlé du remède qu'elle m'avoit fait offrir. Il falloit sans doutte que je fusse de mauvaise humeur. Fosset dit qu'il avoit remarqué que je n'etois pas bien. Je recus une invitation pour aller diner chés Ld. Sydney, ou je trouvay Madame Stevens, tres belle et aimable femme, et M. Brodrick. My Lord me dit pendant le diné qu'il avoit recu une Lettre du Pere Robeau qui étoit un peu croustillieuse et que je devois en avoir recu la copie de même que le Gi Murray. Je lui dis que j'avois effectivement recu une Lettre de Robeau et qui sur la fin il y avoit une lettre qu'il devoit Lui ecrire, que je ne savois pas s'il la lui avoit envoyée. Il me dit que Robeau croyoit avoir à se plaindre de quelqu'un de l'office, mais qu'il ne savoit pas de quoi.

Je lui dis que Robeau etoit dans la dernière des Misères, et que j'avois été obligé de l'aider souvent pr l'empecher de mourir de faim, qu'il etoit surprenant que les Jesuites ne lui payassent pas ce qu'ils lui devoient. Que l'engagemt dans lequel ils etoient entre de laveu du Gouverneur de la Province constituoit sa dette, et qu'on pouvoit les obliger de la payer avec les interests, et même les Interests des Interests. Il l'avoua et s'endormit.

Lundy 150

J'ay assés bien dormy, et ma Tou a diminué, Reçu quelque visittes le matin, fait une promenade en voiture, diné chés moy.

Le Mardy 16.

Fait des visittes et passé à l'office de my Lord Sydney pr parler à Nepean qui me fit dire que si j'avois quelque chose de particulière il viendroit me parler, mais qu'ayant p'usieurs personnes dans son antichambre il me parleroit une autre fois, s'il n'y avoit rien de pressant. J'allay de là à 1½ heure à la Secreterrie des Guerres, où je ne trouvay personne (Il etoit trop matin). Fait visitte à Sr George Yong que je ne trouvay pas, mais je fus reçu per Lady Yong, qui fut fort polie. Fait visitte au Gl Anerlay. Je vis Madame qui est fort aimable.

Le Gl Budé diné chés moy Il ne vouloit pas que j'achetat le cheval du (il Robertson pr lui parceque j'etois trop genereux, etc., etc.

Mercredy 17.

Mon Rhume est presque passé, prometé à pied, fait visitte au Gl Smith et le Baron Alvensleben, requs plusieurs cartes et la visitte du Gl Armstrong recu une Lettre du Chevallier Grau, qui me recommande 2 off: François, dont je me passerois fort. Diné au Logis, et été au concert du Baron ou il n'y avoit pas Beaucoup de monde. J'y rencontray Madme qui ne saurois me dispenser de lui faire visitte. Elle me dit que Lady More étoit incomodée depuis longtemps.

Jeudy le 18e

Le jour de raissance, je m'abillay chés Budé et fus à la cour a 2½, elle etoit extrêmement nombreuse. Je fis ma cour à la Reine qui fut fort gratieuse mais je ne vis pas le Roi.

Diré chés Ld Amherst avec Lord Salsbury, le Gl Arker, le Gl Gordon, Fosset, Tonnyn, Reed, Brocklay, le Gl d'Auvergne, le Gl Lassels, le Gl Townsend, Koningham, le Chev. Yong, Robertson et moy.

Je demanday une bouteille de vieux madère parce qu'on nous l'offrait de mauvaise grâce. Le G! Robertson m'a ramené ches moy. Mon Domestique Francois a été insolent. Il faut le renvoyer.

Vendredy 19e

J'ay dormy d'un sommeil interrompu, incommodé........ d'une challeur sèche et fièvreuse jusques contre le Matin que j'ay un peu dormy. Mais je me suis levé fatigué de fort mal à mon aise sans cependant avoir aucun ressentiment de mon Rhume, promena le Matin et fait visittes aux deux Messis François que je ne trouvay pas chés:

majon, whilst I was abrent at any time. A man servant also will be needed to attend to the horses and go behind the carriage, besides a coachman and groom. That would make seven servants to maintain the whole year.

14. Sunday. Took a drive; visited Mr. Pollen, who was not in, and Lady Amil erst. Major Gunn came to see me and told me that Lady Fawcett was surprised at I had not s, eken to at the remedy she had offered me. I must, no doubt, have been in a he Fawcett said that he remarked I was not well. I received an invitation die at Lord Sydney's, where I found Mis. Stevens, a beautiful and amiable we man, at : Mr. Bredrick. His Lordship told me during dinner that he had received a letter from Father Rouband, which was rather free in tone, and that I were as have received a copy of it, the same as General Murray. I told him I had really a letter from Rouband, and that towards the end there was a copy of a letter he was to write him, but did not know if he had sent it. He said that Rouband believed he had cause of complaint against some one in the office, but that he did not know for what.

I told him that Roubaud was in the greatest misery and that I had often been obliged to help to prevent him dying of hunger; that it was surprising the Jesuits should not pay what they oved him; that the engagement into which they had entered, with the consent the Governor of the Province, constituted his debt, which they could be composed to pay with interest, and even with compound interest. He acknowledged it and fell asleep.

15. Monday. Slept pretty well and the cough is lessened. Received a few visits in the morning. Took a drive and dined at home.

16. Tuesday. Paid visits and called at Lord Sydney's office to speak to Nepean, who sent word that if I had anything particular he would come to speak to me, but that having several persons in his waiting room, he would speak to me another time, if there was nothing pressing. Went from there, at half past one, to the office of the Secretary of War, where I found no one (it was too early). Paid a visit to Sir George Yonge, whom I did not find, but was received by Lady Yonge, who was very polite. Paid a visit to General Annesley; I saw his wife, who is very General Budé dined with me. He did not wish me to purchase General Robertson's house for him, because I was too generous, &c., &c.

17. Wednesday. My cold is almost gone; took a walk; visited General Smith and Baron Alvensleben; received several cards, and a visit from General Armstrong. Received a letter from Chevalier Grau, recommending two French officers, with whom I would be much pleased. Dired at home and went to the Baron's concert, which was not well attended. I met Mrs. me from visiting her. She told me that Lady More was unwell for a long time. there who would not excuse

18. Thursday. The Birth day. I dressed at Bude's and was at Court at half past two; it was numerously attended. I paid my court to the Queen, who was very

Dined at Lord Amberst's with Lord Salisbury, General Arker, General Gordon, Fawcett, Tonnyn, Reed, Brockley, General d'Auvergne, General Lascelles, General

Townshend, Cunningham, Sir George Yonge, Robertson and myself.

I asked for a bottle of old Madeira, because it was offered to us with a bad grace. General Robertson took me home with him. My servant, François, was insolent.

19. Friday. Had broken sleep; uneasy heat, till morning, when I slept a little. I rose tired and out of sorts, but without any from a dry and feverish feeling of my cold. Took a walk in the morning and paid a visit to the two French gentlemen, whom I did not find at home.

Fait quelques visittes. Le Coi : Marsh, le Gl Badé, le Col : Balfour, le Cap. Todd, le Col: Musgrave et le G! Ainslay ont diné chés moy. J'ai trouvé le diné de mon nouveaux cuisinier indifférent, mais je n'avois pas d'apety, les autres personnes l'ont trouvé passable.

Samedy 20e Dormy comme la nuit passé, sorty en voiture, fait visitte à Badé, le G1 Carpenter, Lord Amherst, le Capt Cullen, & Madamo & le G! Christie, le Baron Alvensleben, le Gl F. Smith & le Gl Tryon. Revenu de bonheure & diné chés moy.

Dimanche le 21.

Dormy d'un someil interrompu ...... Je devois dinné ches Messrs Pollen, mais j'écrivis un Billet à Budé pour qu'il m'excuse. Il vint me voir & me donna plusieurs conseils sur mes incommodités. Je fis vonir le docteur Browne qui me conseilla le miel comme fort salutaire contre la gravelle.

J'eus la visitte de Ld Amherst, le general Bough, Mons. Ross, l'agent W. Corré, le cap. Pointon diné chés moy. Lu la soirée l'Expédition de St. Louis en Egypte.

Je pris hier au soir du Thé de son avec du miel et du jus de Citron qui m'a occasionné une douce transpiration toute la nuit, cependant j'ay dormy d'une someil interompue, ...... mais sans peine ......, cependant j'ay eu des inquiétudes pendant une party de la nuit.

William Tuckfield est venu m'offrir une servante de cuisine pr 12 guinées par année. Je lui ay dit de l'engager pour entrer chés moy samedy prochain 27 court Il s'est plaint de co que Ernest babilloit. Je luy ay fait une bonne leçon. J'ay appris des lors par Tuckfield qu'il avoit été fort insolent à la cuisinne. Qu'il avoit dit devant tous les domestiques à la cuisiune que je l'avois mal traitté en prenant un autre Domestique puisqu'il m'avoit aussy bien servy que Maigro à qui je donnois 40 guinées par année. Je m'apperçois que le garçon sera insolent des que l'oscasion s'en présentera ou qu'il aura quelqu'argent.

Chargé William de s'informer du caractère de Pattey. Je la prendray s'il me convient, mais j'auray tonjours besoin du Laquais qui connoisse la ville.

Je pense que tous mes domestiques sont jalous de Tuckfield, peuthètre n'a-t-il pas tous les menagements qu'il conviendroit avec eux, et qu'il se laisse emporter par sa bonne volonté.

Le Mardy 23e janvr Le parlement assemble. J'ay eu la visitte de Major Molcaster du Cap. Cullen à qui je communiquay l'idée ou le dessein que M. Rosse avait de quitter l'agence &c. Budé a passé chés moy et m'a conseillé de prendre une housekeeper, qui aura soin de tout. Adair et Brown m'ont fait visitte. Ma cuisinière ayant fait l'insolente je l'ay renvoyée apprès l'avoir payé. William Tuckfield a arrangé toute cette affaire qui m'au ait donné beaucoup de désagrément. Je descendis chés Madame Fairchild pour faire en sorte que tout se détermine sans bruit. Dîné chés moy avec Freeman.

Payé à la cuisinière 29, 10 7½ L. St., pour toute demande ayant conté ses gages à raison de 25 guinées par année.

Mercredy 24e J'ai assez bien dormy et mon Rhume est presque passé mais toujours une pesanteur.....Le Major Gunn, Watts et le Cape Kenedy m'ont fait visitte. Fait visitte au Major Green diné et passé la soirée chés moy.

Jeudy 25e

Promené passé la soirée chés moy.

Vendredy 260

Resté chés moy à cause du froid. Reçu la visitte du Gl Robertson, et du Gl Tryon, qui me dit qu'il avait reçu un grand paquet de lettres de l'inley qui cherchait à se justifier. Je le conseillay de ne point se mêler de cette affaire, et de répondre à Finley que le roy l'ayant fisio il ne lui conviendroit pas de s'en mêler.

J'ay payé Arlet pour le Lavage de mes chevaux jusques au premier courant, et suis convenu avec luy que par la suitte il ne me feroit plus payer pr mes chevaux me orré, Paid a few visits. Colonel Marsh, General Budé, Colonel Balfour, Captain Todd, Colonel Musgrove and General Annesley dined with me. I found my new cook's dinner indifferent, but I had no appetite. The others thought it passable.

- 20. Saturday. Slept as on the previous night. Went out in a carriage; paid visits to Bude, General Carpenter, Lord Amherst, Captain Cullen, Mrs. and General Christie, Baron Alvensleben, General F. Smith, and General Tryon. Returned early and dined at home.
- 21. Sunday. Had broken sleep. I was to dine with the Messrs. Pollen, but wrote a note to Budé to make an apology. He came to see me and gave several counsels as to my complaints. I sent for Dr. Browne, who advised honey as good for gravel.

Had a visit from Lord Amherst. General Bough, Mr. Ross, the agent, Mr. Coore and Captain Pointon dined with me. In the evening read St. Louis' Expedition into Egypt.

22. Monday. Yesterday evening I took bran tea with honey and lemon juice, which caused a gentle perspiration all night, yet I had broken sleep, but painless. Had uneasy feelings for a part of the night.

William Tuckfield came to offer me a cook-maid for 12 guineas a year. I told him to engage her to come on Saturday, the 27th current. He was full of what Luest was chattering about. I gave him a good lesson. I learned through Tuckfield that he had been very insolent to the cook: that I had ill used him by taking another servant, since he had served me as well as Maigro, to whom I gave forty guineas a year. I see that the lad will be insolent should the opportunity present itself, or that he finds himself with money.

Desired William to ascertain the character of Patty. I shall take her if it suits, but I shall always need a man servant who knows the town.

I think all the servants are jealous of Tuckfield. Perhaps he does not manage the best way with them, and that he lets his good will get the better of him.

23. January. Tuesday. Parliament is meeting. I have had the visit of Major Mulcaster, on behalf Captain Cullen, to whom I communicated the idea or design that Mr. Ross had of giving up the agency, &c. Budé called and advised me to get a housekeeper, who will take care of everything. Adair and Brown called. My cook having given insolence, I dismissed after paying her. William Tuckfield arranged the whole business, which would have given me much annoyance. I went down to Mrs. Fairchild to arrange that everything should be settled without noise. Dined Paid the cook £29 10s.  $7\frac{1}{2}$ d. sterling in full of all demands, calculating her wages at the rate of twenty-five guineas a year.

- 24. Wednesday. Slept pretty well and my cold almost gone, but still a weight on me. Major Gunn, Watts and Capt. Kennedy paid me a visit. Visited Major Green, Dined and spent the evening at home.
  - 25. Thursday. Took a walk; spent the evening at home.
- 26. Friday. Remained at home on account of the cold weather. Received visits from General Robertson and General Tryon, who told me he had received a large parcel of letters from Finlay, who was seeking to justify himself. I advised him not to interfere in that business, and to answer Finlay, that the King having settled it, it would not be proper to interfere.

Paid Arlet for washing my horses to the 1st current, and agreed with him that in future he should not make me pay more for my carriage horses, than if I paid by

J'ay fait venir Tuckfield proxpliquer aux servantes ce que chacune a à faire dans la maison, et expliquer à la cuisinière qu'elle n'aura aucun droit sur les graisses de la cuisinne. Elles ont été fort contentes toutes les deux. Le G1 Christie a passé chés moy pr me dire qu'il avait été chés Lord Amherst et lui avait dit qu'il se proposoit de taire dessider les différents qu'il a avec les agents par des offic: génériux my Lord a approuvé cette méthole, et il a écrit en conséquence aux ngents. Diné chés le Baron Alvensleben avec mesdames Williamson & Ohre, et 'es dlles Pichell, Pauly, Gentilly, le Gl Morisson, le C Williamson, le Cap. Williamson, M. Ohre, et Budé, perdu une guinée et demy au whist, revenu chés moy à 10 h.

Dimanche 28.

Mon Rume est presque passé. Messrs Watts, Robertson, Guan ont diné chés moi. Fait quelques visittes & passé la soirée chés moy.

Lundy 29.

Rien d'extraordinaire.

Mardy.

Mon nouveau cocher a pris soin de ma voiture & de mes cheveaux. Je suis con venu de lui accorder une demy couronne par semaine pour son habillement, lorsque je ne lui accorderai pas une livrée.

Diné à l'American club. Lord Amherst President. Il y avait 25 present Sir Richard Howe a été nommé président. Le diné a été bien servy, tous les vins ont été bon, & en general nous avons diné & passé la soirée fort agréablem t revenu à  $9 \ h$ .

Mercredy 31.

Fait une promenade à cheval. Passé chés Ramesdon qui me trompe toujours. J'ay recu le téodolire & le Baromètre portatif que j'avois pretté au Major Williams, le dernier est en desordre & pert le Mercure. Je suis surpris que le Major ne m'aye pas écrit un seul mot en me renvoyant les Instruments. Passé chés le G! Anislay & Madame avec qui je dois diner aujourd'hui, chés le jeune Ramsden. J'y ay trouvé M. & Mad. Anislay & un officier des Gardes. Miles Sharp & une autre dame fomme d'un officier des Gardes & le Genl Crag, sont venu passer la soirée. On a joué au whist & je me suis retiré à 10½ houres.

Le Tailleur a apporté la livrée de mon Postillon & le Frock de Ernst.

Jeudy, 1erFevrier.

Rté à la citté voir mon neveux M. Corre que je n'ay point trouvé, vû M. L. Tessier & Mr Duval, le premier m'a prié d'écrire au chev. Grau pour l'engager à laisser partir Madame Prevost. Il paroit qu'elle a écrit à Tessier, & qu'elle souhaitte fort ellemême de venir & s'établir à Londres. Fait visitte au Capt Twiss de qui je suis fort content. Payé plusieurs contes & rendu Homage à la ressemblance du Roy de Prusse mon ancien maître.

Le Baron Ragenfeld a diné chés moy, passé la soirée chés Madame Dromond où il y avait bonne compagnie, revenu chés moy, à 10h.

Vendredy le 2e.

Passé chés Budé qui ma fait observer la nécessité de faire visitte à ceux qui arivent en ville, & si quelqu'un est malade de se faire informer comment ils se portent. Fait visitte a M. & Mad. Carpenter, Lord Amhert que je trouvai au parck. Il me dit que my Ld Camden avoient été fort surpris de ce que Carleton avoit fait en Canada concernant les biens des Jésuittes, il a promis d'envoyer un Duplicate de l'ordre du Roy en conseil à cet égard. Fait visitte au chev. Fosset, à Sr Hary Gough.

Samedy, 3. Diné chés le Col. Goldsworthy avec Vanderput et Budé, tout etoit extrèmement propre, et bien servy. Ce qui me confirme dans la necessité d'avoir une médagère anglaise, et de reformer mon Domestique.

nement aagère the year, that is, ten guineas a month, and fourteen shillings a week for my saddle horses, and he promised to supply me with a good coachman, who would attend to four horses, so that the groom could serve in the house.

27. Saturday. Sent for Tuckfiel I to explain to the servants what each was to do in the house and to explain to the rook that she shall have no right to the kitchen stuff. Both women were well satisfied.

General Christic called to tell me that he had been at Lord Amherst's and told me that he proposed to have the dispute he has with the agents settled by general officers. His Lordship approved of this method and he wrote to the agents in consequence. Dined at Baron Alvensicben's, with Mrs. Williamson and Mrs. Ohre, and the Misses Pechell, Pauly, Gentally, General Morrison, Sir Williamson, Captain Williamson, Mr. Ohre and Budé. Lost a guinea and a half at whist. Home at ten o'clock.

- 23. Sunday. My cold is almost gone. Messrs. Watts, Robertson, and Gunn dined with me. Paid a few visits and spent the evening at home.
  - 29. Monday. Nothing extraordinary.

30. Tuesday. My new coachman has taken care of my carriage and horses. I agreed to allow him half a crown a week for clothing, when I shall not give him livery. Dined at the American Club, Lord Amherst, president. There were 25 present. Sir Richard Howe was named president. The dinner was well served, all the wines were good, and in general we dined and spent the evening very agreeably. Home at nine o'clock.

31, Wednesday. Took a ride. Called on Rumsdon, who still deceives me. I received the theodolite and the portable barometer which I had lent to Major Williams. The latter is out of order and is losing the mercury. I am surprised that the Major has not written me a single word in returning the instruments. Called on General and Mrs. Anesley (Ainsley?) with whom I am to dine to-day at young Ramsden's. I found there Mr. and Mrs. Anesley and an officer of the guards; the Misses Sharp; another lady, wife of an officer in the guards and General Craig came to spend the evening. Played whist and I left at half pust ten.

The tailor brought my postition's livery and Ernst's frock.

February.

1. Thursday. Was at the city to see my nephew and Mr. Coore, whom I did not find. Saw Mr. L. Tessier and Mr. Duval. The former asked me to write to Chevalier Grau to get him to allow Mrs. Prevost to leave. It appears that she has written Tessier and wishes very much herself to come and settle in London. Paid a visit to Captain Twiss, with whom I am much pleased. Paid several accounts and rendered homage to the resemblance of the King of Prussia, my old master.

Baron Regenfeld dined with me. Spent the evening at Mrs. Drummond's, where there was a good company. Returned home at half past ten.

- 2. Friday. Called on Budé who pointed out the necessity of calling on those who arrived in town and if any one is ill to ascertain how he is. Paid a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter; Lord Amherst, whom I found in the Park, told me that Lord Camden had been much surprised at what Carleton had done in Canada respecting the Jesuits' Estates; he promised to send a duplicate of the King's order to Council on this subject. Called on Fawcett, and on Sir Harry Gough.
- 3. Saturday. Dined at Colonel Goldsworthy's with Vanderput and Budé. Every thing was extremely tidy and well served, which confirms me in the belief of the necessity of having an English house keeper and of making a change in my servants.

Passé la soirée chés Lady Amherst où j'ay joué trois Roberts. Il y avoit assez peu de compagnie.

Dimanche, 40

.Mons. Corre vint me voir au sujet du procès de Charles Hay, qui paroit déterminer à poursuivre sa cause contre moy. M. Corre avoit consulté ce matin l'Atorney General M. Beecroft, et celui qui doit plaider ma cause. Je ne sais ce qu'ils ont conclu, mais j'apperçois que la cause trainera en longueur, en attendant, la consulte d'aujourd'huy m'a couté 15 guinées.

J'ay remis quelques papiers à M. Corre concernant cet affaire qu'il doit me rendre après les avoir examiné. J'ay eu la visitte de l'Amiral Barrington, du Gl Anislay, Gunn, le Cape Cullen, & le Cap.

Allerrelebre qu'il doit me l'Electron d'H. Alvensleben qui m'a dit que l'Electeur d'H payait 30,000 en contant les Invalides, qu'on avait fait un réglement pe les Trouppes tant pe le temps de pay que pr le temps de Guerre dont le roy etait très contant. Mrs le cape Yong, Twiss, Shank, Couture, & M. Owen, ont diné chés moy.

Lundy, 5e février-87.

Promené le matin diné et passé la soirée à la maison.

Mardy 60

Je fus chés M. Corre pour lui parler au sujet de mes affaires. Il me dit qu'il falloit gagner du temps & qu'il esperoit ne pouvoir pas réussir. Passé chés mon neveux & vint diner chés moy, de la passé la soirée chés le G1 Ainslay, qui m'atendoit à diner ce que je n'avois pas compris.

Mercredy, 70

J'ay écrit au Major Mathews en lui envoyant la Lettre que Corre ecrit à M. Alexr Gray au sujet de Charles Hay. Je chargeay le Cape Freeman d'envoyer au Major la Lettre de Mre Cuenot. J'ay eu la visitte de l'eveque d'Oxford, du Gl Christie, Sr James Napier, Col. Goldsworthy, M. Duval, à qui j'ay pretté les Portraits du Roy & de la Reine pr en prendre une copie. Tuckfield se plaint des causeries de mes Domestiques, surtout de Ernet, le premier est trop minutieux & l'autre est trop étourdy, & a peuthetre une mauvaise langue. Il est trop jeune pour etre mon premier domestique. Diné chés Pollon avec Budé, revenu chés moy fort enrhumé.

Colonel linner. re par Spont the evening at Lady Amherst's, where I played three rubbers. There was but a small company.

- 4. Sunday. Mr. Coore came to see me respecting the suit of Charles Hay, who seems determined to push his case against me. Mr. Coore had this morning consulted the Attorney General, Mr. Beecroft, who is to plead my case. I don't know what conclusion they have come to, but the case, I see, will drag on; in the meantime to-day's consultation has cost me 15 guineas. I handed some papers conceining this business to Mr. Coore, which he is to return after having examined them. Had a visit from Admiral Barrington, from General Ainsley, Gunn, Captain Cullen and Captain; paid a visit to Baron Alvensleben who told me that the Elector of H had paid 30,000 counting the invalids; that a settlement for the troops had been made, as well for the time of peace as for the time of war, with which the King was satisfied. Captain Young, Twiss, Shanks, Couture and Mr. Owen dined with me.
  - 5. Monday. Took a walk in the morning; dined and spent the evening at home.
- 6. Tuesday. Went to Mr. Coore's to speak to him respecting my affairs. He said it was necessary to gain time, and that he hoped it would not succeed. Called at my nephew's and dined at home, thence to General Ainsley's, who was expecting me to dinner, which I had not understood.
- 7. Wednesday. Wrote to Major Mathews, sending him the letter written by Coore to Mr. Alexander Gray respecting Mr. Charles Hay. I desired Captain Froeman to send to the Major Cuenot's (?) letter. Have received visits from the Bishop of Oxford, General Clarke, Sir James Napier, Colone, Goldsworthy and Mr. Duval, to whom I lent the portraits of the King and Queen to have copies made. Tuckfield exaplained of the tattling of my servants, especially of Ernest. The one is too finical and the other too heedlees, and has perhaps a bad tongue. He is too young to be my head servant. Dined at Pollen's with Budé. Returned home suffering from a cold.

Megro's pay bill. The expense to the 24th March came according to his account to £83, 0.6.

8. February, 1787. I advanced five guineas to my servant Ernst on account of his wages for the current year, &c., I increased his wages for the following year, that is, I have promised him 18 guineas a year. He seemed to hope for more, and I believe he will leave me when he obtains better wages. I must try to find another.

Spent the morning at home arranging papers. Had a visit from Colonel Musgrave. Remained in the house with a bad toothache, which prevented me from dining. Wrote yesterday to Major Mathews by New York, promising to write him by Mr. Dunn.

Le Vendredy 9e fev.

Mr Dunn passa chés moy pour me demander à voir la lettre de Ld George Germain de 1777 au sujet de Leevius, qui avoit été suspendu par le chev. Carleton. Il me dit que Mr ('hambers solliciteur de la Trésorerie lui avoit cerit que cette lettre ctoit très essentielle pr la justification de M. Carleton. Il me dit de plus que Mr Livius étant né à Lisbonne, & son père etant un Allemand qui n'avoit jamais été employé [que] dans la Factorie Angloise de Portugal n'avoit aucun droit à remplir un employ de la Couronne, que cette seule raison rendoit invalide l'action qu'il avoit formé contre M. Carleton. Il me parla des pretentions que le chevallier Thomas Mills avoit voulu former contre Lui ; & je compris que le pauvre Mills est dans son tort. Dunn a obtenu la permission de repasser en Amerique & qu'il avoit appointé le Cape Twiss son agent pour passer ses contes ce qu'il croit qu'on ne fera pas avant

Sir John Adair vint me parler au sujet du Docteur Blacke de Mont Real. Davisson vint ensuitte qui me dit qu'il avait rencontré Dunn hier qui lui avoit parlé pr la première fois sur l'affaire des Postes du Nord, & lui avoit proposé de nommer des articles, pour fixer de quelle façon ceux qui avoient les postes aujourd'huy pourroient se charger des Dettes, que les anciens Propriétaires avoient contracté avec les Indiens quoy qu'on n'en eu point demandé.

J'eus la visitte du Col. Johnson des gardes & celle de Bally Boyest [Billy Bayard?] au sujet des contes de Hutchesson avec le Tresorier. Je lui dis que je les avais comparé dans les miens & que tous les vouchers etoient logés et que j'avois payé la Balance. Il conviendra cependant que j'en parle à Messre les Commissaires. Diné chés Lady Holdernesse avec Bude & un M. Grau que se trouve etre le fils de Ferdinand Grau, mon ami, c'est un joly garç in, mais qui paroit un peu me faire connaître. Lady Holdernesse fut fort bien, je me retiray à 81 heures, &

Samedy le 10e J'ay ecrit un billet aux agents Mesers Ross & Ogilvie, Les chargeant de porter 50 L. St. sur mon conte particulier pour payer les Instruments de Musique que le Colonel Etherington a ordonné pour mon Batt: La some totale se montent à passé 83 L. St. Il chargera le reste pr le conte des compagnies.

J'ay écrit au chev. George Yong pour lui recommander le docteur Blake de Mont Real pour la demy paye: fait visitte à Madame Duna que j'ai trouvée fort satisfaitte de la Tourrée qu'elle a faite dans les villes des Manufactures. Elle ma' avoue qu'elle quitteroit ce pays à regret, & qu'elle ne pourroit jamais plus trouver d'agremt en Canada. Fait visitte à Mr Adair, chirurgion general en Stafort Street. Il est parfaittemt logé, & a une collection d'excellents tableaux. Je n'en ay pas trouvé un seul de mediocre. Il me fit voir un petit tableau au Mesaique que le Pape lui a fait présent & qu'il evalu à 6,000 guinées. C'est certainement la plus belle chose que j'ay vu dans le genre. Il me dit qu'il avait presenté d'une quantité de preservations annatomiques au Pape, suffisantes pour remplir deux grandes chambres, que le Pape avoit fait arrangé au mieux, & qu'il y avoit fait plassé le buste de Mr Adair &c. Diné chés le gen! Smith, avec le G! Christie, le G! Robinson & l'Amiral Dadel, Mr le Capt Smith, secretaire du General Clinton, un capt venant de Gibraltar, & M. Walls [Watts?].

Dimanche le 11e f.

Fait visitte au chevalier Clinton & au Gl Gage que je ne vis pas. Passé chés le Gl Robertson ou je trouvay M. Isaac Low de Québec qui se plain d'avoir été mal ll m'a parle de Lord Roden & du peu d'attention que M. Pitt lui a thémoigné ce qui est une des causes qui lui jetteroit dans l'oposition. Il me dit que dans ce pays les services passés etoient toujours oubliés, & qu'il était bon

d'une COUR

9. Friday. Mr. Dunn called to ask me to show him the letter from Lord George Germaine of 1777, respecting Livius who had been suspended by Sir Guy Carleton, He said that Mr. Chambers, Solicitor of the Treasury, had written him that this letter was very essential for Carleton's justification. He said further, that Mr. Livius being born in Lisbon, and his father a German who had never been employed [except?] in the English Factory of Portugal, had no right to fill an office under the Crown, and that this reason alone rendered the action he had taken against Carleton invalid. He spoke to me of the claims Sir Thomas Mills wished to set up against him and I understood that poor Mills was in the wrong. Dunn has obtained leave to return to America and has appointed Captain Twiss his agent to pass his accounts, which he believes will not be done for six years.

Sir John Adair came to speak to me on the subject of Dr. Blake, of Montreal. Davison then came, who told me that he had met Dunn yesterday, who spoke to him for the first time on the affairs of the Northern Posts, and proposed to draw up articles to settle how those who had the posts now could assume the debts which the old proprietors had contracted with the Indiane, although this had not been asked.

Had a visit from Colonel Johnson of the Guards and from Bally Boyest [Billy Bayard] respecting Hutchison's account with the Treasury. I told him that I had compared them with mine, that all the vouchers were lodged and that I have paid the balance. It would be better, however, that I should speak about them to the Commissioners. Dined at Lady Holderness's with Budé and a Mr. Grau, whom I found to be the son of my friend, Ferdinand Grau. He is a nice looking young man but appears to be a little I did not wish to make myself known to him. Lady Holderness was very pleasant. I left at half past eight and spent the evening

10. Saturday. Wrote a note to the agents, Messrs. Ross and Ogilvie, desiring them to debit my private account with £50 to pay for the musical instruments which Colonel Etherington has ordered for my battalion. The sum total exceeds £83 sterjing. He will charge the rest to the account of the companies.

Wrote to Sir George Yonge, recommending Dr. Blake, of Montreal, for half pay, called on Mrs. Dunn, whom I found much pleased with the trip she made to the manufacturing towns. She owned she would leave this country with regret, and that she could never more find pleasure in Canada. Paid a visit to Mr. Adair, Surgeon General, in Stafford Street. He is perfectly lodged, and has a collection of excellent pictures. I did not find a single poor one among them. He showed me a small picture in mosaic, which the Pope had presented to him and which he valued at 6,000 guineas. It is certainly the finest genre picture I have seen. He told me that he had presented to the Pope a quantity of anatomical preparations, enough to fill two large rooms, which the Pope had arranged to the best advantage and had placed there Mr. Adair's bust, &c. Dined at General Smith's, with General Christic, General Robertson, Admiral Dadel (Darby?), Captain Smith, General Clinton's secretary, a Captain neturning from Gibraltar and Mr. Walls. [Watts?]

Returned home at half past nine, after walking with Admiral Dedalle to his house, 66 Pall Mall.

11. Sunday. Visited Sir Henry Clinton, and General Gage, whom I did not see. Called on General Robertson, where I found Mr. Isaac Low, of Quebec, who complained of being ill treated by the commissioners. He spoke to me of Lord Roden and of the little attention paid to him by Mr. Pitt, which was one of the causes which threw him into opposition. He said that in this country past services were always forgotten, and that it was well to profit by circumstances.

Called on the Baron d'Alvensleben, with whom I had an hour and a half's conversation on the affairs of the time. He still disapproves of the conduct of those who made the last peace; the King opposed it as much as he could, but was at last obliged qui ont fait la dernière paix, le Roi s'y est opposé autant qu'il a pû, mais à la fin il a A mon retour ches moy j'ay appris que le Colonel DeLancy, & le Li Porbee y avoient passé, & my Lord Southampton y avoit envoyé un demestique. J'allay ches luy il me dit que tout etoit arrange avec M. Porbec, qui entra un moment après en rapportant un billet de £20 que le Banquier Dromond n'avoit pas voulu accepter, disant qu'il falloit qu'il fut sur du stamped paper. Je via un certain embatas & deux ou tro's messages à Lady Southampton qui descendit enfin en neglige et écrivit un billet qui fut remis au Li Porbee. Je sortis la dessus il me suivit peu apprès & me fit voir les instructions qu'il avoit reçu de my Lord par lesquelles il lui delégoit tout son pouvoir celui même de le faire mettre en prison au cas qu'il ne se conduisit pas comme un gentilhomme. Il lui a dont é £20 at, ou guinées pour le voyage, & il lui a donné une lettre de crédit sur Frankfort pour recevoir £20 st. tous les trois mois à commencer le 25 juin & celui qui payera cotto sommo en retiendra tous les frais du chango. dit qu'il ne regrettera pas cet argent pourveu que son fils peut se corriger. Je ne pus pas m'empacher de lui dire que s'il consideroit que le L. Porbec devoit retirer sa paye de la & vivre avec son fils la somme n'était pas trop grande.

My Lady doit a oir eté une très belle femme, elle a de très beaux restes, & elle paroit etre entierement la maitreace,

Porbec me dit qu'il avoit vu une [scène] desagroable entre le jeune homme & son fière qui lui avoit donné des coups de batons qui l'avoient fait pleurer comme un enfan.

Bude & Porbec ont diné chés moy. J'ay passé la soirée chés Madame Corre ou il y avoit beaucoup de monde. J'y vis le Col. Corre, Sergent Gross, & Mr. Ervin de Boston, revenu a 11 heures après etre convenu avec M. Corre qu'il rencontreroit le Gl Christie ches moy demain à I heure.

Lundy le 12e.

Fait visitte à l'eveque d'Oxford, Lord Amherst, Col. Goldsworthy, M. Dudany, Col, Ballfour. Je ne les trouvay pas

Le Gl Robinson, Smith, Budé, L'Admiral Dedall & le Mess. Gun dinèrent chés moy, & se retirerent à 9 heures, passé la soirée chés moy.

Mardy 13o. Promené à cheval dans le Parck, diné au club où nous ctions 16 personnes. Je fus choisy présidant pr le club prochain, revenu chés moy à 101.

Mercredy 14e. J'eus la visitte de M. de Troytorrens de Cudesford. Il me dit qu'il avoit été demandé par le Duc de Marlborough pour voyager avec son fils qui a 21 années. Il etoit chargé de me faire des compliments des Bains. Il me fit entrevoir que les deux frètes ne vivent pas bien ensemble, l'ainé veillit, et paroit reveur et melancholique. Il faut que je parle pour les racommoder. M. Christin vint aussi dejouner avec moy.

Promené à cheval avec le Geni Smith, le Colonel Musgrave. J'etois invité à diner chez Lady Holdernesse pr samedi, j'ai reça une carte d'excuse. Diné chez M. Corre on il y avait plusicurs personnes que je ne conoissoi pas, perdu deux robers et Joudy 15c. J'eus la visitte de M. Billy Bayard, au sujet des contes de Major Hutchisson Passé chez le Capt Twiss que je ne trouvay pas. Passé chez Lord Amherst qui m'a fort conseille de faire un tour à Bath pr me debarasser de mon rhume. Eté ensuite. chés Budé qui me conseilla de me faire présenter au club par le chevr R. Pigot et par le Colonel Musgrove. Diné chés le General Carpenter avec Sir Harry Goss, sa femme M. Rameden et Madame Bude & Md Sharp, joué deux robers que j'ay perdu revenu chés moy à 10 heures.

to yield. On my return home, I learned that Colonel DeLanoy and Lieut. Porbee had called and Lord Southampton had sent a servant. I went to him and he told me that every thing was settled with Mr. Porbee, who entered a moment after, bringing a note for £20, which Drummond the binker would not accept, saying it must be on stamped paper. I saw a certain embarrasment and two or three messages to Lady Southampton, who came down at last in deshabilite and wrote a note which was handed to Lieut. Porbee. I left thereupon and he followed shortly after and showed me the instructions he had received from His Lordship, by which he delegated to him all his power, even to putting him [the sen] in prison, should he not conduct himself like a gentleman. He has given him £30 storling or guineas for the journey, and a letter of credit on Frankfort to receive £20 quarterly, to begin on the 25th June, the person paying that amount to deduct the cost of exchange. His Lordship told me that he will not regret the money, provided his son can be reformed. I could not help telling him that if he considered that Lieut. Porbee was to draw his pay from that, and to live with his son, the amount was not too much.

Her Ladyship must have been a very fine woman, she has still the remains and she seems to be entirely the mistress.

Porbec told me he had witnessed a disagreeable scene between the young man and his brother, who had given him a caning which made him cry like a child.

Budé and Porbee dined with me. I spent the evening at Mrs. Coore's, where there was a large number of people. Saw there Colonel Coore, Sergeant Gross and Mr. Ervin, of Boston. Went home at half past eleven, after arranging with Mr. Coore to meet General Christie at my house to-morrow at one o'clock.

12. Monday. Visited the Bishop of Oxford, Lord Amherst, Colonel Goldsworthy, Mr. Dalaney, (De Lancy?), Colonel Balfour; did not find them in.

General Robinson, Smith, Budé, Admiral Dedall and the Messrs. Gunn dined with me. They left at nine o'clock. Spent the evening at home.

- 13. Tuesday. Rode in the Park; dined at the club, we were 16. I was chosen president for the next meeting. Home at half past ton.
- 14. Wednesday. Had a visit from Mr. Traytorrens, of Cudesford. He said he had been asked by the Duke of Mariborough to travel with his son, who is twenty-one. He was to convey compliments to me from the Baths. I could draw from his conversations that the two brothers do not live in harmony together. The eldest is getting old, dreamy and melancholy. I must try to bring about a reconciliation. Mr. Christic also came to breakfast. He seems a fine young man.

Rode with General Smith and Colonel Musgrove. I was invited by Lady Holderness to dine on Saturday, but received a note of apology. Dined at Mr. Coore's, where were several persons whom I did not know; lost two rubbers, and returned home at half-past ten.

- 15. Thursday. Had a visit from Mr. Billy Bayard respecting Major Hutchison's accounts. Called on Captain Twiss, whom I did not find. Called at Lord Amherst's, who strongly advised me to take a trip to Bath to get rid of my cold. Then went to Budé's, who advised me to have my name put up at the club by Sir R. Pigot and Colonel Musgrove. Dined at General Carpenter's with Sir Harry Goss, his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Ramsden, Budé and Mr. Sharp. Played two rubbers, which I lost. Home at 10.
- 16. Friday. In going to Mr. Wigglesworth, I met Mr. Molisson, who was going to the comptroller's office. He took me there, and at the foot of the stair he ordered one of the porters to take me to office, where, after having shown the letter mes contes, il fit appeller M. Winglesworth, qui me dit qu'il avoit examiné une partie de mes vouchers qu'il trouvoit un article de 1000 dollars sur lequel je recevrai une lettre de son office afin de produire les Wouchers procette somme. Il me dit ensuitte qu'il ne trouvoit aucun conte par lequel j'eusse fini toute chose avec Hutchisson, et jocrains que par là je ne devienne responsable de tout, et qu'on objecte aux Vouchers, que Hutchisson m'a fourny. Il me dit de plus qu'on trouvoit que le maj r Hutchesson avoit reçu plusiours sommes, même du chevallier Carleton, qu'il étoit occupé à arranger le conte, et que je le verrois dans peu.

Promené au parc avec Ld Amherst, fait visitte au cape Twiss que je ne trouvay pas. Visitté Bayard que je ne trouvay pas. Passé ches les Chev Napier et Rigaud Budé, le Coll. Balfour, Gunn, avec le Baron Regenfeld ont diné chés moy, le Gl Ainsly, Chev. Hary Goff, et le Col. Goldsworthy m'ont fait visitte, Mercredy 21. Je fus au Levé qui fut assés nombreux—fait ensuitte visitte à Ld Amherst que je ne trouvay pas & a M. de Traytorrene qui a la goutte. J'y rencontray M. qui est de retour icy depuis trois mois. Il me parla des dix mille hommes qu'on doit reformer en Prusse. Budé, Marsh & J. Adair ont diné chés moy & se sont retiré.

Jeudy 22e J'eus la visitte du Cape Twiss & du Cape Shanks. Je parlay à Twiss de la difficulté qui se trouvoit au sujet des contes du Cape Hutchins. Il me promit de venir une soirée chés moy pr les examiner.

Je fus à la Cour où il y avoit beaucoup de monde. Je remarquay qu'apprès que la Reine m'eut parlé elle me regardoit plusieurs fois avec beaucoup d'attention & avec un air de complaisance croyant que j'avais été mallade.

Mr Smelt vint m'aborder & me dit que le Roi esperoit que je ne resteroit pas aussi longtemps absent de l'Angleterre que je l'avois été de la Suisse, & que j'établirois mon domicille icy. Nous parlames de Salzas & de sa Louppe, je lui dit que s'il ne trouvait personne à Paris à qui il peut se corfier pr faire que l'amenerais icy nous convîmes que Cabanis était trop vicux pr faire l'opération. He then said he found no account by which I had settled everything with Hutchison, and I fear that I may become responsible for the whole, and that the vouchers furnished to me by Hutchison are objected to. He told me further, that it was found that Major Hutchison had received several amounts, even from Sir Guy Carleton, that he was busy arranging the account, and that I would see it shortly.

Walked in the park with Lord Amherst. Paid a visit to Twiss, who was not in.
Visited Bayard, whom I did not find. Called on Sir James Napier and Rigand.
Budé, Colonel Balfour, Gunn, with the Baron Regenfeld, dined with me. General Ainstey, Sir Harry Goff and Colonel Goldsworthy called.

- 17. Saturday. Rode to Hampstead. Dined at General Robertson's with Budé, General Smith, Bockley [Berkley?], Colonel Burton and Mr. Oldford. Mr. Leighton, formerly clork to the late Major Yonge, came yesterday to offer his services and ask some assistance. I gave him two guineas, and spoke of him to General Robertson, who will employ him. It is said that he is very expert in arranging accounts.
- 18. Sunday. Rode in the park. Returned at four, and spent the day at home. My nephew came in the evening, and told he was leaving for Italy in the first week of March. I told him of my design to purchase the barony of Vaumarchies, if it was for sale, and why. It seemed to please him.
- 19. Monday. Rode in the park for three hours. I met the King and Queen when going there, and made the acquaintance of Sir Thomas Wroughton, Envoy to Bweden, who seemed a very sensible man. Budé and Gran dined with me. I then went with Budé to the Baron's concert, and from there to Ludy Amberst's assembly, which was very numerously attended. Played a rubber with Mrs. Robertson, Count Pollon and General St. Jean. Won a guines and a half to Mrs. Robertson. Home at eleven.
- 20. Tuesday. Visited Mrs. Ramsden, Ainsley, Sir Robert Pigot. Went to dine with my nephew, where I found Mrs. Caristic and Mrs. Sanders. My niceos are preparing for their journey to Italy. I found them, especially Sally, too full of prejudices, but they have an ascendancy over the mind of their father which it would be useless to oppose. Home at nine.
- Amherst, whom I did not find in, and to Mr. Traytorrens, who has the gout. I there met M. who has been back for three months. He spoke of the ten thousand men who are to be disbanded in Prussia. Budé, Marsh and Adair dined with me and went off at nine to the Club.
- 22. Thursday. Had a visit from Captain Twiss and Captain Schanks. Spoke to Twiss of the difficulties about Captain Hutchins [Major Hutchison's] accounts. He promised to spend an evening with me to examine them.

Was at the Court, which was crowded. I remarked that after the Queen had spoken to me, she looked at me several times very attentively and with a kindly air, believing that I had been ill.

Mr. Smelt came to accost me, and told me that the King hoped that I would not be as long absent from England as I had been from Switzerland, and that I should establish my domicile here. We spoke of Salzas and of his tumour. I told him that if he could find no one in Paris to be trusted with the case to bring him here. We agreed that Cabanis was too old to perform the operation. I told him how he had behaved in regard to Traytorrens' tumour; and it may happen that Cabanis will put Salzas off for one day or year to another for performing the operation.

- 1. Friday. Vas at Court which was pretty full. Dined and spent the evening at home. Twiss and Budé dined with me.
- 2. Saturday. Went with Captain Twiss and Freeman to Mr. Wigglesworth's, who made an appointment for Monday next at 13, to bring him the vouchers respecting Major Hutchison, who was my secretary during the years '73 and '71 when I commanded in chief.
- 3. Sunday. General Pigot, General Smith, Christie, Budé and Dr. Brown dined with me and remained till after ten o'clock, after which I went to my nephew's to wish him a good journey. The girls were already in bed and I did not see them. Home at eleven.
- 5. Monday. Paid a visit to Lord Sydney, who was not in. Went to the office, where I found Mr. Townshend, who had returned from his travels shortly before and said that he thought of going to Switzerland and of travelling through it on horseback next July. I handed Mr. Nepean Alco's [Halows?] petition, which he promised to take up the same day. Dined and spent the evening at home.
- 6. Tuesday. Went with Captain Twiss and Captain Freeman and handed Mr Wigglesworth the vouchers for the sum of £9,655 13 111 sterling, which I had drawn in '73 and '74 in favour of Captain Hutchison, to meet the public expenses. Mr. Wigglesworth gave me a receipt, of which I sent a copy with a letter to Mr. Wil-Bayard, to ease his mind. Called on Lord Amberst, who spoke to me about Lieut. Fait une promenade à cheval avec le Gen! Roy & et le Cape Bisset, le premier me dit que M. Archell [Herschel?] avoit découvert deux satellites à la nouvelle Planette que lui fasoit la revollution [l'une] en l'espace de huit jours, et l'autre environ dans 13 jours, qu'aucun astronome en France n'y ailleurs n'avaient pû les voir, & que surtout les François étoient fort piqués que nos instruments surpassent si fort les lours.

Le Genl William Fossett vint me dire qu'on se proposait (si je n'avais point d'objection) d'avoir mon Btten Canada, mais que comme Hope y commandoit comme Brigadier qu'on seroit obligé de faire venir Etherington en Angleterre puisqu'il etoit plus ancien que Lui.

Dinné au club cù Lord Shouldbam presida. Il y avait environ 20 personnes & tcut se passa fort bien. J'allay de là avec Lord Shouldham chez Mad. Trapaud ou il y avoit beaucoup de monde, et cù il faisoit une challeur extraordinaire dont je fus fort incommodé.

Le Gl Christie me surprit en me disant que le Gl Smith avoit refusé d'etre son arbitre pour le différend qu'il a avec l'agent au sujet de l'habillement perdû.

Mercredy le 14.

Le Lt de Porbec vint chés moy pour me prier de lui procurer le moyen de vendre sa commission. Il me parut un fort joly officier & il m'interessat à son sort par le récit de ses services & des depens inevitables dans lesquelles il avoit été plongé pour remplir son devoir. Je l'invitay à diner ou j'eus lieu de me persuader que ce seroit une perte pour le service s'il se retiroit. Il me dit que ses dettes ne montoient pas au delà de 50 à 60£ St. mais que son Père qui avoit une nombreuse famille ne pouvant pas l'assister il se voyoit obligé de vendre pour payer ses dettes. Bude et Green ont dir e chés moy.

Jeudy 15.

Je rencontray Lord Amherst au Parck à qui je dis que je ferai mon possible pour retenir le Lt de Porbce dans le Batt. et que s'il etoit necessaire je payerois ses dettes. Je lui dis ensuitte les depences que j'avois faittes pr retenir d'autres officiers ce qu'il approuva beaucoup. Je lui dis que j'avais reçu une lettre du chevallier Yong au sujet de la destination du ler Batt. Il me dit qu'il en avoit reçu une & qu'il avait ordonné à l'agent de m'en envoyer copie. Il m'a paru à plusieurs occasions qu'il est jaloux du Secretaire de la guerre et qu'il croit avoir seul le commandement du Regimt.

Fait une longue promenade à cheval et ensuite visitte au Baron Alvensleben M. Le Lt de Porbec a diné chés moy qui me dit que la dette principale qu'il avoit etoit auprès de l'agent qui lui avoit avancé sa paye du Lt jusques au 25 Décembre prochaio, que ses autres dettes ne montoient pas à £20. Il me parut cependant déterminé à quitter, & a reprendre ses etudes pour les Loix.

Payé 5½ guinées pour deux Robes & de la toille pour deux chemises pour Madame Fairchild.

Vendredy 16.

Je fus chés Lord Amherst à qui je dis que j'avancerai l'argent nécessaire £100 au Lt Porbec pour payer ses dettes et le mettre à même de se rendre chès lui, & que je le pricis de lui procurer un congée d'une annéo, &c. Il approuva fort ce que je taisois pour les officiers que se trouvoient dans l'embaras &c. Je fus à la citté pour prier M. Corre de me procurer une copie de la lettre de l'agent Ross & Gray à Hanley. 12. Monday. Rode out, made a few calls and spent the evening at home.

13. Tuesday. Rode with General Roy and Captain Bisset. The former told me that Mr. Archell [Herschel?] bad discovered two satellites to the new planet, [one of] which made a revolution in the space of eight days, and the other in about thirteen days; that no astronomer in France or elsewhere had been able to see them, and that the French especially were greatly piqued that our instruments so much surpassed theirs.

General William Fawcett came to tell me that it was proposed (if I had no objection) to send my battalion to Canada; but that as Hope was in command there as Brigadier, Etherington would have to be brought to England, he being the senior.

Dined at the Club, at which Lord Shuldham presided. There were about 20 and everything went off well. From there I went with Lord Shuldham to Madame Trapaud's, where there was a crowd and such an extraordinary heat that I was much distressed.

General Christic surprised me by saying that General Smith had refused to be his arbitrator in the dispute with the agent respecting the lost clothing.

14. Wednesday. Lieut. Porbec came to beg me to procure him the means of selling his commission. He seemed to me a good officer and he interested me in his fate by the statement of his services and of the inevitable expenses into which he had been plunged to discharge his duties. I invited him to dinner, at which I had reason to persuade myself that it would be a loss to the service if he retired. He told me his debts did not exceed £50 or £60 sterling, but that his father, who had a large family, not being able to assist him, he saw himself obliged to sell to pay his debts. Budé and Green dined with me.

15. Thursday. I met Lord Amherst in the park, to whom I said that I would do the utmost to retain Lieut. Porbec in the service, and that if necessary I would pay his debts. I then told him the expenses I had been at to retain other officers in the service, which he highly approved. I told him that I had received a letter from Sir George Yonge respecting the destination of the first battalion. He told me he had received one about it and that he had ordered the agent to send me a copy of it. It has appeared to me on several occasions that he is jealous of the Secretary of War, and that he believes he should have the sole command of the regiment.

Took a long ride and then visited the Baron Alvensleben. Lieut. Porbee dined with me and told me that his principal debt was to the agent, who had advanced his pay as Lieutenant to the 25th of December next; that his other debts did not amount to £20. He seems, however, determined to give up the service and to resume his legal studies.

Paid five guineas and a half for two gowns, and linen for two chemises for Mrs. Fairchild.

16. Friday. Went to Lord Amherst's to whom I said I would advance the necessary amount (£100) to Lieut. Porbec to pay his debts and to enable him to go home, and begged him to obtain for him a year's leave of absence &c. He approved greatly of what I was doing for the officers who were in difficulties, &c. Went to the city to request Mr. Coore to procure a copy of the letter from the agents, Ross & Gray, to Hanley. He promised that he would do so, and seemed delighted at the prospect of closing the business of the late General Prevost by arbitration. Dined at General Smith's with General Douglas, &c.

Promené à cheval, diné chès le Baron Alvensleben avec le Chev: le marquis Trotty, le Comte le Gl Pauly & son campagne, le Gen! Morrisson & le Col: Thomas. Je conduisis le chevr au club, il me parut fort instruit dans les mecaniques, & nous expliquat le possibilité qu'il y auroit été de retirer le Royal George &c.

Je reçus une [carte] de congé des officiers François que je n'avois pas vû.

Fait une promenade jusque à Foulham avec Gunn, revenu chés moy à 4 h. Watts & le Lt Porbec ont diné chés moy. J'ai payé ce matin en présence de M. le Capt Freeman vingt guinées pour les gages de mon Demestique, François pour une année qui étoit echue hier.

J'ay pretté ce matin cent livres sterling à M. Le Lt Porbec dont il m'a fait son billet. Il doit laisser sa paye et ses arrières chés l'agent, jusqu'à ce que je sois remboursé, & lui laissé un ordre à cet effet.

Passé chés le Cape Shaw, qui me dit qu'il avoit arrangé toutes les affaires du Lt Porbec. Il me fit voir aussi la distribution qu'il avoit fait des £100 St que j'ay donné au Lt Prevost pour payer ses dettes avec tous les requs que je laissay entre ses mains. Diné chés moy & passé la soirée chés Lady Amnerst où il y avoit beaucoup de monde. J'y rencontray Lord Southampton qui me fit l'histoire de son fils qu'il souhaitte d'envoyer dans l'étranger &c. Je lui proposay de le faire passer à Cassel sous la conduitte du Lt Porbeo, &c. &c. *

Mardy, 20.

Je regu un billet de Lord Southampton me priant de ne pas faire mention de son nom en parlant au Lt Porbee, qu'il viendroit me voir à midy. J'allay chés lui et' nous convîmes que my Lord passeroit chés moy où il verroit le Lt Porbee et qu'apprès ça nous conviendrions de la façon dont il couviendroit de luy parler. Il s'y rendit et M. Porbee s'etant retiré apprès quelques conv reations indifferentes my Lord me dit qu'il iroit consulter my Lady & qu'il reviendroit auprès de moy dans une heure, ce qu'il fit en m'amenant Stephen DeLanoy, qu'avoit connu Porbee en Amérique et souhaittoit de lui parler. On le fit chercher inutillement.

Diné chés le col. Williamson, avec Lady Young, Lady & le Gen¹ Fossett, le Baron Alvensleben, le Col. Marsh, Lt Charles Goold. Il y eut une asse mblée le soir de 4 Tables.

Mardy 21.

Je sus chés my Lord Southampton. Porbec vint peu de temps apprès chés moy et je l'envoyay chés le Col. Delancy comme nous etions convenus. Peu de temps apprès De Lancy vint chés moy pour savoir ce qu'il conviendroit de donner à Porbec pour se charger d'avoir soin du jeune Fitzroy. Je ne voullus point dessider et luy conscillay d'aller premièrement avec Porbec pour voir le jeune homme, de revenir ensuitte icy ch l'on pourroit arrenger son départ. Il conviendroit que le jeune homme souhaittoit luy même d'ailer en allemagne avec Porbec afin qu'il en sut plus le maistre.

Diné chés moy avec M. M. de Bolton, Buda, le Baron, Marsh, & Twiss, qui se retirèrent a 9 heures.

Le Col. Christie qui passa chés moy me fit le récit de ce qui s'étoit passé à l'assemblée des Arbitres, au sujet des agens et de la façon inconcevable avec la quelle Mess. Ross & Ogilvie s'étoient conduit.

Je ne puis pas comprendre comment Lord Amherst peut soutenir de pareilles gens.

I took the Chevalier to the club. He seemed well informed on the subject of mechanics and explained to us the possibility of raising the Royal George &c.

I received a card from the French officers, whom I had not seen, taking leave.

18. Sunday. Walked to Fulham with Gunn. Returned home at four. Watts and Lieut. Porbec dined with me. Paid this morning in presence of Captain Freeman twenty guineas for the wages of my servant François, for the year ending yesterday.

Sent this morning £100 sterling to Lieut. Porbec, for which he gave me a note. He is to leave his pay and arrears at the agent's till I be reimbursed and he left an order to that effect.

- 19. Monday. Called on Captain Shaw, who told me he had settled all Lieut. Porbeo's affairs. He also showed me the distribution he had made of the £100 I had given to Lieut. Prevost to pay his debts, with all the receipts, which I left in his hands. Dined at home and spent the evening at Lady Amherst's where were a large number of people. I then met Lord Southampton who gave me the history of his son, whom he wished to send abroad, &c. I proposed to him to send him to Cassel under the care of Lieut. Porbeo, &c., &c., *
- 20. Tuesday. Received a note from Lord Southampton, asking me not to mention his name in speaking to Lieut. Porbec, that he would come and see me at noon. It went to him and we agreed that His Lordship would call at my house, where he could see Lieut. Porbec and that after that we could arrange as to the most suitable manner of speaking to him. He came and Mr. Porbec having left after some general conversation, His Lordship told me that he would consult Her Ludyship and would return in an hour, which he did, bringing Stephen de Laney, who had known Porbec in America, and wished to speak to him. A useless search was made for him *

Dined at Colonel Williamson's with Lady Yonge, Lady and General Fawcett, Baron Alvensleben, Colonel Marsh, Sir Charles Goold. There was an assembly in the evening of four tables.

21. Tuesday, [Wednesday]. Went to Lord Southampton's. Porbec came shortly after to my house and I sent him to Colonel de Lancy's as we had arranged. A little after, de Lancy came to my house to know what he should agree to give to Porbec, for undertaking the care of young Fitzroy. I would not decide, and advised him to go in the first place with Porbec to see the young man, then to return here, where his setting off might be arranged. He agreed that the young man himself wished to go to Germany with Porbec, that he might be more his own master.

Dined at home with the Mesers. Bolton, Budé, the Baron, Marsh and Twiss. They left at nine.

Colonel Christie who called, gave me an account of what had taken place at the meeting of arbitrators on the subject of the agents and of the inconceivable manner in which Messrs. Ross and Ogilvie had behaved.

I cannot understand nov. Lord Amherst can sustain such people.

22. Thursday. Called on Lord Amherst, where I found Robertson, who showed His Lordship the notes he had made to prove the rights secured by the peace to the Promené à cheval. Diné chés moy avec Budé le Col: Leyland et le Major Gunn. Je fus le soir chés le G! Christie pour lui parler au sujet de son procès avec les agents, et je lui proposay de lui procurer une conférence avec M. Corre & M. Tessier pour déterminer le party qu'il conziendroit de prendre pour se faire rendre justice revenu chés moy à 11 heures.

Dimanche 25.

R çu la visitte du Gl Robertson, qui me parla de l'affaire du Gl Christie. Il blame fort les agents, mais il paroit doutter si Madame Prevost pourra obtenir quelque chose des agents.

Mr. Dunn vint m'annoncer qu'il comptoit de partir d'icy d'aujourd'huy en huit pour s'embarquer au bord de l'Euretta, Cap. Fittenbe pour se rendre en Canada. Il n'a pas pû finir ses contes, et laissera un pouvoir d'atorney au Cap. Twiss pour répondre aux questions qu'on pouroit faire. Pendant son absence la Trésorrerie lui redoit passer 700 l. st. dont il ne pourra être rembourcé que lorsque ses contes seront finis.

Les commissaires lui ont fait plusieurs questions au sujet de l'affaire de Taylor & Forseight [Forsyth] entre autre sur un voucher de 30,000 et quelques mille livros qui avait été tirés sur moy & dont je n'ay payé qu'une partie ; ce bill étant nécessaire pour suivre l'action que je fis ententer contre ses gens là ; & logé en original à la cour à Québec. Il m'a promit qu'il me donneroit copie des questions qu'on lui a faittes à ce sujet, & de la reponse qu'il y a faitte. Par le procès cy-dessus mentionné j'ay sauvé sur ce seul article passé £5,000 à la couronne. Ce fut par le moyen d'un certain Douglas, qui était leur clarck à Niagara que je parvins à decouvrir leur fourberie.

Dunn me dit que Livius étant un denisant ne pouvoit pas occuper d'employ de confiance dans les Domaines du Roy, qu'il y avoit une pénalitté attachée (£500 St.) pour chaque employ qu'un Denisant occuperoit, qu'en ayant occupé cinq si quelqu'un le prosecuta pourroit lui faire payer £2,500 dont la moitié seroit pour luy.

Il m'asseure que malgré la paye qu'il avoit en motte soroit pour ray.

Il m'asseure que malgré la paye qu'il avoit en pendant la guerre dans les différents employs qu'il occupoit il n'avoit point epargné d'argent. les diffét de plus ont il ne on sur la persons who had lands in America and that consequently Government were obliged to protect them. His Lordship told him that Lord Carmarthen would be greatly obliged to him for information thereupon, which he did not find in the vaults among the papers belonging to his office.

Robertson, as Sir Boothby was dead, or could not live long, asked His Lordship and me, if it would not be proper to ask for his regiment, the last on the establishment of Great Britain, and consequently worth £200 sterling more a year than his, which is on the Irish establishment. I advised him to do nothing about it, His Lordship agreed with me, and told him that but for the Duke of Richmond he would have had the regiment of Dragoons, which is in India, and that he had a right to hope that he would be thought of as occasion arose. I went to the Secretary of War's levée, which was very numerously attended. Thence to the Court, where Dined at home, after which I went to Lord Southampton's where we agreed that if Porbco received twenty guineas for travelling expenses, and £50 sterling every quarter he might undertake the care of the young man's conduct, and to pay all the expenses, including his full pay of lieutenant. We had a very long conversation on this subject and on the best way to get the young man himself inclined to go to Germany. I can see that he is a great trouble and that it is wished to send him off

- 23. Friday. Remained at home. Scribbled over the paper the whole afternoon, without being able to write to the Chevalier Gran a letter which seemed presentable.
- 24. Saturday. Rode out. Direct at home with Budé, Colonel Leyland and Major Gunn. Went in the evening to General Christie's to speak to him about his suit with the agents, and proposed a conference with Mr. Coore and Mr. Tessier, to settle the suitable course to take to obtain justice. Returned home at eleven.
- 25. Sunday. Had a visit from General Robertson, who spoke to me about General Christie's business. He blames the agents very much, but appears to doubt if Mrs. Prevost could obtain anything from them.

Mr. Dunn came to inform me that he counted on leaving here in eight days, to embark in the Euretta, Captain Fittenbe, for Canada. He has not been able to finish his accounts and will leave a power of attorney with Captain Twiss, to answer questions which may be put. During his absence the Treasury allowed as owing him £700 sterling, for which he cannot be reimbursed till his accounts shall be finished.

The commissioners put several questions to him respecting Taylor and Forsyth's business, among others on a bill for £30,000 odd, which had been drawn on me and of which I had paid only a part, that bill being necessary in carrying on the action which I had instituted against these people and the original lodged in the Court at Quebec. He promised he would give me a copy of the questions put to him on this subject and of the answer he had made to them. By the suit above mentioned, I saved on that single item, upwards of £5,000 to the Grown. It was by means of a certain Douglas, who was their clerk at Niagara, that I managed to find out their rascality.

Dunn told me that Livius, being a foreigner could not occupy any office of trust in the King's domain; that there was a penalty attached (of £500 sterling) for each office which a foreigner occupied; that having occupied five, if any one prosecuted he could make him pay £2,500, of which half would be for the prosecutor.

He assured me, that notwithstanding the pay he had had during the war in the five offices he had held he had saved no money. He said further that there was owing to him by different persons of the military, upwards of £3,000, for which he would never receive a sou. Finally he told me that he had greatly changed his opinion and the good idea he held of the laws of this country, &c., &c.

Mr Dunn me dit qu'il croioit que M. Pitt n'osoit pas entamer les affaires de Cochran, parcequ'elles avoient été transigées du temps de l'administration de Lord North. Crainte que s'il étoit obligé de faire un compromis l'opposition ne lui en fit des reproches, on croioit que Lord Dorchester aurait des Instructions sur ce sujet, mais il n'en a point reçu l'avis de M. Chamberlin Solliciteur de la Tresororie qui est regardé comme un très habile hommé, étoit d'opignon que ce qu'on pouroit faire de mieux étoit d'envoyer quelqu'un en Canada & de retirer tout l'argent qu'on pouroit, & il y a eu plusieurs consultations là dessus, mais il paroit qu'on n'a rion dessidé.

L'affaire de Tailleur & Fore ight [Taylor & Forsyth] est toujours en appel & nefinit point, enfin j'ay été très content de M. Dunn.

Lundy, 26.

J'ay fait quelques visittes le matin surtout chés le Duc de Northumberland qui m'a très bien reçu.

[L'entrée qui suit dans le journal est celle qui vient ci-après, mais le commencement manque et la date est douteuse. Le procès de Warren Hastings, dont le cadeau à la reine est mentionné dans le dernier paragraphe de l'entrée qui suit, avait été commencé en 1786].

Fait visitte au Gl Armstrong que je trouvay.

Robertson me parla du discours que M. Francis "avoit tenu au Parlem" au sujet des Diamands que M. Hestings avoit apporté & fait présent à la Rene. Il croit M. Hestings riche d'un million & demy.

Avril, Samedy 28.

Requ une lettre du G¹ Budé qui m'invitta fort à aller à Cheltenham. Il dit des merveilles de ces eaux. Fait visite à Lady Holdernesse qui me fit l'histoire de Messes Green de Ls Tessier & de Mad: Haller & de sa mère ami du Prince de Hesse. Passé chés Mad: Monster qui me fit des reproches obligeant de l'avoir négligée.

Le G1 Koningham dina ches moy & je fus avec lui au Clob de Caré, ou je trouvay fort bonne compagnie. Je passay quattre & demi guinées pour ma souscription & me retira à 11 heures.

Dimanche 29.

Fait visitte au chev: John Dick, qui me dit qu'il ne pouvoient point passer de conte sur qu'on ne leur produit de vouchers, &c.

Diné et passé la soirée chés moy appres avoir fait quelques visittes en blanc.

Lundy le 30.

Je rencontray M. Corre qui me dit que dans le courant de la semaine il passeroit ches moy pour examiner tous les papiers concernant Charles Hay. Il m'asseure que le procès sera jugé dans le courant du mois. Il me dit de plus qu'il venoit de parler à Harley qui lui dit que la raison qui l'avoit engagé à ne pas sure voir la lettre de Ross & Gray ne subsistant plus il lui en donneroit la copie quand il voudioit.

Il me dit de plus qu'il avoit intenté un procès aux agents pour les prétentions du Gl Prevost.

Passé à l'exibition de Somerset house que j'ay trouvé très mauvaise.

Le G1 McLean a dînné ches moy apprès quoy j'ay été au Clob, jusqu'à 11½.

Mardy, May 1.

Promené à cheval, passé chés le B. Alvensleben—diné au Clob. Nous étions.

24, tous de bon humeur & j'i suis resté jusqu'à une & demy heure du matin.

ires de Mr. Dunn told me that he believed Mr. Pitt did not dare to enter on the affairs le Lord of Cochrane, because they had been transacted during Lord North's administration; ni en fit for fear that if he were obliged to make a compromise the opposition would attack e sujet. him. It is believed that Lord Dorchester must have received instructions on the qui est faire de subject, but he has not received the opinion of Mr. Chamberlin, solicitor to the Treasury, who is regarded as a very able mar. He was of opinion that the best thing to be done was to send some one to Canada, and to secure all the money possible. There have been several consultations on the subject, but it appears that nothing has been decided.

The affair of Taylor and Forsyth is still in appeal and does not end. Indeed, I have been very well pleased with Mr. Dunn.

26. Monday. Paid a few visits in the morning, especially one to the Duke of Northumberland, who received me very well.

[The next entry in the diary is the following, but the beginning of it cannot be found and the date is doubtful. The trial of Warren Hastings, whose gift to the Queen is referred to in the last paragraph of this entry, was begun in 1786]

...... the commissioners of accounts. He is certain that he was among the first who returned to America, but afterwards was among the ranks of the government party and was very useful. Robertson gave me a striking instance of this. Our fleet which was at New York, required immediate repair in order to set sail to protect Lord Cornwallis; there were not enough of workmen in the yard. Robertson proposed to collect all the carpenters and put them in charge of Mr. Low, who found a great many of them. But those in the yard would not receive them, so that the fleet lost a fortnight by the delay, which was partly the cause of Cornwallis' misfortune. This anecdote is little known. This same Mr. Low engaged about 300 or 400 men in the Admiral's fleet when it set sail.

Visited General Amherst whom I found in. Robertson spoke to me of the speech Mr. Francis had made in Parliament on the subject of the diamonds Mr. Hastings had brought and presented to the Queen. He believes Hastings to be worth a million and a half.

28. April. Saturday. Received a letter from General Budé, with a pressing invitation to go to Cheltenham. He highly extolled these waters. Paid a visit to Lady Holderness, who gave me the history of Messrs. Green, Louis Tessier, and Mrs. Haller, and of her mother, a friend of the Prince of Hesse. Called on Mrs. Munster, who politely represented me for having neglected her.

General Cunningham dined with me and I went with him to the Carré [?] Club, where I found very good company. I paid four guineas and a half for my subscrip-

29. Sunday. Paid a visit to Sir John Dick, who told me he could pass no account for which there were not vouchers produced, &c.

Dined and spent the evening at home after having paid a few visits.

30. Monday. Met Mr. Coore, who told me that he would call in the course of the week to examine all the papers concerning Charles Hay. He assured me that the case would be decided in the course of the month. He told me further that he had just spoken to Harley, who said that the reason which bound him not to show Ross & Gray's letter no longer existing, he would give him a copy when he wished it.

He said, besides, that he had entered a suit against the agents for General

Prevost's claims.

Called at the Somerset House Exhibition, which I thought very bad.

General McLean dined with me, after which to the Club till half past eleven.

May.

1. Tuesday. Rode out; called on Baron Alvensleben. Dined at the Club; we were 21, all in good humostayed there till half past one in the morning. 6b - 11

- Wednesday. Rode out; dined at home and spent the evening at Mrs. Trepaud's which was crowded; won two rubbers.
- 3. Thursday. Rode out; dined at home and spent the evening at Baron Alvensleben's. Gave Jenny two guiness on account of hor wages. General Curry paid me a visit.
- 4. Friday. Went to the City to speak to Mr. Coore, who said he would do his utmost to have my business settled soon; what he told me remarkable is, that nobody is sure of the turn legal affairs may take. Went to visit three different exhibitions; dined at home and visited Mrs. Robertson.
- 5. Saturday. Went to Blackheath with Lord Amherst to see the Horse Guards exercise. Returned to breakfast with him and dined at Sir James Napier's with Robertson, Read, Cunningham, Colonel Birton and Captain Burton, and then went to spend the evening at the club On my return I found a letter from my sister-in-law, informing me of the sudden death of my sister-in-law Charliet and my sister Jeanno's decline. Received also a letter from M. deBosq (Boisy?)
- 6. Sunday Went to visit Mr. Sanders at Highgate, thence to Hampstead; dined at home, paid a few visits in the evening and then home.
- 7 Monday. Rode out. Home and wrote a letter to Budé, sending a letter from M. de Boisy and the Courier du Bas Rhin.
- 8. Tues lay. Went to see the review of the Horse Guards Blue, which is certainly the finest regiment of cavalry in England. Returned at half past one to the Duke of Northumberland's, where I tound Lord and Lady Darlington, Lord and Lady Elliot, Mr. and Mrs. Wane, and Dundas, Sir with General Rainsforth. Returned at 10 and stayed at home.
- 9. Wednesday. Lord Amherst, Generals Carey, Robertson and Morrison and Colonel Williamson dined with me. Was at the levée where the King asked me if I had any news of Salzus. I told him what I had heard from M. deBoisy. He said that he was happy he was to be operated on, that it was feared if it was deferred longer the gangrene would attack his hand. I told His Majesty I was persuaded that Cabanis had everything prepared before the operation to cut off Salzus' wrist should the operation not succeed. The King asked if any one had told me. I said no, it was an idea which had occurred to me, on which His Majesty said: "You are always a soldier and always right."
- 10. Thursday. Was at the Court, which was very numerously attended. The Queen asked for news of Salzas and said she was surprised that Budé had not given them any. I told her that he had none himself, except by his brother's note, which I had sent him two days ago.
- 11. Friday. Saw the review of the Horse Guards at Blackheath, which was very good. Direct at home. Spent the evening at Mrs. Drummond's and Mrs. Patisson's, where I won four guineas.
  - 12. Saturday. Dr. Brown dined with me.
- 13. Sunday. Generals Robertson and Cunningham, Sir James Napier and General Smith dined with me. Took a walk in the evening and returned home greatly fatigued. Passed a bad night with pains in my legs and thighs, which I had never felt before, with a burning heat in my legs and feet which prevented me from closing an eye before four in the morning. I can't tell to what to attribute it. Mr. York de fermer l'œuil avant les 4 heures du matin. Je ne sais à quoy l'attribuer. Mr York psessa ches moy pour me parler de son neveux. Je lui conseillay de l'envoyer à Gibralter. Je suis bien surpris que le chev. York ne m'en aye pas parlé lui même, l'ayant vu à la Ccur & à la revue. Promeré au Parck en cheval ou il y avoit un monde infiny.

Lundy 14.

Fait quelques visittes et revenu ches moy à deux houres ou j'ay trouvé une lettre de Budé.

Mardy 15.

Fait visitte à M. York ou le chev. & l'eveque ses frères sont survenus qui ont tous approuvé l'idée d'envoyer le jeune York à Gibraltar.

Divid ches le chev. G. Young avec le Due de Northumberland, Ld Arrington, Gl Houbard [Howard], le Gl Fosset, le Gl Bond, le Gl Robertson Monsieur le Gl Howard, le Col. Simpeo, [Simeoe]. le Chev. York. J'ay passé la soirée ches Madame Munster.

Mereredi 16.

Je fus voir Madame Corre à la campagne & M. en ville, nous convimes que j'iray direr chés lui vendredy pour parler de mon procès. Je fus chés le chev. Clinton que je ne trouvay pas. Diré chés le Gl Morisson en compagne d'homes & de femmes Le comte de Linden qui s'y trouvoit me fit beaucoup meilleur accueil qu'a son ordinaire. Il vouloit me convainere que le Duc Louys etoit ennemi des Suisses et avoit voulu persuader les membres de la Republique de les renvoyer pour prendre des trouppes allemandes à la place, qu'its auroient à meilleur marché mais que les Hollandais avoient trop de confiance dans les Suisses pour donner dans ces idées qui stoient de remplir le Hollande de Princes et de comtes allemands. Joué deux robers gagné 3½ guinées.

Jeudy 17.

Le Gl McLean vint dejcuner ches moy & je fus ensuitte avec le Commis de M.
Corre faire un affidavit à Westmineter pour exiger que Charles Hay donne sureté pour les frais du Precès qu'il me tait au cas qu'il le perde—rencontré Lord Amherst au parck et ensuitte Ld Sydney qui me parla de mon ancien amy le Gl H. Honvay qui etoit bon officier de Cavallerie mais fort mauvais cavallier. Dinné ches moy.
Passé la soirée ches Madame Dromond.

Vendredy 18.

Diné chés M. Corre avec le chev. George Thomas qui conoit la Suisse mieux que moy et qui en paroit enchanté. Passé la soinée chés Mad: Robertson gagné à guinée au whist.

Samedy 19.

Fait quelques visittes. Diné, ches moy. Dimanche 20.

Je fus chés le chev: Clinton qui me parut fort extraordinaire ne se rappellant jamais de la lettre qu'il m'avoit ecrit pour me donner avis qu'on projettoit une invasion dans le Canada. Il me parla beaucoup de ses propres affaires et me dit ensuitte que j'avois beaucoup d'amis dans ce Pays. Il nomma Lord Syûney.

J'allay de la avec le G¹ Robertson ches M. Corre ou nous convismes qu'il nous rencontreroit Mardy à 10 heures du matin avec Arnold et MscLean ches moy. Diné ches le Gl Robertson revenu ches moy à 103 heures.

Lundy 21.

Je fus à la citté où je vis Tessier qui me dit qu'il avoit reçu quelques Bonteilles de vin que le General Grand lui avoit envoyé, qui étoit passable. Je rencontray à l'exibition le Ocate Lene avec le Baron un ancien camarade de la Haye qui me reconant s'abord.

Je devais die ner caes Lady Holdernesse mais je m'excusay. Elle m'apprit la reconciliation du Prince de Galle etc. etc.

called to speak of his nephew. I advised him to send him to Gibraltar. Am surprised that Sir Joseph York has not spoken himself, having seen him at the Court and the Review. Role in the Park where was an infinity of people.

- Monday. Paid a few virits and returned home at two, when I found a letter from Budé.
- 15. Tuesday. Called on Mr. York, where Sir Joseph and the Bishop, his brothers, happened to come in, who approved of the idea of sending young York to Gibraltar.

Dined at Sir, George Yonge's, with the Duke of Northumberland, Lord Arrington, [Arlington], Lieut. Houhard [Howard], General Fawcett, General Bond, General Robertson, General Howard, Colonel Simpeo [Simcoe], Sir Joseph York. Spent the evening at Mrs. Munster's.

- 16. Wednesday. Went to see Mrs. Coore in the country and Mr. Coore in town. We agreed that I should dine with him on Friday to speak of my suit. Went to Sir Henry Clinton's whom I did not find in. Dined at General Morrison's in company of men and women. The Count de Linden, who was there, gave me a much better reception than usual. He wished to convince me that Duke Linis was an enemy to the Swiss and wanted to persuade the members of the Republic to dismiss them in order to take German troops in their place as they would be cheaper, but that the Dutch had too much confilence in the Swiss to give in to these ideas, which would fill Holland with German Princes and Counts. Played two rubbers; won three guineas and a half.
- 17. Thursday. General McLean breakfasted with me. Went then with Mr. Coore's clerk to make an affidavit at Westminster, to require Charles Hay to give security for the suit he has in court should he lose it. Met Lord Amherst in the Park and then Lord Sydney, who spoke to me of my old friend, General H. Honvay, who was a good officer of cavalry but a bad rider. Dined at home. Spent the evening at Mrs. Drummond's,
- 18. Friday. Dined at Mr. Coore's with Sir George Thomas, who knows Switzerland better than I, and appeared enchanted with it. Spent the evening at Mrs. Robertson's. Won half a guinea at whist.
  - 19. Saturday. Paid a few visits. Dined at home.
- 20. Sunday. Went to Sir Henry Clinton's. It seems to me extraordinary that he never remembered the letter he had written me, giving notice of an intended invasion of Canada. He spoke a great deal of his own affects, and then told me I had many friends in this country. He named Lord Sydney.

Went from there with General Robertson to Mr. Coore, where we agreed that he should meet us on Tuesday at 10 in the morning, with Arnoid and McLean, at my house. Dined at General Robertson's; home at half past ten.

21. Monday. Went to the city, where I saw Tessier who told me he had received a few bottles of wine sent him by General Grant, which was passable. I met at the exhibition Count Lene and Baron, an old comrade at the Hague, who recognized me at once.

I was to dine with Lady Holderness, but made an excuse. She informed me of the reconciliation of the Prince of Wales, &c., &c.

22. Tuesday. Messrs. Robertson, Coore, McLean and Arnold came to my house. The latter appeared surprised at seeing that the paper containing the names of the suspected porsons in Canada was to become public. He hesitated as to the deposition vint à paroitre en publique. Il hesitat sur la deposition qu'il devoit faire et alla enfin avec M. Corre pour deposer etc. Le G1 Robertson et Koningham dinèrent ches moy.

Mercredy. J'envoyay à Arnold une Lettre pr le Gouvr Cox de la Baye des Challeurs, & O'hara de Gaspé pr le recommandé les priant de lui donner cous les indices qu'ils pouroient concernant la seigneurie de Pabos et mes Terres de bonne Avanture, dont je souhoittoit de me deffaire. Robortson me dit que la Tresorrerie devoit dans peu de temps examiner les affaires de Cockran au sujet de l'argent qu'il avoit tiré en Canada, et que je devois etre pret à repondre Il me dit que Gordon lui avoit dit que Williams etoit un mauvais sujet qui avoit commis une forgerie. Je lui fis voir împrudement les papiers que Wuilliams avoit préparé. Il faudra que je le previenne afin qu'il n'en fasse pas part à Gordon.

Henry Hollande qui arrive de Demarara vint me voir, et dinna ches moy. C'est un jolly garcon que je pourray m'attacher dans la suitte.

Jeudy 24. Je fus à la cour qui etoit très nombreuse. Le Prince de Galle avec le Duc de Comberland y vincent avec toutte leur suitte, et sur la fin Charles Fox y vint aussi. Le Roy lui dit Il fait un temps bien doux aujourd'hui, et se tourne vers une autre personne. La Rene evittait de lui parler. Fox se retiroit avant que le Roy sortit; passé la soirée ches Mad: Morisson perdu 3 guinées.

Vendredy 25. Le Gl Budé qui arriva ce matin de Cheltenham dina chés moy avec l'amiral Digby, le G! Koningham Morisson & le G! Roy & le Lt Holland dinerent ches moy. Je tus passer la soirée chés Lady Gideon ou il y avoit un monde infiny. J'y restay jusques à  $3\frac{1}{2}$  du matin.

Samedy 26. Promené au Parck ou je rencontray le Duc de Northumberland avec qui je me promenay. Nous vimes passer le Roy & la Rene avec les Princesses. Budé & le Baron Regenfold dinerent chés moy nous fumes ensuitte faire une visitte au chevallier Pollon qui me parut avoir beaucoup maigry. Je lui envoyeray demain de la racine de Gensing. revenu chés moy a 9½ heure.

Dimanche 27. J'allay diner chés M. Corre avec le G! Robertson, McLean McLeod Grant, Freeman, passé la soitée chés Lady Amberst ou il y avoit un mauvais concert & beaucoup de monde ou plusieurs personnes s'enuiroit parcequ'on n'y joue pas. Revenu à 114 h.

Lundy 28. Le jeune Davisson qui passa chés moy me fit part du dessein que le Chev. Mills avoit de suspendre le Col : Caldwell de son employ de Deputé Receveur General du Canada & de l'appointer i sa place & qu'il avoit eru devoir m'avertir. Je lui dis que je ne pouvei point me mêler des aflaires du Canada & que même j'aurois souhaitté de n'avoir rien eçu de ce projet, que je lui conseillai d'etre sur ses gardes avec le chev. que je le croyais embarrassé. Il me dit que Caldwell en avoit agi fort mal avec Davisson & Lees en cherchant à leur enlever le contrat pour la fourniture des farinnes pour les Trouppes, &c. Ce contrat vant à ces Messieurs un salaire de £300 st par année outro 25 pour cent pour les achats qu'ils font, ce qui est assés considerable pr ce Pays là Mais aussi ils sont obligé de transiger toutes los affaires que leurs principaux ont dans ce Pays là.

Il me dit ensuitte qu'ils avoient fait l'acquisition du contrat pr les forges dont ils avoient donné 2000 L. St. & sattisfait les pretentions que M. Genevay avoit eu par l'association qu'il avoit fait avec Gugy. Il me dit de plus qu'ils avoient trouvé aux forges pour plus de 1000 St. de mine de fer, qui payoient la moitié de ce qu'ils en avoient donné, & qu'ils avoient vu par les livres de Gugy qui etoient entre leurs mains qu'il avoit fait mille à 1500 L. St de profit clair chaque année.

Sur l'affaire du Poste d'enbas il me dit qu'ils avoient pris Peter Stuart pour associe ou il sura 6eme du profit net sans etre obligé à aucune avance. Mais il doit enfin he was to make, and finally went with Mr. Ccore to make his deposition, &c. Generals Robertson and Cunningham direct with me.

23. Wednesday. I sent to Arnold a letter for Governor Cox, of the Bay of Chaleurs, and O'Hara, of Gaspé, recommending him and begging them they would give him all the information they could concerning the seigniory of Pabos and my lands in Bonaventure, which I wish to get rid of. Robertson told me that the Treasury was in a short time to examine the affairs of Cochrane, in relation to the money he had drawn in Canada, and that I was to be ready to answer. He told me that Gordon had said that Williams was a worthless fellow who had committed a forgery. I imprudently showed him the papers Williams had prepared. I must warn him not to take Gordon's side.

Henry Holland, who has arrived from Damerara, called and dined with me. He is a fine young man whom I might at some time attach to me.

24. Thursday. Was at the Court, which was very full. The Prince of Wales and the Duke of Cumberland came there with their whole suite, and towards the end Charles Fox came also. The King said to him: It is a fine day, and turned towards some one else. The Queen avoided him. Fox witndrew before the King left. Spent the evening at Mrs. Morrison's; lost three guineas.

25. Friday. General Budé, who arrived this morning from Cheltenham, dined with me, along with Admiral Digby, General Cunningham, Morrison, General Roy, and Lieut. Holland. Spent the evening at Lady Gidson's, where there was an immense crowd. I stayed there till half past three in the morning.

26. Saturday. Walked in the Park, where I met the Duke of Northumberland, with whom I took a walk. We saw the King and Queen with the Princesses pass. Budé and Baron Regenfeld dined with me, and we then went to pay a vi-it to Mr. Pollon, who seems to be much emaciated. I will send gensing root to him to-morrow. Home at half past nine.

27. Sunday. Went to dine at Mr. Coore's with General Robertson, McLean, McLcod, Grant and Freeman. Spent the evening at Lady Amherst's, where there was a bad concert and a crowd and several persons grumbled that there was no eard playing. Home at half-past eleven.

28. Monday. Young Davison, who called on me, informed me of the intention of Sir Thomas Mills to suspend Colonel Caldwell from his office of Deputy Receiver General of Canada and to appoint him in his place, and that he thought it his duty to give me notice of it. I told him that I could not interfere in the affairs of Canada, and that I even wished I had known nothing of the project; that I advised him to be on his own guard with Sir Thomas, as I believed him to be embarrassed. He told me that Caldwell had acted very ill towards Davison and Lees, by seeking to get out of their hands the contract for supplying flour to the troops, &: This contract was worth £300 sterling a year of salary to these gentlemen, besides  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent, for the purchases they made, which is considerable enough (or that country, but they are also obliged to transact all the business their principals have there.

He told me then that they had obtained the contract of the forges, for which they had given £2,000 sterling, and satisfied the claims which Mr. Genevay had from his partnership with Gugy. He told me further, that they had found at the forges iron ore worth upwards of £1,000 sterling, which paid half of what they had given, and that they had seen by Gugy's books, which were in their hands, that he had made from £1,000 to £1,500 sterling of clear profit every year.

On the affair of the lower posts, he said that they had taken Peter Stnart as partner, in which he will have one-sixth of the net profits, without being obliged to make any advance, but he is to take charge of all the business and even to forward etro chargé de toute la besogne et même de faire expedier toutes les Pelleteries pr Londres—par les contes que Stuart leurs a fait voir pendant enze années consecutives coux qui avoient des postes ont eu de profit clair & net apprès toutes les dépenses deduittes en delà de 2500 L. St par année, &c. N.-B. par les centes que King le marchand pelletier m'en avoit donne, je devois croire que ce profit devoit otro plus considerable. Il me dit de plus qu'il avoit une moitié dans le profit & que son trère & Lees avoient ensemble l'autre moitié, & qu'ils feroient une pension de £150 par année pendant leur Bail à M. Baby, qui leur avoit cédé sa portion. N. B. Cocy no s'accordo pas à co que Baby m'on a écrit qui dit qu'ils ne lui donnent que £50 St par année. Il me rappelle qu'en parlant à Nepean sur cet affaire il me dit que Davisson lui avoit dit qu'il donnoit £250 St par année à Baby pour sa portion ce qui me prouva qu'il ne faut pas trop se fler à ces Messe. Diné chés moy-passé la soirée au clob.

Moreredy 30. Je fus le matin chés le Constructeur de Batteaux M. Wood, & je vis celui qu'il fait pour moy, qui me parut fort bien construit, mais je crains qu'il ne soit trop pesant pour transporter sur un Chariot. Je convins de faire venir le Charon ches moy pour voir quel espèce de chariot on pouroit construire pour le transporter par terre sars risque qu'il ne se gatte. Passé ches le Prin e de Galle qui n'est pas mieux, Dinné ches le Duc de Nortumberland ou il y avoit le conte d'Arrington, [Harrington (Stanhope) ?] Lord Howard, Lord Amherst le Chevalier York, Bond, Fosset le Col : Goldsworthy & Simpeo, avec le Gl Johnstone, retiré à 9 heure pour passer au Clob Revenu chés moy à 101

J'allay avec le Capt Freeman pour acheter des billets pour la représentation de Westminster mais qu'il ne fut pas enze heure du matin nous ne pûmes plus en avoir celui qui les distribue nous dit qu'il en avoit vendu 2500 pour ce jour là, et qu'il ne lui en restoit plus & qu'ils en auroient pr distribuer 4000. Je fus de là voir la collection d'antiques de Mr dont je fus enchanté. Je vis ensuitte des Tableaux fait à l'eguille qui sont fort bien travaillé passé ches le Prince de Galles qui se trouve micux, revenu ches moy à 2 heures & diné à 11. Je fus ches le Chevr Pollon qui me parut micux & j'allay ensuitte ches Madame Trappard ou il y avoit assés de monde. Joué et gagné un robur-domy guinéo-rovenu à 111 houre.

Vendredy, 10 juin. Le matin à St. Mary Axe, de la ches Tessier & ensuitte ches Corre a qui j'ay donné un b $\,$ ll de £ 00 st. sur mes Banquiers à conte des deponses pr $\,$ le proces de  $\,$ O. Le Gl Maclean dinna ches moy & nous fumes ensuitte ches M. L'advocat Erskine ou nous en trouvames un autre avec M. Grant & M. Corre pour consulter sur mes affaires, apprès un quart d'heure de conversation ou il n'y avoit pas un mot de bon sens ils s'en allèrent ailleurs. Je laissay mos commissions avec M. Je ramensy to Chr ches lui & fis visitte à Madame & Mr Me Lean j'y trouvay le conte de Lusy. | Earl Dalhousie | tout se passa fort poliment & je retournay ches moy à 81. Los jours de la semaine, dans les entrées qui précèdent, ne s'accordent pas avec les jours du mois de l'antée 1787, pas plus que ceux des entrées qui suivent; et pourtant l'ant ée est parfaitement marquée 1787. all the furs to London. By the accounts which Stuart showed them for eleven consecutive years, those who held the posts had a clear and not profit, after deducting all expenses, of £2,500 storling a year. N.B. By the accounts shown me by King, the merchant furrier, I believe that this profit must be greater. He told me, in addition, that he had one half of the profit, and that his brother and Loes had together the other half and that they paid an annual pension of £150 a year during their lease to Mr. Baby, who had given up his share. N.B. This does not agree with what Baby wrote me, saying they were only to give £50 a year.

It reminds me that in speaking to Nepean on this business, he said that Davison had told him that he was giving £250 sterling a year to Baby for his share, which proves that these gentlemen are not to be too far trusted. Dined at home, spent the evening at the Club.

29. Tuesday. Paid a few visits in the morning. Dined with Lady Holderness and spent the evening at the Club.

30. Wednesday. Went in the morning to Mr. Wood, the boat builder, and saw one he is making for me, which seems well built, but I am afraid it may be too heavy to transport in a waggon. I arranged to send the cartwright to my house, to see what kind of waggon could be built to transport it by land without risk of injury. Spent the evening with the Prince of Wales who is no better. Dined with the Duke of Northumberland, where were the Earl of Arrington [Harrington? (Stanhope),] Lord Howard, Lord Amherst, Sir Joseph York, Bond, Fawcett, Colonels Goldsworthy and Simcoe, with General Johnstone. Left at nine to call at the Club. Home at half past ten.

31. Thursday. Went with Captain Freeman to purchase tickets for the representation at Westminster, but although it was not eleven in the morning we could get none. The man distributing them told us he had sold 2,500 for that day, that he had none left, and that there would be 4,000 distributed. Then went to see Mr. [Town-ley's?] collection of antiquities, with which I was delighted. I then saw some pictures in needlework which are very well done. Called on the Prince of Wales, who is better. Home at two and dined at half past four. Went to Mr. Pollon's who se need better, and then to Mrs. Trappard's, where were enough of people. Played and won a rubber—half a guinea—Home at half past 11.

June.

1. June. Friday In the morning at St. Mary Axe with Tessier and then at Coore's, to whom I gave a cheque for £100 on my bankers on account of the expenses for the suit of Charles Hay. I called on the waggon maker, who promised to be at my house on Wednesday next to meet the beat builder to devise a carriage suitable for transporting a boat in Switzerland.

General McLean dined with me and we then went to Mr. Erskine, the advocate, where we found another with Mr. Grant and Mr. Coore to consult on my affairs. After quarter of an hour's conversation, in which there was not a word of good sense, they went elsewhere. I left my commission with Mr. Coore and the proclamations of the Count de Rochambeau, LaFayette, &c., the Count d'Estaing and other papers, in order that he might be ready to answer the questions put to him in court. I took the Chovalier [?] to his own house, and paid a visit to Mr. and Mrs. McLean, I found there the Count de Lusy [Earl of Dalhousie?]. Everything passed politely and I returned home at half past eight.

(The days of the week in the above entries do not agree with the days of the month of the year 1787 nor do those apparently of the following entries but the year is plainly given as 1787.)

27. May. Tuesday. Went with Mr. Coore to St. Alban's tween to meet Christie and Robertson, who had each a conversation with him on the subject of the agents.

d'avis qu'il faut leurs intenter un procès directement sans qu'il soit necessaire d'y faire intervenir Lord Amherst, et il me paroit qu'il a raison. Il y avoit dans une que quelques uns des sujets du Roy possèdent en Amérique, Il etoit composé de l'archeveque de Londres, Lord Amherst, le Gl Robertson, Christie, Reed, James de Lancy, un M. Galloway, Gambell, du Col. Jessop, et quelques autres personnes. On voulut absolument que mon nom fut intéré dans le mémoire.

Dinné au Clob qui etoit nombre et où tout se passa en fort bon ordre [la dépense] ne fut que 15 sh. ce que je n'avais jamais vu auparavant, revenu chés moy examiné les paperasses.

Mercredy 28,
Jercgis une lettre de M. George Harding concernant les appels qui pourroient venir de Quebec, & je pris cette occasion de le retenir pour moi au cas qu'il fut nécessaire (& apprès avoir consulté M. Corre).

Davison qui me fit visitte me dit qu'il s'aperçoit qu'on etoit pas fort content de Lord D. Dinné & passé la scirée chés mov.

Jeudy 29.
Promené à cheval & fait quelques visittes chés Budé, le Baron Alvensleben ou je trouvay Pauly & Rainsfort, diné et passé la soirée chés moy.

Vendredy 30:

Passé la soirée chés moy.

Promené au Parck avec Lord Amherst à qui je dis que Madame Prevost s'impatientoit de voir que l'affaire que son Mary avoit avec les agents au sujet de l'Habillement ne finissait point. Il ne me répondit rien et entama immédiatement un autre discours. Il y a quelque chose dans sa conduitte avec les agents qui me paroît inconcevable.

Christi & le Col. Kemble furent chés moy au sujet des contes du 2e Batt. Ils doivent s'assembler Lundy chés les agents & je dois faire en sorte que le Cap. Shaw

J'ay pris congé de Madame Dunn, ou j'ai trouvé le jeune Lanaudière. Il me dit que son frère ainé étoit encorre à Paris quo7 qu'il eut promis de passer avec Dunn en Canada. M. Dunn m'apporta la copie de la réponse qu'il avoit faitte aux remarques des controlleurs des Contes, & me dit que si on faisait quelqu'autres questions le Twiss pourroit les éclaireir L'admirt. Barrington, Pringle, le Baron, Badé & Cullon dinèrent chés moy, passéla soirée chés moy.

Dimanche, le 1e juin 87.

J'ay reçu une lettre fort polie de M. George Harding, qui accepte mon General Retainer & me dit qu'il faut que ça se fasse par le moyen de mon Procureur. J'ay corit un billet à Mad. Corre en conséquence. Il m'en coutera 5½ guinées.

Le Lt Colonel Cambel & le Capt Show [Shiw] ont passé chés moy prime dire qu'ils ont été chés les agents avec le Col. Christie priexaminer les prétentions envers le feu General Prevost, & nous sommes convenus qu'il convenoit de les remettre à la dessision de quelques arbitres J'ay peu m'appercevoir que le General Kemble ni Show ne sont pas au fet de la chose, & que Ogilvie & Christie s'entendent parfaittement & que Prevost sera la duppe.

J'ay fait quelque visittes. Lord Amherst est venu chés moy, & j'ay pris occasion de lui parler au sujet des prétentions de Prevost pr l'habillemt qui a été perdu. Je lui ai dit tout uniment que cette affaire paraissoit injuste à toutes les personnes qui en entendoient parler que les agents se conduisoient fort mal & ne méritoient pas sa protection, que si l'affaire me regardoient je demanderois de changer d'agent, que les instructions du roy étoient que nous jouissiens de tous les revenus du Batt. & que les agents devoient nous traitter comme les agents de tout autre Regimt qu'ils n'en agissoient pas dans le cas comme d'honetes gens. Il me parut surpris & me dit qu'ils aveient tort. Je lui repondis que je re voyois pas d'autre moyen de finir la

He is of opinion that a suit should be entered directly without the necessity of making Lord Amherst intervene, and it seems to me that he is right. There was in another room a committee to prepare a petition concerning lands in America belonging to the King's subjects. It was composed of the Archbishop of London, Lord Amborst, General Robertson, Christie, Reed, James de Lancy, a Mr. Galloway, Gamble, Colonel Jessup and some other persons. There was a positive wish that my name should be inserted in the memorial.

Dined at the club, which was well attended and everything passed off well; [the cost was only fifteen shillings, which I never saw before. Returned home and examined old papers.

28. Wednesday. Received a letter from Mr. George Harding concerning the appeals which might come from Quebec, and I took that opportunity of retaining him in my case, should it be necessary (and after having consulted Mr. Coore)

Davison who paid me a visit told me that he noticed people were not very well satisfied with Lord D. [Dorchester.] Dined and spent the evening at home.

- 29. Thursday. R. de and paid a few visits to Budé, Baron Alvensieben, where I found Pauly [Paoli] and Rainsford. Dined and spent the evening at home.
  - 30. Friday. Spent the evening at home.
- 31. Saturday. Walked in the park with Lord Amherst, to whom I said that Mrs. Prevost was impatient that the business of her husband with the agents respecting the clothing was not settled. He answered nothing and began immediately on another subject. There is something inconceivable to me in his conduct with the Christie and Colonel Kemblo were with me respecting the accounts of the second battalion. They are to meet on Monday at the agents and I am to arrange that Captain Shaw shall be there.

I took leave of Mrs. Dunn, and found young Lanaudière there. He said his elder brother was still in Paris, although he had promised to go with Dunn to Canada. Mr. Dann brought me a copy of the answer he had made to the remarks of the comptrollers of accounts, and said that if they put any other question Captain Twiss could enlighten them.

Admiral Barrington, Pringle, the Baron Budé and Cullen dined with me. Spent the evening at home

1st June 1787, Sunday. Received a very polite letter from Mr. George Harding accepting my general retainer and saying that this should be done through my attorney. Wrote a note to Mrs. Coore in consequence. It will cost me five guineus and a half.

2. Monday. Lieutenant Colonel Cambel and Captain Shaw called to tell me that they were at the agents with Colonel Christic to examine the claims against the late General Prevost and we agreed that it would be proper to submit them to the decision of arbitrators. I could see that General Cambel and Shaw are not perfectly acqueinted with the matter, which Ogilvie and Christie fully understand and that Prevost will be the victim.

Paid a few visits. Lord Amherst called, and I took the opportunity of speaking to him respecting Prevest's claims for the clothing that had been lost. I told him plainly that this affair appeared unjust to all who had heard it spoken of, that the agents were behaving very badly and did not deserve his protection, that if the affair concerned me I would demand a change of agents, that the King's instructions were that we should enjoy all the revenues of the battalion and that the agents should treat us like the agents of every other regiment, that they did not act in this case like honest men. He seemed surprised and told me they were wrong. I answered that I saw no other means of ending the affair than to ask for a board of chose que de demander un bord d'officiers generaux, que Mad. Prevost comme Tutrice ne pourroit pas sacrifier le Bien de ses enfans; que d'ailleurs Prévost ayant été aussi mal récomponsé de ses services ses heritiers avoint droit au moins de demander justice, enfin je lui parlay fort franchement. Il me paroit que mes raisons faisoient impression sur lui, nous verrons ce qu'il fera.

Diné chés l'Admiral Digby, sa femme qui étoit une Demoiselle Ellice n'est pas jolie mais est aimable & fort unie. Le Col. Drammond autrefois aide de camp du chr Clinton étoit de la partie & nous eumes une longue conversation sur les evenemens de la dernière guerre. Il trouve l'euvrage du Col. Tarleton très mal ce n'est qu'une compilation de Gazette, & il le blame beaucoup d'avoir exposé des lettres ou billets particulier que Lord Conwallis lui avoit écrit en confidence, &c.

Il me dit la conversation qu'il avoit eue avec le Roy au sujet de la Guerre d'Amérique lorsqu'il revint dans ce pays. Il croyoit que les habitants des derrièrs de la Virginia qui la plupart ctoient Ecossois etoient les seuls qui lui fussent attaché. Il blamoit la conduitte de la guerre me dit qu'il étoit brouillé avec Clinton mais cependant quand ils se rencontrent ils se saluoient.

Mesers Stopfort, le Cap: Mr Leg & doux autres Marins étoient du diner.

J'allay de la au concert du Baron qui étoit fort nombre. L'Eveque d'Oxford me presenta à Madame & Lady Thompson me demanda depuis quant j'étois dans ce Pays. Il faut que je lui fasse visitte.

Le jeune D'Airolles me paroit bien étourdie. revenu à 10 h. 1.

Mardy 3,

Le Calt Shaw a diné chés moy & me dit qu'il avoit parlé au Gl Robertson concernant les Contes de Prevost avec Christie, et qu'il se proposoit de lui en donner un détail par écrit. C'est un parleur éternel. Il me fit plusieurs details sur la conduitte que le Chevalier Archibald Cambell auroit tenue vis à vis de Prevost dans l'expedition de la Georgie, qui font peu d'honneur à Cambell—mais ayant plus d'amis et d'activité que Prevost il s'est fait passer pour un grand homme & Prevost a été oublié.

Cambella mal debutté en arrivant aux Indes. Il a employé une dizaine de ses compatriottes d'abord en arrivant contre les resollutions de la Compagnie & les ordres qu'il avoit reçu. C'est un officier qui a des Tallents mais encorre plus d'orgueil & de presomption. Passé la soirée chés Madame Morisson avec le Baron Alvensleben.

Le pauvre General Gage mourut hier après avoir langui longtemes. Le chev. Wuilliam Green ne me paroit pas content d'etre en chef dans le Génie. Il auroit préféré de retourner à Gibraltar, où il avoit le double de paye qu'il a aujourd'huy. Il trouve le Duc minuticux & difficille à contenter.

Mercredy 4e

Je fus au levée qui a été nombreu. Le Roy me demanda où j'irois le Printemps je lui dis que j'irois en Suisse dans le millien de May où de juin, (sic) que j'yrois peuthetre de la en Italie où j'avois été l'an 49. Il me dit quosi j'allois jusques à Naples je devais prendre garde de n'en pas rapporter la Maladie. Je lui dis que l'ayant échappé dans ma jeunesse je courus peu de danger à present, &c.

Fait visitte à Madame & L'admiral Digby, au Gl Trayor & Madame & Madle Leland, & Sir Charles Thompson, & à Madame Christie où jo trouvay le Col: qui me parla de son beaufils le Capt Piquet qui se proposa de retourner en Canada pres'y établir avec sa famille. J'allay le soir chés le Gl Carpenter & le Gl Robertson que je ne trouvay pas.

Mercredy, 5. [Joudi]

J'eus la visitte de Sr James Napier, & de l'Eveque d'Oxfort qui me parait fort sosiable & simable home. J'allay à la Cour qui ne fut pas fort nombreuse. La Rone me parla longtemps & avec beaucoup de bonté. Elle Loua beaucoup les deux demoiselles Suisses qu'elle avoit eu auprès des Princesses.

Je tronvay le chev. Yong qui me dit qu'il y avoit longtemps que nous ne neus etions rencontrés. Il m'apprit la destination des regimts de dragons. Je lui dis que general officers; that Mrs. Prevost as tutrix could not sacrifice the property of herchildren, that, bosides, Prevost, being so ill rewarded for his services, his heirs had at least the right to ask for justice; in fact I spoke to him very freely. It seemed to me that my reasons made an impression on him. We will see what he will do.

me that my reasons made an impression on him. We will see what he will do.

Dined with Admiral Digby. His wife, who was a Miss Ellice, is not pretty but is amiable and even tempered. Colonel Drummond, formerly aide-de-camp to Sir Henry Clinton, was of the party and we had a long conversation on the events of the last war. He thought Color el Tarleton's work very ill-written; it is only a newspaper compilation, and he blames him very much for publishing private letters and notes which Lord Cornwallis wrote him in confidence, &c.

He told me the conversation he had with the King respecting the American war, when he returned to this country. He believed that the inhabitants of the back settlements of Virginia, who were mostly Scotchmen, were the only ones attached to him. He blamed the conduct of the war, told me he was at variance with Clinton but that they always bowed to each other when they met.

Mesars. Stopford, Captain were of the party.

Mr. Legg, and two other naval men

From there I went to the Baron's concert, which was very full. The Bishop of Oxford presented me to Mrs.

, and Lady Thompson asked me how long I had been in this country. I must pay her a visit.

Young Dayrolles seemed very awkward. Home at half past ten.

3. Tuesday. Captain Shaw dined with me and told me that he had spoken to General Robertson about Prevost's accounts with Christie, and proposed to him to give a written detail of them. He is an eternal talker. He gave me several details of the conduct of Sir Archibald Campbell towards Prevost in the expedition to Georgia, which did Campbell little honour, but that having more friends and activity than Prevost, he rassed for a great man and Prevost has been forgotton.

Campbell has made a bad beginning on his arrival in India. He employed half a score of his countrymen on his first arrival, against the resolutions of the company and the orders he had received. He is an officer of talent, but with even more pride and presumption. Spent the evening at Mrs. Morrison's with the Baron Alvensleben.

Poor General Gage died yesterday after having lingered for a long time. Sir William Green does not appear satisfied to be at the head of the engineers. He would have preferred to return to Gibraltar, where he had double the pay he has now. He finds the Duke [of Richmond] particular in trifles and difficult to satisfy.

4. Wednesday. Was at the levée, which was numerously attended; the King asked me where I was going in spring. I told him that I would go to Switzerland by the middle of May or June (sic); that I might perhaps go to Italy where I had been in '49. He told me that should I go to Naples I must take care not to bring back the plague. I told him that having escaped in my youth, I ran little risk now, &c.

Visited Mrs. and Admiral Digby, General Tryon and Mrs. and Miss Leland, Sir Charles Thompson and Mrs. Christie, where I found Colonel who spoke to me of his son-in-law, Captain Piquet, who proposed to return to Canada to settle there with his family. Went in the evening to General Carpenter's and General Robertson's, whom I did not find in.

5. Wednesday Thursday. Had a visit from Sir James Napier, and the Bishop of Oxford, who seems a very sociable and amiable man. Went to the court, which was not very well attended. The Queon spoke to me for a long time and with much kindness. Sho spoke in high terms of the two Swiss young ladies, whom she had with the Princesses.

I found Sir George Yonge, who said it had been a long time since we had met. He informed me of the destination of the regiments of dragoons. I told him le vieux gen! Robertson s'était toujours flatté de recevoir que que chose seroit bien faché. It ne me parut pas y faire beaucoup d'attention.

Lady Holdernesse m'invita pour aller donner chès elle Lundy prochain. Je me suis longtemps entretonu avec plusieurs Porsonnes parricullierem' avec Mas Tryon qui me parla de la maladie de son frère le Gerl qu'elle ne croit pas dangereuse. Elle me fit ensuitte l'histoire des amours du Gerl Robertson qu'elle blâme et trouve que Madame avait de justes raisons de trouver sa conduitte fort extraordinaire de voir qu'il suivait Mne partout comme un joune homme & passoit des heures entières sous sa fenêtre pour avoir le plaisir de la voir.

Le G' Christie est party aujourd'huy. Il y avoit Madame de Hall qui etoit une Demoiselle Hollandaise, alliée à la famille de Vanderduin, mais qui ne vit pas avec son mary, qui lui aloue 8 ou 900 pièces par année avec lesquelles elle vit fort à son aise. Elle n'est plus jeune ny jolie mais elle est aimable, & a eu le bonheur d'etre foit bien introduitte icy, je suppose par Lady Holdernesse & Sir Joseph York.

Mardy 10. Le L' DéChambau du 44 arriva de Quebec & m'apporta des lettres datées du 14 février du Col. Hoppe, Maban & Mathews, qui me donnent une idée de la confusion qui tègne en Canada. Il paroit que Hopp s'est très bien conduit peuthetre par l'influence que Maban a obtenu sur lui le chef de justice s'est demasqué comme un set, &  $\mathbf{L}^{a}$  Dr observe un silonce si profond que les meilleurs amis du gouvernement ne savent qu'en penser & que sachant qu'il avoit demandé Smith pour son chef de justice croyent que tout ce que celui-cy fait est par ordre du gouvernement. Cependant tous les Caradiens voyant l'acte de Quebec en danger se sont réunis à M. Hope, & aux viais amis du Gouvernem ce qui a amporté la balance. Le Col. Clows, le D. Browne & Déchambault ont diré chès moy, celui cy nous a fait un récit assés naturel de tout ce qui s'etoit passé en Canada & surtout du silence obstiné de La Dorchester, & le Col. Clows m'a lut une partie d'une lettre de Mr Lingen [Langan] le secrétaire de Sir John Johnson qui lui donne beaucoup d'eloge sur la conduitte qu'il a tenu dans le comitte & le conseil legislatif ou il etoit dans l'oposition, c'est a dire pour rappeller l'acte de Quebec.

Il y a un certain Hogdon [Ogden] homme de Loyx cy devant du Gersé, grand rebelle et fort amy de Smith qui lui a obtenu de l'employ en Canada. Il s'est très mal conduit depuis son arrivée dans ce psys là et s'est declaré le champion du juge Smith. J'espère 1" le bien de cette Province qu'ils n'y resteront pas longtemps. Finlay, Greene, Holland, Caldwell, Collins & Smith etoient dans l'oposition.

Je rencontray Lord Sydney qui descendoit de son office. Je lui fis part des Lettres que j'avois reçu de Quebec. Il me dit qu'il n'avoit jamais eu bonne opinion de Smith mais que Ld Dorchoster l'avoit demandé & s'etoit rendu responsable pr sa conduitte. Il me dit de plus que tout le monde excepté Mazères et une personne qui n'etoit plus dans le pays parloient fort bien de Maben, que L^d Dorchester quoy qu'il n'en parlasse pas avec autant d'éloge que moy en disant du bien quoy qu'il ne lui croyé pas beaucoun de savoir.

Je rencontray Lord Harrington dans le Parck avec lequel je me promenay longtemps. Il me demanda si je voullois me reposer un moment chés lui, je l'accompagnay, il me présenta à Mi Lady avec laquelle je causay une demi-heure. En me retirant my Lord me demanda si je n'étois pas engagé de dinner chés lui & de revenir à cinq heure. Je m'excusay. J'uy eté bien aise de faire sa conoissance. Dechambault et les Davissons ont diré chés moy. Davisson l'ainé me parut un peu serieux, sans doute à cause de son commerce.

Jendy 12.

J'allay déj uner chés Lord Sydney cù je trouvay son fils. Je leurs fit lire la lettre du General Hope. My Lord me dit qu'il n'avoit jamais cu bonne opinion du chef de justice mais que je pourois etre persuadé qu'il ne pouvoit faire aucun tort à Hope, qu'il ne conoissoit personne de qui le Roy eût meilleure opignon. Je lui dis combien il etoit heureux qu'il commandat la Province. Il en convint & peu apprès il entama d'autres discours surtout sur le Prince Ferdinand le Duc regnant d'aujour-lire la on du tort à ui dis pprès ujourthat old General Robertson was always flattering himself with receiving something and would be annoyed. He did not seem to pay much attention.

Lady Holderness invited me to dine with her on Monday next. I entertained myself for a long time with several persons, with Mrs. Tyon, who spoke to me about the illness of her brother, the General, which she did not believe to be dangerous. She then gave me the history of General Robertson's love sffairs, whom she blames, and thinks that his wife had just reason to consider his conduct extraordinary, seeing that he followed Miss everywhere like a young man, and spent whole hours under her window to have the pleasure of seeing her.

General Christie set out to day. There was a Mrs. Hall, who was a young Dutch lady, connected with the Vanderduin family, but does not live with her husband, who allows her £-90 or £900 ( $pi\hat{e}ces$ ) a year, on which she lives comfortably. She is no longer young or pretty, but is amiable, and has had the good fortune to be well introduced here, I suppose by Lady Holderness and Sir Joseph York.

10. Tuesday. Lieutenant De Chambau (Deschambault) of the 41th, arrived from Quebee and brought me letters dated the 14th February, from Colonel Hope. Mabane and Mathews, which give me an idea of the confusion reigning in Canada. Obtained over him; the Chief Justice is unmasked as a fool, and Lord Dr. [Dorchester] observes a silence so profound that the best friends of Government do not know what to think and that knowing he had asked for Smith as his Chief Justice believe that all the latter does is by order of Government. However, all the Canadians seeding the Quebee Act in danger, have united on Mr. Hope and the true friends of Government, which has restored the balance. Colonel Clewes, Dr. Brown and Deschambault dined with me; the latter gave a natural enough recital of all that had passed in Canada, and especially of the obstinate silence of Lord Dorchester. Colonel Clewes read me a part of a letter from Mr. Lingen [Langan?], Sir John Johnson's Legislative Council, where he was in opposition, that is for the repeal of the Quebee

There is a certain Hogdon [Ogden?], a lawyer, formerly of Jersey (New Jersey), a great robel and very much the friend of Smith, who has obtained for him an office in Canada. He has behaved badly since his arrival in that country and has will not remain there long. Finlay, Green, Holland, Caldwell, Collins and Smith were in opposition.

11. Wednesday. Met Lord Sydney who was coming from his office. I acquainted him with the contents of the letters I had received from Quebec. He said he had never a good opinion of Smith, but that Lord Dorchester had asked for him and had made himself responsible for his conduct. He told me further, that every one, except Mascres and a person who was no longer in the country, spoke well of Mabane; that Lord Dorchester, although he did not speak so highly of him as 1, spoke well of him,

I mot Lord Harrington in the park, with whom I walked for a long time. He asked me to come in to rest in his house. I accompanied him, and he introduced me to Her Ladyship, with whom I chatted for half an hour. In leaving His Lordship cused myself. I am happy to have made his acquaintance. Deschambault and the Davisons dined with me. The elder Davison seemed a little serious, no doubt on account of his business.

12. Thursday. Went to breakfast with Lord Sydney, with whom I found his son. I made them read General Hope's letter. His Lordship told me that he had never had a good opinion of the Chief Justice, but that I might be persuaded he could do Hope no harm; that he knew no one of whom the King hal a better opinion. I said how fortunate it was that he commanded the province. He agreed and shortly after began on other topics, especially on Prince Ferdinand, the present reigning d'huy, Lord George Germain & je compris qu'il tenoît la pluspart de ses Idées à l'égard du Prince Fordinant de general Boid qui avoit été son aide-de-camp.

J'ecrivis au Gl Hope & remis ma lettre chés Davisson qui devoit la mettre sous son couvert. Donné à M. Emery 2 guinées pour la société des Suisses & une guinée r les pauvres.

Vendredy 13e. Jour de la Bataille de Mohitz [Molwitz] l'an 1741. Fait visitte au Baron Alvensleben qui m'a dit plusieurs ancedotes du vieux règne. Visitté l'Eveque d'Oxfort qui est fort content de l'esprit des journaux & des papiers que je lui ay pretté. Dinné & passé la soirée chés moy.

Samedy 14e. Rencontré Lord Amherst au Parck. Il croit que Lord Roden tache de Gagner le Duc de Nortom & que celui cy l'évitte & il croit que le Roi a été faché que le Duc de York aye fait l'acquisitance dans le Yorkshire, & il suppose que le Roi ne souhaitte cus que le Duc de York vient en Angleterre, craint qu'il ne se débauche. Il me dit que le Chevallier York étoit fort faché qu'on lui eut donné un Regiment sur l'etablissemet d'Irlande, qu'il auroit préféré de garder le 5e Dragon qui portoit le vieux uniforme au lieu qu'avjourd'huy il faudroit qu'avec l'uniforme bleu qu'on avoit adopté, il montrat le col. Le Duc de Northomberland dit sur ce svjet qu'il ne paroitroit pas mieux avec un bonet de Grenadier. Chés moy où j'ay passé la soirée.

Dimanche 15e.

Dechambault, le Gi McLean le D. Barr dinerent chés moy. Dechambault nous amusat beaucoup par le récit de ce qui s'étoit passé à Québec. Il me dit que Cockran & le Docteur Konedy l'avoient accosté et s'étoient beaucoup informé si Maban existoit encorre. Ils sont toujours aussi invétérés contre lui.

Lundy 15e Je menay Dechambault chés Mad. Wone à Chelsea que nous ne trouvames pas non plus que le G1 Robertson mais nous trouvames le G1 Rainsfort qui le recut fort bien et lui promit qu'il seroit le premier à achetter dans son Regimt

Je rencontray Lord Amerst au Parc et peu apprès le chevr Yorck qui me parut un peu haut, Dîné et passé la soirée chés moy.

Mardy 17e

Je fus à la citté. M. Corre me dit que mon procès se jugerait avant la fin du mois, et qu'il avoit bonne espérance.

Reçu une lettre de mon neveux datée du 4 de Juin.

Dîné au Clob Sr Edmund Afflick président. Nous étions 24 et tous de bon humeur resté jusques à 10 heure, Mercredy 18, Je fus au Levé arec Dechambault, nous dinames chés Lord Sydney avec Lord & Lady Chattan & le cap : d'Overgne. Les dames me parurent de fort bon humeur.

Jeudy, 19. Je conduisit Dechambault à la Cour qui fut fort nombreuse & dura jusqu'à près de 5 heures, dîné chés moy avec Dechambault qui m'a dit qu'il avoit écrit une longue lettre à sa mère qui lui ferait beaucoup de plaisir. Il s'en fut à la comédio.

Vendredy, 20. J'allay à la Trésorerie où M. Rose me demanda si M. Grant avait reçu le sallaire du cheve Mills. No pouvant pas m'en rapeller il me fit voir la copie d'une lettre que j'avais écritte à David Grant sur ce sujet, cù je lui disais que je ne voullois pas signer un warrant proette paye &c. Je fus ensuitte chés M. Winglesworth qui me fit voir la conte par laquelle il avait été payé jusqu'au 24 Octobre 1783, & je le priay d'en donner un certificat au des de la lettre, ce qu'il fit de bonne giace. Je le portay sur le chan à M. Rose qui parut fort surpris & me demanda plusieurs fois s'il avait été payé dès lors. Je lui dis que je ne pourray pas le savoir puisque j'avois quitté le Canada peu apprès, mais que les contes de la Province devoient avoir été envoyé des lors, & qu'il acra facille d'y voir si on avait payé quelque chose. Duke, Lord George Germaine, and I understood that he held most of his ideas of Prince Ferdinand from General Boyd, who had been his aide-de-camp.

Wrote to General Hope and sent my letter to Davison, who was to put it under his cover. Gave Mr. Emery two guineas for the Swiss Society and a guinea for the poor.

- 13. Friday. Day of the battle of Mohitz (Molwitz) in the year 174!. Paid a visit to the Baron Alvensleben, who gave me several anecdotes of the old reign. Visited the Bishop of Oxford, who is much pleased with the spirit of the journals and papers I lent him. Dined and spent the evening at home.
- 14. Saturday. Met Lord Amherst in the park. He believes that Lord Roden is trying to gain over the Duke of Northumberland, who avoids him and he believes that the King is annoyed that the Duke of York should have become acquainted in Yorkshire, and he supposes that the King does not wish the Duke of York to come to England for fear he should be led astray. He said that Sr Joseph York was angry he had been given a regiment on the Irish establishment, when he would have preferred to keep the 5th Dragoons, which were the old uniform, whereas now it would be necessary with the blue uniform that had been adopted to show the neek. The Duke of Northumberland on this subject said that it would look better with the Grenadier's bonnet. At home, where I spent the evening.
- 15. Sunday. Deschambault, General McLean and Dr. Barr dined with me. Deschambault amused us a good deal with an account of what was taking place in Queboo. He said that Cochrane and Dr. Kennedy had accosted him and had made particular enquiries if Mabane still existed. They are as inveterate as ever against him.
- 15 [16]. Monday. Took Deschambault to Mrs. Wone's (?) at Chelsea, whom we did not find in, nor General Robertson, but we found General Rainsforth, who received him very well and promised he would be the first to purchase in his regiment.

Met Lord Amherst in the park and shortly after Sir Joseph York, who seemed rather stiff.

Dined and spent the evening at home.

17. Tuesday. Went to the city. Mr. Coore told me that my suit would be decided before the end of the month and that he had good hopes.

Received a letter from my nephew, dated the 4th, from Turin.

Dined at the club, Sir Edmund Affleck presiding. We were 24 and all in good humour; remained till 10 o'clock.

- 18. Wednesday. Went to the levée with Deschambault. We dined at Lord Sydney's, with Lord and Lady Chatham, and Captain d'Overgne [d'Auvergne]. The ladies seemed to be in very good humour.
- 19. Thursday. Took Deschambault to the court which was very full and lasted till nearly five o'clock. Dined at home with Deschambault, who told me he had written a long letter to his mother, which would give her much pleasure. He went off to the play.
- 20. Friday. Went to the Treasury, where Mr. Rose asked if Mr. Grant had received Sir Thomas Mills' salary. Not being able to remember, he showed me the copy of a letter I had written to David Grant on this subject, in which I told him I would not sign a letter for this pay, &c. I then went to Mr. Wigglesworth, who showed me the account, by which it had been paid to the 24th of October, 1783, and I asked him to give a certificate of this on the back of the letter, which he did with a good grace. I immediately carried it to Mr. Rose, who seemed much surprised and asked me several times if he had been paid from that time. I told him that I had no knowledge of that, since I had left Canada shortly after that, but that the accounts of the Province ought to have been sent from that time and it would be easy to see in these 6b—12 dit & me répota plusieurs fois qu'on ne pouvoit pas trouver ces contes dans aucun endroit n'y auenn de ceux que j'avois envoyé pendant mon séjour en Canada, ce qui me surprit beaucoup & me fit voir combien on devoit être soigneux des Papiers lorsqu'on est employé par le public. Mais j'appris que c'est une méthode qu'ils ont à la Trésorerie afin de s'évitter la pene de chercher et examiner les, & il faut être fort soigneux de ne point leur en donner, sans prendre de reçus parce qu'il est comme certain qu'il ne les rendront jamais.

M. Rose amy de Grant & Mills paroisse soubsitter de payer à ce dernier tout le sallaire de son employ, pendant son absance, cecy me fit faire beaucoup de réflection

Je disois a Winglesworth que les vouchers p la paye de Hutchesson étoient en partie une gratification que je lui faisois pour l'exactitude que l'exigeois de lui &c. Il me dit que je devois le dire lorsqu'on demanda des colaircissements sur les contes. Il se plaignit que Bally Bayard etoit si pressant qu'il devenoit incomodent.

Dire ches M. Ross avec Lord Amherst, Gl Brackley, Robertson, le Col. Kemball [Kemble] & le Cole Robertson & Ogilvy, revenu ches moy.

Madame fairchild me parla sur la conduitte de mes Domesti ques, &c.

Samedy, 21.

Je fus au Hyde Parck voir exercer la Cavallerie qui fit fort bien. Lord Amherst commandoit & le Due de No-thumberland etoit toujours à sa gauche, &c. &c.

Le General Koningham & le Major Gunn ont diné chés moy. Le Cape F. toujours positif & passé la soirée chés moy.

Dimanche, 22.

Le Chevalier Mills vint chés moy et je lui fis voir la lettre que j'ecrivis à Wuilliam Grant son député lorsque je le suspendi de son office & celle que j'ecrivis à son neveux David Grant qui voulloit recevoir le sallaire de son oncle, après son départ je lui dis que je voullois une copie de sa lettre à M. Rose. Il me pria beaucoup de lui montrer la lettre que je voullois lui ecrire avant que de l'envoyer & que si je voullois je la lui remettrai moy même. Il souhaittoit d'être présent. Il prevariest beau oup sur les contes qui avoient été envoyés du Canada à la fin. Il me dit que Caldwell avoit tiré la moitié des appointements depuis mon départ, c'est à dire £250 par année, enfin j'ay [vu] qu'il est dans quelque difficulté & qu'il souhaitte de pouvoir tiré quelqu'argent de la Tresorerie. En cherchant quelques éclaircissements parmy mes papiers sur cette affaire j'en ay trouvé plusieurs qui peuvent être utile au cas qu'on veuilla reche cher les affaires des Grant & surtout les duplicats de mes derniers dépêches à la Tresorrerie & aux Ministres avec les Incluses sur cette Fait quelques visittes en blanc. Le General Robertson & Maclean ont diné chés moy avec Davisson, Dechambault et le Col. Clows, qui se sont retirés à 81 heures, resté chés moy.

Lundy 23.

Promené à pied & fait quelques visittes. Dechambault à diné chés moy ou j'ay passé la soirée.

Mardy, 24.

Fait visitte à M. & Mad. Carpenter, M. le G! Fosset & l'eveque d'Oxford. Diné chés le Baron Alvensieben avec le Chevalier George Raullay, sa femme & ses doux deux autres dames, Lord le Capt Pauly & Gantell, passa la soirée, et revenu à 10 heures du soir.

Le Chevalier Mills vint déjeuner chés moy. Je lui fit voir le billet que j'écrivis à M. Rose en lui envoyant les copies des Lettres que j'écrivis à M. Grant lorsque je le suspendi, avec celle que j'écrivis à David Grant son neveux en Nove 81 peu de jours avant mon départ de Québec. Mills vouloit fort remettre les lettres lui-même, mais je lui dis que j'avois a parler à M. Rose sur d'autres choses. Il me pria fort de ne lui rien dire d'autre que de ce qu'il y avoit dans mon billet. Il m'assuroit en même temps et positivement que Grant n'avoit jamais reçu son sallaire. Je fus if anything had been paid. He told me, and repeated it several times, that these accounts could nowhere be found, nor any of those which I had sent during my stay in Canada, which surprised me greatly and showed me how careful we ought to be when employed by the public, but I learned that it is a method they have at the Treasury to get rid of the trouble of seeking and examining them and great care must be taken not to give them without taking a receipt, since it is almost certain they will never turn up.

Mr. Rose, a friend of Grant and Mills, appears desirous to pay the latter the whole salary of his office, during his absence, which produced in me much serious reflection on the conduct of these gentlemen.

I told Wigglesworth that the vouchers for Hutcheson's pay were partly for a gratuity which I made him for the exactitude I required from him, &c. He said I should say so when information is asked respecting the accounts. He complained that Billy Bayard was so pressing that he became a bore.

Dined at Mr. Ross's with Lord Amherst, General Buckly, Robertson, Colonel Kemble and Colonels Robertson and Ogilvy. Returned home.

Mrs. Fairchild spoke to me respecting the conduct of my servants, &c.

21. Saturday. Went to Hyde Park to see the cavalry drilled, which was very good. Lord Amherst commanded, and the Duke of Northumberland was always at his left, &c., &c.

General Canningham and Major Gunn dined with me. Captain F. always positive; spent the evening at home.

22. Sunday. Sir Thomas Mills called and I showed him the letter I had written to William Grant, his deputy, when I suspended him from his office, and that which I wrote to his nephew, David Grant, who wished to receive his uncle's salary, after he had left. I told him that I wanted a copy of his letter to Mr. Rose. He begged me earnestly to show him the letter I wished to write him, before sending it, and that if I wished I could hand it to him myself; he desired to be present. He prevaricated a good deal about the accounts which had been sent from Canada at the end. He said that Caldwell had drawn half of the allowances since I left, that is £250 a year; at last I saw he was in some difficulty and that he was auxious to draw for money on the Treasury. In searching for some information on this saffair among my papers, I found several documents that may be useful in case an investigation is desired into Grant's affairs, and especially duplicates from last dispatches to the Treasury and to the Ministers, with the enclosures on this business.

Paid a few visits. Generals Robertson and McLean dined with me, together with Davison, Deschambault and Colonel Clewes. They left at half past eight.

Stayed at home.

23. Monday. Took a walk and paid a few visits. Deschambault dined with me; spent the evening at home.

24. Tuesday. Visited Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter, General Fawcett and the Bishop of Oxford. Dined at Baron Alvensleben's with Sir George Raullay (?), his wife and two daughters, Mr. and Mrs , two other ladies, Lord and Lord , Captain , Paoli and Gautell (?). Spent the evening and home at ten.

Sir Thomas Mills came to breakfast. I showed him the note I wrote to Mr. Rose, in sending copies of the letters I wrote to Mr. Grant when I suspended him, with that which I wrote to David Grant, his nephew, in November, '84, a few days before I left Quebec. Mills wished very much to carry the letters himself, but I told him that I had to speak to Rose upon other matters. He urgently begged me to say nothing beyond what was in my note. He assured me at the same time and positively that Grant had never received his salary. I was surprised in the greatest degree at seeing that, notwithstanding what Wigglesworth had told me, he main-surpris au dernier point de voir que malgre ce que Winglesworth m'avoit dit il souter oit qu'il ne l'avoit pas recu, sur ce que je m'échauffoy un peu en lui disant que si Grant lui soutenoit ça il se trompoit et que comme c'etoit moy meme qui avoit signé les warrants c'étoit à moy à le prouver. Il me pria beaucoup de ne pas le faire, qu'il ne felloit pas perdre Grant tout-à-fait, que Rose etoit son amy, & qu'il lui avoit du lui-même à son arrivée qu'il n'etoit point nécessaire qu'il prit Caldwell pour son député, & qu'il pouvoit continuer Grant, s'il le vouloit. Sur ce que je lui dis que Grant devoit beaucoup au Gouvernement. Il me dit qu'il avoit donné des suretés suffisantes à Lord Dorchester pour tout ce qu'il pouvoit devoir, que Lord Dorchester en etoit satisfait et l'avoit ecrit à M. Rose qui le lui avoit dit depuis peu de jours. Je suis persuadé qu'il y a la dessus quelques mauvaises manœuvres.

Je remis moy meme la lettre à M. Rose & lui dis que M. Winglesworth pouvoit l'instruire encore plus particut de tont l'argent que Grant ou Caldwell pouvoient avoir reçu comme deputés de Mills. Je lui parlay ensuitte de Douglas, & il me dit qu'il y avoit deux ou trois petits emplois vacant dans les Customs en Canada; qu'on pouvoit lui en donner un Je le refusay croyant que les emplois etoient à la nomination de Leid Dorchester, mais je me suis trompé. Il faudra que je lui parle de nouveau parce que si je puis obtenir quelques choses pour lui ça fera un bon effet dans la Province.

Payé Helmlay le libraire 3½ guinées pour les deux vollumes du portefeuille du Marechal Turence. Marsh qui passa chés moy me dit que le Gl Koningham avoit obtenu le 45e regimt que tout le monde en etoit surpris puisqu'Abercrombie avoit fait publiquement tout ce qu'il avoit pû pour le perdre de reputation. J'ay payé le comte du charpentier Aitkins. Ca montoit à £49.11.8½. Adair diné ches moy passé la soirée ches Mad: Robertson ou il y avoit beaucoup trop de monde perdu 2 Robers.

Vendredy 26. Visitté le Baron Alvensleben qui me dit qu'il s'étoit formé une association à la Haye qui avait déjà été signée par plus de 2000 personnes, parmi lesquels il y avoit plusieurs officiers, Personnes de la première distinction, le Comte Bentinek est le premier qui aye signé, cette association s'appelle la voix du peuple, et veut qu'on retablisse le Statouder dans tous ses droits. Il y a aussi beaucoup de confusion à Amsterdam et dans d'autres villes, on attend la malle avec impatience et on augure bien pour le Statouder, tained that he had not received it, on which I became a little provoked, telling him that if Grant maintained that, he was mistaken and as it was myself who had signed the warrants it was for me to prove it. He bagged me earnestly not to do so, that it was not necessary totally to ruin Grant, that Rose was his friend; that he had said himself on his arrival that it was not necessary that he should take Caldwell for his deputy, and that he might continue Grant if he wished. On this I told him that Grant was owing a large amount to Government. He said he had given sufficient security to Lord Dorchester for all he could owe, that Lord Dorchester was satisfied and had written so to Mr. Rose, who had told him of it a few days before. I am persuaded that there is some trickery going on in this matter.

I handed myself the letter to Mr. Rose, and told him that Mr. Wigglesworth could give him still further information on all the money which Grant and Caldwell had received as deputies for Mills. I then spoke to him of Douglas, and he told me that there were two or three small offices vacant in the Customs in Canada; that one of them could be given him. I refused, believing that the offices were in Lord Dorchester's nomination, but I am mistaken. I must speak again, because if I can obtain something for him it will have a good effect in the Province.

24. Wednesday. Deschambault dined with me and left in the evening to join his regiment. Spent the evening at Mrs. Williamson's.

- 25. Thursday. Was at the City and paid a few visits. Received a note from Sir Robert Pigot, who informed me that I had been unanimously admitted as a member of the Club Caré. Paid Helmlay the bookseller, three guineas and a half for the two volumes of Marshall Turenne's portfolio. Marsh, who called, told me that General Cunningham had obtained the 45th Regiment, that every one was surprised, as Abercromby had done publicly all he could to destroy his reputation. I paid Aitkins the carpenter's account. It amounted to £49.11.8½. Adair dined with me. Spent the evening at Mrs. Robertson's, where there were far too many people; lost two rubbers.
- 26. Friday. Visited the Baron Alvensleben, who told me that an association was formed at the Hague, which had been joined already by more than 2,000 persons, among whom there were several officers, persons of the highest distinction. Count Bentinck was the first who signed. This association is called "La Voix du Peuple," and is intended to re establish the Sladtholder in all his rights. There is also great confusion in Amsterdam and in other towns. The mails are expected with impatience, and people augur well for the Sladtholder.

  Arrived in London on the 31st May, 1789.

Visited on the 1st June, Lord and Lady Amherst, Lord and Lady Sydney, Sir George and Lady Yonge, Lady Holterness, Mrs. Molisson, General Budé, the War Office, Lord Sydney's office, the Duke of Northumberland, Baron Alvonsleben, General and Lady Fawcett, Lord Hopetown, the Duke of York, Lord Dover, Sir J. 16. Mereredy. J'ai été à Hamstead d'ou j'ay apporté du Fruit & du Beurre. Les Cols. Kemble & Hunter ont diné ches moy. Reçu une Lettre de James Pillichody.

17. Joudy. J'ay été faire visitte au Baron Alvensleben, qui ma dit que le Landgrave de Hosso a degoutte 4 ou 5 do ses meilleurs Genereaux qui ont pris leur demission. Le Due des deux Ponts est fort singullier et depensier à l'excès. Le Due de Choiseul avoit dit plusieurs fois pendant son ministère que les Gardes Françoises occasioneroient la ruine de la Constitution. Il est surprenant qu'on ne l'aye pas prevenu.

dinné et passé la journée chés moy. 18. Vendredy.

Eté à St. Mary Axe. Mon neveux me dit qu'il avoit plassé le fils ainé de Mr Sanders.

19. Samedy. fait visitte a Mr Prevost qui me dit que les Suisses avoient pretté un nouveaux serment au Roy, & & la nation. Le Baron Rt & le Capt Frazier ont dinné chés moye Mal à l'oreille je ne suis pas sorty.

20. Dimanche. Le Mal d'oreille continus. Je ne suis point sorty. Le Baron, le Major Green & le Capt. Frazier ont dinné chés moy-reçu la visitte de Colonel Small & du Col. McArthur.

- 6. Sunday. Budé, Major Mathews, Captain Frazer and Horton dined with me. The conversation the whole evening was on the affairs of Canada with Mathews, who slept at my house,
  - 7. Monday. Polier called, Budé, the Baron and Mathews dined with me,
- 8. Tuesday. Was at Mrs. Coore's at Hampstead; gave her a dozen quails. I saw there Mr. Liseit, the uncle who was to have been in the Navy. Dined at Fawcett's with General Stiffen, Baron Kutzleben, Budé and Major Guan. Lost three rubbers to Lady Fawcett.
  - 9. Wednesday. September. Major Mathews dined with me. Was at the Club.
- 10. Thursday. Major Mathews and the Baron dined with me. My nephew arrived in the evening. The major was to leave at daylight.
- 11. Friday. Captain Frazier paid me a visit and Davison sent me a letter from Gray. I wrote Lord Amherst sending him a letter from Needall the minister.
- 12. Saturday. My nephew came to dine with me and showed me a letter from his mother, which is most affectionate. I walked back with him to Hampstead.
  - 13. Sunday. Did not go out.
- 14. Monday. Received a letter from Lord Amherst on the subject of Mr. Mieville, which I have sent to him. Met Lord Sydney who invited me to the partridge shooting. Took a walk with Colonel Hunter; we spoke a great deal of Canada and of Colonel Harris. I believe I have made a bad bargain.

Dined and spent the day at home.

- 15. Tuesday. Mr. Mieville the Minister came from Canterbury. I gave him a letter to Lord Amherst where he called. On returning [I] paid a visit to Mrs. Prevost, who is full of the troubles the French give her, especially Mr. Daligre. In the evening called on Mr. Moultry, who has the gout.
- 16. Wednesday. Was at Hampstead, from which I brought fruit and butter. Colonels Kemble and Hunter dined with me. Received a letter from James Pillicody.
- 17. Thursday. Paid a visit to the Baron Alvensloben, who told me that the Landgrave of Hesse had disgusted four or five of his best generals, who have taken their discharge. The Duke des Deux Ponts is very singular and extravagant. The Duke de Choiseul had said several times during his ministry that the French Guard would bring about the ruin of the constitution. It is surprising that this had not been anticipated.

Dined and spent the day at home.

- 18. Friday Was at St. Mary Axe. My nephew told me he had found a place for the oldest son of Mr. Sanders.
- 19. Saturday. Paid a visit to Mrs. Prevest, who told me that the Swiss had taken a new oath to the King and Nation. The Baron Regenfeld and Captain Fraser dined with me. Ear-ache; I did not go out.
- 20. Sunday. The earache continues; I did not go out. The Baron, Major Green and Captain Fraser dined with me. Received visits from Colonel Small and Colonel McArthur.
- 21. Monday. Davison called on me and wished me to interfere in Canadian affairs. Was at Hampstead; paid a visit to Mrs. Robertson. Dined and spent the evening at home. 6b-13

22. Mardy.

Eté à la Grande Cave ou j'ay rempli tous les Barils dans la Madeira de Tod. Il est entre 3. Beuteilles—dans l'autre Baril Madere 10. Bouteilles dans le Baril cheres 2. beut, entre les deux de Port 4 bout.

Apporté à la maison.

12 B. Madere, 12 B. Cheres, 18 B. Port, 8 B. Vieux Madere, 4 B. Claret.

Capt. Frazier et Davisson ont diné ches moy.
24. Mercredy.

LeRoy est venu en ville. Il y a eu Levée à St. James ou j'ay été.

25. Jeudy.

Fait visitte à Lord Dover qui etoit allé à Kieu dinné ches moy ou Davisson est venu & me fait voir la liste de Personnes propres à etre jures à Québec—qu'il se propose de faire parvenir à Mr Grenville par le Capte Frazier. Il me dit que Finlay ecrit des Vollumes, & qu'il souhaitte fort que le ministre ne voye pas les Littres.

Promené et fait visitte au Gl Roy, qui se propose d'aller passer l'hiver à Lisbonne fait visitte l'apprès dinné au Gl Moultry.

Mon neveux est venu déjeuner avec moy, et ma remis les Contes de mon Agent eté à St. Mary Axe et à Hamstead.

28. Dimanche.

Eté à frognall, faire une visite à Ld Sydney, ou j'ay été reçu avec toute l'affabilité possible. Lord Stopfort qui y étoit m'a appris plusieurs anegdettes concernant les Pes celui qui est à Geneve doit 16,000 St. & ne peut pas partir sans payer—les autres sont dans le même cas & ne trouvent pas du crédit. Le Duc du Clarence est de même que les deux Cadets. Si LaRegence avoit eu lieu on auroit nommé quattre Marcehaux Le Prince le Duc de York, le Gl Conway, et peut-être le Marquis Townshend,—tous les uniformes de l'armée, Inf. Cavallerie artillerie & la Marine auroient été changés qu'elle confusion.

28. Lundy.

Le Col. Hunter me fit visite & ma fait connoitre plusieurs vilenies du Col. Etherington. Je lui fit voir le conte des agents, ou il me fit remarquer une erreur de 5£5 qu'il fera coriger. Je devrois obliger l'officier qui Comande le Batt. de m'envoyer chaque année un retour des Habillements. Il paroit que j'ay été lezé impunement que les Messieurs ont disposé sans scrupulle de tout ce qui m'appartir surtout M. Prevost, mais sans me voller comme a fait Etherington.

fait visitte au Col. Miranda qui paroit toujours plus interessant. Reçu une Lettre du Capt Rusillion, le cuisinier et Ehrgel ont ecrit à Enguel.

le Gl Budé et le Col. Goldsworthy ont dinné ches moy. J'ay tout lieu de regretter de n'avoir pas fait ma Cour à Weymouth.

Passé la soirée ches le B. Nagell ou j'ay trouvé Lord Howard & Milady. Joué au commerce et revenu a onze heures.

Le 1er Octobre Jeudy.

fait visite à Lord Amherst qui est venu en ville avec Milady.

2. Vendredy.

Diné ches le Baron Alvensleben ou il y avoit plusieurs personnes le Baron me dit que le Roy en recevant les Plans dit d'abord que c'etoit de moy, et que j'etois un bien bon officier. Il les examinat avec empressement. Gagné deux Robers & revenu avec le General Pauly à minuit.

fait visitte à Lord Amherst que me fit voir les lettres qu'il avoit reçu Canada concernant les biens des Jesuittes le juge Smith le flatte de la façon la plus basse. Milord me dit qu'il avoit écrit au Lieut Gouv. de Guernsey concernant le Ministre Mieville et Lui avoit recommandé de Lui donner ( ) s'il y en avoit un vacante que ça Lui donneroit directe une cure, s'il en venoit une vacante.

Cod. II

Madeira; There are about 3 bottles; in the other barrel of Maderia, 10 bottles, in the sherry barrel 2 bottles, between the two of port 4 bottles.

Brought to the house: 12 bottles Madeira; 12 bottles sherry; 18 bottles port;

8 bottles old Madeira; 4 bottles claret.

Captain Fraser and Davison dined with me.

- 24. Wednesday. The King came to town. There was a levée at St. James' at which I attended.
- 25. Thursday. Called on Lord Dover, who had gone to Kew. Dined at home, where Davison came and showed me the list of persons suitable to be sworn in at Quebec, which he proposed to send to Mr. Grenville through Captain Fraser. He told me that Finlay is writing volumes, and that he wishes very much the minister should not see the letters.
- 26. Friday. Took a walk and paid a visit to General Roy, who is proposing to pass the winter at Lisbon. After dinner called on General Moultry.
- 27. Saturday, My nephew came to breakfast with me and handed me my agent's accounts. Was at St. Mary Axe and Hampstead.
- 28. Sunday. Was at Froghall to pay a visit to Lord Sydney, where I was received with all the affability possible. Lord Stopford who was there gave me several anecdotes, concerning the Princes. The one at Ganeva owes £16,000 sterling and cannot leave before paying; the others are in like ca e, and cannot get credit. The Dake of Clarence is the same as the two younger. Had the Regency taken place, four marshals would have been appointed, the Prince, the Dake of York, General Couway and perhaps Lord Townshend. All the uniforms of the army, Infantry, Cavalry, Artillery and Marines would have been changed. What confusion!
- 28. Monday. Colonel Hunter called and acquainted me with several villainies of Colonel Etherington. I showed him the account of the agents in which he pointed out an error of £5, which he would have corrected. I should oblige the officer commanding the battalion to send me every year a return of the clothing. It appears that I have been wronged with inpunity, that the gentlemen have disposed without scruple of all belonging to me, especially Mr. Prevost, but without robbing me as Etherington has done.
- 29. Tuesday. Visited Colonel Miranda, who appears always more interesting. Received a letter from Captain Roussillon, from the cook and from Ehrgal. Wrots to Engnel.
- 20. Wednesday. General Budé and Colonel Goldsworthy dined with me. I have every reason to regret not having paid my court to Weymouth.

Spent the evening at the Baroness Nagell's, where I found Lord and Lady Howard. Played at commerce and returned at eleven.

October.

- 1. Thursday. Visited Lord Amherst, who has come to town with Her Ladyship. 2. Friday. Dined at Alvensleben's, where were several persons. The Baron told me that the King on receiving the plans said at once they were mine and that I was a very good officer. He examined them most attentively. Won two rubbers and returned with General Paoli at midnight.
- 3. Saturday. Visited Lord Amherst who showed me the letters he had received from Canada concerning the Jesuits Estates. Judge Smith flatters in the basest manner. His Lordship told me he had written to the Lieut. Governor of Guernsey respecting the Minister Mieville, and recommended he should be given a charge if there were one vacant. That this letter would at once give him a charge should one become vacant.

veux loisse y, le 4. Sunday. Visited Lord and Lady Amherst, but they were not in. Went to Mrs. Provost's, to whom I had lent my carriage to pay a visit. Moultry and Colonel Hunter dined with me, and told me of the proposition that had been made to him for the Bay of Honduras, where he will go, taking his passage to Jamaica with Lord Effingham.

Hunter told me that the King had at once recognized him, &c., &c.

- 5. Monday. Davison came to tell me that Lord Dorchester had obtained permission to come home; that there was no appearance of his ever returning to Quebec; that Colonel Clarke commanded the Province; that the King positively [refused to appoint] the men Carleton had recommended there. Sir Thomas Mills suspended from his office. Colonel Miranda called.
- 6. Tuesday. Called on Mrs Prevost, who told me that her father had sent 15,000 as a present to the nation instead of the crop which is worth much more. Hampstead. Barr dined with me. Received a letter from Major Mathews.
- 7. Wednesday. Was at the levee, which was pretty full; the King was very gracious. General Grenville, Budé, Roy, Colonel Goldsworthy, and Miranda dined with me.
- 8. Thursday. Went to the Court, which was numerously attended; the Baron dined with me and we spent the evening at Madame Naglé's.
- 9. Friday. Signed a letter which we wrote to Lord Rolney respecting the installation money, which he has not yet paid. Paid a visit to Lord Holderness.
- 10. Saturday. Took a drive and a walk. Met Nepean who gave me an account of the tumults taking place at Versailles. Was at St. Mary Axe.
- 11. Saturday. Visited Mrs. Prevost; thence to Hampstead and to Mr. Coore's; returned and spent the evening at home.
- 12. Monday. Adair called. Captain Frazer dined with me. We had a long conversation on Canada. He knew Brigadier Hope.
- 13. Tuesday. Gunn dined with me. The Prince of Wales is obstinate in his opinions.
- 14. Wednesday. Was at the levée, which was well attended, noticed Lord North especially. Dined at Sir George Yonge's, with Mr. and Mrs. Manfred, Sir G. Outard, General , Miss Cockburn, Messrs. Miranda, Roy, Fawcett, &c., &c. Spent the evening and lost two rubbers. Home at .welve.
- 15. Thursday. Took a walk. Called on Ludy Holderness; dined and spent the day at home.
- 16. Friday. My nephew came to breakfast with me. Called on Sir Robert Pigot, dined at Fawcett's with Generals Roy and Dan as, Dr. Farquhar, Chonel Major Gunn and Miss ; spent the evening and played two rubbers.
- 17. Saturday. Visited Mr. Rigaud, who dined with me, along with the Baron and Gunn. Received news of the two victories over the Turks.
- 18. Sunday. Dined at my nephew's, with Mr. and Mrs. . Ramsgate was the subject of conversation. It appears that there is a good deal of amusement there.
- 19. Monday. Called on the Baron, Sir Robert Pigot and Mrs. Prevost. Was at St. Mary Axe, where my nephew informed me of the relations apparently to be formed, between Mr. Morris and Sally. Was at Mr. Christie's. Mr. Adair and the Baron dined with me; the latter told me that the Duke of Orleans had arrived in London.

Îl y a dans la Grande Cave 46. Bt. Sidre; 25 Bt. Vieux Bourgogne. Le Col. de Miranda a dinné ches moy, resta jusqu'à 10 heures.

Mon neveux vint me dire qu'il me Conseillait d'acheter deux actions dans les Indes dont je retirerais les 5 pr ct. qu'il lui resteroit encorre passé 14,000 de mon argent dont il ne pouroit me donner que 4 pr ct. donné ordre d'acheter.

22. Jeudy.

Vû Madame de Peister & Md Prevost qui ma fait voir une Lettre de son Perequi pouroit bien venir icy. Il n'y a point d'argent à Geneva, tout est d'une chute [cherté?] orible en Suisse, ou on ne veut plus recevoir de françois.

On me dit que le Duc D'Orleans avoit une lettre de creance aupres du Roi. Le Lt. Col. Hunter vint m'expliquer ce qui concerne la demande que le Gl Morisson fait pour l'habillement que ses Draught ont reçu en passant dans mon Regimt Il paroit n'etre pas fondé mais il faut que je fasse examiner la chose par deux Generaux.

23. Vendredy.

Dinné ches le G1 Moultry avec le Col. McArthur, Col. Small, Col. Hamilton.

Le Col. de Miranda suppose avoir été obligé de s'absenter pr avoir permis le Contrebande.

24. Samedy.

Diné ches moy, fait quelques visittes pris 100£ ches les Banquiers.

Consulta Mr Coore, pr les affaires de de Lancy—dt pr mes concessions dans la Florida. Diné ches mon neveux, j'avois pris le chocolat ches le Baron Regensfeld.

26. Lundy.

M. le Lt. Rapilje a dejeuné ches moy, tous avons été ensemble ches Mr Coore pr faire faire une Procure que je Lui remettray avec les Titres des Terres que j'ay dans la Florida qui font 7. patentes en tout 6500 arpents ma procure est adressée à Mr David Odge, Mr Rapilyi Père et Mr Rapillyi fils. Celui-cy me dit que tous les Comendus Espagnols faisoient une Commerce de Contrebande, & qu'ils étoient fort arbitraires dans leurs Gouvernemts.

Le 27. Mardy.

Mon neveux a déjeuné ches moy, & nous avons ûny avec Mr Tuckfield tous les contes des Taxes de ma maison dont mon neveux se chargera pour la suitte, & il Lui avancé 20£ St. Le Capt. Frazier est venu me communiquer la Lettre qu'll a reçu de M. Nepean & me demanda mon avis sur la fi.çon d'y repondre on a reçu la capitulation de Belgrade.

J'ay été au Levé c'etoit jour de Collier. Le Duc Dorleans etoit present. Le clerk de Mr Coore est venu pour Executter la Procure que j'ay signée pr Messrs Hodges & Rapilyi père et fils. J'ay reçu de Fisher un forck d'un form neuf. Frazier a

29. Jeudy.

Gun a diné ches moy reçu une Lettre de Mr Rapilyi que me dit qu'il est arrêté pr dette et me demande de la caution & a. le Oct mall s'est chargé de lui parler à ce sujet.

J'ay retiré la Procure que je me proposais de donner à Mr Rapilyie de meme que les Titres de mes Terres qui etoit ches Mr Coore. Le Col. Small a diné ches moy a parla de Mr Rapilyie qui est arrêté.

Eté à St. Mary Axe & ches le Gen¹ Moultry.

20. Tuesday. Took from the large cellar: 22 bottles of port; 11 of sherry; 6 of Madeira.

There remained here on the 20th: 6 bottles sherry; 3 claret; 5 Madeira; 3 old Burgundy; 4 N. (new) Burgundy; 7 Konigshorn; 6 cider.

There are in the large cellar; 46 bottles of oider; 25 bottles old Burgundy. Colonel Miranda dined with me; stayed till ten o'clock.

- 21. Wednesday. My nephew came to tell me that he would advise me to purchase two shares in the Indies [East India Company] for which I would receive 5 per cent. That there would still remain £14,000 for which he could only give me 4 per cent. Gave an order to purchase.
- 22. Thursday. Saw Mrs. de Peyster and Mrs. Prevost who showed me a letter from her father who might come here. There is no money in Geneva; every thing is horribly dear in Switzerland, where the French will no longer be received.

I am told that the Duke of Orleans had a letter of credence to the King.

Lieutenant-Colonel Hunter called to explain what concerns the demand General Morrison made for the clothing his draughts received on passing into my regiment. It does not appear to be well founded, but I must have the matter examined by two general officers.

23. Friday. Dined at General Moultry's with Colonel McArthur, Colonel Small and Colonel Hamilton.

Colonel Miranda is supposed to have been obliged to absent himself for having allowed smuggling.

- 24. Saturday. Dined at home; paid a few visits; deposited £100 with the bankers.
- 25. Sunday. Consulted Mr. Coore on Mr. deLancy's affairs and on my concessions in Florida. Dined at my nephew's. Took chocolate at the Baron Regenfeld's.
- 26. Monday. Lieut. Rapiljie breakfasted with me. Went together to Mr. Coore's, to get him to draw up a power of attorney that I should hand him, with the titles of the lands I have in Florida, seven patents in all for 6,500 acres. My power of attorney is addressed to Mr. David Odge [Hodges], Messrs. Rapiljie, senior and junior. The latter told me that all the Spanish commandants made a trade of smuggling and that they were very arbitrary in their governments.
- 27. Tuesday. My nephew breakfasted with me and we closed with Mr. Tuckfield all the account of taxes on my house, of which my nephew will take charge in future, and advanced him £20 Captain Fraser came to communicate to me the letter he had received from Nepean and to ask my advice how to answer it. The capitulation of Belgrade is received.
- Wednesday. Was at the levée; it was collar day; the Duke of Orleans was present. Mr. Coore's clerk came to execute the power of attorney, which I signed for Messrs. Hodges and Messrs. Rapiljie, senior and junior. Received from Fisher a fork of a new shape. Fraser dined with me.
- 29. Thursday. Gunn dined with me. Received a letter from Mr. Rapiljie, telling me that he is arrested for debt and asking me to be his security, &c. Colonel Small undertook to speak to him on the subject.
- 30. Friday. Withdrew the power of attorney which I intended to give Mr. Rapiljie, as well as the titles to the lands, which were at Mr. Coore's. Colonel Small dined with me and spoke of Mr. Rapiljie, who is arrested.
  - 31. Saturday. Was at St. Mary Axe and at General Moultry's.

- 2. Monday. Took to Mr. Coore Wallace's last account, which proves that deLancy's bill belongs to me. I also left a letter from Wallace to prove his signature. N.B. The account and the signature are in Alexander Wallace's hand. I gave an order to my nophew (who came to dine with me) to write to his mother that she might draw upon him on my account £100 sterling a year, from the 1st June, 1790, of which she will give £25 sterling a year to each of her daughters:
- 3. Tuesday. Dined at Mr. Coore's; we were twelve persons. Home at 11. M. Péna, who has returned from St. Petersburg called, as did Colonel Marsh.
- 4. Wednesday. Heard of the death of Mr. Louis Prevost. Spent the day in arranging old papers.
- 5. Thursday. Was at the Court, which was crowded. Dined at Marsh's with Colonel Garth and his brother, General Cammell and General Pattison; stayed till one in the morning.
- 6. Friday. My nephew breakfasted with me, and told me that he had written to his mother respecting the yearly allowance I was making. Sir James Napier, Colonel Marsh, Mr. Adair, M. de Péna dined with me. Went to Mr. Coore's to ask him to tell Mr. Rapiljie's attorney that I would join in the agreement that shall be made to pay his debt, provided it be paid in twelve months.

Called on Lord and Lady Amherst, who received me well. His Lordship told me that in future promotions would be made by battalions. I do not know how this change comes. I undertook to purchase a lieutenancy for a nephew of Mathews, and asked Ogilvie to write him accordingly.

- 7. Saturday. Gave new great coats to my coachman and to John. Went to Mr. Coore's and Colonel Small respecting Rapiljie. Dined and spent the evening at home arranging old papers.
- 8. Sunday. Visited Generals Leland and Ainsley, Major Chapman, General Bruce, M. Péna and Colonel Miranda. Colonel Kemble and Captain Fraser called. Dined at Hampstead with Mr. and Mrs. Sanders, and M. Péna.
- 9. Monday. My nephew dined with me. General McLean, Fraser, Kemble and the Baron dined with me.
- 10. Tuesday. Paid a visit to Lord Heathfield, who seemed very feeble, but spoke with much fire and in a firm and strong tone, and was much pleased with the civilities he had received at Aix-la-Uhapelle and Brussels. Major Gunn dined with me.
- 12 [11]. Wednesday. Was at the levée, which began early. Lord Amherst, Colonels Marsh and Hunter, Sir James Napier and Mr. Adair dired with me.
- 13 [12]. Thursday. Went to the city to speak to Mr. Coore respecting Rapiljis, but did not find him. Went to my nephew's.
- 14 [13]. Friday. Went to Mr. Coore's who told me of the discovery he had accidentally made respecting Rapiljié, which disgusted me with having had anything to do with him. It was Colonel Lutwidge [Luttridge], a loyalist, who married the daughter of Rapiljié's uncle, who disclosed the mystery and told all that his father-in-law had done for him. He took him out of the King's Bench where he was confined for sixteen months.

15 [14]. Saturday. Was at St. Mary Axe; from there to the Club. The weather was bad. Spent the evening at home.

16 [15]. Sunday. Gave my coachman and footman new liveries. Captain Fraser came to show me the petition which Captain Macdonald intends to present to-Lord Amherst.

Mr. George Davison, who left Quebec in October, arrived this morning and brought me letters from Dr. Mabane and Devos, dated the 1st of October.

My nephew [Devos] left here with Major Holland on the 1st of July.

17 [16]. Monday. Major Murray dined with me and gave me an idea of Mrs. Robertson's fortune, which is between £1,300 and £1,400 sterling a year.

18 [17]. Tuesday. Visited Mr. H. Davison, General Campbell, Edington, Molison, Sir James Napier, General Smith. Colonel Beverly Robinson called. I took from the large cellar: Madeira 6; Sherry 15; Port 33.

Mr. G. Davison called. He told me much good of my nephew Devos, and much ill of Smith, Grant, &c., &c.

19 [18] Wednesday. The Baron Regenfeld and Budé called, also Governor Franklin, who spoke to me of claims preferred against Government for wood cut on Lake Champlain by a certain Metcalfe, a great rebel, &c. Called on Major Murray, Mr. Inhubar (?) & Colonel Miranda, whom I find every day more interesting. Dined at Sir James Napier's with General Smith, Colonel Marsh, Dr. Adair. Lord Amherst who was obliged to go to the Theatre with the Court, was not there.

I was invited to dinner in eight days at Colonel Marsh's.

20 [19] Thursday. Was at Court. Dined at Lady Holderness's. Called on Madamode Nagle, and spent the evening at Colonel Goldsworthy's, played a rubber with his sister. Budé spoke to me of Mr. de Montmolin, on whom I must call to explain the situation of his relative in Quebec, who is a minister.

21 [20] Friday. Called on Lady Yonge. General Smith, Sir James Napier, the Baron, Colonel Small, and Mr. Adair dined with me.

I received a letter from my nephew, which informed me of the capture of Ostend and of the whole of Brabant, except Brussells, where there are 7,000 soldiers of the Empire. I asked Colonel Small to write Rapiljie, that I would not interfere in his affairs, since his uncle, who was on the spot, had done all he could to assist him and had taken him out of King's Beach, where he had been for sixteen months.

21. Saturday. Gunn dined with me.

22. Sunday. Did not go out. General Campbell and General McLean, with the Baron and Captain Fraser dined with me. Lord Stopford, Mr. Pena and Major Murray called.

23. Monday. Baron Regenfeld called. The state of the Netherlands and the present situation of the Empire formed the subject of conversation.

24. Tuesday. Colonel Small came to tell me he had settled the whole with Rapiljie. He had seen General Clinton who believes war to be inevitable. He is returned from Aix-la-Chapelle. Called on C. Hatton and Lord Amherst.

25. Wednesday. Was at the levée and then dined at Colonel Marsh's with Lord: Amherst, Sir James Napier, Generals Garth and Smith and Colonel Williamson.

The attorney for James de Lancy will bring me a subpœna for Monday next.

29. Dimanche.

J'ay été avec le Gl Cragg visitter la Galerie de Tableaux de M. des Enfants qui de même que Mr Bourgeois ont été fort polis, et nous avons été satisfaits on ne peut pas plus. Il y a 12 chambres ou cabinets remplis de tableaux des meilleurs maîtres nous en avons vu huit appartenant au Duc qui viennent de France tres bons. Mr Inhubar ma fait visitte et me dit que l'Empereur fait tous lui même et que la Boheme et la hongroie comencent à renuer. Le Col: de Miranda a dinné ches moy et ma paru toujours plus interessant. Il voit beaucoup le Gl Clark et le Gl Halliwell.

30. Lundy. Mon neveux a dejeuné avec moy et ma communiqué une Lettre de sa mere qui Lui dit que Mr Barton veut se charger de l'education du jeune Davon mais qu'elle veut faire cette dépense elle même et le plasser ches un Ministre-promené et passé

26. Thursday. Received visits from Lieut. Colonel Hotham, Major and his son. Mr. Barrow came to speak to me about my proxy and we agreed to put it off to the term in January next. Called on Br. [Beverly?] Robinson, Generals Francklin and Movitry. George Davison dined with me and told me the posts have this year returned 7,500 pounds of beaver, and 1,600 martins, without counting other articles; that the St. Maurice Forges have produced a great deal and that their partner Law is rather neglectful of their business, never works after noon and that his brother, Alexander Davison, complains greatly.

28. Friday. Dined at General Smith's with the Baron, Sir James Napier, Adair and the Baron, a Hessian officer.

The conversation turned on the differences which existed between Colonel Abereromby and General Canningham, in which I felt convinced how great was the wrong done to the conduct of the latter.

28. Saturday. General Robertson came to invite me to dine with him on Thursday next. Adair breakfasted with me. Captain Twiss called. The two Messrs. Davison c lled, and seemed a little serious.

I received a note from Messrs. Judge and Chandesex (?), attorneys for James de-Lancy, who had sent my subpœna, to say it was not necessary I should appear on Monday, as my advocate had postponed the case to the next term, which will be in-

29. Sunday. Went with General Cragg [Craig] to visit M. des Enfants' gallery of paintings, who, as well as Mr. Bourgeois, was very polite, and we were satisfied; by the best masters. We saw eight belonging to the Duke which came from France—very good.

Mr. Inhubar called and told me that the Emperor does everything himself, and that Bohemia and Hungary begin to be disturbed. Colonel Miranda dined with me, and appears slways more interesting. He sees a good deal of General Clark and General Halliwell.

30. Monday. My nephew breakfasted with me, and communicated to me a letter from his mother, which says that Mr. Burton wishes to take charge of the education of young Davon, but that she wishes to be at that expense herself, and to place him with a minister. Took a walk, and spent the evening at home.

December.

- 1. Tuesday. Took Harford into my service as butler and head servant, and promised him 35 guineas a year and his board, without having a claim to anything else, except when travelling, when I would treat him according to the custom of the places visited. Wrote to Major Mathews. General McLean, Major Hunter, Major Benson and Captain Fraser dined with me. Hunter seemed to have taken pains to acquaint himself with the fur trade and the upper countries. Fraser has only superficial ideas on the subject.
- 2. Wednesday. Took a turn to the city, then to the Secretary of War, to Colonel de Lancy's and Colonel Morrison's.
- 3. Thursday. Was at the Court. The Queen, who was very gracious, told me that she had seen my portrait, which resembled me perfectly. Dined at General Robertson's, with General Smith, Major Chapman, Colonel Burton and two naval officers. Home at 9 o'clock.
- 4. Friday. Visited Lady Holderness, where Mrs. Hotham called. Was at the city. Dismissed Rapiljie's brother, who told me a lie. Received some white partridges from Captain Fraser.
- 5. Baturday. Visited the Baron Alvensleben, where I found Kutzleben, who told us of the unworthy manner in which the Landgrave has treated him.

Diné ches Lady Holdernesse avec la famille de Nagle le Baron et Budé, joué 4 Robers à la demy Guinée. J'ay gagné deux.

J'ay appris que le Baron Stiffen sera cassé la jambe a Tongre en tombaut de cheval, on est tres mecontent en franse du Duc D'orléans, le Roy doit lui avoir dit qu'il avoit risqué de perdre la Tête & y facilitoit sa retraite dans ce pays.

6. D. manche.

Eté à Parsons Green avec mon neveux pour voir ses Enfants. Il m'a fait voir des Lettres qu'il avoit reçu de sa mere & de Mrs Barton au sujet de l'argt que M. Aubergeld a fait remettre à sa femme, Lo Baron de Mulaburg et le B. Regensfeld avec le Col : de Miranda le G! Moultry, Cap. Frazier, Col : Hunter & le Col : Kemble ont diné ches moy.

8. (7) Lundy. J'ay parlé au chev. A. Campbell au sujet de Rapilye, dinné seul, passé la soirée ches le B. Nagell qui m'a appris la prise do Namur & d'Anvers par les patriottes J'ay reçu une Lettre de Horsfort qui s'étoit engagé ches moy comme Domestique depuis quelques jours & a qui j'avais donné permission d'aller ches Lui pour revenir aujourd'hui, &c. qui me dit qu'il a changé d'avis.

George Davisson ma dit que le C: Caldwell avoit une espece de promesse de succeder a Mills comme Rr General du Canada.

9. (8) Mardy.

Visité le Ba Alvensieben ou le Gl'Paaly est survenu & nous a dit ce qui s'étoit passe dans l'assemblée Generale au sujet de la Corse. Gentilly est party pour Paris d'ou il passera en Canada. Le B. Regensfeld a dinné ches moy, il pense fort sensé. ment sur le Conte de son maitre.

10. (9) Mercredy.

Mon neveux qui est venu dejeuné avec moy ma fait voir des Lettres qu'il a reçu de M. Devos au sujet de ses prétentions en Hollende.

Eté à la Cour, le Levé etoit nombreux et le Roy se porte à merveille. Le Col: Marsh a dinné ches moy. Il est partisant du chev. Howe-qui a dit Il toujours fait de fort bonnes dispositions & n'a jamais su profitter de ses avantages.

10. Jeudy.

Je suis allé à St. Mary Axe -donné un ordre post écrit à mon neveux, de papiers sur le Conte des deux Enfants de Madame Auberg- auraient 250 L. St. dont je leurs fait present, mais qu'il doit garder entre ses mains en leur en payant au cinq pour cent.

Learned that the Baron Stiffen broke his leg at Tongre by falling from his horse.

There is great dissatisfaction in France with the Duke of Orleans. The King told him he had risked the loss of his head, and facilitated his retreat to this country.

- 6. Sunday. Went to Parson's Green with my nephew to see his children. He showed me letters he had received from his mother and from Mrs. Barton respecting the money Mr. Aubergeld had remitted to his wife. Baron de Mulaburg and Baron Regensfeld, with Colonel Miranda, General Moultry, Captain Fraser, Colonel Hunter and Colonel Kemble dined with me.
- 8. [7]. Monday. Spoke to Sir A. Campbell respecting Rapilite. Dined alone and spent the evening with Baron Nagell, who informed me of the taking of Namur and Antwerp by the patriots of Brabant. I received a letter from Horsford, who had engaged some days ago as my servant, and to whom I had given leave to go home to return to-day, &c., telling me he had changed his mind.
- 9. [8]. Tuesday. Visited Baron Alvensleben. General Paoli dropped in and told us what had passed in the General Assembly on the subject of Corsica. Gentilly has left for Paris, whence he will cross to Canada. Baron Regenfeld dined with me. He thinks very sensibly on the subject of his master.
- 10. [9]. Wednesday. My nephew, who came to breakfast with me, showed me letters which he has received from Mr. Devos on the subject of his claims in Holland. Went to Court; the levée was full and the King wonderfuly well. Colonel Marsh dined with me. He is a partisan of Sir William Howe, who said he always made very good arrangements, but never knew how to profit by his advantages.
- 10. Thursday. Went to St. Mary Axe; gave my nephew a written order for papers concerning Madame Aub rg's two children. They are to have £250 sterling, per cent. for it.

Drew on my bank account.

11. Friday. Called on Lord Dover, the Bishop of Hereford. Napier, Sir R. Pigot, Captain Twiss, General Morrison, George Davison dined with me. Visited

Gave five guineas to Colonel Small to be given to Rapiljie, who is in Fleet

- 12. Saturday. Visited Lord Heathfield with Captain Prevost, but he was not visible; the servant said he was worse. We spoke a good deal about Gibraltar.
- 13. Sunday. Went with Colonel Small to speak to Rapiljie's uncle, who let us know what a scamp he was, for whom he had spent £180; that he wanted to hear nothing more about him, and that he advised us not to mix up in the business, but that if his brother wanted to return to New York he would help him with pleasure.

14. Lundy.

J'ay reçu quelques visittes et ne suis point sorty.

15. Mardy.

J'ay reçu de Lettres du Canada par Mr Cragy [Craigie] ou on me donne de bonnes nouvelles de mon neveux De Vos, que j'ay été communiqué à mon neveux Anthoire. Il me dit qu'il devoit arriver un expres du Brabant, qui annonce la prise de Bruxelles, reçu une Lettre de M. le Banderet Christen.

16. Mercredy.

Cregy [Craigie] m'est venu faire visitte. J'ay été ches le Col: Hunter que je n'ay point trouvé, ches Made Davisson, Dinné ches le Baron Alvansleben avec le Conte Frere, le Baron Alvensleben, le Conte Saxon, le G. Morisson G¹ Praaly, Ainsley & 5 autres. Il a néigé aujourd'huy pour la première fois.

17. Jeudy.

Eté à la Cour qui n'étoit pas nombreuse. J'y ay vu Lord Heathfield et Lord Fiffe, à que je dois faire visitte de même qu'au G.

Le Col: Hunter & Mr Cragy [Craigie] ont dinné ches moy. Messa Davisson sont venus après diné. Les affaires du Canada sont venus sur le Tapis et j'ay pu comprendre qu'il n'y a personne qui veuille se presenter pour supporter les interets de la Province, & à moins que Davisson ne fasse agir quelques membres du Parlemt les choses iront fort mal.

Le Col: Hunter a parlé aux agents, au sujet de la Lettre du Col: Harris.

Davisson me dit que le Père Robeau est encore vivant.

18 Vendredy.

reçu la visitte de l'Eveque de Herefort—fait visitte à Lord Fif'e [Fife] Mad. McLean Budé, Lady Fausset, passé ches les agents qui m'est dit que la proposition que le Col: Harris avait faitte étoit souvent arrivée concernant l'habillemt et qu'ils m'informeraient par la suitte de qu'il conviendroit de faire à cet égard et qu'il savoit bien que je n'ay paraisse [paresse ?] en rien. Je leur ay dit que j'etois pret d'achetter une compagnie pour mon neveux DeVos & Ils l'ont mis en notte. Le Major Mathews n'a pas voulu que j'achetasse pour son neveux. passé la soirée ches Made de Nagle ou le Doct. Parker.

19. Samedy.

fait visitte à Mad, de Saumaire & a M. de Miranda.

Dinné ches M. Davisson avec Nepean & le Major son frère, le besu pere la belle mere et la sœur de Davisson, Mad. Marton et sa fille & le Docteur. Joué au whist, & revenu a 11 heures on fit venir les deux enfants qui parurent faire plaisir au Grand Pere &c.

Jacque Holland arrivé de Québec, & ma apporté des Lettres de son Père, du Mahan, & de mon neveux j'ay été sur le champ parlé à Nepean qui m's promis de faire tout ce qu'il pourroit en faveur de Holland.

21. Lundy.

le Lt Col: Hunter est venu prendre conger.

Le Major Jessop est venu me dire que son fils part pr N. York. Mon neveux ma fait connoitre les intrigues de son cousin avec Lady Massarene qui est une mégere ac. Que le Prince Edward a payé la moitié de ce qu'il devoit à M. Bois de la Tour et ou'il devoit aller à Gibraltar en Garnisson.

Que M. Morisson [Morris] est fort pressant pour avoir une reponse et qu'il ignore si la deml voudra accepter.

Mon Domestique Frederic Ottonin natif de Bole à 6 lieu d'Averdun & 2 de Neusschul est entré à mon service le 21e Decembre 1789 & je Lui ay promis 30 guinées par année outre sa nourriture sans aucun autre profit, Îl y a 50 Douzeines de Bouteilles Vuide sous l'escalier de la cuisine.

- 14. Monday. Received a few visits and did not go out.
- 15. Tuesday. Received letters from Canada by Mr. Craigie, giving good news of my nephew Devos, which I communicated to my nephew Anthony. He tolls me that an express arrived from Brabant announcing the taking of Brussels. Received a letter from Banderet Christen.
- 16. Wednesday. Craigie came to call. Went to Colonel Hunter's, but did not find him in, and at Mrs. Davison. Dined at Baron Alvensleben's with Count Frere, the Baron Alvensleben [Regensfeld?] the Count Saxon, General Morrison, General Paoli, Ainsley and five others. It snowed to day for the first time.

17. Thursday. Was at Court, which was not well attended. Saw there Lord Heathfield and Lord Fife, whom I should visit as also G.

Colonel Hunter and Mr. Craigie dined with me. Messrs. Davison came after dinner. The affairs of Canada came on the carpet, and I could understand that there were no one who would present himself to support the interests of the Province, and unless Davison get some of the members of Parliament to act, things will go badly.

Colonel Hunter has spoken to the agents on the subject of the letter from Colonel Harris.

Davison told me that Father Roubaud is still alive.

18. Friday. Had a visit from the Bishop of Hereford. Paid visits to Lord Fife, Mrs. McLean, Budé, Lady Fawcett. Called on the agents, who told me that the proposition Colonel Harris had often made concerning the clothing had arrived and that they would inform me subsequently what they would agree to do respecting it, and that he knew well I was never idle. I told them that I was ready to purchase a company for my nephew Devos, of which they made a note. Major Mathews did not wish me to purchase for his nephew. Spent the evening at Madame de Naglés, where was Dr. Parker.

19. Saturday. Visited Madame de Saumaire and Mr. de Miranda.

Dined at Davison's with Mr. Nepean and his brother the Major, Davison's father and mother-in-law and sister, Mrs. Morton and her daughter and the Doctor. Played at whist and home at 11. The two children were bought in, who seemed to give pleasure to the grandfather, &c.

20. Sunday. Visited my wine cellar, in bin No. 7, Port 8; 8, Hermitage 4; 9, Old Burgundy 2; White Champagne 3; Red Champagne (wired) 2; 17, Cider 3; in the upper part, Muscat 2; Swiss 3.

James Helland arrived from Quebec and brought me letters from his father, from Mabane and from my nephew. I went immediately to speak to Nepean, who promised do all he could in Holland's favour.

21. Monday. Lieutenant Colonel Hunter came to take leave.

Major Jessup came to tell me that his son is leaving for New York. My nephew informed me of the intrigue of his cousin with Lady Massarene who is a Mægera, &c. That Prince Edward has paid half of what he owed to M. Bois de la Tour and that he is to go into garrison at Gibraltar; that Mr. Morrison | Morris] is very urgent for an answer and that he does not know if the young lady will accept.

My servant, Frederic Ottonin, a native of Bale, 6 leagues fron Yverdun and two from Neufchatel, entered my service the 21st December, 1789, and I promised him 30 guineas a year and board, but no other profit.

Lord Dover ma fait visitte, & a été fort poly. Il ma remercié des attentions que j'avois eus pr Milady, à la Cour.

fait visitte à Lord Amherst. Milady etoit sortie. Il ma dit qu'il feroit tout ce qu'il pourroit pr le jeune Holland mais que Lord Dorchester auroit du écrire.

Lord Dover est fort pique contre le Major Holland à cause de la conduitte qu'il a eu avec sa premiere femme.

G. Davisson est venu me prier d'aller diner ches son frere avec Cregy, pour examiner le pamphlet que le docteur [Mabane?] a fait pour repondre à celui que Lambourne [Lymburner] et ses constituents ont publié icy. Il ma paru tres bien ecrit et propre à être publié des que les affaires du Canada paraitront en Parlemt

On a beaucoup parlé apprès dinné des affaires du Canada, on blame sans reserve le Gov. le chef de justice, Grant, Finlay &c.

On se plaint beaucoup du chef [Sir John] Johnson, peu propre à conduire les Indiens, sans qu'on puisse trouver personne pr Lui Substituer.

25. Vendredy. Visitté le Gl Smith, le chv. Napier, le chev. Pigot, qui ma fait voir la requette qu'il a presente au Roi qui est fort bien ecritte.

Eté ches le Ba Alvensleben qui avoit reçu des lettres de Vienne, ou on lui marque que l'Empereur avoit été malade d'une Indigestion.

Le Gen! Rainsmouth a été nommé pour comander en Brabant.

I. Empereur leve beaucoup de Trouppes dans ses Etats pour y envoyer. Les Peuples de la Moravi et de la Boheme sont tres mecontents. Il y a une Action entre les Troupes Asiatiques et les Turcks d'Europe, qui voulcient empecher les premiers de retourner ches Eux selon leur Coutume c'est ce qui a procuré le dernier avantage que le Prince de Cobourg a eux centre les Turcks.

On ma dit que le General Massay menaçoit d'entrer dans l'opposition en Ireland. Mon neveux a passé ches moy a 9 heure du soir et ma apporté son conte de l'année, ou je me trouve plus riche que je ne contoit. Il ma parlé des inclinations de sa fille Saly, Comme d'une chose qu'il approuveroit & qui même paroissoit Lui faire plaisir.

89868 aabla 10 80 Braiit & omi22. Tuesday. Visited the Bishop of Hereford and Baron Alvensleben.

Dined at Sir Harry Parker's with his brother the Admiral, Sir John Trevelyan and three other gentlemen. We sat a long time at table and drank excellent wine.

23. Wednesday. Took a walk. Holland dined with me.

24. Thursday. Lord Dover paid me a visit and was very polite. He thanked me for the attention I had paid to Her Ladyship at Court.

Virited Lord Amherst; Her Ladyship had gone out. He said he would do all he could for young Holland but that Lord Dorchester would have to write.

Lord Dover is displeased with Holland on account of his conduct to his first wife.

Gi [George] Davison came to ask me to dine at his brother's with Craigie to examine the pamphlet which the Doctor [Mabane?] has written to answer that which Lambourne [Lymburner] and his constituents have published here. It seemed to me very well written and suitable for publication when the affairs of Canada shall be discussed in Parliament.

A good deal was said after dinner respecting the affairs of Canada, and the Governor, the chief justice, Grant, Finlay, &c., were found fault with without reserve.

Much complaint was made of Sir John Johnson, as not being well suited to manage the Indians, but no one could be found to take his place.

25. Friday. Visited General Smith, Sir James Napier, Sir Robert Pigot, who showed me the petition (very well written) which he presented to the King.

Was at Baron Alvensleben's, who had received letters from Vienna, informing him that the Emperor had been suffering from indigestion.

General Rainsmouth was appointed to command in Brabant. The Emperor is raising a large body of troops to send there. The populations of Moravia and Bohemia are much dissatisfied. There was an action between the Asiatic troops and the Turks of Europe, who wished to prevent the former from returning home as is their custom, which secured the last advantage the Prince of Cobourg had against the Turks.

I have been told that General Massey threatens to go into opposition in Ireland. My nephew called at nine in the evening and brought my account for the year, by which I find myself richer than I had calculated.

He spoke to me of his daughter Sally's inclinations, as something he would approve of, and which even appeared to give him pleasure.

26. December, Was at the large cellar, from which I took out 12 bottles Madeira, 27 of sherry, 41 bottles of Port. Put in that of the servants, of Port 15, of Madeira 6, of Sherry —. I drew a decanter full from each of the pipes of Madeira, which I found to be a good wine.

General Marley, Sir James Napier, Colonel McArthur, Colonel Small, Captain Fraser and young Holland dined with me; every thing was good.

27. Sunday. Visited Baron Alvensleben, with whom I found General Paoli, who was considerably perplexed about the affairs of Corsica. Lord Fuzwilliam, who appears to be very amiable, seems to believe that affairs in France will be a long time of settling down and that the Emperor would be a long time before he subdued Brabant, Colonel Miranda dined with mo. He seems to me still better informed and more interesting. He told me that the conduct of the Duke of Orleans was known and abominated in France.

Nous avons parlé sur les dettes et les ressources de l'Angleterre qu'il paroit avoir étudié Sur les mines d'or qui furent découvertes par un Deserteur Espagnole il y a peu d'années, & qui ont tarry.

Il croit qu'il reste peu d'or ou d'argent en Amerique, & qu'ils envoyent tout en Espagne pour en recevoir leurs besoins Il loue la beauté du climat, et la Fertilité des terres, comme un paradis terrestre, Il abomine l'administration de ce Pays comme celui de l'Espagne.

Le G1 McLean a été ches moy avec le Col. Kemble qui m'a apporté le journal de son expédition de Nicaragua.

Eté à St. Mary Axe, de la ches l'Eveque de Herefort.

Dinné ches Ld Amherst avec le Gl Massey, Garth, Col. Campbell, Sr James Napier, Small, McArthur & Col. Johnson. J'ay eu une occasion de parler à mi Lord des raisons qui ont fait du tort Gl Coningham occasione par la jalousie de Major Abercromby.

Passé la soirée ches moi.

29. Mardy.

Ecrit une lettre au G1 Budé, George Davisson m'est venu lire le plan que les juges du Canada presenteront à Lord Dorchester au sujet des plaintes qui avaient été portées contre Eux, par Monck, & le chef de justice Smith. C'est une piece très bien écritte et qu'il convient de faire imprimer.

Le Major Mathews est arrivé apres dinné nous avons passé la soirée ensemble.

We spoke of the debts and resources of England, which he has apparently studied; on the gold mines discovered by a Spanish deserter a few years ago and which have become exhausted.

He believes there remains little gold or silver in America and that they send the whole to Spain to provide for their wants. He praises the beauty of the climate and the fertility of the soil as a terrestrial paradise. He abominates the administration of that country, as that of Spain.

28. Monday. General McLean called with Colonel Kemble, who brought me the journal of his expedition to Nicaragua.

Was at St. Mary Axe; thence to the Bishop of Hereford's.

Dined at Lord Amherst's, with General Massey, Garth, Colonel Campbell, Sir James Napier, Small, McArthur and Colonel Johnson. I had an opportunity to speak to His Lordship of the reasons which led to the wrong done to General Cunningham, occasioned by Major Abercromby's jealousy.

29. Tuesday. Wrote a letter to General Budé. George Davison came to read me the draught of the answer which the Canadian Judges will present to Lord Dorchester on the subject of the complaints against them by Monk and Chief Justice Smith. It is a very well written document and suitable for printing.

Major Mathews arrived after dinner; we spent the evening together.

- 30. Tuc lay [Wednesday]. Was at the levée, which was not well attended; thence to Baron Alvensleben. Mathews and Alexander Davison dined with me.
- 9. Febuary. Tuesday. Walked and paid visits. Dined at the American Club. Spent the evening at Marsh's with Goldsworthy and his sister, M. le Guisfardien and his wife, Mrs., Colonel Williamson, Balfour, Dr. Wilkin. Budé with Philipson and others was expected, but did not appear. Marsh seemed annoyed.
- 10. Wednesday. I was to go to Westminster at 10 o'clock, but my nephew came to say that it would do if I went at one o'clock. I found Judge Johns there, who is perfectly acquainted with the business I have with J. deLancy, much better, even, than I am. He will be a very good witness. Rivingston's brother was also there with other persons. We remained till 4 o'clock, after which we were told the case would not be heard till Saturday next at 9 o'clok. My nephew dincd with me.
- 11. Wednesday [Thursday]. Visited Baron Alvensleben, where I met Admiral Forbes and Budé.

Dined at Captain Kennedy's with Lord Castels [Cassilis] Sterling, Campbell, two gentlemen whom I did not know. Home at half past nine, where I spent the evening.

Mr. Craigie came to tell me he leaves for Scotland to-morrow; that the affairs of Canada will not be before Parliament till some time in March, and that Davison is annoyed at it.

- 13 [12]. Friday. Davison brought me two pamphlets containing observations of the Quebec Judges. Called on Coore and my nephew and then to the Club.
- 14 [13.] Saturday. At nine o'clock in the morning was at the Court at Westminster, where my dispute with James deLancy was settled by the judge deciding in my favor with a shilling which carries [costs]. Buce, General Fawcett, Mr. General Stevenson; was at the Club.

- 27. Saturday. Took a walk with General Smith; went to the tinsmith's; from there to Dubosk's, bookseller, Gerard Street, and then to a German's where we purchased a ham, beans and lentiles. He lives in the house forming the corner of Marylebone and Gerard Streets.
- 28. Sunday. Visited Davison with Mathews. From there to St. Mary Axe, where my nepnew communicated to me the letter he has received from Messrs. Tulkar, who have sent him a bill of exchange for £1,000 on account of Mr. Devos. He showed me at the same time the letters he had written them, as well as to Mr. Bertram, by which he begged him to take charge of the family correspondence, not thinking it proper for them to correspond with women. His idea of placing the youngest Devos in Holland appears to me just. Took a turn in the Park, which was crowded.

My nephew came to dine with me.

March.

1st March—Monday. Visited Sir Samuel Napier and Baron Alvensleben, who gave me the news from Vienna. Was at Mrs. Prevost, who was at her toilet, thence to Captain Prescott's and Colonel Polier's. Adair and Dr. Barr dined with me, along with Mathews. Went to the Baron's concert. Called in the morning on Colonel Miranda, who appears every day more interesting. He told me M. Andriany had an allowance from the Emperor to travel and gain knowledge of chemistry and natural history.

2. Tuesday. Major Mathews handed me several papers concerning the effects disposed of on my account at Quebec. He told me that Genevay has still forty odd pounds of money, the proceeds of (Wagren que à vendre?) I teld him to keep this money on my account in order to assist young Collins, who is apprenticed to a carpenter in Montreal. The major handed me £31. 15, sterling he had received from Mr. Ainsley on my account, as also two receipts, the one for £20 and the other for £10, which Mr. Ainsley had paid in charity by my order.

The Major is leaving to day to join his regiment.

3. Wednesday. Went to the India House to vote for Mr. Pardoe. The King spoke to me of Lord Heathfield, as if he believed that I could change his resolution to marry. Morrison spoke to me about the clothing which he claims for my battalion.

Lord Sydney told me of the resolution come to in the National Assembly of France to make all ranks of citizens equal.

Visited Madame de Nagle, Morrison and Pattison. Was at the Club, where the Baron informed me that the death of the Emperor [Joseph II, of Germany] was certainly true. A servant came to offer to serve for three or four months, to see if he would agree. The one from General Polier brought me a letter from my nepheu and offered his services the same as did his comrade, both have a good manner.

- 4. Thursday. I warned my servant Ottonin that I no longer needed his services and the one from Mr. Ainsley has come on trial. Was at Court. Dined at Lord Sydney's almost en famille. Spent the evening at Lady Amherst, where there was a crowd. Home at 11 o'clock.
- 5. Friday. Dined at General Ainsley's, with his wife and his sister, Mr. Hamilton, a naval officer, Mr. Eddington, and Major Gunn. Played three rubbers, and home at eleven. Have been suffering greatly from a cold all day.

- 6. Saturday. Was at St. Mary Axe. Mr. Miranda and the Captain dined with me. The latter is not very prudent. He unveiled unreservedly all Prince Edward's conduct during his stay at Geneva, and the conversation he had with the King on the subject.
- 7. Sunday, Budé dined with me. I visited Baron Alvensleben and the Bishop of Hereford.

Spent the evening at home. Still suffering from a cold, My nephew came to breakfast with me.

- 8. Monday. Captain Davison came to see me. Took him to the Exhibition of Merlin, from there to my nephew's to see the model of the Catapult, which he greatly admired. Returned and dined at home.
- 9. Tuesday. Dined at the Club; we were 19 persons; a good dinner. Home at nine.
- 10. Wednesday. Visited the Baron. The Bishop called, glad to be rid of his cold.
  Took a walk and returned home much fatigued.
- 11. Thursday. Called on Lord Heathfield; found him weak but easy. He told me he was born on the 1st of January, 1718.
- 12. Friday. Visited Baron Alvensleben and Mrs. Carpenter, who received me cordially, then to General Robinson's and the agents, who have done nothing about the clothing that General Morrison claims. They are gentlemen on whom I cannot depend. Spent the evening at Mr. Morrison's where there was a crowd. Won three-rubbers.
- 12 [13]. Saturday. Was at Colonel Polier's, Mrs. Ramsden's, the agents and Lord Amherst's. Thence to the City, where my nephew read me the letters from Mr. Bertram respecting the Devos family.

General Smith, Captain Fraser, Colonel Polier, General Ainslie and General Bruce dined with me.

Visited Madame le Nagle, who seems to me to need a good deal of humouring. Visited the Baron and the Chevalier Doslary (?)

- 20. Saturday. The Baron dined with me and we arranged all the accounts relating to the installation.
- 21. Sunday. The Baron dined with me and brought the Baron Way, an officer in the Austrian service, who greatly entertained us with the campaigns against the Turks, who are not so contemptible as I thought. In the evening at Madame Trapand's, where I lost two rubbers, four guineas and a half.
- 21 [22]. Monday. Visited Lady Holderness, was at the levée of the Prince of Wales and in the evering at the Baron Alvensleben's concert,
- 23. Tuesday. Dined at the Club. I sent a case containing the portrait of Joseph Brant and that of his friend, with several volumes of newspapers, the plans of the battles of the King of Prussia, &c , the whole to the care of Craigie.

(In the original the entries are Wednesday 23, that he dined at the Club, which he did on Tuesday the 23, and Friday 24, in place of Wednesday, evidently slips of the pen in both cases).

24. Wednesday. The Baron [Alvensleben] and Baron Way dined and spent the evening with me.

My nephew came to see me and to inform me of the death of my sister Justine, and show me different letters he has received from his mother, sister and Mr. Bertram. We agreed on the replies he should make to them.

To ascertain that all my sister's servants are properly rewarded and that Mile.

Dupuis shall receive a life pension of 100 l. Swiss.

- 25. Thursday. Was at Davison's, who told me that Mabane is much embarrassed in his affairs. He complains greatly that Government decides nothing respecting the business of the judges, any more than in special business relating to Canada. He has purchased the pamphlet "Theodosius," which the Attorney-General, Mr. Macdonald, had already read. Dined at General Smith's.
- 26. Friday. Craigie, Davison and Colonel Kemble dined with me. Was at the Club.
- 27. Saturday. My nephew came to communicate a letter from Major Mathews respecting what he owes me. Count Andriani came to ask me for letters of recommendation to America which he thinks of travelling over.

Gent aujourd'hui Il y avoit une 15 de personnes, nous avons joué au 21. presques deux heures, j'étois fort fatigué particulieret des jenoux & des jambes qui etoient fort enflées.

May Dimanche le 20

Le Major Mathews est arivé à 10 heures du matin, nous avons été ches les Davissons a St. Mary Axe, & ches le G¹ Powell.

Mon neveux ma dit qu'on avoit appris par la Poste de hier que la guerre étoit declarée entre la Prusse, le Roy de Hongrie & la Xarine, & qu'en concequence de cette nouvelle les fonds avoient baissé conciderablement.

Je reçu hier une Lettre du Dr Maban dattée du 6 fevrier, j'en reçu une avant hier du Capt. Freeman dattée du 8 fevrier.

Lundy le 3e

Repondu au Dr Maban & au Capt. Freeman a qui j'ay envoyé des Livres & des papiers de nouvelles j'ay porté ces Lettres ches M. Davisson & j'ay été de la à l'exibition de Somerset house, ou j'ay rencontré M. Bourgeois qui y conduisoit Madame de Callone revenu ches moy dou je suis allé ches le B. Alvensleben, que ma dit qu'il avoit reçu des Lettres de Berlin du 20e Avril par les quelles il voyoit qu'il n'y avoit point encore d'hostilités de commencées mais que l'armée Prusienne seroit mise sur l'Etat de guerre le 15 May, & que tout le regiment avoit ordre de se tenir prêt à marcher; il paroit aussi par les Lettres de Vienne que le Roy de Hongrie se fait aimer & qu'il est dessidé pour le Paix. Le Genl Powell, Budé et le M. Mathews ont dinné ches moy.

25. Sunday. Paid a visit to Lord Heathfield, Baron Regenfeld and Captain Way dined with me.

26. Monday. Budé called and informed me of the effect of cherrywater on headashes arising from the stomach.

Was at the levée of the Prince of Wales with General Powell, who dined with me. Spent the evening at Lady Amherst's where there was a large party. Played at quadrille with Lady Dover, Madame Deligue and Lady.

Received a letter from Quebec from Freeman, dated 8th February, 1790, who appeared much satisfied with Devos, who had gone to join his regiment. Received a letter from Captain Cullen for Captain Freeman dated "Patna on the Ganges, 25th October, 1789, by the Rose, Capt. Dampster." Callen hopes to re-establish his business at Benares, where he goes to settle.

Colonel Polier told me that circumstances are favourable for making a fortune there, the French having thrown open that trade to the public. My nephew also received a letter from Mr. Alfred Wallace, respecting the affairs of Shipody and the claims of Mr. Hassencleaver.

27. Tuesday. Dined at Somerset House by invitation of Mr. Bourgeois; there were at least 140 persons at four tables. Returned at home at half past nine.

28 Wednesday. Took Colonel Polier to be presented to the King. The Baron, General Burnet and General Powell dined with mo. In the evening was at Madame Nagle's, where I took leave of Dr. Des Tours.

29. Thursday. Took General Powell to Sir George Yonge's levée, and from there went home to take up Colonel Polier, whom I took to the Court, where he was presented to the Queen, Went then to the City, to speak to my nephew respecting the affairs of Hassencleaver. General Powell dined with me.

30. Friday. Was at the City. Paid my coach builder £79. General Powell dined with me. Spent the evening at hirs. Williamson's, where there was a large gathering. Lost two rubbers and home at one o'clock in the morning.

May.

May 1. Saturday. M. Martin de la Tour came to breakfast with my nephew. Received a visit from McLean. Dined at Colonel Williamson's who was made Major General to-day. There were 15 persons. We played at vingt-et-un nearly two hours. I was greatly fat, , especially in the knees and legs which were much swollen.

2. Sunday. Major Mathews arrived at ten o'clock in the morning. We went to Davisson's, to St Mary Are and to General Powell's.

My nephew told me that it had been learned by the mail of yesterday, that war had been declared between Prussia, the King of Hungary and the Czarica, and that in consequence of this news the Funds had fallen considerably.

I received yesterday a letter from Dr. Mabane, dated the 6th of February. I had received one the day before from Captain Freeman, dated the 8th of February.

3. M. Tay. Answered Dr. Mabane and Captain Freeman, to whom I sent books and no wanapers.

I carried these letters to Davison and from there went to the Exhibition at Somerset House, where I met Mr. Bourgeois, who had taken Madame Calonne there. Returned home and went to Barou Alvensleben's, who told me he had letters from Berlin of the 20th April, by which he saw that hostilities had not yet begun, but that the Prussian Army would be placed on a war footing on the louh of May, and that the whole regiment [army?] had orders to be ready to march. It appears also that the King of Hungary is making himself loved, and that he is decided for peace. General Powell, Bude and Major Mathews dined with me.

4. Tuesday. Dined at General Dalling's where was a large party; sat at table till half past ten. Good dinner; good wine.

5. Wednesday, My nephew came to breakfast with me, and on returning to the City wrote me a note to let me know that during last night all the sailors on the Thames, had been pressed, and that war was on the point of being declared against Spain, which had seized five of our ships near Cook's River [Nootka Sound] and the Funds had fallen three per cent.

Mathews and Dr Barr dined with me. McLean came after dinner and spent the evening at Mr. Patison's. Played two rubbers; lost half a guinea.

6. Thursday. Answered the letter from the Treasury respecting the officers of the Provincial Marine at Quebec.

which was well attended by the military. Lord Southampton spoke to me of his son, who is in Germany and who wished to marry the daughter of Lady Lord Dover was mixed up in it and blames His Lordship for not giving his consent to it. However the latter has very strong reasons.

- 13. Thursday. Was at Court, which was very numerously attended. Lord Sydney invited me to dine on Wednesday next. Dined at home.
- 14. Friday. My nephew came to breakfast, and told me that the return of young Morrison had restored peace to the house; his fortune is what he said.

Gave an order to my nephew to purchase £3,000 in the three per cent. consols. Went to Lord Amherst concerning recruits; he gave all the necessary orders to the different battalions.

N.B.-To ascertain if it is necessary to order the accoutrements, arms and clothing for the augmentation.

Opinions are still divided as to whether there will be a war or not. The Funds begin to rise. The Baron dined with me.

15. Saturday. Was at the agents respecting the augmentation. They advised me not to order the accourrements till I received orders to do so. I recommended Devos to them, should there be a vacant company.

The two Barons dined with me. The Funds have risen considerably.

- 16, Sunday. Captain Chain [Cheyne?] came to tell me that he believed Lieutenant Keirsley was dead. He begged me to transfer Ensign Sproll [Sprott?] of the fourth battalion into mine, his father being settled in Nova Scotia. Went to visit Lord Heathfield, but did not find him at home.
- 17. Monday. Spent the evening at Lady Amhorst; a crowd; played two rubbers.
- 17. [18] Tuesday. Went to see the review of Elliot's Dragoons. Dined at the Club; we were a large company and had a bad dinner. Spent the evening at Lord Dalling's; there was a large company. Lost two rubbers with Mrs Duhaine [Duane ? ].

Called in the morning at Lady Mary Horben's (?) who presented me with two drawings done by herself.

Was at I rd He thield's, who was preparing to leave for Air la Chr dle, whence he will go to Gibraltar.

- 23. Sunday. Vited it in Alvensleben, who said that there were advices that Russians and Advice and the design of remaining on the defensive against the Turks in order to the might be able to oppose their united forces against the King of Prussia: that the Russians had informed the Poles that they would enter Poland the moment they should attack Gallicia. Dined at Hampstead with Colonel Police. Messrs, Christie and Perceval.
- 24. Monday. Dined at M. Guisfardien, where I made the acquaintance of M. de Montmolin, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, two ladies attached to the Princesses, Colonel Polier, Colonel who has served in India, A Mr. Buguan [Buchan?] came in the evening with Mr. Francklin. Played three rubbers, which I lost.
- 25. Tuesday. D' at Lord Heathfield's, with the author of the Anticipation, an amiable man. I not feeling well and went home early.
- 26. Wednesday. Mr Damier (?) came to call; amused me greatly with the difference he has had with Mr. Christman.

Colonel Small and Colonel Fraser called.

My nophew came to communicate to me a letter from his mother, who has been informed of the marriage of Sally.

Received a letter from Captain Deschambault without date or the name of the place from which it is written.

- 27. Thursday. Was at St. Mary Axe. Dined at home and spent the evening at Lady Yonge's, where I played three rubbers. Home at one o'clock.
- 28. Friday. Captain Bartholomew of the Navy called to thank me for what I had done for him in Canada.

Captain Schank came to communicate to me a note he received this morning from Nepean to be at the office at noon to morrow, where Mr. Grenville wishes to speak to him. Nepean sent me a note that it might reach Major Mathews. I suppose some expedition is proposed. I sent the letter to Bridgenorth.

Christie the younger came to tell me the conversation he had with the mother of Mr. Rushout, which I thought ill judged. It appears that they wish to get off Christie, and it appears to me also that his sister-in-law wished he should return to Switzerland. The portrait he drew makes me believe that his brother will not be very happy with her.

Called on Baron Alvensleben. No news yet from Germany. Spent the evening at Madame de Montmolin's with M. and Madame Guisfardien, Mrs. Christie, her brother-in-law, M. Francillon, and some other people.

Learned there of the death of the Duke of Montague, who appears to be greatly regretted; he leaves a number of good offices vacant. Home at eleven o'clock.

29. Saturday. This morning I wrote a note to Colonel Polier, sending him twelve new louis, asking him to purchase for me four or five pieces of the finest Indian handkerchiefs at Ostend and to take charge of them to Switzerland.

Met Sir Henry Clinton with whom I took a walk. He told me that the Duke of Gloucester was much inclined that England should take Swiss troops into its service. I showed him the inconvenience which would arise from the capitulation of Swiss troops, which he did not know, &c. He said he had learned from General Losser that the Prussians had marched on the 15th.

Lundy 31, Le Major Mathews est arrivé ce matin. Il avait reçu une Lettre de Mr Nepean outre celle que je lui avois envoyé.

Jettay a l'office de Mr Grinvill à midy. Il me demanda si je croyois qu'en delivrant des Postes du Canada la Traitte avec les [Sauvages] perdit besucoup, et si en fortifiant des Postes apposés a ceux la on pourroit s'asseurer cette Traitte. Il souhaittoit qu'en délivrant des Postes on peut obtenir des Ameriquains une communication avec le Mississippy. Je lui dis qu'a l'egard de la Traitte on en perdroit certainemt une partie, mais cette perte seroit peuthetre reparée par les marchandises que nos Negotiants [vendroient] aux ameriquains qu'au reste, Je croiois que si les Americains insistoient a avoir les postes que je croyois qu'on pouroit se faire une meritte en les Leurs délivrant, que s'ils etaient déterminés à les avoir, qu'ils etoient si nombreux qu'ils pouroient les prendre quand Ils jugeroient à propce que je ne croiois pas que la Grande Bretagne voulut entreprendre un guerre pr les deffondre, Je lui montray quels Postes il conviendroit de prendre, pour former une comuniquation &c. Il me priait de mettre mes Idées sur ce sujet par ecrit &c.

Mathews fut appellé apprès moy, & on lui fit a peu pres les memes questions en le priant aussi de mettre ses Idées par ecrit des qu'il seroit arivé au Regiment. Nous sommes allé apprès dinné faire visitte a Corre & a mon neveux.

Mardy le Juin.

Employé toute la matinée à chercher les Plans, qui peuvent donner quelques idées de la Province de Quebec & des endroits ou on devroit batir des Postes.

Le Colonel Cammell est venu me prier de parler au Secretaire de la Guerre au sujet du Ranc de Colonel qu'il espere d'obtenir. Je Lui ay donné une Lettre pr le Secretaire de la Guerre datté d'aujourd'huy. Le Capt. Frazier & Mathews ont dinné ches moy.

Le Baron Regensfeld a dinné ches moy. Il a parlé fort sombrement sur l'Etat des pretentions que les Espagnols forment sur la navigation et les Cottes de passifique Ocean & sur la jalousie que les Holandois thémoignent sur notre Etablissement au

Il me d't que le gouvernement Espagnol avoit demande à la france si elle la soutiendroit au cas qu'elle eut guerre avec L'Angleterre, &c. &c.

Lundy 7. Le Col. Polier a dinné ches moy. Il est enthousiasme de la Campagne qu'il a acquis de Lausanne et s'impatiente de pouvoir s'y rendre. Il me dit qu'il avoit cultivé dans l'Inde onze arpents en Rosier qui lui a produit par la distillation ne lui avoit produit que 8 ences dessence. Livros de Rose qui 30. Sunday. Paid a few visits and dined at home.

31. Monday. Major Mathews arrived this morning. He had received a letter from Nepean besides the one I sent him.

Was at Mr. Grenville's office at noon. He asked me if I believed that by giving over the posts in Canada, the trade with the Indians would lose much, and if by fortifying posts opposite them that trade might be secured. He wished in giving up the posts, that a communication with the Mississippi could be obtained from the Americans. I told him that with respect to the trade a part would certainly be lost, but that this loss would perhaps be made up by the goods that our merchants [would sell] to the Americans, and further, I believed that if the Americans insisted on having the posts, a merit should be made of giving them up; that if they were determined to have them, they were so numerous they could take them when they thought proper; that I did not believe Great Britain would undertake a war to defend them. I showed him what posts it would be proper to take to form a communication, &c. He asked me to put in writing my ideas on the subject.

Mathews was called after me and almost the same questions put to him, desiring him to put his ideas in writing when he had joined his regiment. We went after dinner to call on Coore and my nephew.

June.

1. June. Tuesday. Employed all morning in looking for plans which may give an idea of the Province of Quebec and of the places where posts could be built.

Colonel Cammel called to ask me to speak to the Secretary of War on the subject of the rank of Colonel which he hopes to get. I gave him a letter to the Secretary of War dated to-day. Captain Fraser and Mathews dined with me.

2. Tuesday. [Wednesday]. Was at the levée. Dined with Baron Alvensleben. Major Mathews has gone to join his regiment.

The American Club met to-day; the last time for the season.

- 3. Thursday. Spent the evening at Mr. Morrison's; lost two rubbers and two-bets.
- 4. Friday. King's birthday, which was very brilliant. Dired at Lord Amherst's in uniform; home at half past nine.
- 5. Saturday. Was at St. Mary Axe. Dined at Lady Holderness's with Mrs. Harquart [Harcourt], Mrs. Johnson, a beautiful woman, Messrs. and Budé. Made a call on Ladies Amherst and Fawcett. Spent the evening at the Club, where I saw by the papers the advantages gained by the Swedes over the Russians.
- 6. Sunday. Went with my nephew to see a house which belonged to Mr. Berrings; it is beside that of the Duke of Chandos. The house, although of singular taste, appears to be pretty and commodious. There are 40 acres of ground about it; the whole is well situated.

Baron Regenfeld dined with me. He spoke in gloomy terms on the state of the claims the Spaniards set up to the navigation and coasts of the Pacific Ocean and the jealousy shown by the Dutch to our settlement at Botany Bay.

He told me that the Spanish Government had asked France if she would support her in case she should go to war with England, &c., &c.

7. Monday. Colonel Polier dined with me. He is enthusiastic about the property he has purchased in Lausanne, and is eager to get there. He told me that in India he had cultivated eleven acres of rose bushes, which had produced pounds of roses, giving by distillation only eight ounces of essence.

Le Baron a dinné ches moy.

Mercredy 9.

passé à l'office de Mr Grenville pour parler à Nepean que je n'ay pas pu voir, j'ay boaucoup promené, passé chez Ld Amberst qui me dit qu'il avoit cerit au Chevallier Yong au sujet du Lt qu'on a plassé dans mon Batt. Adair a diné ches moy.

Jeudy 10. Resté toute la journée au Logis-occupé a ecrire et a Lire.

Le Vendredy 11. Dinné ches le col. Crosbie avec le Gl Morisson Davisson, Mr Lewis et quelques autres messieurs. Nous avons eu un très bon dinné & très bien servy.

Samedy, 12. Mr Mandrot est venu diner chés moy, qui ma donné toutes les nouvelles d'Yverdun.

Mon neveux est party aujourd'huy pour l'Isle de White [Wight].

Le Lt Prevost qui est arrivé des Isles m'est venu voir, Il est fort impatient d'avoir une compagnie.

Le Baron a dinné chés moy, & je suis allé faire un tour de promenade en voiture. Dimanche le 13.

fait visitte à Mr Wallace qui ma apporté tout ce qu'il a pû trouver dans les livres de son frere concernant mon conte avec M. Daniel Delancy pour la vente de ma ferme du Maryland. Il me censeille de lui écrire pour le prier lui-même de m'envoyer son Conte, & de retirer ce qui pouroit m'être encorre du.

Il est d'avis que nous devons proposer à Mr Blower d'acheter nos droits sur Chipody, seul ou avec Lettres de Justice Ludlow de la province de Bronswick, j'y ay consenty comme le seul moyen qui nous reste pour en retirer quelque chose.

Lo C. Miranda & le Baron ont dinné chés moy, lls croyent tous les deux la guerre avec L'Espagne inévitable.

Lundy le 14. J'ay reçu une Lettre de Maj. Mathews dattée du onze. Il me dit que le Régimt avait ordre de se rendre a Chatham et qu'il partoit ce jour la avec la première division et qu'il seroit 20 jours en marche.

Le Capt Shanck est venu dejeuner avec moy. J'ay signé le certificat qu'il avoit donné au Capt Alkro [Haloro]. J'ay prié le Capt Shanck de porter 10 guinées à Madame Cramahé, pour 4 douzaines de madere que Cramahé m'avait pretté à mon arrivé en Canada & que mon domestique avoit negligé de remplasser. Ayant lieu d'etre mécontent de mon Domestique Louys Mathey Je lui ay dit que son service ne me convenait pas et qu'il pouroit se chercher un maître Je l'avois engagé le 18 Mars à raison de 30 guinées par année de sorte que le 17 Juin Il m'aura servy le 🗜 d'une année.

Mardy 15. Le Courier d'Espagne est arivé ce matin et rien ne transpire des nouvelles qu'il doit avoir apporté.

Le Capt Shanck qui a dinné chés moy me dit que Made Cramahé avoit obtenu une pension de 150 L. dinné et passé la soirée chés moy.

Mercredy le 16. Mon neveux qui est venu dejeuner avec moy ma comuniqué La Lettre que Mr Mandrot lui avoit apporté. Sa mere lui marque que ma sœur J. a iaissé 75 once d'argenterie, outre ce qu'il y a au chapitret, & soixante & neuf Suisse argent contant dont le 1 partie interet.

Eté au Levé qui étoit fort nombreux pour la saison. On croit en general que les nouvelles qui sont venues d'Espagne ne sont pas favorables, que les deux cours se sont trop presiées, & qu'il sera difficile d'évitter la guerre.

- 8. Tuesday. Dismissed John Thomson, my man servant, and although he owesme £5 or £6 sterling I made him a present of three guineas and made a present to Enguil of a guinea. To-day I paid my tailor, Fisher, in full of my account, £100, by a cheque on my banker. The Baron dined with me.
- 9. Wednesday. Called at Mr. Grenville's office to speak to Nepean, whom I could not see Walked a great deal. Called at Lord Amherst's, who told me he had written to Sir George Yongo respecting the Lieutenant whom he had placed in my butalion. Adair dined with me; stayed at home.
  - 10. Thursday. Stayed indoors all day engaged in writing and reading.
- 11. Friday. Dined at Colonel Crosbié's with General Morrison, Davison, Mr. Lewis and some other gentlemen. We had a very good dinner, very well served, &c.
- 12. Saturday. M. Mandrot came to dine with me and gave me all the news from Yverdun.

My nephew left to-day for the Isle of Wight.

Lieutenant Prevest, arrived from the West Indies, came to see me; he is very impatient to get a company.

The Baron dined with me and I went for a drive.

13. Sunday. Paid a visit to Mr. Wallace, who brought all he could find in his brother's books concerning my account with Mr. Daniel Delancy for the sale of my farm in Maryland. He advised me to write him to request that he would himself send me his account and to settle what might be still due.

He is of opinion that we should propose to Mr. Blower to purchase our rights over Shipody, alone or with letters from Justice Ludlow of the Province of Brunswick. I consented as the only means left to get anything out of it.

Colonel Miranda and the Baron dined with me; both believe war with Spain to be inevitable.

14. Monday. Received a letter from Major Mathews dated the 11th. He told me that the regiment was ordered to Chatham; that he was leaving that day with the first division, and that he would be twenty days on the march.

Captain Schank came to breakfast. I signed the certificate he had given to Captain Alkro [Haloro]. I asked Captain Schank to carry ten guineas to Mrs. Cramahé, for four dozen of Madeira which Cramahé had lent me on my arrival in Quebec, and which my servant had neglected to replace. Having reason to be dissatisfied with my servant Louis Mathey, I told him his services did not suit me and that he could look for another place. I engaged him on the 18th of March at the rate of 30 guineas a year, so that on the 17th June he will have served for quarter of a year.

15. Tuesday. The courier from Spain arrived this morning, but nothing is known of the news he must have brought.

Captain Schank, who dined with me, told me that Mrs. Cramabé had been granted a pension of £150. Dined and spent the evening at home.

16 Wednesday. My nephew, who broakfasted with me, communicated the letter Mr. Mandrot brought him. His mother tells him that my sister J. has left 75 ounces of silverware, besides what there is at the charpitret (?) and sixty-nine Swiss (?) cash, of which one-fourth is at interest.

Was at the levée which was very full for the season. It is generally believed that the news from Spain is unfavourable; that the two Courts are too exacting and that it will be difficult to avoid war.

Mr Adair a dinné ches moy, & nous avons fait ensemble le tour de heighgate. Jeudy 17.

Eté à la cour qui étoit fort brillante. Il na rien transpirer de nouveau.

Vendredy 18. Mandrot qui est venu dejeuner avec moy, ma fait l'histoire d'Yverdon, J'ay été à la citté de la au clob, & dinné ches moy, avec Budé, qui me dit qu'il avoit 400 & quelques livres St. de ses propres revenues sans conter les bienfaits du Roy.

Samedy 19. Le jeune Mandrot & Bourgeois sont venu dejeuner ches moy, ils me paroissoit des jeunes gens de bonne conduitte propre au clob, le Baron & Way ont dinné ches moy. le Dernier a reçu des Lettres de Vienne du 4º de ce mois, ou on lui dit qu'il y a une espéce d'amnistie [armistice] entre les Autrichiens & les Turcks, & qu'on croyait la paix prochaine, & Regensfeld qu'il savoit precertain que notre ministaire avoit des avis du Continent & se persuadoit qu'il y auroit dans peu de temps une paix generalle.

On est toujours dans l'inabilité sur les affaires d'Espagne, on dit que la France a fait offrir la médiation, mais que notre Cour la refusée poliment. J'ay écrit au Maj Mathews.

Dimanche le 20.

Occupé toute la matinée a examiner des Papiers, le Baron et Mr Adair ont dinné ches moy. Fait visitte à M. Coore ou j'ay trouvé mon neveux qui yavoit dinné. Je l'ay remise à Hamstead.

Je finis hier (en présence de mon neveux) mon Conte avec William Tuckfield, qui fut ba[la]nce & Je lui ay avance pour la demy année à venir £18-18-St. & je lui ay fait présent de quattre Guinées.

Lundy 21. Mesrs Mandrot & Christie avec M. Bourgeois & mon neveux ont dinné ches moy. Il a fait fort chaud toute la journée, & je suis resté la soirée ches moy.

Mardy 22. Beau temps & fort chaud. Le Col. Miranda dinné ches moy, promené la soirée en voiture. Eté au foxhall [Vauxhall] avec M. Miranda.

Mercredy. 23. Le G! Powell qui est arrivé ce matin a dinné ches moy, & nous avons fait un tour en voiture.

Jeudy 24. J'ay été dejeuné avec mon Neveux a Hamstead. fait visitte au Baron Nagle. Regensfeld a dinné ches moy.

Vendredy 25. passé au club. On croit que nous aurons guerre. Le Col. Marsh & le Gl Powell ont dinné ches moy nous sommes allé à Curshelag et à Ve ac [Ranelagh] revenu à minuit.

Samedy 26. Le Baron R. a dinné ches moy & nous avons fait une promenade en voiture. Le Gl Powell est reparty aujourd'huy pour Wharwick.

Dimanche 17. Mr Prevest m'est venu présenter le jeune Prevest qui vient de Colmar. Il me paroit le plus joly de la famille. Le Baron Way dinné ches moy. Lundy 28.

Promené dans la matinée passé la soirée ches Md Murray ou j'ay fait trois Robers. J'ay finy tous les Contes du menage avec Louys Matthey.

Mardy. 29. Le Baron a dinné ches moy. Davisson est venu prendre le caffé et nous avons fait une promenade à Heighgate ensemble.

Il me dit que le Juge Smith avoit presente une requette au Congres, demandant la permission de retourner vivre parmis eux.

J'ay ecrit un billet au Gl Budé pour lui faire comprendre la difficulté qu'il y a d'entrer dans notre Regimt a moins que d'acheter.

Mr. Adair dined with me and we took a stroll to Highgate together.

17. Thursday. Was at the Court, which was very brillant. Heard nothing new.

18. Friday. Mandrot who came to breakfast gave me the history of Yverdun. Was at the City; thence to the Club, and dined at home with Budé, who told me that he had upwards of £100 of an income of his own, without counting the King's

19. Saturday. Young Mandrot and Bourgeois came to breakfast. They seemed well conducted young men, suitable for the Club. The Baron and Way dined with me. The latter has received letters from Vienna of the 4th of this month, which state that there is a kind of amnesty [armistice] between the Austrians and Turks and peace is believed to be near. Regenfeld said he knew for certain that our Ministry had advices from the Continent and were persuaded that there would be a general peace in a short time.

There is always an inability to judge of Spanish affairs. It is said that France has offered its mediation, but that our Court has politely refused it.

Wrote to Major Mathews.

20. Sunday. Engaged all morning examining papers. The Baron and Adair dined with me. Paid a visit to Mr. Coore, where I found my nephew, who had dined there Went with him to Hampstead.

I settled yesterday (in presence of my nephew) my account with William Tuckfield, which was balanced, and I advanced him, for the coming half year, £18 18s., and made him a present of four guineas.

21. Monday. Messrs, Mandrot and Christie, with Mr. Bourgeois and my nephew, dined with me.

It was very warm all day, and I remained at home in the evening.

22. Tuesday. Fine weather and very warm. Colonel Miranda dined with me. Took a drive in the evening. Went to Foxhall [Vauxhall] with Mr. Miranda.

23. Wednesday. General Powell, who arrived this morning, dined with me, and we took a drive.

24. Thursday. Breakfasted with my nephew at Hampstead. Visited the Baron Nagle. Regenfeld dined with me.

25. Friday. Called at the Club. It is believed that we shall have war. Colonel Marsh and General Powell dined with me; we went to Carshelag and Veneiac [Ranelagh?]. Returned at midnight.

26. Saturday. The Baron Regenfeld dined with me, and we took a drive. General Powell left again to-day for Warwick.

27. Sunday. Mr. Prevost called to present the young Prevost who has come from Colmar. He appears to be the best looking of the family. Baron Way dined

28. Monday. Took a walk in the morning. Spent the evening at Mrs. Murray's, where I played three rubbers. Settled all the household expenses with Louis

29, Tuesday. The Baron dined with me. Davison came to take coffee, and we took a walk to Highgate together.

He told me that Judge Smith had presented a petition to Congress asking permission to return and live among them.

Wrote a note to General Budé to let him understand the difficulty of getting into our regiment except by purchase.

Mon nouveau Domestique Andre Falkner est entré ches moy comme valet de chambre et boutelier. Je lui ay promis 40 L. et. par année, sans qu'il puisse pretendre autre chose que sa nouriture, soit ches moy ou en voyage.

M. Ferdinand Christie est venu ches moy pour me dire qu'il s'étoit arrangé avec M. de Colone pour voyager avec son fils. Il lui accorde 200 L: St: par année, mais il faut qu'il se pourvoye lui même d'un Domestique.

Mercredy, 3". Mr Mandrot est venu dejenner chés moy, et me dit qu'il auroit proposé son Beau frère Aubergonois pour M. de Colone si Christie n'avoit pas accepté l'employ. Il me dit que tout était tranquille en Suisse, mais qu'on y etoit fort lasse des François, qui y introduisoit le jeu & la dissipation. C'est une race abominable partout.

Jeudy le 1re Juillet.

J'ay payé 10. guinées a Louys Mathey pour ses Gages de 4. mois qui finissent au 17. juillet. Il est tres Content de moy mais se plaint de Made Fairchild. C'est un Sot dont je suis bien aise d'etre debarassé.

Le pauvre Saranville est entieremt derangé

J'ay acheté une Tabatière d'or dont j'ay payé 18 guinées. J'ay vu Ld Amherst qui me dit que M. Pitt s'étoit emparé du Militaire et que Sr Gorge Yong ne faisoit rien sans ses ordres. Ogilvie me dit la même chose. Samedy 3.

Mr Adair a dinné ches moy & ma fait part de la Lettre que Made Provost a reçu de sa sœur, ou il paroit qu'elle et M. le Chigran ont dessein de se retirer. fait visitte à Mrs Coore.

Ecrit à Bude, au sujet de Twiss & du Maj. Mathews.

Dimanche le 4. Dinné seul, promené et passé la soirée ches moy.

Lundy 5. Davisson a passé ches moy et me dit que le conseil assembloit tous les jours, & que dans peu de jours on sauroit s'il y a Guerre ou Paix. Il croit que le chev. Gray aura le Comandemt d'une expedition, pour la quelle on employera 4,000 hommes de Trouppes Allemandes. Il me demandoit si je ne croyois pas que son frere fut propre pr servir de Secretaire aupres du Gl Gray, qu'il ecrivoit bien l'anglois & le françois &c. &c. Cecy me fait raitre des sourgons. Le Col. Mr. Ferdinand Christic came to tell me that he had arranged with M. de Calonne to travel with his son. He gives him £200 a year, but he must provide himself with a servant.

30. Wednesday. Mr. Mandrot came to breakfast, and told me he would have proposed his brother-in-law, Aubergonois, for M. de Calonne, if Christie had not accepted the position. He said that everything was quiet in Switzerland, but that they were tired of the French, who were introducing play and dissipation. It is an abominable race everywhere.

July.

1. Thursday. I paid 10 guineas to Louis Mathey for his wages for the four months ending on the 17th July. He is well pleased with me, but complains of Mrs. Fairchild. He is a fool of whom I am glad to be rid. Handed to Falkner :-

6 bottles Port. do Madeira, Sherry.

7 petit Burgundy. 1 White Champagne. 1 Red Champagne.

There were already 2 bottles Swiss Wine, 3 Muscat wine, 1 Cider.

I gave him a ten pound note. Baron Regenfield dined with me.

Learned of the death of General Roy, a great loss to the army and to science.

2. Friday. Called at the City and at Mr. Christie's, who told me that everything was arranged between M. de Calonne and his brother, and that he was to set out on Monday next.

Poor Seranville is entirely deranged.

Bought a gold snuff box, for which I paid 18 guineas.

3. Saturday. Mr. Adair dined with me and told me the contents of a letter which Mrs. Prevost has received from her sister, by which it appears that she and M. le Chigran intend to retire.

Visited Mrs. Coore.

Wrote to Budé respecting Twiss and Major Mathews.

4. Sunday. Dined alone; took a walk and spent the evening at home.

5. Monday. Davison called and told me that the Council was meeting every day and that in a few days it would be known whether there would be war or peace. He Grey will have command of an expedition, for which 4,000 German troops are to be employed. He asked if I did not think that his brother would be fit to act as secretary to General Groy, that he wrote English and French well, &c., &c. This excited suspicions in me. Colonel Miranda and Dr. Adair dined with me. Stayed in doors during the evening.

6. Tuesday. My nephew came to breakfast and told me that the young people would have together a fortune of £14,000 sterling.

Received this morning a letter from Captain Freeman, who tells me that my nephew Davos has been spending freely, but that he behaves honourably, &c., &c. Received a letter from Mr. Jenkin Williams, thanking me for having purchased [a commisson] for his son. He wishes also to purchase a lieutenancy.

Received also a letter from Mabane of the 6th June. That from Captain Freeman was dated 27th May, the one from Williams the 7th June.

Le Col. Miranda, les Barons & le Mj. Benson ont dinné ches moy & sont resté presque a  $9\frac{1}{2}$  houres.

Dinné ches le Gen! Morrisson ou je trouvay le Col. Marsh & la famille Patisson, qui y logeoient.

dinné ches Mr Davisson appres avoir passé ches le Baron Alvensleben qui étoit allé à Vendsor Mr Nepean qui s'y trouva me dit quo Lord Dorchester reviendroit certainemt au printemps prochain et que vraysemblablemt il ne retourneroit jamais en Canada, le Gl Clerck dont il dit beaucoup de bien doit partir incessament pr Québec. Il ma promis de recomander le Dr Maban de la façon la plus forte. Davisson me fit d'autres confidences en me disant que le Col. Simpke [Simcoe] étoit nommé pr le nouveau gouvernemt—que Lord Dorchester avoit recomandé le chev. Johnson [Sir John Johnson] de la façon la plus forte; & de nomer du Deyce [Doase] pour être surintendent des Indiens. On voit par la que le J. Smith est toujours au gouvernail.

Tiré 60 guinées ches Mes Banq⁸ je fus ches le Duc de Northumberland p^r recomander le jeune Davisson comme Secretaire p^r le Gl Clarck, mais le Duc se t^rouva hors de Ville.

le Capt Prévost qui m'avoit déjà communiqué les manœuvres de son Cousin probtenir une compagnie est venu encore ce matin je l'ay envoyé ches Le Amberst. J'ay appris la mort de Le Heathfield.

Mardy [Mercredi] 14.

By parlé de Prévost, été ensuitte à la Cour, le Levé étoit nombreux je pris l'occasion de parler au Sceretaire de la Guerre qui me parut fort prevenu en faveur de Pr. Il me dit qu'il avoit eu dessein de m'en parler avant que de rien faire pr Lui.

Jeudy 15.

Rté à la Cour qui étoit assé nombreux pour la saison, je parlay a Ld Sydney au sujet de Prevost. Il me demanda s'il m'étoit venu voir. Il parut un peu embarassé. Les Mandrots & mon neveux ont diné ches moy.

J'ay beaucoup marché et suis revenu ches moy fort fatigué Le Gl Grenville Budé & le Baron ont dinné ches moy; je me suis fait excuser ches le B. Alvensleben. Samedy 17.

Eté à St. Mary Axe et ches. Mandrot pour lui porter des pieces du Lustre pr le Capt. Troytorrens.

Le Baron ma dit qu'il etoit arrivé un exprès party de Paris le 14 à cinq heures du soir au Gouvernement ou en marque que tout est parfaitement tranquille. Mr Prevost a passé ches moy. Il a beaucoup parlé sans faire mention de ses manœuvres pour obtenir une Compagnie; je lui annonçay que Lé A [Amherst] exigeroit vray-semblablemt qu'il rejoignit incessemt son Batt. 7. Wednesday. Was at the levée. The King asked me if there was no dissatisfaction in Switzerland, &c., &c.

Called on Lady Holderness. The Baron dined with me. Was at Hampstead and the Club. General Fairfax told me that he had spoken to the King about Twiss, who had been recommended by the Duke of Richmond to succeed Roy, &c. I spoke to him also of Mathews, but the person is already designated.

- 8. Thursday. My nephew came to breakfast and showed me a bill for £21. 10, drawn on him by Devos. He had in the same way drawn on me for £30 odds without any advice. This conduct must be checked.
  - 9. Friday. The two Barons dined with me.
- 10. Saturday. Major Benson came to tell me that he hoped to form a recruiting party for my battalion.

Colonel Miranda, the Barons and Major Benson dined with me and remained till nearly half past 9.

- 11. Sunday. Dined at General Morrison's, where I found Colonel Marsh and the Patison family, who are lodging there.
- 12. Monday. Dined at Mr. Davison's, after having called at the Baron Alvensleben's, who had gone to Windsor. Mr. Nepean, who was there, told me that Lord Dorchester would certainly return next spring, and that probably he would never go back to Canada. General Clarke, of whom he speaks well, is to leave immediately for Quebec. He promised to recommend Mabane in the strongest manner. Davison gave me further confidences, by telling me that Colonel Simpko [Simcoe] was appointed to the new government; that Lord Dorchester had recommended Sir John Johnson in the strongest manner, and Deyce [Dease] to be superintendent of Indian affairs. It will thus be seen that Judge Smith is still at the helm.
- 13. Tuesday. Drew 60 guineas from my bankers. Went to the Duke of Northumberland to recommend young Davison as secretary for General Clarke, but the Duke was out of town.

Captain Prevost, who had already communicated to me his cousin's schemes to obtain a Company, came again this morning. I sent him to Lord Amherst. Learned of the death of Lord Heathfield.

- 14. Wednesday. Was at Lord Amherst's and spoke to him of Prevost Then went to the Court; the levée was crowded. I took the opportunity of speaking to the Secretary of War, who seems much prepossessed in favour of Prevost and that he had intended to speak to me before doing anything for him.
- 15. Thursday. Was at the Court, which was pretty full for the season. I spoke to Lord Sydney about Prevost; he asked if he had come to see me, and seemed a little embarrassed. The Mandrots and my nephew dined with me.
- 16. Friday. Walked a great deal and came home very much fatigued. General Grenville, Budé and the Baron dined with me. I sent an apology to Baron Alvens

17. Saturday. Was at St. Mary Axe and at Mandrot's to earry him some pieces of lustre for Captain Traytorrens.

The Baron told me that an express to Government had arrived which left Paris on the 14th at five in the evening, which stated that every thing was perfectly quiet. Mr. Prevest called; he spoke a great deal without mentioning his schemes to get a company. I informed him that Lord Amberst would probably require him to rejoin his battalion immediately. He wished to wait to ascertain if war would be declared or troops sent, so that be might have a passage to cost him nothing. This is the second theme of the late General de Pisinge.

J'ay été le soir à Hamstead pour voir mes nieces qui sont revenues de prendre les bains de mor.

Dimanche 18e.

Le Capt. Vanderput qui m'est venu faire visitte, me dit qu'il avoit envoyé de la Tamise 4,787 matelots qui ont été pressés icy. Il me dit qu'il savoit depuis longtemps que l'Angleterre avoit promis au Roi de Pruce, d'envoyer 12 vaisseaux de ligne dans la Mcditeranée dans le Courant de juillet si S M. l'exigeoit, Lundy 19. Le Capt. Prevost m'est venu communiquer un placet que Le Amherst Lui avoit conseillé de presenter au Secretaire de la Guerre, que j'ay trouvay fort bien. Il me dit que M. Provost avoit manqué la Compagnie que le Capt. Dobson a obtenu dans mon Regimt que le Secretaire de la Guerre lui avoit dit que comme l'officier qui avoit quitté avoit obtenu une compagnie d'Invalide le Roi avoit ordonné qu'on plassat un capt. de la demy paye.

Les Protecteurs de Prevost sont Lord Sydney & Mr. Rose, qui est sollicité par Madme Nesbett qui a beaucoup d'influence sur Lui et une Dame Waren &c.

Prevost dit qu'il ne voudroit pas accepter de Capt. Lieutenance.

Il a été fort lié avec le Prince Leiward & c'est Lui qui lui a obtenu la permission d'avoir des chevaux à Goneva & qui ensuitte menagcoit toutes ses parties de plaisir. Il en a reçu plusieurs lettres fort obligeantes et le Prince lui avoit offert une Compagnie dans les Gardes Hanoveriens &c. Il etudioit pour être advocat : devoit etre recu docteur lorsque les troubles de Geneve comen cerent. Il prit des armes en desence du magietrat. Il fit faire un uniforme de Dragons de Geneve, avec lequel il parut comme officier.

Le G. A. Provost lui procura un Drapeau dans son Batt. Il vint en 1782 le joindre aux Iles, deux mois avant la paix, le Batt. fut reforme peu de Temps apres en juin 1783 et Prevost alla a Geneve ou II a jouy de la  $\frac{1}{2}$  paye pendant cinq années. Il fut ensuitte remplassé comme enseigne peu de temps appres on leva deux nouveaux Batt. et je fit mon possible pr lui obtenir une Lt qui me couta beaucoup de pêne; il fut ensuite pendant quelque temps à Chatam pour y recevoir les Recrues. Il trouva moyen d'aller à Geneve, ou il courtisa le Pr Elward; le fils de M. Rose, & les Parents de quelques Dames qui l'ont recomandé icy, & c'est par leur moyen qu'il espère d'obtenir une compagnic. Je ne crois pas qu'en tout il aye été pendant trois années au Regiment.

Il s'est querollé fort mal a propos avec le Mj Whitesake [Whiteside] du 4e Batt. parcequ'il etoit entre dans le Batt : Celuicy beaufrere de Mrs Louys doit lui en avoir Il est en general turbulent veut diriger et se meler de tout.

Il veut profiter des services du G! Prevost (au prejudice des Enfants) pour se procurer d'avancemt. Sur les affaires de Gibraltar P. me dit que le Prince se conduit fort bien. Il dine une fois par semaine ches Obara, & aura (?) ches Lui, du reste Il ne se voyent que le soir, le Prince a toujours la fureur des chevaux fait coupper les oreilles des anes & des mulets &c. On n'aime pas O'hara Il est trop severe, Il est actuellement brouillé ou en different avoc le Col. Mars, (Marr) qui est chef Ingenieur. Il me paroit que tous les deux ont tort.

Le chev. Boid est allé au Roy pour demander à aller à Gibraltar, Le R. lui a dit qu'il y penseroit.

On parle de Lt G. Lenox pour remplasser le Gl. Heathfield,—celui cy a ordonné que ses Os fussent transporté à Gibraltar.

Mardy 20. Le Baron a dinné ches moy. J'ai été à la secretaire de Guerres.

Mercredy ie 21. Eté chés Lord Amherst ou je lui ay parlé sur le conte de Prevost. Il me fit voir la Lettre qu'il lui avoit ecritte pr le prier de lui procurer une compagnie parce qu'il n'etoit plus en Etat d'acheter, Il vouloit aussi etre employée en recrue, mais nous nous convimes qu'il convenoit qu'il joignit le Regimt dinné ches Nepean avec l'Admiral Pigot, le Gen! Faucet, le Gen! Clarck & le Capt. Croffort [Crawford] resté jusques à 11 heures, nous avons parlé peu du Canada.

Went in the evening to see my nieces, who have returned from seabathing.

18. Sunday. Captain Vanderput who called, told me that he had sent from the Thames 4,78/ sailors who were pressed here. He said he had known for a long time that England had promised the King of Prussia to send 12 ships of the line into the Mediterranean in the course of July if His Majesty required them.

19. Monday. Captain Prevest came to communicate to me a petition which Lord Amherst had advised him to present to the Secretary of War, which I thought very good. He told me that Mr. Prevost had failed to obtain the company which Captain Dobson had got in my regiment; that the Secretary of War had told him that as the officer who had left had obtained a company of Pensioners, the King had ordered him to appoint a half pay Captain.

Prevost's protectors are Lord Sydney and Mr. Rose, who is urged by Mrs. Nesbit who has great influence over him and a Lady Warren, &c.

Prevost says he would not accept a captain lieutenancy. He has been very intimate with Prince Edward; it was he who obtained for him permission to have horses at Geneva and managed all his parties of pleasure. He has received several obliging letters and the Prince offered him a company in the Hanoverian Guards, &c. He studied for the Bar and was to be received as a doc'or when the troubles in Geneva began; he took up arms in defence of the magistracy and had a uniform made for the Genevese dragoons, in which he appears as an officer. General A. Prevost procured him an ensigney in his battalion. He joined it in 1782 in the West Indies, two months before the peace; the battalion was reduced shortly after (in June 1783), and Prevost went to Geneva where he has enjoyed half pay for five years. He was then replaced as ensign shortly after; two new battalions were raised and I did my utmost to obtain a lieutenancy for him, which cost me much trouble. He was for some time at Chatham to receive recruits. He found means to go to Geneva, where he paid his court to Prince Edward, the son of Mr. Rose and some ladies, who have recommended him here, and it is through them he hopes to obtain a company. I do not believe that he has been altogether three years with the regiment. His lieutenant's commission is dated the 25th June, 1781. He quarrelled very unseasonably with Major Whitesake [Whiteside] of the 4th Battalion, because he entered into the battalion. The latter, brother in law of Mrs. Lewis, must have written about it. He is generally turbulent, and wishes to direct and interfere in every thing.

He desires to profit by the services of General Prevest (to the prejudice of the children), so that he may secure advancement. As to the affairs of Gibraltar, Prevos' lold me the Prince behaves very well. He dines once a week with O'Hara and will have (?) with him. Further, he sees him only in the evening. The Prince has a passion for horses, has the ears of the asses and mules cut, &c. O'Hara is not liked; he is too severe. He is at this moment embroiled with Colonel Mars [ Marr], who is chief engineer. It seems to me that both are wrong.

Boyd has gone to the King to ask to go to Gibraltar. The King told him he must think of it,

It is said that Lieut.-General Lonox is to take the place of General Heathfield; the latter ordered that his remains are to be taken to Gibraltar.

Tuesday. The Baron dined with me. Went to the Secretary of War.

Wednesday. Was at Lord Amherst's, to whom I spoke regarding Provost. He showed me a letter he had written, begging him to procure him a company, as he was no longer in a position to purchase. He also wished to be employed in recruiting, but we agreed that it would be more suitable that he should join his regiment. Dined at Nepean's with Admiral Pigot, General Fawcett, General Clarke and Captain Croffort [Crawford]. We stayed till eleven; spoke little about Canada,

Le jeudy 22.

Eté chés Lord Amhert qui me fait envoyer les Lettres qu'il a reçues du Canada sur les affaires des jesuittes, je lui ay premis d'en parler au G¹ Clarck & d'en ecrire à Mr Williams. Budé, le Baron & le G¹ Cammond ont dinné ches moy le dinné excellent -eté à Hamstead.

Le Vendredy 23.

Ld Amherst ma fait visitte à 8 heure du matin pour m'invitter à aller à Mt Real. J'ay été au Levé. Le Gl Clarck ma accompagné ches moy, pr me faire plusieurs questions sur le Canada. Il me demanda si Davisson pouvois fui convenir pr secretaire, je lui ay dit que Oui. Il souhaitte de monor deux officiers avec Lui qui Lui sont fort attachés, & il souhaittoit de savoir s'il n'y avoit point d'employe ou de revenant bon, qu'il peut leur accorder &c. Il me demandat si je croyois qu'il peut vivre dessement avec 1500 L. par année, &c. Il me promit de venir dinner ches moy Vendredy prochain.

Samedy 24. Dinné ches moy fait visitte à Mrs Coore.

Dimanche 25. fait visitte au Baron Alversleben qui masseure fort amicalement & vouloit que je dinnasse avec Lui. Il etoit fort curieux de savoir si le Roy avoit nomé au Gr de Gibraltar. Il me dit lorsque je le quittay si javois quelque chose a faire dire au Roi, qu'il le ver vit demain & qu'il avoit contume de Lui demander qu'il avoit vu, & que vraysemblablemt Il lui parleroit de moy.

Lundy 26. Le Capt Prevost me communiqua la requete que Ld Amherst Lui avoit conseillé de presenter au Secretaire de la Guerre que j'approuve fort. Mardy 27.

Les Baions ont diné ches moy.

Mercredy 23. Je fus au Levé ou il y avoit peu de monde.

Jeudy 29. Eté au Cercle qui n'étoit pas nombreux. Je parlay à Sir G. Yong au sujet de Lt Prevost il me dit qu'il avoit repondu à Mr Rose.

Le Col Kemble et le Baron ont dinné ches moy.

Vendredy le 30. Lord Amherst, le G1 Clarck, le Baron, Montbrifa, le Col. Amherst ont dinné ches moy. On nous a anonce la mort du General Landon.

Samedy le 31 Mr Inhubar m'est venu faire visitte et ma d't qu'il etoit sur que le Suedois etoient hors de combat - Que L'Imperatrice avoit consenti que le Roi de Hongrie tit une paix Séparée avec les Turcke, et qu'il y avoit toute apparence qu'elle se conclueroit, que le Roi de Prusse qui avoit demandé Datzick & Thorn, s'etoit relaché de ses pretentions, & que le Roi d'Hongrie rendroit aux Turcks toutes les conquettes qu'il avoient faittes, de même que Belgrade. La nouvelle de la perte de la Flotte Suedoise a été annoncée aujourd'huy dans la Gazette. Il y avoit bien de l'Imprudence aux Suedois de rester aussi longtemps dans la position ou ils avaient placée Leur flotte. Cet evenement qui flatera la vanité de l'imperatrice de Russie pouroit l'engager à accorder à la Paix. Le Mi. Genn a dinné ches moy & ma fait part au sujet qui l'a appellé à Londres.

On attribue au conseil d'un cape de vaisseau Anglois, l'endroit ou le Roy de Suede à mis la Flotte.

Le 4e Aoust. On a reçu la nouvelle de l'avantage que le Roy de Suede a remporté sur les Russes avec la Flotte de Galere.

- 22. Thursday. Was at Lord Amherst's, who has the letters sent me which he received from Canada on the affairs of the Jesuits. I promised to speak about them to General Clarke and to write to Mr. Williams. Budé, the Baron and General Camboold dined with me. The dinner excellent. Was at Hampstead.
- 23. Friday. Lord Amherst paid me a visit at eight in the morning to invite me to go to Montreal. Was at the levée. General Clarke accompanied me home, to put several questions to me about Canada. He asked me if Davison would suit as his secretary. I said yes. He wished to take two officers who are much attached to him and he wished to know if there were no office or good employment he could give them, &c. He asked me if I believed he could live respectably on £1,500 a year &c. He promised to come and dine with me on Friday next.
  - 24. Saturday. Dined at home. Visited Mrs. Coore.
- 25. Sunday. Paid a visit to the Baron Alvensleben who received me in a very friendly manner and wished me to dine with him. He was very curious to know if the King had appointed any one to the governorship of Gibraltar, and told me, when I left him that if I had anything to be said to the King, he would see him to morrow; that he was accustomed to ask him what he had seen and that probably he would speak of me.
- 26. Monday. Captain Prevost communicated to me the petition which Lord Amherst had advised him to present to the Secretary of War, of which I strongly approved.
  - 27, Tuesday. The Barons dined with me.
  - 28. Wednesday. Was at the levee; very few there.
- 29. Thursday. Was at the Court, which was not numerously attended. I spoke to Sir George Yonge respecting Lieutenant Prevost; he said that he answered Mr. Rose.

Colonel Kemble and the Baron dined with me.

- 30. Friday. Lord Amherst, General Clarke, the Baron, Montbrifa (?) and Colonel Amherst dined with me. General Landon's death was announced.
- 31. Saturday. Mr. Inhubar came to pay me a visit and said that he was sure the Swedes were defeated; that the Empress had consented to the King of Hungary making a separate peace with the Turks, and that there was every appearance it would be concluded; that the King of Prussia, who had demanded Dantzic and Thorn, had given up his claims and that the King of Hungary would restore to the Turks all the conquests he had made, the same as Belgrade. The news of the loss of the Swedish fleet was announced to-day in the Gazette. It was very imprudent of the Swedes to remain so long in the position in which they had placed their fleet. This event, which will flatter the vanity of the Empress of Russia, may had called him to London.

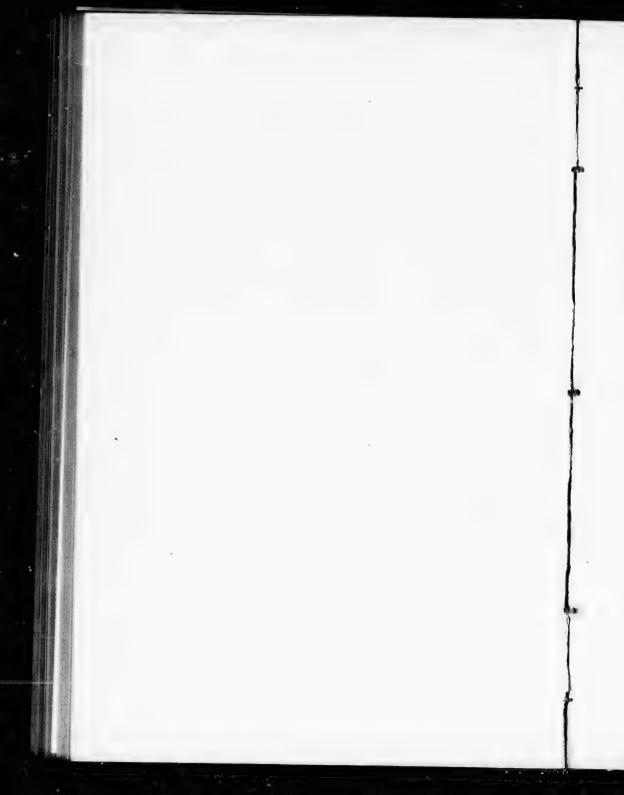

To the captain of a British vessel is attributed the advice as to the place where the King of Sweden put his fleet.

4th August. News has been received of the advantage the King of Sweden has gained over the Russians with a fleet of galleys.

8th August. General Clarke left for Quebec.

9 August. Dined at Baron Alvensleben's.

12th August. Budé, Vandeput, the Baron Regenfeld and Gunn dined with me.

B.M. 21,632

Minutes taken at a meeting of the Governors of South Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania with the Earl of Loudoun. The minutes are signed by Arthur Dobbs, William Denny, Rebert Dinwiddie and Horatio Sharpe. It was proposed by Lord Loudoun that the greatest part of the troops should be employed to the northward; that he would leave for the defence of the southern provinces a battalion of 1,000 men and the three independent companies of 100 men each in South Carolina; about 2,000 effective men (the number is thus stated although only 1,300 are given ) For the security of the whole, the Provinces were to raise enough to make up 5,000 men, in the following proportion:

Pennsylvania ...... 1,400 Maryland.... North Carolina..... South Carolina..... 500 Which joined to the King's Troops.... 1,200

Make in the whole..... 5,000 It was agreed by the meeting that there being danger of an attack on South Carolina, there should be raised for the defence of that Province and to secure Georgia 2,000 men, in the following proportion :-

Five companies of regular troops..... Three independent companies..... Provincial Troops South Carolina ..... 500 North Carolina..... 200 66 44 Virginia..... 400 44 44 Pennsylvania..... 200

Making in the whole ...... 2,000

These troops to be under the command of Lieut. Colonel Bouquet and transported to Charles Town, South Carolina, as soon as possible. Lord Loudoun agreed to supply provisions, but their transport was to be at the expense of the respective Provinces. Conditions were also inserted regarding the quartering of troops necessary for defence.

Instructions by Lord Loudoun to Lieut. Colonel Bouquet, of the 62nd or Royal American Regiment, for his embarkation at Philadelphia for Charles Town, with directions as to his command in defence of the southern provinces. The number of troops is given, and their composition. When he is to consult with the governors; allowance of provisions; courts-martial on regular and provincial troops, &c., &c., Page 110

Loudoun to Lyttleton. Sends copy of minute; is sorry he was not at the meeting. The objection of his Province to sending any considerable number of men from fear of a rising of the blacks is removed, as the additional force sent is enough to overawe them. The character of Bouquet sent to command the troops. His plan to post the 500 men from South Carolina on the frontiers may be changed according to circumstances. Is desirous to save expense to the mother country of forwarding provisions for regulars to so great a distance as the frontiers, which must be more familiar to the provincial troops; and, besides, Charlestown being the place of the greatest importance, the regulars should be kept near it. Other arrangements for provisioning the forces. How the posts in the Cherokee country should be garrisoned. As the force is sent entirely for the protection of South Carolina, he expects they will reinforce the fort at Chota and supply the garrison with provisions. Indian affairs. The necessity for bringing the different Assemblies to bear a share in the defence of the whole, on which the mother country is expending such large sums at present.

May 5, New York Circular of Lord Londoun to the Governors of North and South Carolina and Georgia. Calls attention to the desire of His Majesty that the Councils and Assemblies be applied to in the strongest terms to raise as large a number as possible of provincial troops over and above those needed for immediate defence. Major General Webb is to command at Albany in his (Loudoun's) absence. Colonel Stanwix is to take post in the back part of Pennsylvania with the first battalion of Royal Americans and to have command of the rest of the Pennsylvanian troops, of the troops raised in Maryland and in Virginia, Lieut. Colonel Bouquet is dispatched with other troops to South Carolina, for the security of that and the most southerly Provinces. Reminds them of the agreement as to provisions for the troops left in the Provinces. Hopes they will lose no time in getting the forces ready; that the militia be properly armed, &c., and ready to move on the requisition of the commander. Hopes to receive the same benefit from the militia as was received lately from the militia of the upper part of this country on the attempt of the enemy on Fort William Henry.

September 10, Charlestown.

Bouquet to Governor Dobbs. The arrival of the Highland battalion commanded by Montgomery will save the trouble of sending the 200 men. Does not know what Loudoun will do with all the men here; supposes he will send some to the northward, in which case Dobbs' troops would still be wanted. Recommends officers sent to his Province, owing to the scarcity of men here, to be provided with quarters. Asks that a remedy be found for the exorbitant price charged the officers for provisions.

September 10, Charlestown.

Same to Lieut. Shaw, commanding at Fort George. Will send an officer to relieve him, if he does not soon recover. He is to furnish all the necessary scouts to Fort Loudoun, but Ensign Boggs has not gone as ordered, for want of an escort; does not understand why, as the traders go up and down unmolested. If one is needed, let Boggs have it. Garrison is supplied with provisions; the carriage to be paid by the Province, and the Governor had authorised a gill of rum to each man working in the fort. The men must not imagine they can work or not; all the King's troops must do so when ordered, but the Governor has now consented to allow the men repairing the fort two gills of rum dail, at the experse of the Province. Hopes to hear no more complaints; every man refusing to work is to be confined and punished. Details of the work to be done. Arrival of Montgomery's Highlanders.

September 10. Charlestown.

Bouquet to Captain Paul Demeré. Rolls of men, &c., received. Hopes that he may succeed in keeping the Indians and engaging them to go to If the Carpenter should go in good faith, he could render a good account of the enemy's settlements and the nature and distance of the route by which to reach them. Satisfaction must be received from the people of Silkio (Chilcothe?).

September 10,

Same to General Webb. Arrival of Montgomery with 106 super-Charlestown numerary men; very healthy on arrival, but have become extremely Demands for transports, &c.

September 10,

Same to Lord Loudoun. Substantially the same as the letter to Webb, Charlestown. with the addition that the country is so unhealthy, that all the officers sent out to recruit, as well as the men, have fallen sick.

September 15.

Same to Dobbs. Thanks for the care taken of recruiting officers. Owing Charlestown. to the great expense for provisions will not send Hay and his party further than Newbern. Respecting Montgomery's Highlanders. The news of the grant of £50,000 to Virginia and the two Carolinas is very agreeable to him; this gratification was necessary to enable these Provinces to support the extracrdinary expenses of the service. Is desirous to have a statement of the military condition of the Southern Provinces, and hopes His Excellency will let him have it.

September 17, Charlestown.

Same to Governor Ellis. Thanks him for the care he has taken of the troops. Will take care to put the Province to no expense whatever. No rum is to be provided for the troops in his (Ellis') garrison. His trouble about quarters for the Highland battalion; would rather make two campaigus than settle the quarters in any of the American towns. The great loss of Fort William Henry and the disappointment of the great expedition, the superior force of the enemy having occasioned the return of Lord Londoun to New York. Prosecution of Sloagman. The exchange of artillery is agreeable to Governor Littleton and to him. To send the pieces at the expense of South Carolina after being proved on the spot. His disappointment regarding the provincial troops of South Carolina prevented him from disposing of the independent companies employed in the forts at too great a distance to be relieved by the regulars, their establishment is more suitable to Georgia and he is disposed to employ them in that way. Believes that at present more troops would be burdensome to the town, but so soon as he (Ellis) asks for a reinforcement it shall be sent. Respecting recruiting and the loss of so many men by death, owing to the sickliness of the season, and by desertion. Should be glad to see the progress made in the fortifications.

September 17,

Same to Lieut, Shaw. On account of his ill health he will be Charlestown. relieved by Ensign McIntosh. As the fort is of great importance, asks him to remain with Ensign McIntesh to help him. If his health does not admit of this, he is to give McIntosh all instructions. Nothing has been paid the men for working, except two gills of rum daily. Has done his best to get pay for the men with him (Shaw), but they m st be content to be used like the others; as soon as possible they shall so relieved. It is not easy to get what is necessary to carry on the work, but the best must be done to forward it. How far the officers may go in conciliating the Indians.

Beptember 29.

short to enlist men. Pennsylvania, Virginia and South Carolina enlist for the whole war. He would rather have no troops, than after they began to be of use to have to disband them. Asks him to make suitable arrangements about the troops, as the want of regulations makes himsensible of their necessity. Asks leave to enlist the disbanded six months' men for the Royal Americans. It seems impossible to get recruits in these parts. No news since the report of the loss of Fort William Henry. Troops very sickly; the Highland battalion has over 400 sick.

October 15, Obarlestown.

Bouquet to General Napier. Had sent in July the military returns of the Province for June and July; now sends those for August and September. Work on the fortifications goes on as quickly as circumstances will admit. The Highlanders landed on 1st September; they are very sickly; hopes that as the air is beginning to cool they will soon recover. Death of Dusseaux and resignation of Prevest. Applies for one of the two vacancies in the American battalions. Limited by Act of Parliament to this regiment, there are no other hopes of preferment left, and asks that he will not forget the officers in America,

October 15, October 16,

Same to Lord Barrington. Enclosing returns of the troops. Arrival Charlestown, and sickly state of the Highlanders under Montgomery.

Same to Colonel Hunter. Was glad to hear of his recovery. Charlestowa difficulty of negotiating bills; the inconvenience of this for paying the The troops. Had succeeded in getting money by mere chance, but that .pre arious way will not suit, as besides the pay of the Americans there is the subsistence of the Highlanders to provide for. Can pay until Christmas, but after that does not know where he can place a single bill. There will be such a demand for bills for indigo that military bills cannot be negotiated before spring. Suggestions for overcoming the difficulty. In consequence of the capture of ships by the French, the merchants require six bills to each set. He has only four; asks for two additional with official authority. Respecting the rate of money. Loudoun has ordered back the Virginian troops, but they cannot be spared till January. If they are to go then transports must be sent at the expense of the Province of Virginia. The irregularities of the posts; hopes that the Governor may improve the service. The bad climate; hopes he may not pass another summer here; does not like the country. Friendly messages.

October 16, Charlestown.

Same to Loudoun. Though the Highlanders left with 130 supernumeraries, they have lost so many men that they want all to make up 1,000 privates. Except quarters, they are well provided for. Care shall be taken of the clothing, firelocks, &c. Bill for £5,000 received and receipt sent. Is sorry that Hunter had advised sending bills instead of money; the incorvenience thus caused; the merchants have agreed on a rate to be charged so as to force him to comply with their terms; can see no way to do but to give two per cent, for negotiating the bills ; Mr. B. Smith, the Speaker, is the only man who would do it even at that rate. If the contractors would write themselves, they might get it done at one per cent., but he cannot. Respecting the indigo market and the Virginian troops, who cannot be dispensed with till January, the Highlanders being new to the country and so many sick. The three independent companies are on the frontiers; the provincial regiment has not yet 70 men. The net force for the present consists of the Americans only, reduced by sickness to 300 men fit for duty. Has sent 100 men to Georgia, 100 more are wanted at Port Royal to work on the new fort and with the militia jointly protect that harbour against privateers. It is not "well possible" to carry on the service in this wide country without provincials; it would be the ruin of the troops if they were scattered over 400 and 500 miles on the frontiers besides the immense expense for their provisions. The provincial regiment can never be raised unless the Assembly agree to his proposition to oblige the militia to serve by lot two or three years in the provincials; does not expect them to do it. The arrival of the "Winchelsea" disabled, Transports wanted if the Virginians are to go back. These could be provided from Hampton and if Hunter sent early notice, the men in Georgia could be sent for. This would prevent difficulty in the pay of the transports; no monoy has even been seen from that Province for the pay of their troops. The difficulties of communication. Sends accounts and vouchers. Has been saving to Government, having charged the Province what he could, convinced that the people were able to pay, and seeing how unwilling they were to spend money in providing quarters and necessaries for the troops. Georgia is different. Though extremely poor they have done a good deal, influenced by their Governor, who is indefatigable for their safety and welfare. As it is a frontier to the two powers, and the people unable to repair their decayed forts, recommends that that should be done and the garrisons supplied with provisions at the expense of Government. The bad state of Forts Augusta and Frederica. Fort William is only an advanced post kept to test the right of possession against the Spaniards, the limits not being well fixed. The difficulty of recruiting. The unhealthiness of the country. Names of offi ors on the invalid list. Letter from Governor Dobbs respecting the difficulty of raising men. Has hinted to Governor Dobbs the necessity of having regulations concerning quarters, &s. When the sickly season is over shall try, but does not expect, to complete the five companies. The air has been so infected that even the horses died. Loss of horses by officers; this, with the abominable imposition of the inhabitants, renders it impossible for any officer to be employed on his pay in recruiting. Has shown Governor Lyttleton the necessity of putting a stop to such robbery by a law to fix the rate to be charged the troops for diet, when provisions cannot be sent, with regulations as to deserters, &c. Hopes the new Assembly will pass such laws. The eternal struggle in America is about quartering the men in towns; the only effect of solicitations is ill humour; cannot even get straw for the Americans, what could be got was given to the Highlanders. The town is large, the public houses few and bad; had the men been divided among the inhabitants nobody would have suffered much, and half of the men lost by death or desertion would have been saved. How the troops are quartered. Sends plan of the town and fortifications; how the works were carried on. Notwithstanding the risk of the town lying open, it has never been possible to get a sufficient number of negroes on the work. Private interest is the first point here. Troops to be employed in building. His design is to make the town defensible.

October 18,

Bouquet to Governor Dinwiddie. Cannot send back to Virginia the two Charlestown. companies as ordered, from want of transports, &c. If they are to go back in January, begs him to arrange for transports, &c. One of the companies has been sent to Savannah, Georgia; as it will require time to recall it, asks him to send notice of the time the transports are to be sent so that the company may be ready. Calls attention to the want of pay of the two companies,

October 18,

Same to Colonel Stanwix Returns sent. Respecting recruiting. No Charlestown. supernumeraries from the Highlanders for the Americans, owing to the many deaths. Clothing received. Ourry has left some in Philadelphia; asks him to inquire about it. Is heartily tired of disputes about quarters.

Transports still here waiting for convoy; fortifications, &c., as in previous

There was added to this letter, dated 27th and 28th October, a request for him to take charge of certain men left, and giving the names of officers on the sick list at Philadelphia and Hampton. Hopes he may be in comfortable winter quarters. Results of recruiting. The Assembly has voted £1,000 sterling for barracks for 1,000 men, but declined to do anything about bedding, & ... without which the barracks are useless. There is no danger of falling in love with South Carolina. If there had been any inclination that way their genteel proceedings would have cured it.

November 9. Charlestown.

Bouquet to Do' bs. Has received list of arms, &c., in his Province; shall write to Lord Loudoun on the necessity of providing arms for the militia. Respecting the sending back of provincial troops to Virginia. Of the steers sent 43 had died and Mr. Stead had to pay for burying them. Late news is so bad that it would be better to have none at Same to Governor Ellis. The provincial troops at Savannah are to be removed to Virginia. The state of the troops generally. Same to Captain Demeré (in French). Hopes he may enjoy his pleasant place of retreat. In respect to replacing the men of the independent companies discharged or recommended to Chelsea, Lord Loudoun writes that each captain must keep his company complete and that returns will show that there are funds enough for this purpose. The companies must be filled with serviceable men and the discharge of all who are unserviceable will increase the recruiting fund. All invalids may, therefore, be sent from Savannah to Charles Town with the company of Virginians. Has no doubt he (Demoré) will do all he can to complete his men in which he (Bouquet) will assist him to be on the same footing as the other King's troops. Asks his opinion of Fort Frederica, and if it is worth being repaired. So soon as he can find time he proposes to December 2, Charlestown. visit Georgia. Lieutenant Doyle to Bouquet. Cannot send any wood to the sick people, no provision being made by the Assembly for wood for hospitals, and only two cords a week for every hundred men.

December 8,

Bouquet to Lieut. Outerbridge, Fort Augusta. Thanks for reporting the state of the fort. Shall desire Governor Ellis to send him a barrel or two of powder. Intends to visit the forts. Asks him to as ist in recruiting.

December 9,

Same to Governor Ellis. Has heard that he had engaged a transport for the Virginian company. Has yet had no answer as to supplying the troops with utensils, &c., at the expense of Government. To send ammunition to Fort Augusta. Congratulates him on the treaty with the Creeks.

A letter dated 9th December, to Governor Dinwiddie, has a note that it was not sent, but instead of it one dated 16th Docember.

December 10,

Same to Lord Londoun. Acknowledges letters; regrets the disagree-Charlestown, able contents of his letters. Major Tulleken will give His Lordship details of the present situation. The arrangements for transports. Refusal of some of the masters to sail without convoy; refers to Captain Hale for details. The Virginian company has arrived; will sail in January. Disposal of troops; would have sent a company of Americans to Savannah, had there been any appearance of danger. The Governor says no troops can be furnished there with bedding or utensils. By the treaties with the Creeks the Province is safe on the land side, and by the fortifications of the town it is safe from privateers. The orders to com plete their number have been given to the captains of the independent companies. They have applied for leave to go north or to England for men. State of Licutenant Outerbridge's health. Has referred the question of allowance of provisions to the consideration of the governor as to the proper time to submit it to the Assembly. Repairs to Fort St. George have changed for the better the conduct of the Indians. The Choctaws are buying goods from the traders and beginning to give up the French interest. The new fortideations are going on with disputch. He dare not speak of quarters; sends the resolutions of the Assembly on the question. The officers cannot agree to the arrangement made by the Assembly. Owing to the delays by the Assembly troops cannot be in quartors before February.

December 10, Charlestown.

Bouquet to Governor Ellis. Captain Mercer arrived with his company; his satisfactory report of the treatment received from him (Ellis). Expects answer as to utensils from Loudoun; has sent no troops as it would be disagreeable to him (Ellis) to see them without bedding, &c., in winter, with no means of supplying them. Had hoped his Indian affairs were settled, but sees that he is still postered with them. Hopes he has more satisfaction with his transactions than he (Bouquet) has; is heartily tired of America; if he could once get rid of it, no consideration would make bim return.

December 16, Charlestown.

Same to Governor Dinwiddie, the arrangements for returning the provincial troops to Virginia.

December 23, Charlest wn. December 25,

Same to Colonel Hunter. Having no money to pay the troops, had taken $2,000 from Mr. Bacot; asks him to pay the amount. Same to Lord Loudoun Asks leave for Victor Duplessis to serve as volunteer in His Lordship's regiment.

Charlestown. December 25, Charlestown

Same to General Webb. Sends returns of troops in the Southern Province.

December 25,

Same to Colonel John Forbes. Has received the general orders Ubarlestown, sont him.

December 25.

Same to Captain Demoté, (in French). The barracks of the old fort Charlestown. are to be demolished, new ones to be built in the fort new being erected, How he is to dispose of his troops. In a month or two will send troops to Georgia for its defence and will visit it to see what is necessary for its security. Has represented to Lord Loudoun the bad condition of his arms; Governor Ellis might lend him the requisite number.

Same to Shall supply the 100 men with provisions on the King's account since the Province cannot furnish them, provided that the carriage of troops and provisions be borne by the Province. What the Act of Parliament specifics is to be furnished by the Province, besides quarters. The commissary has been ordered to supply the troops in Savannah with fresh meat daily. On the 15th another application was sent substituting the word pelition for remonstrance but in the same terms otherwise.

January 24. Charlestown.

Bouquet to Governor Ellis. Is glad to find the Assembly so well disposed. This disposition is so unusual on this continent, that it appears existent ary. Ore company of the Highlanders to be sent to Savanreal specie orders from Lord Loudoun relative to troops for his lines o, His Lordship has allowed provisions for the independent companies, on condition that the Province, should bear the expense of carriage to the back settlements, which has been agreed to. Will supply Fort Augusta with powder as he (Ellis) cannot do so.

1704 Uharlestown.

Bouquet to Colonel John Forbes. Has received his letter from Albany of the 16th November, respecting recruiting. Concerning accounts. Has ordered Captain Goldsmith with Lieutenants Gray and Shaw of the three independent companies on recruiting, but expects no success. I ... rracks are building and furniture voted, but the troops are still in the same situation in regard to quarters as when they landed. Report spread of the removal of the Highlanders to the northward has stopped the building of barracks for the officers. If that regiment is removed the troops left will not be sufficient for the protection of the Province, with so many distant posts. The independents are not above 200; the Americans are not complete, but there are three capital posts on the sea shore to be garrisoned, namely, Charles Town, Port Royal, and George Town, The Carolina Regiment will never be raised; there are now only 200 men mostly of the worst kind; almost naked, so that they are unfit for any duty and can scarcely be exercised unless the sun shines brightly. The last letter from Lord Loudoun took three months and ten days to come &c. Page 74 Same to Lord Londonn. With accounts; the profit on bills drawn.

between the King of Prussia and the French to the month of April, 81 Same to Colonel Hunter. Respecting accounts and the form in which they should be kept, &c., subsistence for his officers not yet received from Colonel Young. Is sorry Governor Dinwiddie has not yet ordered transports for the provincial troops. News from Europe, &c. "The Assembly has at last provided quarters for the force, which will be ready next month, but it has been done with so much reluctance and with such symptoms of disaffection for the troops, that we think ourselves very little obliged to them. There remain still some points to settle, in which I hope we shall succeed and have nothing more to do with them " February 21, Same to Colonel (Forbes?). Had only received his letter of the Charlestown. 6th of December on the first of the month, the " Peggy" having been lost on Cape Roman. The delay has put it out of his power to execute orders respecting clothing, of which details are given. Had begun to despair of getting back to Pennsylvania, the Highlanders being ordered to the northward. After many struggles the troops are finally provided with quarters; the division (Royal Americans) took postession two days ago of the new barracks; 500 Highlanders are also provided for; the barracks for the remainder will be ready soon; hopes the officers will be provided for when the Assembly meets. Has made a bargain with a captain of the provincial troops of North Carolina to recruit the men for this division. Respecting the disposal of men over the number in the other division. all precedent either in Europe or America. In the north the troops are all quartered without the smallest difficulty; those in South Carolina should be put on the same footing as those in other parts of America. Is apprehensive of disputes between the officers and inhabitants owing to the rules; he insists on having all the officers quartered either in barracks properly furnished or in the town, and points out that it is only reasonable to make a sufficient allowance to officers who have removed from their quarters or who have never had any assigned to them since they came to the Province.

March 3. Charlestown.

Bouquet to Lyttleton. With explanation of statements in previous letter and names of officers who removed from their quarters or never had any assigned to them. The furniture required in barracks. The practice in the Northern Provinces, which is detailed in letter from the Quarter Master General.

Letter enclosed from major Robertson, D.Q.M.G. Also enclosed. List of officers removed or who had no quarters assigned to them.

Same to Ensign McIntosh. Approves of his plan for providing cattle for the garrison as stated in his letter of the 9th ultimo. He (Bouquet) will supply the post with provisions; to report monthly the state of the Province. Returns of provisions, &c., to be sent.

Apparently in answer to letter of the 17th February from McIntosh, in which he gives a detail of the difficulties of obtaining provisions and the steps taken to obviate these and to get supplies for the garrison. The letter is stated to be from Lieutenant not Ensign McIntosh.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH GENL AMHERST.

1759 - 1763.

B. 21,634,

1759 March 1 Philadelphia.

Bouquet to General Amherst. Had been left to fortify the different posts on the communication with the Ohio, but was summoned here to see Brigadier Forbes; found him so far gone that he could not see him. The intelligence from Pittsburgh admits of no delay in sending. All accounts are unsettled, and further delay in payment would prove of bad consequence. The 100 Maryland men left at Fort Cumberland reduced by desertion to 25, having received no pay, so that the Fort may be abandoned. Pennsylvanians not yet paid. Deputies of the Six Nations on the Ohio demand an answer. Provisions sent to Pittsburgh not paid for. Orders must be sent to prevent the confusion that will be caused by the death of Forbes.

March 5, New York.

Amherst to Bouquet, His concern at the situation of Forbes. The probability of his death before this reaches and that the troops will be under Bouquet. The importance of keeping up communication with Fort du Quesne. In the state of Forbes' health, his intentions to be carried out. Has desired Governors Fauquier and Sharpe to meet him at Philadelphia. Will give all the assistance he can in clearing the unsettled accounts of last campaign. Has no doubt the Provinces will exert themselves in raising and paying troops, according to the King's pleasure. Hopes to settle the matter of the troops, supposed to garrison Fort Cumberland, with the Governor of Maryland personally. To assure the Indians that he (Amherst) shall not neglect to secure their interests. Is not inclined to believe the Indian reports as to projected attacks on Pittsburgh. Is confident Forbes has left orders for its defence. The enemy should be attacked if it venture too near.

March 7. New York.

Same to Sir John St. Clair (there is no signature). That he is to have all the accounts for the last campaign ready for examination and

March 9, New York.

Same to Bouquet. An Engineer to be stationed at Fort Ligonier to be at hand for duty where wanted. To try to quiet the people of Philadelphia about their accounts.

March 11, Philadelphia.

Bouquet to Amherst. The death of Forbes. Amherst's orders transmitted to Col. Mercer. Satisfaction of the Indians. The garrison of Fort Cumberland reduced to a few men; an officer and 20 men to march there from Bedford. Governor Denny has laid Amherst's message before the Assembly. No precise news of the arrival of the Governors of Virginia and Maryland. Mr Griffiths, a Quaker, has prepared his house for Amherst's reception. He (Bouquet) has taken command of the troops. His reasons for so doing. Objections made by Col. Morris of the 17th; asks for Amherst's decision.

March 13, New York.

Amherst to Bouquet. News of the death of Forbes received. Brigadier Monckton arrived from Halifax to succeed Forbes. Till he reaches Philadelphia, Fouquet to take command. The necessity of having a Genl. in command. Will accept the offer of Mr Griffiths. 14

March 13,

Bouquet to Amherst. The disaffection of the Ohio Indians confirmed; Philadelphia. the difficulty of ascertaining the strongth of the French in these parts. The weakness of the new fort at Pittsburgh. If attacked the garrison to burn it and fall back on Ligonier or Fort Cumberland. The state of the garrisons of Ligonier, Bedford, Cumberland, &c. The possession of the Ohio cannot be secured without 1,000 men and artillery at Pittsburgh. The difficulty with "this obstinate people," to obtain carriages till they are paid; ready money would remove that. The Bouquet to Amhest. Arrival of Governor Sharpe. Governor Fauquier, of Virginia, will not come owing to the objections of his Council and Assembly.

March 18, New York.

Amherst to Bouquet. Does not credit the news from Pittsburgh, but they must be on their guard as much as if they believed the intelligence. Is convinced that, though small, Pittsburgh can be defended successfully against any force the enemy can bring. Has no fear of Ligonier either, but it must be placed in a respectable condition. In event of an attack the whole of the garrisons to move forward to Pittsburgh. Approves of his orders. Trusts that the Pennsylvanians will not delay; their accounts are called in for settlement. Brigadier Stanwix is to take the place of Monekton, appointed elsewhere. Ligonier the proper post to have reinforcements placed for the security of the whole communication. Pittsburgh only fit for defensive operations.

March 18, New York.

Same to the same. Col. Byrd's regiment ready to move to Fort Ligonier, whenever required. No appearance of an offensive campaign to the southward. Will draw regulars "this way" (towards New York,) and four companies of the Royal Americans. As he expects a successful campaign will send for him (Bouquet) to partake in it.

January 16, New York. Amherst to Bouquet. Croghan gone with Indian accounts to Sir William Johnson; their prodigious amount. Has granted a warrant on account of reasons given by Sir William; but orders for Indian presents must be sparing in future. Rum and spirits forbidden to be carried by Indian traders. All officers to enforce this rule.

January 21, New York.

Same to the same. Gage's detachment; under Balfour to proceed to Philadelphia, thence to New-York. Mr. Franks explains why Bouquet's bills on the contractors were refused (See p. 71). No change made in the payment for contingencies. Approves of the distribution of the troops for ease in provisioning them. General complaint of the severe winter. Is surprised at the want of provisions at Niagara.

January 21, New York. Col. William Amherst to the same. Invalids can derive no benefit from Chelsea whilst they remain in this country. Those who can work would be better to remain. The General will send home those who are fit objects.

Postscript. Discrepancy in the charge for supernumeraries. How to be reduced.

January 31, New York.

Amherst to the same. News received of the damage by floods to Fort Pitt; approves of the measures taken for security. Is afraid after all the expense that the same may happen again. Lt. Col. Eyre ordered to report.

February 3, Fort Pitt. Bouquet to Amherst, Liout. Moyer has left Ensign Pauli and 15 men at Sandusky. The blockhouses at Presqu'isle and Venango might be reduced to subaltern commands. Partial clothing only arrived. Ensign Gorrel the only officer willing to purchase.

Amherst to Governor Sharpe. To restore tranquillity in the old Provinces and in those newly acquired, His Majesty desires that each Province raise its quota of men to be in readiness for an early campaign.

Same to Bouquet. Lt. Col. Eyro proceeds to inspect the forts in order to report on the means to be taken for their security. Stanwix provided for; Colonel Provest to take charge of the 1st Reyal Americans. Commissary Leake's remarks on the provision department to the southward. The large number of warmen drawing rations covered to the southward.

The large number of women drawing rations cannot be allowed. 103
Same to same. Proclamation by Bouquet has given offence in Virginia; there seems no reason for it, and letter to Governor Fauquier would, no doubt, explain, but no room must be given for the Colonies to complain of the military power.

Same to the same. Approves of reducing the garrisons at Presqu'Isloand Venango. The two men deserted to the Indians will, no doubt, be given up. He (Bouquet) did right in ordering the Virginian detachments to remain. The Assembly will raise more men for next campaign, the King's commands being before it. Is waiting for the recommendation before promoting Ensign Gorrell.

Bouquet to Amherst. Col. Eyre's arrival; every light given to him to make a full report on the fort, &n. Col. Prevost put in orders as Colonel commandant. Observations on Commissary Leake's remarks on provision department. The danger of the limited service men in the battalion demanding their discharge and there is no fund to re rait. The inconveniencies suffered by the officers. State of the stores at Ligonier and Bedford. There are 200 or 300 prisoners of "our people," still among the Indians, who are promised to be delivered this Spring. Presents to be given for this and for other occasions, but will deal with discretion.

Same to the same. Relative to the complaints of Governor Fauquier, (see p. 105). His reason for preventing outlaws from settling on Indian lands. His further reason was to frustrate the bubble scheme of Colonel Cresup to settle the Ohio. The attempt to bribe him (Butquet) to go into the scheme. His attempt to prevent a scandalous breach of Treaty. Believes that he has incurred the enmity of persons in Virginia about roads and provisions, which leads him to desire a change of command. There is a greediness to engross the lands, which leads to jealousy. The garrisons at Presqu'Isle and Venango will be reduced.

Has made a requisition for recruits and will not, therefor, keep any of the men whose service has expired, but to keep any who will re-onlist. Sees no hope of bringing the whole of the Royal Americans together. Approves of disposing of the flour, &c., at Ligonier and Bedford. The bad effects of transferring the charge of the Indians to the Provinces; they must not get too much ammunition whilst the war lasts and no rum, as its prohibition will prevent many crimes. Is glad of the savings in the Indian Department through Bouquet's care. The English in the hands of Indians must be given up. Supply of provisions sent to Canada. Lieutenant Governor and Council of Virginia satisfied with Bouquet's answer. (see p. 105). Approves of his not allowing traders to pay for licences. 128
Same to the same. Has sent warrant for Croghan's Indian accounts

Is hopeful that by Bouquet's efforts the Indian expenses will be lessened. The prohibition of rum was in consequence of the evils caused by it. The rum seized from the trader to be retained. Men entitled to their discharge will receive it when recruits come in. Is not yet certain as to the destination of the Virginians. Provisions sent to Niagara from Fort William Augustus and Oswego.

Amherst to Bouquet. Major Campbell recalled to take command of the companies of the 42nd and 77th, that were removed to Staten Island. The oldest Captain to take charge in his room and to pursue his route as ordered. 271 Same. Intended disposition of the troops on Lake Erie &c.

Bouquet to Amherst. Major Campbell to proceed to Philadelphia as per Philadelphia. letter of 12th from Amhorst. Too much in the dark to form a plan, but proposes to send the two companies as an escort; to make the garrison defensible, and to clear the communication. Suggests the propriety of abandoning the blockhouses at Venango and LeBeuf, and sending the men to Fort Pitt or Presqu'Isle. The communication from Fort Pitt to Detroit by Sandusky impracticable during a war with the savages, owing to the nature of the ground. The panic general on the frontier. Proposes to form the provincials into rangers, under charge of an officer and to form a new magazine at Fort Pitt.

Amherst to Bouquet. Approves of his arrangements for the protection of the communications. The small remnant of the 77th not sent, the men being so weak from the West Indian distemper. Capt. Dalyell to reinforce Presqu'Isle. Hopkins' Rangers routed on the w y to Detroit by the Irdians. None of the small posts to be given up, as that would encourage the Indians. Every measure to be taken to put a stop to further mischief and bring the Indians to subjection, as every act of kindness is looked on as proceeding from fear. To take temporary measures for the safety of the communication at Fort Pitt. He is to acquaint Governor Hamilton of anything extraordinary. Will reduce the Indians on the Detroit if they have done mischief.

June 25, New York. Amherst to Bouquet. Approves of Ourry's measures for the defence of Fert Bedford, &c. The evil effect of the inhabitants throwing themselves into the power of the Indians. The Indians below spirited up by the defeat of Lieutenant Cuyler's party. Croghan's opinion of the course of the Delawares and other nations probably correct. Indians held are to remain as prisoners. All the troops that could be collected have been sent to him (Bouquet). Is hopeful the Province will raise more mensured Governor Hamilton to use his influence to this end, and get the Legislature to pass an Act to make the turnishing of carriage compulsory. Approves of Croghan having garrisoned Fort Littleton; the expense should be borne by the Province. Sir John St. Clair to be immediately ordered to the communication. Has sent Plumsted and Franks a credit for carriage. They should drive the live cattle and send bread with the troops.

Bouquet to Amherst. Has received the welcome news of the preservation of the Detroit. The reinforcement will enable him to crush out opposition, till orders are given to extirpate the vermin from a country they have furfeited. Movements of the troops to Bedford and Lig. nier. Would be sorry to be under any obligations to the Cherokees, and the Catawbas are no longer a nation. Would prefer to kill every savage than to be doubtful whether he is friend or foe.

June 28, Boston. Mrs Mary Clapham to the same. Asking that inquiry should be made, on behalf of the orphans, into the affairs of Lieutenant William, Clapham, killed near Lake Erie in Jure 1762, and of Colonel Clapham, killed at Pittsburgh, in May last (1763).

June 29, New York. Amberst to Bouquet. Their sentiments exactly agree as to the treatment of Indians. He wishes to hear of no prisoners should the villains be met with in arms. Those concerned in the murder of Davis, Robertson, &c, or were at the attack on the detachment for Detroit, will certainly be put to death. Moven ents of troops. Sir John St. Clair has left. Bouquet to direct his movements.

June 29, Carlisle.

Bouquet to Amherst. Arrival of the two light companies of the 42nd and 77th. A general panie has seized the inhabitants, so that no carriage can be found for provisions, &c. A detachment leaving for Ligonier by way of Bedford. Few Indians yet on these frontiers, but every tree has become an Indian for the terrified inhabitants.

July 2. New York.

Amherst to Bouquet. All the troops to be pushed forward to Presqu'Isle and Niagara. Bouquet to go no farther than Fort Pitt, to be in readiness. Ship carpenters to be sent to Presqu'Isle from Fort Pitt to build lake eraft. Major Gladwin to have charge of troops for retaking any forts that may have fallen. He is to forward his objects. Encloses letter from Col. Clapham's daughter (see p. 290). No traders to pass the posts until the savages are entirely reduced.

July 3, Carlisle. Bouquet to Amherst. The loss of the posts of Presqu'Isle, LeBœuf and Venango. The destruction of Presqu'Isle involves a change of plans; desires instruction. Fort Pitt has provisions enough not to require much risk for solding in a supply. On account of the harvest Pennsylvania cannot raise troops for six weeks or two months, and has no militia law. The Indians will cool down and be more easily dealt with then. The fright of the inhabitants makes it difficult to obtain carriage. Has made a demand on the Governor for arms, and proposes to collect the frontier people in stockaded places for defence. The 2nd company of the 42nd will arrive on the 5th. He has secured all the provisions and powder possible.

July 7, New York Amherst to Bouquet. The less of Prosqu'Isle can make no change in his plans. He (Bouquet) must advance the troops, sending reinforcements to Presqu'Isle, as already arranged, only taking care to make their march secure. Will order troops from Ningara to retake Presqu'Isle, If any troops arrive from the West Indies they will be sent to Ningara. He trusts that Pennsylvania will now raise a sufficient force to defend the back settlements. To get rid of all useless people at Fort Pitt as fast as is consistent with safety. The Six Nations reported to be quiet. Approves of Capt. Ecuyer's conduct and trus's that the commander of every post will defend it to the last, and to keep no terms with the savages.

July 7, New York. Same to Governor Hamilton. Calling attention to the necessity for defence; he can use no argument with the Assembly if the present danger to the poor families does not make them open their hearts like men, but he (Hamilton) must use his utmost influence.

July 10, New York. Same to Bouquet. Has applied to Johnson for three or four Indians to send to Capt. Dalyell for intelligence of his motions. Three mon missing at Niagara, supposed to have fallen into the hands of the skulking villains.

July 11, Johnson Hall.

Sir William Johnson to Amherst. Information as to the manner of taking Venango, and the reasons given by the Indians for doing so. Determination of the Onondagas to live and die with the English as declared before all the assembled nations. The Senecas urging the destruction of the English, but are not joined by the other tribes.

July 13, Carlisle.

Bouquet to the same. He will remain at Fort Pitt to forward the work. His disappointment of assistance by the extraordinary vote of the Assembly. Remarks upon the arrangements necessary under the circumstances. Will make the necessary inquiries regarding Colonel Clapham's effects. No traders will be permitted to pass, but they will not be difficult to prevent, as the Indians are murdering from 40 to within 16 miles of this place. The infatuation of the Government of Pennsylvania and the dilatoriness in respect to defence.

July 16, New York. Amherst to Bouquot. Letter of 13th received. Has requested Hamilton to place the provincials under his (Bouquet's) command. He (Bouquet) must be the best judge of what men can be allotted to the several garrisons. Every detachment should be able to act offensively or not be sent. Fort Pitt must not be left so thinly garrisoned as to be in danger. How to attack the Indians. Not to fire cannon, but to let them got near and shoot with small arms. The women and children cannot be sent away too soon. Other arrangements. Is sorry to hear the Indians have done mischief on the Patowmack (Potomac); it should be a spur to the Province in raising men.

July 16, New York. Same to the same. Governor Hamilton has obtained power to raise 700 men; has urged him to use all dispatch. Hamilton has since written that he will place the force so as to protect the men getting in the harvest, a plan to which he (Amherst) is opposed, as he desires the troops raised should he placed under Bouquet for general service, in which case provisions will be issued by the Crown. Bill passed by the Assembly (Pennsylvania) to compel the inhabitants to furnish carriage &c. for the king's service. Sir William Johnson sends information as to Indian movements. The Six Nations are to meet him at German Flats; he believes all but the Senccas will attend. To send a list of white people that fall by the Savages. Amherst to Governor Hamilton. The bill for compelling the inhabitants to furnish carriage &c. will be attended with good consequences. He relies on the commissioners paying the men raised by Croghan for garrisoning Fort Lyttleton. The provincials must be placed under Bouquet's orders or all the measures taken for the security of the country will be frustrated. Lt. Col. the Governor and commissioners (of Pennsylvania) to place the provincials under Bouquet of no avail. "I never saw any men so determined in the right as these people are in their absurdly wrong resolve." Bouquet to Amherst. Will obey orders sent; will send list of persons killed by the Indians. Three more have been massacred at Shippenburg.

Troops and convoy arrived and will rest for two days. Desertion. Pennsylvania has refused to garrison Lyttleton; he has placed some inhabitants in it. - Juniata being decayed is evacuated. Invalids of the 42nd and 77th left to secure Bedford with the assistance of the inhabitants. Highlanders cannot act as flankers, as they lose themselves in the woods; is trying to get 30 woodsmen to march with the troops. Hopes to be able to save the infatuated Pennsylvanians in spite of their endeavours to defeat Amherst's vigorous measures; even the most exposed inhabitants show the same backwardness. No word from Fort Pitt. An Indian prisoner sent to the Ohio for intelligence.

July 26 Bedford.

Same to Colonel Robertson. Is not disappointed at the result of the appeal to the Governor and Commissioners as he knows their indifference to the service. Though utterly abandoned by the very people he is ordered to protect, he will do his best to save them from destruction. His want of men used to the woods; cannot send a Highlander out of sight without running the risk of losing him, which exposes him to surprise. The bad state of the roads causes slow progress. Amherst to Bouquet. Approves of his measures. The unaccountable behaviour of the Province of Pennsylvania. If the persons to blame could be the only sufferers, "it would be but just that they felt the effects of their supineness and timidity." Respecting the reduced officers of the 42nd, courts martial &c. Gladwin has baffled the attempts of the savages, but all the upper posts have been surprised. Dalyell with 260 men had got to Presqu'Isle. The 46th ordered to Niagara, as well as the 80th; the movement of troops consequent on this. The Royal Americans to be brought to Presqu'Isle that they may join the battalion at Pittsburgh. He flatters himself to be soon in a condition to punish the barbarians. Crogham writes that the Delawares and other Indians on this side the Lake will move over when Bouquet reaches Fort Pitt, Wishes there were not an Indian within a thousand miles, as they are more nearly allied to the brute than to the human creation.

Same to Major Campbell, 42nd. The reduced officers shall receive their allowances as usual. The reduction will only take place when the service permits.

Same to Bouquet. Instructions as to the reduction of regiments and filling up by draughts the regiments intended for service in North America. Respecting posts on the Ohio, and the transfer by the French of the fort at the carrying place above the junction of the Wabash. 348
Same to the same. Respecting the reduction of the 42nd and 77th Officers or men desirous of remaining in the country to take up lands, Bouquet to Amberst. Arrival with little further molestation. The Delaware, Shawanese, Wiandots and Mingoes had attacked the fort till they left to march against him (Bouquet); their boldness. Capt. Ecuyer wounded. The ability of that officer and his skilful measures for defence. The good spirit of the inhabitants and troops. Capt. Basset carrying this letter will give information respecting the march &c. Has had no word from Presqu'Isle or Detroit, and all the Indians in this quarter being declared enemies no news can be got. Campbell with 400 men goes to Ligonier for the rest of the convoy. Rangers killed, the rest to be paid off at Bedford. Had the Province assisted this would have been the time to crush the barbarians. More provisions wanted. Officers recommended for promotion.

Same to Col. Amherst. Provisions thrown into the fort, and the Savages defeated. Recommands the case of Major Campbell for consideration, also of Lieut. Dow, wounded and not yet recovered; his anxiety about his (Dow's) son (reduced from the 1st Batt.) should be relieved if possible.

Amherst to Bouquet. Remarks on the actions of the Indians. Promotion of Lieut. Balneavis and appointment of Mr Peebles to be ensign in the 42nd. The intatuated obstinacy of those in power in Pennsylvania in refusing to exert themselves in the defence of the livesand property of the back settlers. Very different in Virginia, where 1000 men have been raised at once, one detachment of which (400) on the way to Fort Comberland had routed a party of Indians. Has written to Col. Stephen (of Virginia) to employ his men on the communication for the security of Fort Pitt &c. Governor Sharpe has furnished the militia on the frontiers of Maryland with arms &c., and orders to act offensively against the Indians. Expects good news from the Detroit. 365

Bouquet to Amberst. Return of Major Campbell and detachment from Ligonier with convoy, saw no savages. The sickness of the men caused by over fatigue prevents him from sending the 42nd and 77th to Presqu'Isle. All the sick and wounded able to go are sent to Bedford.

Indian village burned near Sandusky. The Delawares dejected at their defeat. The Shawanese returning from the Detroit; the Delawares preparing to join them. He (Bouquet) is sending off the Indian messenger to Presqu'Isle with letters for Gladwin. 300 good men would enable him to burn and destroy all the Delaware towns and clear the country of all that vermin.

August 29, New York. Amherst to Lt. Governor Fauquier (Virginia.) With copy of letter to Col. Stephen and reference to Bouquet's rout of the Indians near Bushy Run. The Virginian volunteers should be employed in destroying the Shawanese settlements; he (Amherst) would try to spare a few men from Fort Pitt to join. Flatters himself that there will soon be favourable accounts from Detroit.

August 31, New York. Same to Col. Stephen. Respecting the proposed attack on the Shawanese settlements.

August 31, New York. Col. Amherst to Bouquet. Hopes his (Bouquet's) victory will lay the foundation for future peace. Will do every thing possible for Major Campbell. The family of an officer of such merit as Lieut, Dow shall never want the countenance and assistance of the General.

August 31, New York. Amherst to the same. His satisfaction at the force under Bouquet having reached Fort Pitt, after defeating the Indians. He approves of his (Bouquet's) tactics on the second d.y's fight. Respecting promotions in the 42nd. Approves of the discharge of the rangers of whom he has a poor opinion. Olders given to forward provisions on Ourry's demand. Orders to Stephen as to his movements against the Indians, with whom Bouquet is to concert measures. Will give Basset leave on account of his health. He approves of Capt. Ecuyer's conduct. Gladwin instructed to have an eye to Presqu'Isle and to send troops to meet those from Fort Pitt, so as to act against Indian settlements in the neighbourhood.

September 1, Fort Pitt. Proceedings of a Court of Inquiry held by order of Col. Bouquet to inquire why an Indian, named Andrew, did not proceed with a packet to Presqu'Isle. The defence states that it was owing to the reports of the blocking up of the roads by Indians, namely, Ottawas and Chippewas.

Recapitulating contents of previous letters; he remonstrates on the early and general suppression of allowance for provisions during the present savage war, but will do his best to soften the discouragement of the soldiers on hearing of it. Is glad that the 1.60th is to be together again. The French garrison on the Ohio might be relieved from Fort Pitt. The unnatural obstinacy of the Government of Pennsylvania may draw on a lingering war. The Provinces of Virginia and Maryland have exerted themselves, but there is no law to compel their militia to leave the Provinces. It is evident that the whole body of the Indians, except the Five Nations are concerned in the present insurrection. Their ammunition must soon give out.

October 24, Fort Pitt. Bouquet to Amherst. Arrangements for the reduction of the 42nd and 77th. Orders sent to the 60th in South Carolina. The steadiness of the Five Nations and Canadian Indians is agreeable; the losses at Niagara &c., most unfortunate. The escorting provisions &c., made offensive operations impossible. No assistance from Pennsylvania and Maryland. Stephen has furnished 94 volunteers for escort duty, but will not help to attack the Delawares without a certain numbur of woodmen. Cannot employ regulars in the woods against savages. The attack against the Shawanese settlements requires a large force. Stephen can raise 1,000 men if the question whether the Crown or the Colony is to pay the expense is settled. If it is, November is the best month for the attack. The remains of the militia being naked are going down. He recommends them for an allowance of pay. The small number of Royal Americans remaining makes it necessary to employ the 42nd as a garrison. Proposed distribution of troops.

October 27, New York. Amberst to Bouquet. Has arranged with Sir William Johnson at Albany to try to keep the Five Nations quiet till the season arrive for operations into the heart of the enemy's settlements. Movements of officers. Has written Governor Boone to order arms, &c., to complete the companies, from those belonging to the independents till they can be replaced. Ourry setting out with a convoy of provisions for Fort Pitt; Indians infesting the communication. Stephen offers a respectable force when he heart from the Lieut, Governor. It is too late this season, but when the winter is over, he (Amberst) trusts they shall be able to put in execution a proper plan for taking ample vengeance on the barbarians. Brigadier Stanwix to Bouquet, Philadelphia. Can conceive the disagreeable nature of last summer's work. The Quarter Master General, Brigedier Mclekton and Colonel Young will settle the rest. Has no objectien to Harding and Leirder going cut, if good men come in their room. General Amherst leaves all these things to go by seniority, the companies being effered to the senior lieutenant captains, and so on downwards. There are more companies to be sold than purchasers to be found in young regiments. Leinder and Harding sent to Maryland, Virginia or the lower country, to try their hands at recruiting. The necessity of them (Stanwix and Bouquet) making a jurction. Amherst understands this, but will make no change till final orders are received from England. (No address but begins, "Dear General,") Had received the four companies on arrival; in better order than he expected, but in want of tailors and gun makers to repair their clothing and arms. Shall discharge the men totally unfit for service and retain invalids fit for garrison duty. Arrival of Lieut. Blane and party; the others left sick at Ligonier. Bad news from the frontier; the magazines empty, the reads spoiled and the bridges carried away by the last flood. The cremy have appeared on the communication, have killed and scalped 11 sick going to Redford, and taken a prisoner at Ligonier where Lloyd and Mackerzie do not agree well. The 300 Vinginiars were not marched, which will be no disappointment; has written to their Colonel to repair the worst parts of the read and to make a new bridge. Bouquet to Stanwix. Gratification at the good opinion of him by Stanwix, Has succeeded at York (York Town) in getting at least 50 waggons, which shall begin to move in 10 or 12 days. Stevenson her agreed to manage the transport, going direct to Belford which will save roads, forage and time. Advertisements wanted for the counties of York, Berks and Cumberland, 200 for each county. Mr. Allen spoke to the people from the bench an I recommended the service in the strongest terms. Will be to night at Reading; will meet the chief men, and hopes to settle with them and be at Pailadelphia on Weinesday. Forage will be scarce till after harvest; has collected 6,000 bushels and continues buying. Captain Hambright has executed well the duty of purchasing horses in which he has been employed. The price averages £14. Hambright says he can provide drivers and produce 230 horses within a fortnight, but they must wait till the money can be raised as the horses must be paid for in ready cash. Memo on the same subject to Stevenson. Stanwix to Colonel Byrd. Had reseived his letter from Belford of 21st July. The last letter sent by him (Stanwix) was lost, the express being taken by the Indians. On arrival at Liganier, he is to send 400 of his regime it to repair the roads from there to Firt Badford. The importance of the work; how tools are to be got. The garrison to be reduced at Pittsburgh so that a magazine may be formed there and at least a month's provisions for 1,000 men. After that Gordon with an escort of 450 men could march with a large convoy from Ligonier to begin the work at Pittsburgh. Tae communication with the Monongahela must be laid aside for the present, and the rest of the men and artificers are to join the convoy at Bolford.

August 23, Fort Belterd.

Bouquet to Stanwix. Had succeeded in getting 16 waggons to Ligonier and 23 to Pittsburgh. They set out with the rest of Gordon's stores except the lead. The King's horses could not be shod in time, but they will go to-morrow with 5) waggons. There are 32 waggons coming with forage from Carlisle, on which he would try his rhetoric and the winning influence of the dollars. Has contracted with Ramsay to send 1,000 barrels of flour or 50,000 pounds on or before the beginning of October, and the same amount every fortnight, under the penalty of £1,000 sterling; has advanced him £1,000 Virginian currency. Has also contracted with Graham, another merchant, to deliver 600 bushels of salt at the same place. The saving in transport, etc., by these two contracts. Burd with upwards of 100 men will try to open the road from the Great Meadows and to build store houses, etc., on the Monongabela; has supplied him with provisions &c.; head carpenters to be sent from Pittsburgh to direct the work. Has paid the Catawbas. Sends saddle bags with silver Indian trinkets.

August 23, Ligonier.

Stanwix to Bouquet. Has arrived last night; expects the baggage waggons to-day. Sends 20 waggons to Bedford under escort of Captain Robinson's Highlanders, to assist in sending them back loaded. He expects 68 waggons from Pittsburgh. What cannot be loaded here back to Pittsburgh shall be sent to be loaded at Bedford and this is to be the general rule. Other details on the subject of transport, &c. Major Stewart has done wonders to the road so far as he has gone. He was left at the Shades of Death, which infamous road it is hoped he will mend well. Byrd is to open the road from this to Laurel Hill; the Pennsylvanians to mend from this to Pittsburgh, August 24, Fort Ligonier.

Same to the same. Is glad he has prevailed to get 16 waggons to come here and 23 to go through to Pittsburgh. Approves of his contract with Rameay, to forward the formation of a magazine at Pittsburgh, on which the whole depends. Respecting money. The saddle bags with trinkets received; will not open them till he gets to Pittsburgh Same to the same. Letters received The salt is on the road to Win-Fort Bedford. chester from Red Stone Creek. The 200 pack horses from Virginia with flour arrived at Fort Cumberland. Byrd sends 68 to him (Bouquot); the rest are to load forage for Pittsburgh. Almost a total stagnation of waggors since he (Bouquet) left; scarcely enough arriving to keep the stores full and feed the horses beyond the mountain; 400 pack horses are gone to Ligonier. Many horses unfit to work are sent to pasture. Captain Hambright is coming with 30 new waggons loaded with forage for Pittsburgh. The 500 new pack horses daily expected. If half that promised from Philadelphia is received it will be well. Roads finished to Ligonicr. Supplies of flour at Pittsburgh. Captain Gorden's stores being gone, the carriages will be left for flour and forage. Liquor and salt gone up. He (Bouquet) should be able to feed 3,000 men including Indians at Pittsburgh. Will come himself after Hambright's arrival. Is pestered with 16 Catawbas come on Girt's invitation; Mercer ordered to send them back as cheaply as possible. Mercer states that gold and silver would purchase in Virginia double what would be done with paper currency. Suggests that the Morongahela should be reconnoitred a little above the mouth of Red River Cicek.

Beptember 2, Pittsburgh.

Same to the same. Has enough to feed 300 more men than he has, He has ordered Byrd to march up 300 of his Virginian regiment. Gordon having received tools, calls for more men than he can give, he (Bouquet) is to send up 300 or 400 of the first and second battalions of Pennsylvanian regiment to Ligonier. Stevens to march here with the rest of the Virginian regiment. Another convey expected from Virginia, which will put them beyond fear of starving.

Boptember 7 Fort Bedford. Bouquet to Stanwix. The first battalion of Pennsylvania will march to morrow for Ligouier. The second has gone to Red Stone Creek, part being left at Cumberland to escort the pack horses, &c., from Virginia.

Men ordered to keep up roads, &:. Forage coming in fast; 200 horses will carry 1,200 bushels to Ligonier; the continued rains have prevented the waggons from starting; they go to day. Hambright has engaged 80 good drivers and sent 50 before his brigade who will take better care of the horses than the villains draughted from the new levies. Has sent 100 large beeves to Ligonier since he (Stanwix) left; 100 more go tomorrow, and 100 weekly unless the Indians kill or steal them. It would be a good time to kill at Pittsburgh in November for winter stock. The station from Ligenier to Pittsburgh being too long, suggests to place 50 rangers at the four redoubts. An idle report that 30 Indians were seen near Ligonier.

September 8, Pittsburgh.

Stanwix to Bouquet. Is glad he got the order for the 21000 and that salt is on the way from Winchester to Red River Creek; there are more boats than are needed to carry it forward. Gordon preparing to build six large bateaux. Respecting the supply of provisions and forage. The 215 beeves from Cumberland are very small, not equal to those from the other way. Indians and Indian presents. Shelby surveying the road to Ligonier; how the work is to be done. Ground broken for the fort on the 3rd; slow progress owing to the demand for other services. If the project at Red Stone Creek succeed, he has no doubt a good magazine can be formed here. Amherst's letter stated the reduction of Niagara, and that the French were burning and retiring from Crown Point, Wishes that such disposition of the troops were made for Bedford and Ligonier that those at Bedford should make good all escorts to Pittsburgh, so that the work could be carried on there without the troops being taken off for escort, &c.

September 11,

Bouquet to Stanwix. He may be easy respecting stores for the future. Fort Bedford. Forage coming from all quarters; the quantities sent off. Details of provisions, &c. Mercer has been successful on the frontiers of Virginia and Maryland; if the river prove navigable there will be no want. Arrangements for escort duty. Tools wanted for Armstrong to repair the road. Good news expected from below. Money wanted, &c.

September 12, Bedford.

Same to the same. It is lucky a door was opened in Virginia and Maryland, as Pennsylvania has atmost abandoned them. List showing how little the counties of that Provinco will do, but yet he can feed 3,000 men at Pittsburgh for three months and lay in six months provisions for 1,000 men. Details on this point, &c.

Bouquet to Stanwix. Has no return of the troops at Pittsburgh; Fort Bedford, hopes to get it to judge of the consumption. Account of forage sent and to be sent to Ligonier, with flour, &c. Shovels and spades shall be forwarded. Men ordered to repair the road to the three redoubts; thinks 150 or 200 men would be enough at Ligonier. Armstrong could work at the roads from the three redoubts till he meets shelby. If some one acquainted with the blazes were sent to direct, the road could be cut in half the time. Hogs can easily be got when orders are given for winter garrisons. Supplies of forage daily arriving. Delays of supplies from Virginia, as it takes time to advertise and get the people in motion, but Mercer writes he has had good success, waiting only for money;

Stanwix to Bouquet. Had wished Patterson to go on a scout with an Indian or two, but as he was disappointed of the white men, he (Patterson) is to come to Pittsburgh. The returns show that he (Stanwix) has only 300 or 400 barrels of flour and Stevens has as yet but little flour at Ligonier, but has no doubt he (Bouquet) can send a plentiful supply till that from Virginia is at Redstone Creek. Respecting the care of salt provisions. Money will be sent by Barron, but as the £1,000 in gold cannot be sent to Virginia, the Virginians must be obliged to deal in their own paper. Commissaries for Bedford and Cumberland; that fort must be repaired. Will leave as many troops at Bedford as can be covered and fed; bedding wanted. Hopes Red Stone Creek will be made a good communication. Money sent (about £10,000 currency). If there are not troops enough for escort at Ligonier he may call for men of the third battalion, as he hopes in future to hear of few Indians near the settlement. The man of the first battalion Royal Americans to be sent up; great want of tents. Promotions in that battalion.

September 19, Winchester. Lieut, Colonel Mercer to Stanwiz. Has reported his proceedings to Bouquet as ordered. The damage done to the pack horses by the badly made saddles. Two merchants of this town have sent one Cunningham as their factor with Indian goods. It is a new trade, and on the report depends the settlement of the question of many others going out. Money wanted for various services given in detail. So often has the public faith been broken that the people will not deal with him except on his own personel engagement. Rutherford is left without money and he (Mercer) has to keep up his credit. The neglect to send money hurts the service. Bouquet has ordered a supply of money to Rutherford, but he has none and would have been obliged to let a man go who wanted half a crown had he not assisted him.

September 19, Pittsburgh.

Stanwix to Bouquet. The state of flour still very low. Instructions to Armstrong about roads are right. Hopes to keep at least 600 or 700 men in Pittsburgh for the winter. Timber for barrels to be cut, Morton's illness; hopes with the assistance sent him he may be able to carry on the service till Hambright arrives. Money sent and arrangements respecting bills &c. Sends Byrd's letter from Girt's plantation; will send what he wants up the Monongabela if there be water, &c. 61

September 21, Bedford. Bouquet to Stanwix, Memorandum of money received and how disposed of; note of money still wanted. Delays of Hambright's brigade; it was expected at Carlisle on the 17th and must be on the way to Bedford. Has also been disappointed with the Virginian pack horses; they left their loads for the garrison at Cumberland, the contractors having neglected to send provisions to that post. Reports the state of the supply of waggons, &c. Has had no return of the number of people requiring provisions at Pittsburgh, so does not know the number of carriages wanted for supplying the garrison; he (Stanwix) may be sure of meat and flour for 3,000. How provisions are sent, &c.

September 24, Pittsburgh.

Stanwix to Bouquet. Note of money sent. Is sorry for Hambright's delay. The contractors should supply Cumberland, but they must still depend on them (Bouquet and Stanwix). Is in hopes from Bouquet's calculations they can subsist this campa; and lay in a magazine for six months for 1,000 men. Major Gates has sent a return of the present eaters (the number consuming provisions at Pittsburgh); 100 good workers have been besides ordered from Ligonier; hopes to have captains Hubbert and Shelby here after the roads are monded which should be about the beginning of October. Amhorst still thinks Niagara can be garrisoned from Pittsburgh. Sir William Johnson says those were Prideaux' orders, but says nothing of sending bateaux to carry the troops from Presqu'Isle. Has written that it is impossible to carry out the order, without water, horses or bateaux from Niagara.

September 28, Bedford.

Bouquet to Stanwix. Memorandum respecting money. His calculations as to provisions. Directions to Colonel Armstrong should be sent by Stanwix direct, that men are to be brought to Pittsburgh. Respecting pack horses, their employment, &c. The winter sets in earlier and the grass dies sooner by a fortnight or three weeks between the mountains than on the west of Laurel Hill, which will then be impracticable for pack horses; they will then be employed from Ligonier to Pittsburgh. Stores full of every thing. Humbright arrived; his pack horses and waggons shall be loaded and then he (Bouquet) shall proceed to Ligonier for a couple of days, to put things in a regular way for the campaign and then go to Pittsburgh. The foundations of the fortifications being laid, the work will grow apace. The eternal pack horses from Winehester are at last on the road.

October 2, Bedford. Same to the same. Has forwarded letters; money received. Suggests the propriety of forming a magazine of forage for the horses that will be required next Spring at the fortifications. Hambright's brigade moves to-morrow; a great deal of flour can now be sent to Pittsburgh. Hoops has been deficient with the cattle; has ordered 200 beeves to be sent from Virginia to Pittsburgh; half are already in motion. If he must go to Niagara (which he does not think practicable) he has the satisfaction of knowing that he leaves the department in the best way that could be expected. He will be at Ligonier on the 5th.

October 3, Pittsburgh. Stanwix to Bouquet. Letters a knowledged. Has had 100 men from Armstrong to add to the working party, and has ordered him to send 100 more. Has now only a fortnight's flour; 22 waggons arrived from Ligorier with only 33 barrels; has no doubt he (Bouquet) will hurry more forward. Wants as many men as he can feed, &c. 73 Same to the same. Remarks on contents of letters received. Has had October 7, Pittsburgh.

Same to the same. Remarks on contents of letters received. Has had two parties from Prosqu'Isle of the regiments at Niagara, the one with a letter from Colonel Fauquier that he was not to relieve Niagara, and the other stating that Amherst expected him to relieve Niagara, believing the relief of the Royal Americans to be near or at Prosqu'Isle, and that the latter were to be sent over the lake, with a sufficiency of bateaux to carry the troops over Lake Ontario to Oswego. These things astonish him after he had written that it was impossible to furnish this relief without bateaux, provisions, horses or water, and distress him so much that he will say no more at present. Hopes to see him at Pittsburgh when things are settled. Hears that Hubbert has had the road made to the three redoubts and will soon join Shelby, and come down the road together. Hopes all will be done by the 16th, which will be a great point in favour of getting from this to Ligonier. When the road is done must contrive to get the guns and send ammunition from Ligonier to Pittsburgh.

October 9, Ligonier. Bouquet to Stanwix. Arrived last night; was detained by the weather; the rains have so destroyed the roads between the mountains, that ten horses could hardly get a waggon up the Alleghany, and in coming down to Edmund's swamp they sank above the axles. By the deepness of the road and the additional weight of the rain on their bags, 300 pack horses have been ruined. The debris is expected to-morrow, but does not think the waggons can be here before the 12th. It is a misfortune, but a good deal of flour was here before which will be pushed forward. Had he known the lowness of the stock at Pittsburgh, he could have prevented it, but does not think that a man entrusted with supplying an army was ever treated with such neglect, for except what he learned from him (Stanwix) he got no returns, though he begged to have them from Major Gatos. Sends a note of what provisions are forwarded. Is astonished at the change respecting Ningara, showing that Amherst does not know the immense difficulty of subsisting a handful of men at Pittsburgh, and that none of the country waggons will go beyond Bedford, for which he cannot blame them since he has seen the state of the roads. All the dependence must be an pack horses.

November 26, Cumberland.

Bouquet to Stanwix. Could expect but little from Virginia, but that little bas failed; hears nothing of Mercer or his contractors. He shall lose no time in repairing that breach. Salt sent forward, and has sent for 50 bushels more left on the road from Winchester. How the salt is protected from the wet. The blankets used for this purpose and others sent by Ourry will serve for the troops at Pittsburgh. Ourry is also forwarding 500 head of cattle bought by Hoops. Has bought horses, eleighs, &c., and impressed whatever can carry a load to the Monongahela; though late, hopes the troops will not suffer, "but after the fate! experience of the Virginia promised assistance and resources, any man who would trust them deserves to be served as we are," By the burning of Callender's house at Carlisle he (Bouquet) has lost the papers and receipts concerning the public service besides his luggage and private papers. Money matters. The roads are so bad that he was obliged to leave his waggon and baggage in the woods; only pack horses can be used. So soon as the salt is forwarded he shall proceed to Winchester to finish, if he can, for ever with all these worthy gentlemen &c., &c.

Pecember 8, Pittsburgh. Stanwix to Bouquet. Approves of all he says in his letter of the 20th Money sent as requested. Sends four companies of his battalion to Lancaster, namely, Bouquet's, Stevenson's, Elrington's and Campbell's. Other treops to be sent. The Virginian regiment marched on the 25th odefend Fauquier's Dominion or to assist Lyttleton who is calling on Fauquier for help. Seven bateaux sent to Red Stone Creek are frezen up, Does not expect that he can leave this before January. Barron and Gates have set off to see their wives.

December 20,

Bouquet to Stanwix. Has been detained; has settled for all that was clearly due, but has referred the rest to him (Stanwix). Memorandum on money matters. Salt and pork sent off, the quantity to follow in February, March and April. If there is corn in Pittsburgh, some of the hogs could be kept alive and fat and saved for the use of the sick, &c. Lyttleton has sent word to Fauquier that the Cherokees had offered to deliver up the offenders, but that he leeps marching on intending to hang them in their own town. Major Lewis arrived from Montreal reports that Pennsylvania is keeling only 160 men having disbanded the rest. All the prisoners returned from Canada; Jenkins is at Crown Point; Ryde was sent to New Orleans. The French look on themselves as conquered, having no provisions, bread and meat being three French livres a pound. Their men-of-war above Quebec are to attempt to go down after the retreat of the British fleet. Is glad of his promotion, though the Royal Americans will lose a good colonel. Sets off for York on the way to Lancaster to settle the accounts of the upper country. 85

December 24, Pittsburgh., Stanwix to Bouquet. Asks him to be present at Lancaster, where the troops of the Province of Pennsylvania are to be disbanded, so that he may direct the officers of the four companies of his battalion in recruiting; no greater service can be rendered the tattalion just now than to endeavour to complete it, and his presence will do more than all the January 4, Lancaster.

Bouquet to Stanwix. The measures he has taken for recruiting on the unexpected reduction of the provincial forces of Pennsylvania. There has been no success with the new levies; hopes to have more with the other. The men required have volunteered cheerfully to go back to Bedford which is satisfactory as he heard that last year they did not behave well. They shall be marched immediately after receiving money from Philadelphia to clear them. Hoops sending a new supply of cattle; hogs are ordered from Maryland. Hopes he (Stanwix) will soon receive flour; early in Spring he can have any quantity as the country people are willing to be employed as soon as the horses can get ford in the words. Is uneary about his (Stanwix's) indisposition.

January 10, Pittsburgh.

Stanwix to Bouquet. States the contents of a former letter. Supposes the detachment of this battalion has been marched to Bedford, where Ourly is to command for the present. Well supplied with salt, but the stores do not increase. Cannot increase the garrison for the works, till there are at least 1,000 barrels of flour beforehand, which can be accomplished if the Virginians do any thing at all. Has a good deal of frozen beef, so shall not go on salt provisions till the 20th. If the hogs and sheep arrive monthly as promised, he shall be pretty well off for flesh. Not to stay longer in Lancaster than is agreeable to him, as his (Stanwix,s) gout is getting better and he hopes to leave this in February if the roads

Same to the same. It was lucky he (Bouquot) was at Lancaster, at the breaking up of the Pennsylvanian provincials, from whence he has great hopes of completing the four companies. When recruiting is pretty well over, Elrington to be sent to New Yerk for the clothing of the tattalion. Respecting the other clothing. The four companies to be completely clothed before they leave Lancaster, as it is protable they will march carly in Spring. Instructions to be given to Etherington (elsewhere Elrington) not to delay &c. Shall ablige Prevost with clothing if he can. Amherst's instructions about clothing sent. Money warran's forwarded, with note of the uses to which it is to be applied. The uncommon severity of the weather; will not move till there is a prospect of its being warmer. Not to tie himself down to Lancaster; he can easily pass between that and Philadelphia. Hopes to have flour from the ccuntry people, so that they may know the way to this market (Pittsburgh). Has written Amherst that the fort, works, and garrison on the two communications require 2,000 men, but does not know where to get them. The Pernsylvanians are disbanded and Governor Fauquier writes that the Assembly will keep on foot no more than will secure their own frontiers. Complains of the number of Indians brought in whom he does not know how to feed.

January 26, Pittsburgh.

Same to the same. Hopes he may be able to go a good way in completing the battalion. Major Tullekon stays till he (Bouquet) can come to take command of the battalion. Tulleken's selling out is meantime suspended. Hopes to go home for a reason he (Bouquet) knows. The excessive cold still detains him.

General Monekton to the same. He is to proceed to Carlisle to march Philadelphia. with the four companies of the Royal Americans to Fort Bedford, and on arrival there to send a detachment to Ligonier, the one now there to go to Pitteburgh. Orders that returns be sent of the state of stores as Bedford, escorts for provisions, & 1, to be furnished. Should reinforcements be wanted at Ligonier or Bedford, the troops on the communication to be ordered to join and under his command march to the relief of either. Will be at Carlisle on the fifth of June for a few days, to review and direct the march of the Pennsylvanians. Shall always be happy in concurring with him in any measure for the advancement of His Majesty's service.

He (Bouquet) is at once Padford, sanding the detachment to Monekton to Bouquet. The non arrival of the express leaves him in to proceed with the four companies to Bedford, sending the detachment to Ligonier as ordered, but if immediate aid is wanted at that post or Pittsburgh, he is to proceed by forced marches and without baggage to their relief. His anxiety about the ordnance stores, &c., at Ligonier. If necessary the whole four companies are to proceed by forced marches. Colonel Boyd has been ordered to proceed to Fort Cumberland without delay. He (Bouquet) may open all letters addressed to him, Monckton.

June 7 Carliele.

Horatio Gates to the same. Letters received. The General is sorry for the bad state of the roads; he will send off Byrd with the first battalion of Pennsylvanians with whom tools will be sent to repair the roads. The General desires him (Bouquet) to march to Pittsburgh with all the regulars and provincials that are at Bodford, except the officers and 200 men of the Royal Americans, who are to be left at the post; the detachment for Ligonier, however, to be sent on. Sends letters. The expresses will bring the letters weekly.

June 7, Bouquet to Monekton. In the indian case indian for the present, till Ft. Lyttleton forwarded, he thinks it more prudent to dissemble for the present, till Bouquet to Monokton. In the Indian case mentioned in letter Pittsburgh is better provided, trying in the meantime what Croghan can do. The four companies have arrived here and proceed to-morrow to Bedford. The roads from Loudoun are so bad that almost all the waggons upset. This is partly owing to the heavy rains, partly owing to the neglect of the commanding officers at Loudoun and Ligonier in not repairing that road; has ordered all the men upon it. Wheelwrights wanted to repair waggons at Loudoun and this post.

June 8, Carlisle

Gates to Bouquet. Sends letters, &c, arrived from Pailadelphia. Gordon has just gone; Walters ordered to stay at Bedford with the two companies left there. Byid, with his men, ordered from Cumberland to Bedford.

June 10, Bedford.

Bouquet to Monekton. The four companies arrived here last night. The roads are so bad above Loudoun, that the waggons which attempted to go to Ligonier with only 1,200 weight are halted on the top of the Alleghany, though they put ten horses to one waggon, and can go no further. Pack horses must be used till the weather is settled and the roads can be repaired. Sends returns of the stores; bid state of the storehouses. By orders received in letter from Gates, Captain Schlosser marches to reinforce Fort Ligonier. He (Bouquet) will only have one subaltern to march with him to Pittsburgh, after leaving the officers and detachment at Bofford. The provincial troops here. Will join Schlosser at Stony Creek on the 12th and proceed to Pittsburgh.

Shall open the letters according to orders. Instructions by Monckton to Major Walters sent by orders of Amherst July 6. to relieve the garrison of Niagara with a detachment of the 1st battalion Royal Americans and to take the command at Niagara in place of Colonel Eyre of the 44th regiment. July 6, Pittsburgh. Horatio Gates to Bouquet. The General is pleased to hear he has made so good a setting out. The sutler to accompany him has set off with 20 horse loads of rum; to be joined by 21 horse loads more of "that sweet liquor." The General had hoped the fellow would have taken some wine &e, for the officers, but he looked only to his own profit. To take all the rum for the King's service, which with carriage will be paid for at Pittsburgh. The utmost endeavour to be made to prevent rum from getting among the Indians.

Monckton to the same. To execute Amherst's orders, he has sent a July 6, Fort Pitt. field officer with 400 rank and file of the Royal Americans to relieve Niagara; for taking post at Presqu'Isle, he can only send 100 men of the Virginian regiment, (none of the Pennsylvanians having arrived). Hopes to be able in two days to send a proper detachment to the latter; sends therefore, a letter to Major Gladwin of the 80th, who is to take the relief to Niagara across Lake Erie, to leave 150 of the Americans or of his own detachment, at Presqu'Isle for two days to secure that post. Gladwin has orders if he arrives there first to throw up an intrenchment to serve as such to a block house to be erected there on the most advantageous position, to contain about 150 men with officers in proportion. Captain Croghan with a few Indians are to attend him (Bouquet). He is to give them friendly assurances. Crogban is to invite the chief to meet him (Monckton) at Fort Pitt. Should the Indians, contrary to expectation, prove hostile he has a sufficient force to execute the service with which he is charged. To retain only sufficient men to secure the post till a reinforcement be sent. Sends the instructions for Walters (p. 113). Amherst has ordered Gladwin to leave some of the whale boats on Lake Erie to keep up the communication; six will be sufficient. Injunctions to dispatch &c. July 7 to 17. Journal of the march of a detachment under the command of Colonel Bouquet, from Fort Pitt to Presqu'Isle. The distances given are: Fort Pitt to Venango ...... 811

1423 118 The order of march follows. 124

Horatio Gates to Bouquet. News from Quebec confirmed. Walters need only carry 24 rounds from Presqu'Isle to Niagara; the rest to be left with him (Bouquet). The escort for the horses returning to be from the Virginians.

Bouquet to Monckton. Confusion at leaving; many of the men drunk First Crossing on the 7th when the detachment left Fort Pitt, and had to encamp four miles off, having marched at least six. Has met here Butchins who will give an account of his journey. Is sorry Gladwin has so much the start:

will lose no time and hopes to be at P. esqu'Islo by the 16th. Nobody knows anything of the country but the Indians, and they are almost always drunk. The bad arrangement of the pack horses; and the men are loaded besides carrying tools; the heat is great and there is no water. The bad state of the roads; the Indians in good humour; they get a sheep every night.

aly 9, Fort Pitt. Monokton to Bouquet. Letter sent by Mercer, who marches this morning with 150 Pennsylvanians; hopes he will reach Presqu'isle shortly after Bouquet. Thinks there is no doubt that Quobec is safe, 129

July 10, Fort Pitt. Same to the same. Is sorry to find he has met with so many difficulties. The blame of the horses giving out to soon must lie with the drivers; a strict watch should be kept on them. Sends back Hutchins, who will be of use. Thinks Moreer will make up to him, in which case he need not detain Gladwin a moment. The sutler's horses prossed in to the service, as he had made all the Indians drunk. The men returned have get 150 lashes out of the 300. They shall be sent back, to be given or pardened the remainder according to their behaviour.

July 10, Fort Pitt Same to Gladwin. Hears from Hutchins of his arrival at Presqu'Islo; hopes there need be no detention, but has written Bouquet on that subject.

July 13, Venango, Bouquet to Monekton. Hutchins has delivered the letter; having ridden 11 hours the first and 15 hours the second day. Venango is farther than he and Hutchins thought. Expects Mercer to overtake him soon. Gladwin and his men will not be detained a moment. The fort here burned to the ground and the few huts round it demolished. The ruinous state of the saw mill. The Alloghany here is hardly navigable for canoes. Changes of loads, &c., have improved the pack horses, int their backs very sore still; 13 are left behind tired or lost and two bags of flour, which Mercer brings up. One Virginian lost; supposed to have lost himself in the woods. Croghan goes to Custologas town with presents. B.ker's Journal of the road sent to Gordon.

July 14, Mungo Town Beef River.

Same to the same. The Indian sent from Venango has returned pretending to be lame. Delay on account of the borses and obliged to halt for want of water further on. Has sent word to Gladwin to Presqu'Isle to be ready to receive the Royal Americans and to send men to repair the bridges from Presqu'Isle to Le Beuf. The distance marched is 104 miles, still 39 from Presqu'Isle. The Indians lent horses or several loads must have been left. The horses with sore backs have given out. Has lost no time on the march. Asks for locks for stores and garden seeds, especially turnips. Croghan obliged to stay at Custologastown, the Indians being all drunk and not fit for business.

July 17 to 29, Presqu'Isle.

Journal of Bouquet's arrival; Indians from Detroit sent to observe the motions of the troops, go back after giving friendly assurances. The attack on a party of 20 Indians (p. 308). Minor details given of routine,

July 21. Presqu'Isle. Hugh Moreer to Bouquet. Two of his people found dead and scalped. The sergeant who brings this was wounded. Tracks of the enemy seen going towards the fort. How the bullocks may be safely driven, &c. 308

July 22, Presqu' (sle Instruction (unsigned) to march with a detachment taking the bullocks and horses to the Peninsula. To build a post for a sergeant and party, seeking the best site to discover the Lake and South shore. Other arrangements for the care of the horses, and for getting and sending intelligence. The guards to be alert day and night to prevent surprise to.

July 28, Presqu'Isle. Bouquet to the General. Two men of the party sent to reconnoitre the Peninsula report being attacked by about 2) Indians near its neck.

Captain McNoil sent out with 100 men found the sergeant lying in the water wounded, two men killed and scalped and two missing. It is the same party who assured Croghan they would do no harm. If he had had the whale beats he could have destroyed their cances and probably retaken the two prisoners. Has sent the eattle for grass to the Peninsula, and built a block house on the narrow part of the neck for a sorgeant and party; a redoubt is built for the grass guard. Ualoss attacked by a very large party thinks the Peninsula secure. An Indian who appeared, retreated directly on seeing the post. No timber here fit to build whale boats; would build a pilot boat if approved and if anchors, &c., could be got. Delays owing to alarms, sickness, &c. Asks for one or two patteraroes, or cohorns to give the alarm to recall the workmen. Flints, scythes, &c., wanted for the Indians. Various small details. Page 139

July 28, Pittsburgh.

Monekton to Bouquet. Has received letters and returns by Croghan. Approves of the several steps he (Bouquet) has taken. Loss of pack horses; the horses belonging to the Virginian officers are ruined. Will not attempt with pack horses again, but will try the Ohio; is sending Major Stuart with 100 men in bateaux, to take post at Venange, 50 men to follow with cattle and Patterson with 30 or 40 horses to curry between Venango and Presqu'Islo. Arrangements about flour, tools, &c. Rospecting provisions and demands by Basset. Asks h s opinion about building bateaux and decked vessels, and whether by Gladwin's account there are harbours on the lakes. Intends to build a small post at Le Bouf. Arrangement of the convoys for pack horses, namely the Ponnsylvanians to go to Presqu'Isle and remain there; the Virginians to escort the horses to Venango, and remain there; by this means the garrisons will be exchanged. Good news from all quarters. Return of Virginians almost starved; their stores were expended, and the Indians had none, being all drunk. How military artificers are to be paid. Respecting roads, &c. Sir John St. Clair returned recovered from his illness. Bouquet to Bentinck, asking him to send up wine,

July 29, Presqu'fale. July 30,

Horatio Gates to Bouquet. The flight of the French at Quebec, leaving their cannon, camp equipage, &c. Arrival of St. Clair, looks ill, but eats heartily and if he persevere in drinking moderately will disappoint his executors. As he (Bouquet) is likely to get the first news of the Grand Army, asks him to send the carliest news of the capitulation of Montreal, and in return will send the history of Marshall Broglio's defeat. August 6, Presqu'isle.

Bouquet to Monekton. Arrival of detachment of Virginians and one of Royal Americans from Niagara, where Walters has no flour to spare. The danger of navigation on Shallow Lake Cannot store provisions for a year unless cattle and salt are sent. D. sertion of Ponnsylvanians. Indians arriving almost starved. Hoops taken prisoner; has e-caped from Detroit, reports the number of French troops there.

August 11, Presqu'fale.

Same to the rame. Has received letters by express from Venango, where Major Stuart had not arrived on the 8th. The last heavy rains have raised the water and will facilitate his passage, but will render the swamp near Le Bouf very deep for loaded horses. Grumbling of the men at reduced rations; relieved from Niagara by Amherst's orders. Provisions besides pitch &c. to finish the bateaux asked from Major Walters at Niagara. Is sending Horsey, the master shipwright, to Niagara to see about material for building bateaux and the decked vessel proposed, which will do well on the lake. Horsey has orders also to examine harbours; that at Presqu'Isle is one of the best in the world. Major Gladwin has sent a plan of the coast, too large to send by Horsey. the small post at Le Bouf should be placed; more men wanted to have it finished before the frost. The Virginians have been exchanged with the escort from Venango. Nothing has grown in the garden. State of the road. Condition of the boats. The supply of flour, &c., sufficient in the meantime. Only a few Indians living on the Lake are here; McKee does not understand their language. Wishes Croghan were here to get rid of them.

August 15, Presqu'Isle. Bouquet to Monckton. Arrival of Major Smallman from Venango with a party of Pennsylvanians escorting tools, provisions, &c. The same number of Virginians will go to Venango with the pack horses. Leave of absence to Lieut. Col. Worth. Sends the sketches of the lake, &c. Hoops sends a letter about rations; how they had been settled; have any alterations been made? Three deserters brought from Venango. The heavy rains.

August 20, Pittsburgh. Horatio Gates to Bouquet. The General (Monckton) has received all the letters and will write soon. The present letter is sent by some Six Nation Indians to be attached to his post for obtaining intelligence and to hunt, &c. The venieon they bring in to be bought by the commissary, and issued as rations to the troops. The General has finished his conference with the Indians, who appear more hearty in the cause than ever before.

August 23, Fort Pitt.

Monckton to the same. To supply Basset with such stores as are necessary. Only a small quantity of flour can be sent him from Niagara. Can send no men from here; sends four horses, which with the others he has should be enough. Only a small block house for an officer and 20 or 25 men wanted; will order assistance for this to be sent from Venango. Has written to Niagara to give the shipwright sent there all the assistance that can be given. Deserters to be punished. Indians seem satisfied; they are to receive presents at Fort Pitt only. Orders respecting the venison from the Indians repeated. Is sending warriors to Detroit to demand the prisoners and a principal man of the Six Nation who is in prison there. They will not be satisfied with them alone; if they can be got to strike one stroke, they must be persuaded to pursue it. Major Gladwin's three deserters sent to be forwarded to their regiment. Stores, seeds, &c., sent. Croghan purposes sending Montour up soon. If kept sober he will do well. Is glad he has a better road to Le Montgomery's return to the settlement. Murray pushing on. Monekton to Bouquet. Has sent Montour with some Indians who are to be kept in whole or in part as he may think best. They are to be allowed the same ration as the troops and to be employed hunting. Should the intelligence sent by Croghan (p 161) be true, the Indians will be serviceable. Montour is to call at Custologas to notify the Indians there to be ready. Neither Croghan nor he believes the report. The Indians with him will help him in carrying on the works in quiet.

September 1, Presqu'Isle. Bouquet to Gates. Had received letter by an Indian, who reported the early arrival of pack horses from Venango, but knows nothing of the expected Indians. Return of bateaux from Niagara with a small supply of flour &c.; no more can be sent till the sloop returns from Oswego. No naval stores to be had. Horsey has returned with a good report of the landing near Niagara and of the timber, but as he could get no help had ceme back without doing anything; reports good bays along the coast. His disagreeable situation for want of proper boats; reports the state of those he has. By sending up Buffalo Creek there is rigging at Pittakungh to fit up a vessel. Forty mensent for flour; had been obliged to give his own tent to make a sail for the sailing boat. It is very cold and he does not expect the navigation to remain open after the middle of October.

September 3, Presqu'ile.

Bouquet to Monckton. Pack horses attacked at a mile and a half from the camp; the advanced party (a corporal and some sick on horse back) were fired at by the French and Indians, one killet, three Virginians taken prisoners, but Captain McNeal coming up drove back the enemy and rescued the prisoners. A reinforcement sent, but the enemy did not appear again. Report by a Delaware of a large party of French coming to attack the post. Besides the man killed two are missing. Another man fired at coming from the Peninsula by land, but he escaped. Clapham sent with a boat to reconnoitre. The guard in the redoubt in darger from any small party, and it was reported that there was a larger party than appeared; is too weak to risk any party out but the hunters, the woods being almost impracticable. The Indians will be out after them for two or three days; they have fortunately lost three of their own which makes them more eager to overtake the enemy. Will reinforce the escort of the pack horses as far as LeBeuf.

Gates to Bouquet. The General has received all the letters sent by the Indian. Instructions sent by Hutchins; the method proposed should keep the coast clear and distress the enemy. Good news hourly expected from Philadelphia; it will be sent on arrival. Does not apprehend any serious attack on his (Bouquet's) post and Oroghan says he would have timely intelligence of the enemy's motions. It is believed by many that a separate peace is made with France.

The city w.s without defences, the number of troops diminished and resources exhaus-They were surrounded by three armies, a collective force of 30,000 mon. On the 6th Amherst was in sight of the walls; Murray had carried one of the faubourgs and the army from Like Champlain was at LaPrairie and Longueuil. Had no choice but to capitulate and had made advantageous terms especially for Michillimakinac. The inhabitants are to preserve the free exercise of their religion, to retaim possession of their property, moveable and immoveable and of their furs and to be treated like the other subjects of the King of Great Britain. Privileges granted to the military. The inhebitants being declared by Amherst subjects of his Britannic Majesty, the common law of Paris (Coutume de Paris) is not continued. The troops are to engage not to serve during the war, to lay down their arms and to return to France. The troops at Michillimakinac are under the same conditions and are to go to a seaport to embark for France; the citizens &c will be under the command of the officer sent by Amherst. Copies to be sent to St. Joseph and the neighbouring posts.

September 13, Presqu Isle.

Bouquet to Monckton. Letters brought by Montour and Indians. The little influence possessed by the managor at Pittsburgh over the Indians. Has kept a few Chippewas, whose appearance may be of use, but they will not stay long, this being a bad country for gams. No other Indians are settled on this side of the Lake from Detroit to Niagara, except a few stragglers. Had sent a party after the enemy; they overtook them, when the enemy fled, leaving their meat upon the field. Arrival of flour from Niagara, much of it having served for a breastwork at Oswego all last winter. Sloops ordered to follow Amherst. Reported capture of the French vessels and attack on Isle Royale. Deficiency of oakum for flat boat; will send her to Niagara as she is. Houses will be finished in October and men shall be sent to prepare timber for a block house at Lo Bouf. Respecting the state of the horses. Pennsylvanian deserters severely punished; those from the Royal Americans sent to Niagara. Asks orders about leaving troops; about building vessels, and suggest ins as to preparations for the latter. Canada, but no particulars. Same to the same. Amherst has ordered Major Rogers to send a detachment of regulars to take possession of Detroit, Michillimakinak and their dependencies. Captain Campbell goes for this purpose with 100 men. Carpenters sent to repair and build boats; will write about provisions. As the Assembly of Pennsylvania will not likely furnish men, he will be obliged to get 60 or 70 from Niagara; will write Mercer about them. Cattle sent. The pack horses with Campbell, after delivering their loads, are to continue carrying between Venango and Presqu'Isle; will send as many more as he can get. Rogers thinks French Creek would be navigable were the trees cut that have fallen into it; a captain and 70 or 80 men might be sent to do this, to be supplied with cross out saws which are forwarded. This will also take many enters off, which is a consideration at his post.

October 19, Fort Pitt.

Same to the same. Detailed instructions on the subjects of the preceding letter. Campbell will show him a copy of the capitulation of Canada. All the men that can be spared, besides those to French Creek, to be sent to Fort Pitt to save provisions. When arrangements are made he (Bouquet) is to come down. Carolina in a bad state. the posts cannot be left, the men must be detained at all events. Respecting stores, provisions, &c.

Bougnet to Monekton. Letters received. Arrival of shipwrights; they have repaired and are building boats. Arrival of Campbell with detachment and stores; 40 rangers and 15 Royal Americans sent off with cattle by land, taking bateaux to ferry the men over the river and French Creek. The provisions sent make about two month's supply for them. Five bateaux with rangers went to Niagara for provisions to go to Detroit, which will give three months' supply. Pennsylvanians sent down to clear French Creek, &c. Has kept 25 men at Le Bouf and as many here as will man the six new bateaux for a trip to Niagara, leaving about 20 here. Orders about provisions sent to Walters; fears he has no bateaux. The very bad weather since 1st of October, of which details are given, as well as an account of damages sustained by boats, &c. With the assistance of the Canadians Major Rogers may get to Michillimakinak, which is 120 leagues from Detroit. La Baye is 80 leagues further on the north shore of Lake Michigan. Scarcity of ammunition; has given Rogers what could be spared. Thinks from the difficulty of getting provisions that 80 men will be sufficient for this post and La Pointe. Does not mention the forts on Lake Huron and Superior and others to the west upon the water falling into Hudson's Bay, as it would take two years to see them all.

226, Same to the same. Had arrived last night from Presqu'Isle after waiting till the 19th for the detachment of the Royal Arroricans, but had no word from Walters, although orders were sent on the 31st; the whale boat sent was overtaken by a detachment of rangers and they proceeded together to Niagara, so that the orders must have reached. A boat sent with another message was wrecked. Progress in building bateaux. On the 19th another bateau was sent to Niagara for provisions, only 20 pounds of meat and 3,400 pounds of flour being left. Arrival since of cattle, &c. Peansylvanian and Delaware troops ordered to march to Carlisle, the detachment ordered to relieve the posts as per return enclosed. Shall execute the orders respecting the upper garrisons. A foot express is fixed for each post as far as Juniata, where the chain will break. The Pennsylvanians left at Presqu'Isle and the Virginians keep their posts till the Royal Americans arrive.

Same to the same. Sends monthly returns of the first battalion Royal Americans. From the heavy rains raising the rivers and creeks, it is doubtful if the expresses to Presqu'Isle and Venango can get along. Scarcity of forage. The Virginians in excess of 300 are going down, and out of them Lt. Col. Stephen is to leave a few men at Fort Cumberland. Loss of six waggon horses; carclessness of the Pennsylvanians in this respect; it is suspected that six deserters have stelen them. Has sent orders along the line to have them arrested. Asks instructions respecting the discharge asked for by three and four wags, men.

re pecting the discharge asked for by three and four years' mon. Arrangement he proposes for having the accounts settled.

Monekton to Bouquet. It will be time for the provincials to march down; sends details of the garrisons for the posts, which are to be taken equally from the Americans (Royal) and Virginians. There might be spared 30 or 40 men who would be useful should Amherst decide to let the Virginians go. The garrisons at the advanced posts may perhaps be reduced. He is to order 30 of Walters' men to be detained at Prosqu'isle, on their arrival with provisions. Colonel Stophen or Major Stewart may send away all the Virginians above 300. The battalion under his (Bouquet's) command is to be ready to take the field on the shortest notice. When the Pennsylvanians march, their tenta are to be taken into store. The Assembly will not give a man; they are even going to break the three companies. Spare arms to be stored; expenses to be reduced, details of the savings that can be effected, and accounts rettled. Carpenters to be kept at Presqu'Isle to prepare timber for bateaux and for a vessel on the Lake; Clapham, now at Pittsburgh, to go down to superintend. The Delaware troops at Fort Burd to come down by way of Pittsburgh.

December 2, Fort Pitt. Benquet to Monckton. Has heard from Captain Miles, in command at Presqu'Isle; hopes he will stop desertion till the detachment ordered from Venango can get there. No word of the arrival of the Royal Americans at Prosqu'Isle; doubts if they are coming, in which case it will not be possible to feed above 20 mon there, even if hogs can be get to it, which is doubtful. Desertion of a corporal and five men of the Pennsylvanians sent on escort duty; three are arrested; orders sent down to arrest the corporal and two men who escaped. Bullocks for the upper posts sent to Venango, with salt provisions for that post. The river high and the frost severe; the water is too deep for the bateaux sent by Sir John to use setting poles.

December 4, Fort Pitt. Same to the same. Shows the difficulty of supplying the upper posts. Haldimand, commanding the 4th battalion Royal Americans, writes that he had discharged 125 men, whose time had expired. He (Bouquet) must do the same.

December 7, Philadelphia.

Monckton to Bouquet. His (Bouquet's) presence much wanted at Fort Pitt. Since he sent the distribution of troops others have arrived from Ergland; the General has sent Colonel Vaughan's regiment for this department; the first division arrived yesterday and the remainder will arrive to morrow, which shall be sent forward as soon as the weather shall permit. What is to be done with the Virginians and how many men are to be left at the posts? Hopes he has heard of the safety of the missing. Sends a march route to the commanding officer of the Virginians. If there is difficulty in supplying Le Bouf and Presqu'isle, the Virginians might be sent to Pittsburgh. Russel to be sent down to go with the troops to Carolina, the names of the corps being given. Expresses his satisfaction with Bouquet's conduct. To send a subaltern and twenty of the Royal Americans to Ligonier; and, if they can be spared, the same number to Bedford.

December 20, Fort Pitt.

Bouquet to Monekton. Had been obliged to detain the Virginians till the arrival of Vaughan's first division. With the different duties (enumerated) he has only 154 men fit for duty in the garrison. The gate still open; the frost prevents clearing the ditch; not a stick of wood in the place and none cut in the woods; the Alleghany full of ice and likely to be frozen over soon, and his main spring, Clapham, so ill that he cannot stir. What is to be done with the provisions should the frost prevent them being sent to the posts? It is owing to Major Stewart's activity that the two advanced posts have got the little provisions they have. It is a good thing to have a man who has a head as such men are not common lere, but throw all the burden on the commanding officer, being themselves unconcerned spectators. Arrival of the Pennsylvanians from the upper posts, having been relieved by the Virginians. Orders sent to keep only 60 Royal Americans for Presqu'Isle and Le Bœut. Venango reduced to 40 men. The bad state of the roads; the weather will be more settled in January. Has heard from an Indian that the missing boat was wrecked, but the people saved. Owing to want of accommodation, proposes to drop one company of Vaughan's at Bedford and another at Ligonier, which would relieve Juniata and Stony Creek and a few men might be left at other posts (named) to carry letters, they are Monekton to Bouquet. Letters received; hopes the Virginians arrived in time to relieve the Pennsylvanians at the upper posts. The great loss of the large flat is distressing. Vaughan's regiment that are fit for duty (about 250) are on the march for Pittsburgh. No more men to be sent to the advanced posts than can be supplied. Indians might be employed, as was done by the French; an extraordinary price for venison might encourage them. Leaves the distribution of troops to himself, but thinks the Virginians should garrison Forts Bird and Cumberland, and that Vaughan's regiment might be kept at and below Pittsburgh. Would prefer his delaying the discharge of the men from his battalion till Vaughan's arrival. Is going to New York but will return soon. Asks for the discharge of Henry Haynes.

Same to the same. Hopes as the weather has been favourable that Vaughan's regiment will soon be with him (Bouquet). The General (Amherst) will not consent to the discharge yet of the men of his battalion; those of the 4th were discharged on a particular premise. 228

Same to the same. Sends general orders for publication. His present Majosty (George III) was proclaimed on the 25th of October, the day after the late King's death.

Gates to Ourry, that he has permission to purchase the company in the second battalion of the Royal Americans. How the other steps are to go and the amount of each. Has the General's (Monckton) leave to come to New York, after the march of Vaughan's regiment is settled. 230 Bouquet to Monckton. Had sent orders to the Royal Welsh Volunteers to relieve several posts (named); the Royal Americans to return here and the Virginians to march to Winchester. Reliefs for Venango and LeBouf. Has bought pack horses to save expense. All well at Presqu'Isle; abundance of meat every where. On the arrival of Vaughan will relieve Forts Bird and Cumberland. Vaughan has just arrived and reports Detroit well supplied; ammunition will be sent there; its large consumption, but the rangers are a destructive people. Mather has been given £100 to pay the Indians for venison. Sends list of naval stores wanted for building a docked vessel, Return of Clapham and Affleck; the men who deserted after their misfortune robbed them of every thing and sold the provisions to the Indians. One half of the officers and men of the garrison reized with epidemic cold, resembling pleurisy, caused by variable weather. Why he discharged the men of his battalion, Is sorry for the punishments inflicted during the campaign, which were enough to ruin any regiment; has not punished one man since he joined. Applications for leave to sell out.

Monekton to Bouquet. Letters received. Respecting the repair and building of bateaux &c., to be ready when the weather breaks up. Desires that the road between LeBout and Presqu'Isle be made passable for a waggon if it can be done. To reinforce Presqu'Isle, LeBouf and Venango to enable them to forward provisions, &c. The Virginians to be sent off in detachments as Vaughan's gets up. Preparations for forwarding provisions, &c., and the steps to be taken to prevent damage. How the returns of the corps are to be made up Is plagued about the Virginian contracts for flour. Stoddard's accounts were so complicated that nothing could be made of them. The French prisoners not yet arrived. Ammunition to be sent to Detroit. Respecting promotions. The men who left Irwin on the way to Niagara, should be flogged and sent about their business.

January 26, Fort Pitt. Bouquet to Monckton. General orders received and given out. Arrival of the first and second divisions of Vaughan's regiment. The Virginians have marched to Winchester, Bedford and Cumberland. No men will be discharged from the battalion without the General's orders. Explains certain returns sent. Will at his own expense replace the men he has discharged from the battalion, which he can do in a short time, if permitted to recruit. Had erred by discharging every year part of the men entitled to it; by this means not half as many were discharged as from the fourth battalion, though there were from the beginning not 150 men draughted, all the rest being enlisted for three and four years. Owing to his impaired state of health, asks leave to retire on half pay or sell out.

January 26, Fort Pitt. Same to the same. General orders received. Arrival of Vaughan's last division; march of the Virginian troops by Bedford and Cumberland for Winchester. Asks instruction respecting deserters from the Pennsylvanians. Arrest of a deserter from Belestre's troops; he is a German and says he knows where the French buried iron guns; shall dig for them when the frost goes. Respecting the men discharged from his battalion. 243

February 12, New York. Monckton to Bouquet. Not to retain the German mentioned. Belestre's houses within the fort cannot be sold; what is to be done with those at the Detroit will be determined afterwards. Respecting a deserter. How the Indians are to be victualled. Approves of his course respecting pack horses. Is glad to hear that the upper posts and Detroit are well supplied. The General is displeased with Walters for not forwarding provisions. Respecting money matters, promotions, &c. Is glad he had reenlisted some of the discharged men; will speak to the General about allowing other discharges. Is extremely glad to find that corporal punishment is laid aside, as he never knew a regiment the better for it where carried to excess. The same disease he mentions (p. 234) has prevailed along the continent, and a good many have died of it. Has nothing to add respecting the upper posts.

February 12, New York. Same to the same. Is glad to hear of the arrival of Vaughan, &c. The four Pennsylvanians should get a good flogging. Hopes that Belestre's soldier may find the guns; many have pretended to know where they are. The General is satisfied about the discharge of the men, although he would have liked that they had been detained a little longer. Ammunition may be given to Indians; Crogham can be certain of going against the Cherokees. There is no objection to traders going to Detroit, if they conform to the necessary rules. Is glad the sick recover a little; work at the ditch when the weather permits will do them good.

February 24, Fort Pitt. Bouquet to Monckton. Sends returns. The garrisons of Venango and LeBouf relieved and all the Virginians gone down. The Royal Americans were 22 days on the march to LeBouf; several of them frost bitten. They have flour and salt till April. Artel [Hertel] has returned from Shawanese town, with only six men out of 18, some being left sick, others having deserted; they were all militia of Canada. Liout Butler of the rangers keeps the post at the Miamis; has sent a Franch trader for goods. The Indians being naked and in want of every thing, he has induced Trent and others to trust the Franch trader. February 27, New York.

Monckton to Bouquet. Vaughan's regiment is ordered to Philadelphia by Amherst who has applied to Governor Hamilton for 300 men to replace them; but as they cannot wait to be relieved, he must do the best with the Royal Americans for garrisoning the different posts. Instructions have been sent on the subject to Vaughan. This will leave the posts weak, but there is no help for it. Will hurry up the Pennsylvanians if they can be persuaded to raise them, but doubts of their readiness to comply. No letters have arrived, but two packets are expected.

March 18, Fort Pitt.

Bouquet to Monckton. Letters brought by Hoops, who, with Read, had come to make a survey of provisions. Vaughan's regiment will leave to-morrow; there are none of the men detached beyond this, so has only to relieve Bushy Run, Ligonier and Stony Creek. Vaughan will leave one officer and 20 men at Bedford, and one officer and six men at Juniata. Has sent to Detroit 25 out of 34 oxen received from Virginia: this is the last supply he can send till he is reinforced; Campbell had better get provisions from Niagara and send Canadians to Fort Pitt for cattle, giving timely notice. Sends report of a Court of Inquiry on Mr. Baby and two traders, which contains the facts. The case of Thomson's clerk is more open to indulgence than Blain's, who disobeyed positive orders.

March 20 Fort Pitt.

Same to the same. Answers in detail the questions concerning provisions and gives information respecting water and land communication to Presqu'Isle. The difficulties from obstructions in and the depth of Bouf river; proposes, therefore, that this year only the beaver dams and a narrow channol be opened. Work on the carrying place neglected (there being two used by the French); would employ 300 men for the campaign. The old one must, therefore, be repaired and made passable for waggons in summer, which could be done by 50 men in two months. Arrangements proposed for horses at Le Bouf for land carriage to Presqu'Isle, and for their being kept at the latter place. How oats could be raised at each post. Reports on the use of the vessels for water communication, and how he deals with the bateaux; refers to the Indian department for report on Indians. How his returns are made up. Hes got rid of the Pennsylvanian deserters. Respecting promotions, changes among the officers, &c.

April 5, Monckton to Bouquet. M. Bauy may come to act of allegiance he Philadelph's. debts and go to France, but as he has not taken the oath of allegiance he has not taken the oath of allegiance he has not taken the proposes, and as he attempted to trade without leave, he deserves no indulgence. Captain Nelson with his company of 60, part of the 300 voted by the Assembly, has marched to Bedford; Ourry will follow in a few days; Ligonier can't be better, Blaine being there; the rest of the 300 to go to Fort Pitt as soon as raised. The best way to deal with the traders who supplied Baby against orders is to pull down their houses and banish them, restoring their goods; strict regulations are necessary and Amherst has written Sir William Johnson on the subject. The enormous expense for Indians; it is time they lived by their hunting. Work at the fort. Basset to report what the artificers are doing. The General intends the vessel for the Lake to be built above the Falls. Does not think it worth while to clear French Creek or repair the road till the terms of peace are known. The American battalions are to be reduced to 700, so that those in excess in his (Bouquet's) battalion he will apply for leave to discharge. Vaughan reports people settling on the Monongahela at a distance from the fort; they must be ordered off as they may create disturbances with the Indians. Cannot at present give him leave of absence.

April 6, Philadelphia. Monckton to Bouquet. Is glad to hear that Campbell's party is so healthy. It will be necessary to build more bateaux at Detroit; the ship carpenters are to be ordered there. In the Assembly yesterday it was 15 to 12 against furnishing any more men for His Mujesty's service. 264

April 18, Fort Pitt. Bouquet to Monekton. All well at the post, except Captain Mather, who was so ill that he was allowed to come from Venango; that fort is in good hands, Baillie being vory exact and attentive. Provisions forwarded there and to Presqu'Isle and Le Bœuf. The Lake opened on the 20th of March, but was full of ice till the 1st April, when M. Christie sent a bateau to Niagara for provisions. Letters shall be forwarded and accounts and returns sent by Bentinek.

April 22, Fort Pitt.

Same to the same. Returns, accounts, &c., sent. Note of the prices of corn bought at Venango and Fort Pitt, some more, but not much. can be bought at the same rates; contract made with the country people to earry flour to Venango. The price at which flour can be carried to Red Stone. Death of Stoddard from cold in the woods. John Carlisle applies for the removal of stores left in his charge at Alexandria in Braddock's campaign. Baby has been informed of the General's orders; has allowed him to remain and sell the skins now coming up the river. The goods seized shall be restored to the owners; their clerks were alone guilty and shall be banished and their houses pulled down as an example. (pp. 254, 260.) Sends list of the inhabitants with and without licences. Means he proposes to stop the nightly trade of rum with Indians. Only two contracted ship wrights here; assiduous good workmen. The immense expense for ropairing bateaux; new ones building. at Presqu'Isle; progress of others building. Presqu'Isle to depend on Niagara for supplies. How he would like the troops sent, so as to avoid confusion in the returns. The Lattalion has been reduced as ordered. Separate abstracts shall be sent for the reduced sergeants and supernumeraries. Respecting spare arms and those lost in action, by desertion, &c. Does not understand an order about drummers. Orders sent to drive the people off the Monongahela. Taverns wanted on the road. Croghan and Chapham wish to make a settlement on lands acquired from the Indians, and asks orders thereupon. Has renewed the order forbidding the impressment of horses or carriages except by his own directions; shall impress none himself except from absolute necessity. More waggon horses wanted. Has now six men in the ditch; the sod work is all repaired and he shall begin to make bricks. Is sorry for Bentinck; the permission to purchase offered by the General was kind and his friends in neglecting it have ruined him; suggests that he be employed somewhere during the campaign to save him the mortification of serving as youngest lieutenant in the 45th were stolen out of the stable by Shawanese; one found shot; the others overtaken, but the Indians only laughed at message sont by Croghan and carried them off. The Mingoes at the head of the river carried off ten of Trent's horses, but he has recovered them. The loss is serious just now; has bought two to get wood for the brick yard. The expected 500 men having "vanished" shall only carry on the most necessary work. The 250 shall be employed finishing as much as can be done at the Fort. Captain De Haas' company expected. No success in digging for the French cannon. The French soldier fled but was caught by Trent when looking for his horses; he is in irons and shall be sent to Niagara. Crogban leaves for Niagara.

May 1, New York, Gates to Bouquet. Sends general orders. Burnsly to come to New York to assist the committee in settling Colonel Young's accounts. The 22nd regiment, Montgomery's and Vaughan's sailed yesterday under convoy for Guadaloupe.

May 17, New York.

Monckton to Bouquet. All the provincials ordered to Fort Pitt, except 20 for Bedford and Juniata, and a sergeant and 12 for Ligo-Wonders at the continued ill behaviour of the Indians; Croghan can't be spared till he alters it. Gordon leaves to morrow and will take up horses. Explains orders about the drummers. To hurry Barnsley down about Young's accounts. Bentinck was to have gone to Louisbourg, but Amherst has given him a company in the Royal Scotch, so he only goes to Halifax. Changes in the Ministry and preferments of general officers. He (Monckton) has been appointed to this government. The General (Amberst) complains of the troops being paid for work, as it is the only place in which it is done; asks his sentiments on the subject. The pay might be reduced to the price of a gill of rum, which should not be more than four pence. He may discharge the men of his battalion who are best entitled to it. Gates to the same. the different steps purchased. Bouquet to Monckton. Barnsley leaves for New York, to assist at the so tlement of Young's accounts. The distribution of medals to faithful Indians. Part of De Haas' company has arrived; the rest left behind; the men are encamped on the Monongahela to be near their work at the saw mills &c. Has ordered tents to be repaired for their use. Cochrane resorts his detention by ice on the Lake in April. Concerning stores, &c. All quiet in the posts; the garrisons at Presqu'Isle and Venango might be diminished. Carre sent to Venango to relieve Baillie, who is sick. Has reduced the price of carriage to the posts. The Shawanese stole fifteen horses belonging to Welsh, which were going to Detroit, and forced the drivers to swim them over the river; Welsh has sent men in pursuit. Croghan will state the reason of Baby's stay here, who, the Doctor thinks, will be able to go dewn soon. 283 Same to the same. He has given a pass to two Delawares going to

June 12, Fort Pitt.

Same to the same. Only 30 provincials arrived; 70 more expected tomorrow. The garrison at Ligonier relieved. The sergeant's party sent to Detroit with oxen has returned after great fatigue and want; the horses carrying the flour broke down, and though almost starved they did not kill one butlock. From Sandusky they found continual swamps and often marched middle deep in the water. Campbell complains of the quantity of rum sold at Niagara by Sir William's permits, and of the bad vagabend Mingoes. they go to town, so long as they detain prisoners and steal horses, as they attribute kindness to fear, and he never could get any thing from them by soft words. They have formally thanked him for keeping rum from them. Another bateau upset and provisions lost. Wreek of a large bateau; one man killed and another drowned. Barnsley went down after a party sent to save the provisions, but his bulk does not admit of great diligence. Orders sent for the discharge of men whose time has expired. Commissions have arrived. In England all soldiers are paid when employed on regular fortifications like this, and their allowance of provisions on this continent is necessary on account of the high price of everything. It appearing extraordinary that the men are paid only at this place for working, he enters into an explanation of the reason, which is given at length. Is happy to hear of Bentinck's good fortune, and congradulates Monekton on his promotion.

June 28, New York. Monekton to Bouquet. Clothing for his battalion stopped till the roads improve. The Pennsylvanians having no doubt joined, he is to build a small block house at Lake Sandusky, as a halting place. By a sketch of the Lake he sees that the French had their fort on the north side; prefers the south side for the convenience of bateaux coming and going. The work to be begun at once and the Indians informed of the object. Stores to be examined at Bedford. If the shipwrights will do to build the fort they may be employed, if not they are to be discharged, as they are a heavy loss and have little to do. There is no objection to taverns being set up between Bedford and Pittsburgh; does not see how Croghan and Clapham's scheme can be carried out consistently with promises made to the Indians.

June 30, Fort Pitt.

Bouquet to Monckton. The sudden revolution of Indian affairs at Detroit. The measures taken to prevent surprise; the inhabitants armed, guards along the rivers; temporary defences to the fort. Messages sent by the Detroit to the other Indians. A vessel on Lake Erie would be useful in supporting the advanced posts. Ammunition will not be sent to Detroit unless it can be delivered safely. The killing of the Indian is unlucky at present, but cannot be made a pretext for the conspiracy; the chiefs in the neighbourhood agreed at a conference that the Indian deserved his fate. An old Indian trader, a Pennsylvanian and batman to Captain Little was carried off by two Indians, a Delaware and a Mohican, but released by the latter whilst the other was absent hunting. Reinforcements sent to Ligonier; nearly every man passing on the road from there to Presqu'Isle is robbed. The 300 Pennsylvanians are now reduced to one half. Burnet arrived with horses and has gone back for forage. How are the presents for the Delawares and Shawanese to be brought up? More troops should be enlisted from Pennsylvania. Will not leave in the present critical circumstances.

July 5, New York. Monekton to Bouquet. To send off cattle for the meeting of Indians with Sir William Johnson at Detroit. May discharge men entitled to it, Blockhouse at Sandusky to be repaired. Leave given him to come to Philadelphia on his business as it is so pressing. Mather cannot be spared, unless his health absolutely requires it. The necessity for his (Bouquet's) speedy return. The artillery to come down to New York, except those specified. Has heard of the killing of one Indian at Ligonier and of another at Tuscarora; Groghan to investigate. (This letter was not received till the 2nd of October.)

July 10, Fort Pitte Bouquet to Monckton. The detachment of artillery sent down as ordered. Will give all the dispatch possible to the intended block house at Sandu-ky. The diminution in the number of Pennsylvanians by sickness and desertion; little can be done with the few men remaining. A plot.

for desertion discovered among them; the ring leader was killed; six others concerned were punished. Want of carpenters. Campbell writes from Detroit confirming the news about the Indians; nothing new here, except that more horses have been stolen. Proposes to withdraw all trade from the Shawanese till they deliver the prisoners and stolen horses. They are in want of powder, and if the trade is withdrawn they could not long stand the immoderate price charged by the other Indians, Respecting payments, which he wishes to be made by Gordon. Page 300

A continuation dated the 24th says that there was a great council of Indians who pretended to tell all that passed Western Indians, but said not a word of truth. Were told they would be judged by their actions. Details of desertions and deserters.

July 13, Philadelphia.

Monckton to Bouquet. He is surprised at the sudden change among the Indians, but hopes, as the Detroit Indians refused to join, that it will not turn to anything. Preparations to be made to meet it. Sir William Johnson to have a meeting at Detroit and Gladwin going there with a large detachment. The Indians about Pittsburgh have no reason to complain. Ourry has orders to arm the inhabitants of Bedford, keep a good look out, &c. Will try to get the Governor and commissioners to complete the 300. He (Bouquet) not to leave till every thing is quiet. If the Delawares and Shawanese bring in the prisoners they must receive some small presents.

July 24, Fort Pitt. Bouquet to Monckton. Letter of 13th received. Indians quiet.

Delawares and Shawanese divided respecting the delivery of prisoners; it is said the first have 100 and the others 150. The distress in sending off the detachment ordered, owing to want of transport for provisions, &c. The expense incurred by Gladwin in building the block house; Croghan proceeds to Detroit to arrange with the Indians and fix on a spot for a post on south side of the Lake. Sir William and Croghan will learn the true reasons of discontent among the Northern Indians. Those here complain of nothing except the prohibition of trade. When the withholding prisoners and stealing horses are given as reasons, they make promises they never intend to keep. The traders anxious to go in to trade. Asks explanations of regulations. Amherst has ordered Walters not to discharge men whose time is up.

August 11, Fort Pitt.

Same to the same. Stories circulated about Mr. Baby caused his arrest when the Indian plot was discovered, but his innocence being clearly proved on investigation, he has been released. His intelligence and knowledge of the Indians, &c. would make him useful; he asks leave to go to Montreal There has been no disturbance from the Indians since their scheme was discovered. Croghan has settled for the Indians killed below. The small supply of fresh meat. Flour sent to Venango and LeBeuf. Deserters. The weak state the bat alion must be in after troublesome. He has been robbed of subsistence money; thieves not yet discovered.

Monekton to Bouquet. As Sir William Johnson is at Detroit hopes he can set everything right. To secure Fort Pitt against surprise. Approves of not letting traders go to the Shawanese and other towns that steal horses, till they leave off the practice and bring in some of the prisoners. The regulations do not allow traders to go where they choose, the passes only allowing them to go where the officers commanding posts should think proper, and that as the commanders are responsible for the conduct of the sutlers, they must fix their licences. Respecting returns, &c. Approves of his dealings with the Seneca chiefs. What is to be done with deserters. Points out errors in accounts. Promotions; hopes he has recovered the money stolen.

September 10, Fort Pitt.

Same to Monckton. None of his (Monckton's) expresses arrived for two months. How the insolence of the Indians could be checked. The imprudence of the Six Nations will give a handle to divide their councils; Sir William will, no doubt, improve the favourable disposition of the Western Indians. He had embarked on the 20th August for Detroit, with a reinforcement for Niagara; the Royal Americans are to garrison the French forts on Lakes Huron and Michigan. What cattle were sent off; this post now well supplied, so that a grass guard has to be furnished which cannot well be spared. The want of success in recruiting. Had discovered the error pointed out in the accounts, but cannot clear it here. The rest of the letter refers to internal affairs of the garrison, stores, accounts, &c. 11th; suicide of Dr. Milne; asks for a duly qualified surge in to take his place.

September 19, Fort Pitt. Same to the same. Respecting accounts. Arrival of Meyer's detachment with cattle and horses at Sandusky. Illness of Captain Cochrane at Presqu'Isle, where he cannot recover for want of assistance and medicine; has ordered Major Walters to relieve him that he may go to the hospital at Oswego. Additional provincial recruits arrived, 34 in number, a welcome reinforcement. Respecting the supply of cattle; part of the supply sent to Venango. Proposes a new route to the Ohio by the west branch of the Susquebanna, through a short portage to the heads of two different creeks falling into the Alleghany on this side of Venango, and the Indians say navigable in Spring and Fall. Hutchins offers to survey it with one Indian and two white men in a cance. 321

Memorandum for Captain Campbell of certain affairs to be attended to at Detroit.

October 5, Fort Pitt. Bouquet (in French). No address, simply "Monsieur et Cher Amy." The affairs of Carolina are a vexatious proof of the impossibility of taking concerted action. The sending young Roger see ned the only way to save the wreck, left from the negligence or bad faith of Fesch. Has not thought proper to withdraw his procuration from Austen, Laurens and Appleby till he learns of Roger's arrival and knows his instructions and sentiments. The expense of liquidation; what he proposes. Further about this business, about other money matters, a proposal in 1758 by Prevost to take shares in a commercial house, &c. (This letter refers to Bouquet's estate under the charge of Fesch.)

October 5, Fort Pitt.

Same to Monckton. Croghan returned from Detroit, reports Sir William Johnson's complete success in his treaty with the Indians. Has only now received his letter of 5th July (p. 298) sent to Detroit by mistake. Is disappointed of flour from Detroit for Sandusky, as Campbell can hardly provide for his own post, owing to a bad crop. The expense and difficulty of supplying Sandusky from this post. Regulations for Indian trade received. Nelson cannot pay bills drawn for contingencies without his (Monckton) orders. Byrd's battalion of Penrsylvanian troops being reduced and he continued only as Captain, his (Bouquet's) views as to the manner in which Byrd can be left in command should he (Bouquet) have leave of absence. An Acadian deserter from Fort Charles who has been a year in the woods and travelled from Fort L'Assomption to Fort Loudoun, reports the Tennessee navigable to the Falls, and thence 40 miles more to the fort by a good path for horses and the hills not very high. October 7, New York:

Monekton to Bouquet. Hopes to get the General to allow the stolenmoney to be charged to contingencies. Gordon ordered down to take part in an expedition. The serious loss of flour. He (Bouquet) should not leave Fort Pitt till the General decides, as he has ordered the offleers to their posts. There being so many troops going on the expedition, Gordon must make haste or he will be too late.

Is pleased at his (Monckton's) appointment to command an expedition, but feels the temporary loss of an indulgent General. His sense of obligation for the payment of the stolen money. Gordon's merits; he can always be depended on and his work this year with a handful of men does him honour. He (Bouquet) will bear his exile patiently. Trusts that the finishing stroke of the war may be reserved for him (Monekton) to whom the first success was due. Monckton to Bouquet. Acknowledges receipt of papers to be laid before Amherst. General Gage to the same. Has succeeded Amherst, who sailed on the 17th for England. The harassing nature of the service in which he (Bouquet) was engaged during the campaign. Hopes he got up the last convoy, which will leave the fort well supplied. Is sorry that Pennsylvania and Maryland were so backward in affording assistance, as it is next to impossible for regulars to march in woods without a body of good woodmen to prevent surprise. The Crown will pay the expense of expedition proposed in conjunction with Colonel Stephen, if he (Bouquet) approves of it. If too late this year, it must be deferred till Spring; he is to put his fort in a proper state of defence and secure his communication when his present operations are completed. Will be glad to see him at New York to concert the operations for next Spring Disposal of the first battalion, &c. To look out for a person fit to act as engineer. To take the names of the militia suffering from detention at Fort Pitt, so that amends may be made to them. Rolls of the 42nd and 77th regiments brought by Captains Graham and Campbell; hopes the former will soon be completed; the remains of the latter will be Same to the same. That he has sent the proclamation regulating the limits of the new Government, granting lands to the reduced troops &c. to be proclaimed in the usual manner. (The proclamation does not accompany the letter.)

December 22, New York.

Same to the same. His letters received; he may supply the want of a magistrate at Fort Pitt by the Judge Advocate; attestations made before him where there are no civil magistrates will be valid. Captain Cochrane to be appointed to one of the companies of Carolina. The misfortune to Major Wilkins' party on Lake Erie on the 7th November when were lost, Lieutenant Davidson of the Artillery, Lieutenant Painter of the Platoon, and Dr Williamson of the 80th regiment, with four sergeants and 63 rank and file, a great many boats, provisions, one six pounder and all their ammunition; this obliged them to return to Niagara. The sincerity of the Indians of Detroit in their overtures can only be discovered hereafter. In the meantime Gladwin must guard against treachery. The other tribes may sue for peace, but no overture of that kind must come from the military authorities, as these would rather protract the war. If really inclined for peace, the Indians will apply to Sir William Johnson. The posts on the Mississippi to be relieved from Mobile, those on the Ohio from Pittsburgh. Respecting quarters and movements of troops, &c.

way; but if he does not think proper to grant peace to the Indians the same plan may be followed in Spring. Repairs to the forts; the posts on the communication secured an i provided with stores, &c. Hutchins, ensign in the 60th, will act as ensign till one can be sent up. The Delawares and Shawanese have not applied for peace; is afraid the provinces may neglect to make preparations; the only certainty of a lasting peace, is not to grant it except at the head of such forces as must convince them of the ability to chastise them if they break it. Respecting the arrost of Licutenant Guy of the 60th and Watson of the 77th. Had written them to sastisfy Captain Stowart, who had arrested them, but they did not answer. They are ordered to this post to be tried. Page 344

January 30, New York.

Gage to Bouquet. Respecting the charges against two officers, Lieutenants Guy and Watson. Desires to see Bouquet at New Work to settle the plan of operations for next season, as the peace with the Indians is very precarious. Is trying to draw some of the friendly Indian into the quarrel; they have promised to fall on the Shawanese and Delawares, which nations should be punished though peace be made with the rest. Shell soon order three companies of the 42nd from Carliste to march this way to be replaced by the first battalion lately come down from Niagara, who have been ordered to Philadelphia; they went off in very bad condition, in want of every thing.

February 4, Fort Bedford.

Bouquet to Gage. Letters, dispatches & 2., received and forwarded. The King's approbation of the conduct of the troops, would have increased their zeal had that been possible. Left Fort Pitt on the 21st of January; the deficiency in stores shall be supplied from here, the communication being free of Indians. When that is done he will come to New York. Only his desire to forward the service could have detained him so long in this wilderness. Is sorry for the distressed situation of the three companies returned from Niagara, but it was only what might be expected from the hard service of the battalion among the Indians for the last six years. Is pleased to know that it is determined to punish the Delawares and Shawanese; the Senecas do not deserve milder treatment; wishes they were compelled to incorporate with the other Five Nations, so as to lose their odious name, as after their unparalleled treachery there can be no sincere reconciliation.

February 22, New York.

Gage to Bouquet. Hopes that the provisions placed in Fort Pitt, with the supply now sent will last till the middle of summer. Expects him (Bouquet) at New York. The Shawanese and Delawares have not not yet made overtures for peace. Shall do everything in his power to make them sue for and be glad to get it. The Senecas are equally guilty.

Gage to Bouquet. Is sorry the convoy was delayed by a small scalping party which the men that killed the soldiers near Fort Pitt seem to have been. The proper plan would have been to scour the country, rather than to have stopped so essential a service. Should the convoy arrive safe there will be no fear of Fort Pitt for twelve months. Hopes that Governor Penn will not hesitate to send the provincial troops asked for; if sent not a moment should be lost in forwarding the convoy, if threatened with attack by a large force it should stop or throw itself into a place of safety.

Bouquet to Gage. For authority to send a convoy from Fort Loudoun to Fort Pitt, owing to fresh acts of hostility by the Indians, which render an additional escort necessary.

Gage to Bouquet. Has placed all the troops from Philadelphia southward under his command. Is disappointed in the hopes of reinforcements of provincial troops to act in conjunction with the regulars, through the backwardness of some Provinces to give assistance in the common cause. As the regulars consist only of eight companies of the Royal Highlanders and six companies of the first battalion of the R yal Americans, his first measures must only be defensive, preserving Fort Pitt and the posts of communication, which have cost so much blood and treasure, from falling into the hands of the enemy. Has written to the Governors of Virginia and Maryland, desiring them to give directions to the militia on their frontiers to obey the orders he (Bouquet) shall send concerning stations, and that men volunteering for escort duty may be allowed to go, without being struck off the militia roll. The frontier counties of Pennsylvania being left defenceless by the legislature, will no doubt associate for mutual defence. It is to be hoped he may be able by the frontier men and militia to procure on an emergency enough to defeat the enemy's designs. His Majesty regards this Indian war as carried on for the interest of the Provinces which should bear the expense, so that he must put the Crown to as little expense as possible, but this is not to prevent judicious encouragement to the country people to join His Majesty's regular troops on critical occasions. Enjoins economy in the administration of affairs in the Southern district. The risk of suffering in a defensive war with Indians; how offensive operations may be carried on against the Indian settlements, and hopes he may be able to send 150 to 200 friendly Indians to cooperate. He intends to attack the Wyandots from Lake Erie and hopes the two attacks from Fort Erie and Fort Pitt may be made nearly at the same time. Owing to the distance much must be left to his (Bouquet's) discretion.

Same to the same. Has sent a credit to enable him to pay off the Fort Pitt militia. Sends an account for gunpowder, which he is to pay for at the rate current in that part of the country.

Welbore Ellis, Secretary at War, to Gage. For an exact return of the Royal Americans, specifying the names of the officers, the date of the reduction &c., that the reduced officers may be put on half pay.

Bouquet to the same. Sends letters. The express met the convoy within 25 miles of Fort Pitt, where it must have got safe. The public accounts here are settled; to-morrow he leaves for Carlisle. He was detained at Philadelphia, the commissioners having declined to subsist the Indians, but had agreed to continue after some negotiation. The Indians were to be removed from the town to an island and he agreed to furnish a guard, Page 571

April 19, New York.

Gage to Bouquet, Has received his letters from Lancaster with enclosure from Fort Pitt. The guard for the Indians is useless except as a show. Sir William Johnson has made peace with the Senecas, who have delivered up the murderers of the traders, and given up a large tract of land round Niagara to the King, with the carrying place, and promised to take up the hatchet with the rest of the Six Nations against the enemy, giving hostages. About 400 are gone out. Sir William Johnson's son is at the head of a large party. Troops of Connecticut and Jersey expected soon at Albany, and Bradstreet will then move for Niagara. It will take him some time to get over that earrying place, and his first operations will be against the Indians of Sandusky, thence to Scioto. If he (Bouquet) could be in readiness to fall down the Ohio and up the Muskingum, thence to Scioto, it would confound the Indians; To communicate fully on the subject, when arrangements are made. Respecting hospital service; Commissariat regulations; artillery, store keepers, &c. S.r William Johnson will furnish near 200 Indians for an expedition to Fort Pitt.

Bouquet to Gage. Letters received. Convoy arrived safely at Fort Pitt; the houses have returned. Has received a credit to pay the Fort Pitt militia.

April 21, Carlisle.

May 2, Carlisle.

Same to the same. The guard left at Philadelphia for the Indiana, was intended to let the people see that they (the Indians) are under Gage's protection. The peace with the Senecas is very honorable and must be followed by the submission of the Delawares, Shawanese, Wyandotes and Mingoes. What terms are to be granted, if they sue for peace? Suggests the following points: 1. That they deliver the murderers of Clapham, &c., to be put to death. 2. That they deliver all white people, prisoners or adopted, and this must be insisted on as the latter have been active in hostility. 3. That they renounce alliance with any Indians besides the Six Nations. 4. That they renounce in favour of the Crown all rights, &c., to the lands on the east side of the Ohio from the head of that river to the sea. 5. That they do not cross that river without leave. 6. That they shall trade only at Posts pointed out. 7. That they repay in skins within seven years, the losses sustained by the traders. 8. That they give sufficient hostages for the performance of the treaty. Cannot give a satisfact ry answer till he knows what the Assembly of Pennsylvania has done; has had no answar from the Governor of that Province or of Virginia. Shall be ready to march in a few days when he knows what troops he can depend on, and meantime desires to know when Bradstreet is to be at Presqu'Isle and what his stay there; he will find it difficult to extend to the Indian towns on the Scioto, the distance being 90 miles, as he cannot have horses to carry provisions and there is no water carriage. The measures he (Bouquet) proposes for the expedition. Minor details. Had no opportunity before, but shall now suppress every kind of expense not absolutely necessary. Ourry's accounts should be settled at New York. All other accounts are now adjusted. Recommends colonel Reid for his care in respect to accounts. Believes the man Hicks who made a deposition to be a spy; he has lived for several years with the Indians and joined in their depredations. The six companies ordered to Fort Loudoun have been stopped by the creeks being impassable from the rains.

Same to the same. Recommending the appointment of an adjutant to the first battalion Royal Americans.

Gage to Bouquet. Believes that the Delawares &c., will sue for peace; the transaction must be left to Sir William Johnson. His object in demanding a tract of land for the King, was to form a military establishment near Fort Pitt, a little community of which the commander of the fort should be Governor. It is confidently said that neither Virginia nor Pennsylvania can by their charters claim up to the Ohio; asks him to get some certain knowledge of their boundaries, and my out townships on a well considered plan, having in view security and defence, with regulations as to the conduct and obligations of the muitary settlers. Bradstreet not to be long at Presqu'Isle, owing to the uncertainty about the Detroit Indians, as also of those beyond Detroit, which will make it impossible for Bradstreet to send any reinforcements till his return from Michillimakinak; all his troops are boyond Albany, except those of Connecticut, who have not yet moved out of their Province. Sir William Johnson has promised a large body of Indians shall be assembled at Fort Pitt to carry out his (Bouquet's) plan. The Assembly to meet to-day at Philadelphia, but does not expect anything to be done except to petition the King to be taken under his protection. Hicks to be tried and hanged if proved to be a spy. Change among the officers of the army. Page 385

May 20, Philadelphia.

B suquet to Gage. It is needless to remark on the unwillingness of Virginia and Maryland, especially Virginia, to furnish troops. They have not always held their militia aw so sacred as not to mould it according to circumstances, but they seem now as indifferent as if they belonged to a different State and had no concernin this war. Having no hopes of assistance from these two Provinces, he has turned to Pennsylvania, and has reason to believe the House will grant 1,000 men, besides 300 for the frontiers, but as the 1,300 were to be raised for His Majesty the 300 left on the frontier should be victualled for the King, which at a private conference he promised to recommend, but he believed that the Province would soon be as willing to premote the service as they have obstructed it hitherto; hopes the request for subsistence will be granted. Cannot tell hew long it may be before the troops can be got ready. Application respecting surgeon's pay. Agrees as to the means of impeding the Indians; will write what occurs to him on the subject. The inconvenience for settlement of the ground about Fort Pitt on account of the high hills and the bottoms liable to be overflowed. At a moderate distance three or more townships might be placed one each river and one between them. The officulties as to the ownership of the soil arising from claim by Crognan on an Indian title, and the indeterminate limits of Pennsylvania and Virginia. The King may, however, cut out of the latter what he pleases, as was formerly done by taking the Carolinas, Maryland and Pennsylvania out of that Colony. Several grants have already been made on the Ohio by Virginia without, he thinks, sufficient authority. To prevent disputes, all grants to the westward of the Alleghany Mountains should be annulled, under whatever pretence, and in this he would include the charters to the Ohio companies. How the proprietors of Ponnsylvania might be brought to surrender the part of their charter respecting lands to the westward or he Alleghanies, and a new military government might be formed to the westward, thus effectually covering Pennsylvania from attacks by the Indians, and thus enhancing the value of the lands. The three companies of the Royal Americans reduced to 55 men, 38 having deserted, caused he believes, by Amherst's refusal to allow the men to be discharged, whose time had expired; the encouragement given to deserters must rule the army unless the laws against harbourers are strictly enforced. When he can be spared as mermission to enjoy the leave of absence granted by

May 21, New York.

Gage to Bouquet. Respecting promotions and exchanges among the officers of the army. Accounts received have been paid; some at Forts Pitt and Cumberland are left open; they should be closed as he can allow no article of the last campaign to come into this. The Paymaster General is anxious to have a final warrant. Desires to have as full information as possible about the navigation of the Ohio. Major Loftus was attacked on the Mississippi and returned without much damage; hopes that by precautions he may succeed in his second attempt, Page 393

Was already informed that Governors Fauquier Same to the same. and Sharpe would send no assistance from the militia of Virginia or Maryland. The indifference of these Provinces to the results of the ludian War would astonish any one less acquainted with their internal policy than he (Bouquet). If the 200 men are to be under the King's General, he can have no objections to feed them, but if they are called troops for the defence of the frontiers and under the command of the Governor, he cannot do so, as the other Provinces would make the same demand. If the 300 are enlisted indiscriminately they could be fed like the regular troops, but posted on the frontiers and not take the field. How provisions, arms, &c., are to be supplied. Croghan's grant is not valid; it is said that no Indian grants are valid, unless made by the King's consent and approbation. Concerning funds for recruiting, &c. 395

May 27, Philadelphia.

Bouquet to Gage. Has informed Lieut. Potts that his resignation of the adjutancy in favour of Burnet has been accepted, giving him the offer of a purchase in the battalion. Business respecting promotions. Delay of the contractors to settle accounts. The steps taken to prevent delays on the part of contractors such as occurred lust year. Suggests that a pardon be offered to deserters who shall return; this might procure some of the old soldiers each of whom, for actual service, is worth three recruits. The want of bateaux at Fort Pitt for transporting men, stores, &c. The difficulty of land transport owing to the state of the roads. Has no satisfactory information of the navigation of the Ohio below Fort Pitt. Generally from the middle of March to the beginning of July and after heavy rains, the navigation is road, and without portage, but when the water is low a portage is needed at the rapids. Above the fort to Venango and LeBouf boats cannot go by water unless it be middling high, causing eddies, but the navigation against the stream is almost insurmountable if opposed by the Savages. The bad effect on the Indians of any repulse to the troops, however slight. The Irdians have evidently bought powder at the French village near Fort Chartres; this will be continued in order to keep the extensive trade of the country in their (French) hands. Sends estimated cost for building bateaux, should they be required.

May 31, Same to the same. Yesterday the Governor (of Pennsylvania) assented Philadelphia to the bill for £55,000 currency to complete 1,000 men to act with His Majesty's troops; those for frontier defence are not in the bill, so the Crown will not have to victual them. There is no money in the Treasury to pay the long arrears due to their (the Pennsylvanian) troops, which must be cleared before they can be moved; that operation will take about four weeks. During that time the men wanted can probably be raised, the clothing made and arms repaired, in all which nothing has yet been done. The camp equipage may be sent now from New York. From the delay the season for certain navigation of the Ohio and the smaller rivers -the Muskingum and Scioto - will be lost. The only certain way is to go altogether by land, carrying flour upon horses and driving cattle. The enemy can be attacked either by marching the whole force against the lower Shawanese towns, and then marching against the smaller towns, or by encamping at Fort Pitt and thence harassing the enemy, burning their villages and destroying their corn. Points out the advantages and disadvantages of each of the plans proposed. How he could cooperate with Bradstreet, and that Sir William Johnson should send a message with terms of peace by one of the Six Nation Indians, the terms to be equivalent to those granted to the Senecas; if the terms are refused, an attack to be made on both sides. Encloses letter to Sir William Johnson to be read and forwarded. Page 402

Bouquet to Sir William Johnson. Asks his sentiments concerning the operations against the Indians; and desires as full information as possible of their numbers, the number of troops required, the best method of attacking them, &c. States (giving the distances of each in detail) the different routes that might be followed to the Lower Shawanese town, and a list of the Delaware and Shawanese towns on the Ohio, upon the branches of Muskingum and upon Scioto. He depends on Indians as guides: some one to be sent to manage them; how are they to be fed, June 5, New York.

Gage to Bouquet. Respecting the half-pay officers. &c. Accounts to he closed up; there will be some trouble with Ourry's, as articles belonging to all departments are mixed together. Respecting medicine, arms, &c. Thanks for the information about the navigation of the Ohio. There is no doubt the Delawares and Shawanese have been supplied from the Illinois and have endeavoured to stir up other Savages. The French will underhand give all the trouble they can, to keep the trade of the Illinois in their own hands. Conjecture as to the murderers whom he believes to be Susquehannas. Discusses the different plans for annoying the enomy, (the Indians); Bradstreet should cooperate with him, but the distance prevents full communication between them. Bradstreet might be informed of the time of moving so that he could join. Sir William Johnson is too far off to consider the terms of peace; that must be done by himself (Bouquet). Return of the date of reduction, &c., in the battalion, &c. The trial of Hicks to proceed.

June 7 Philadelphia.

Bouquet to Gage. New contract for supplying provisions to the troops in America, the terms. Owing to the distance of the frontier posts, desires to know if they are to come under the terms of the new contract, and what are the arrangements about transport. Has had a meeting with the Governor and Commissioners who are to raise 300 men for frontier service which are not to be victualled by him, not being voted for the King's service. They (the Governor, &c.), are to garrison Fort Augusta and to give him 950 men including a troop of 50 light horse equipped by them, and are to send for 50 bloodhounds to be used against Indian scalping parties, so as to deter them from that kind of war. Has received his (Gage's) lotters and shall send returns. How pay lists have been made up. Expects the rest of the battalion from Detroit, when order will be established (in respect to the position of the officers), which is now impossible in the present state of dispersion. Respecting desertors; the trial of Hicks, whose life may be spared so that he may serve as a guide. Quiet at Fort Pitt; more scalping on the frontiers, particularly at Bedford and Ligonier.

Same to the same. Sends lists of the officers of the first battalion of Philadelphia. the Royal Americans, reduced on 24th August, 1763, and the alterations to 24th May last Remarks on the returns, &c. Gage to Bouquet. Remarks on the contract for supplying provisions at Philadelphia; supposes that the contractors will make no scruple of delivering at Carlisle. If they do, the settlement may be left to the Treasury. Is glad he has procured a troop of light cavalry; hopes the Governor and Council will pursue his plan of getting over bloodhounds, and making use of rangers on horseback, which will prevent scalping parties venturing near the feontiers. The means to be adopted for bringing in deserters. Bradstreet has orders to send the men of the battation, who are now at Detroit to join their corps. Hicks will probably be condemned, but he may be spared if a better use of him can be made. Captains Prevost and Hutchison have left New York to join him (Bouquet). The curious state of Ourry's accounts, which are a medley, the only authority he had to receive or pay money being from Genera! Americans. Gage to Bouquet. Is greatly concerned at the horrid murders committed on the frontiers of Pennsylvania and Virginia. The Virginians have resolved to abandon their posts and close towards the settled country, but the Indians will find out these settled frontiers; they seem well supplied with ammunition. Respecting unauthorised contracts made by Monekton, and how he is to act regarding them when fresh meat is wanted. Is at present busy getting vessels off for the Floridas.

Bouquet to Gage. The delays in furnishing money and men by the June 21, Bouquet to Gage. The delays in intrinsic by Bouquet to Gage. The delay having lost the advantage Philadelphia. Government of Pennsylvania. The delay having lost the advantage of less consequence to wait a of cooperating with Bradstreet it become of less consequence to wait a little longer, as they could not without great risk and difficulty penetrate in summer beyond the Ohio where there are no roads. In the beginning of October, the leaves and weeds decay and the woods are more open. Hopes to do all that can be expected, that is to go to the Lower Shawanese Town. Bradstreet will be near his return by October, and on the first of that month he might make a diversion from Eric. A number of volunteers from Virginia would join if allowed provisions and ammunition. Should Governor Fauquier be asked for his approval, before their offer is accepted, or might he dispense with that and invite them to join him at Fort Pitt on the 1st of October? He will have with drivers, &c., about 2000 persons to feed, requiring 3000 pack horses to carry six months flour, besides a year's provisions to be left at each fort. The ammunition, stores, baggage, 1800 beeves, &c., must be divided, it being impossible through such a country and roads to march the whole together. His arrangement for convoys. Has, he hopes, settled accounts with the contractors, in which he has made considerable deductions. Their large claims for losses of provisions on the road are referred to the Treasury. A copy of the new contract has been sent, unsigned; point out defects in its terms, and states the arrangements he has made for carrying out the new contract. Has employed a clerk. Orders for recruiting in Great Britain complied with, and Lieut Shaw appointed. Asks leave to grant brevets for Majors during the campaign. Clothing for the 55th arrived damaged. Rations, &c.

Gage to Bouquet. Respecting the settlement of contractors' accounts. Ourry's are being divided according to the department to which they belong. How the accounts are to be settled. Hopes Captain Ourry and Colonel Robertson will soon he with him (Bouquet). He will gain nothing by applying to the Government of Virginia, it will end in calling a council, which will talk of nothing but law and advise every thing to disappoint him. The best way is to get as many vo unteers as possible, and say nothing about it as there it no need to ask permission to take volunteers. Captain Fraser's promotion sent; brevets for majors to be filled up during the campaign.

July 18, New York.

Same to the same. The quick return of Lieut. Colonel Robertson from Philadelphia; the arrangements for the Quarter Master General's Department. Has written to Sir William Johnson to procure a body of Indians, and to Bradstreet to make in October a diversion in his ( 5 suquet's) favour. Gladwin is of opinion that there can be no peace unless a stroke is made on some of the tribes in arms. An artillery man has been scalped on the carrying place. Is sorry that there should be a doubt of his having 1,000 men for the proposed attack; volunteers should be encouraged; has given his reasons for not writing the Governor on that head; Mr. Fauquier's letter showed the backwardness of the Council to afford assistance. It appears that the Governor can do nothing without the Council, and the Council will do nothing but thwart the Governors, there is no occasion to ask leave to get volunteers, and he shall not be the better for doing it. Has no doubt that Franks will use every chicanery to get his demands paid. Concerning provisions, money, &c.

Gage to Lieut, Potts, that he should have considered before he resigned his Adjutancy, and had plenty of time to consider before his successor's commission was signed. Half pay officers cannot be allowed to go on this campaign and draw full pay. If he is inclined to serve on his half pay and Bouquet approves, he shall have no objections and shall reinstate him in the army when an opportunity shall offer.

August 3, New York.

Same to Bouquet. Letters received Arrangements respecting cortain officers, for the service with Bouquet in the approaching campaign. The staff for America being made up in London. No change in the government of Quebec.

August 16, Philadelphia.

Governor Penn to the same. The commissioners have complied with his request, though it was considered unreasonable, no such claim having been made for any previous campaign and the musters at Lancaster and Carlisle showing that the battalions wanted only 28 men for whom commissions and money had been left with him. It was, therefore, expected that he would supply the deficiency without further charge to the Government (of Pennsylvania), but the desertion had induced them to come into his measures. Steps taken to prevent desertion. Medicines shall be sent up. He is empowered to draw for the sum allowed by the commissioners to complete the troops Returns received from Colonel Francis. Wishes for his success, &c.

August 18, New York.

Gage to the same. Letters received. Decrease of provincial troops from desertion, &c. Hopes recruiting will be successful. The blamable conduct of Col. Stephen has been represented to Mr. Fauquier, as he has been obstructing the public service. The good character of Colonel Lewis. His (Bouquet's) powers in respect to courts martial. About 1,600 Indians were at Niagara; the risk if they were ill disposed, kept Bradstreet too long upon the carrying place, the Chennussees (Chennusio) not there, but ultimately made a new peace and came in with their families and all their prisoners; they have brought in the Delawares to make their peace also. Except the Hutons, some Mississaugas and some Chippewas, none of the tribes sent deputies who had borne arms in hostility. During the Congress the Wyandots, Ottawas and Pottav atomics had sent in their prisoners to Detroit and saved themselves from being attacked. Bradstreet has orders us to make a formal peace with these nations or to fall on them; the Shawanese and Delawares have sent in a challenge, and he has been ordered to march and attack the nations on the Scioto at the time fixed by him (Bouquet). Trusts that between them these barbarians will pay dearly for their massacres. Bradstreet left for Detroit on the 6th with about 500 Indians. Sir William Johnson has been desired to send Indians to him (Bouquet). The Cherokees have sent out a few parties against the Shawanese; they might be more useful, but that they are on the eve of war with the Creeks. Lieut, Governor Bull is informed of the plans of the French to bring provisions up the Ohio; the Cherokees to be got to intercept them.

August 27, New York.

Same to the same. Has received report of court martial, which he returns approved; if there is any room for mercy it is to be exercised. Is glad to hear that Colonel Reid has marched from Fort Loudoun, and that there is a good prospect of beginning the expedition at the time appointed. The Shawanese and Delawares must feel the weight of resentment or no peace can be expected. He is to listen to no proposal for peace unless the promoters of the war are given into his hands to be put to death. No answer has yet been received from Sir William Johnson respecting Indians for Fort Pitt, Holland has arrived at Quebec and brought Murray's commission as governor; those for the lieutenant governors are not yet arrived. 461

1764. Heptember 2, New York.

Gago to Lieut. Potts. Is astonished at receiving articles of a peace concluded between Bradstreet and the Shawanese and Delawares, without obtaining any satisfaction for the crucities these barbarians have been guilty of, and perving only as the basis for future massacres. Senda answer to Bradstreet, which is to be got into his hands by some means. It will show his (Gago's) opinion of the peace. He annulls and disapproves it. "Attack and use every means to extirpate the Delawares and Shawanese, and listen to no terms till they deliver the promoters of the war into your hands to be put to death, and send their deputies to Sir William Johnson to sue for peace." He may write Bradstreet about the mutual assistance they can give each other. Presumes Bradstreet is at Sandusky, as he has given the Savages 25 days to bring all the prisoners there.

New York.

Sume to the same. Finds by his letter just received, that the villains who have been amusing Bradstreet with overtures of peace on the side of Lake Eric, have been committing murders on the frontier with their usual cruelty. The deputies could not have represented the nations they pretended; they would have been furnished with more belts and gone to the Congress at Niagara. The bad effect of granting them a peace on the first asking. All the nations must be informed of the treachery of the Shawanose and Delawares as the reason for proceeding against them. Letters sent to be forwarfed to Bradstreet with the same instructions. Sir William Johnson has sent a party of Mohawks to be joined by others, to meet him (Bouquet) at Fort Pitt. His desire is for peace and such satisfaction given as will ensure its duration.

September 15, New York.

Same to the same. The villains who have been amusing Bradstreet with overtures of peace on the side of Lak, Erie, are still committing murders on the frontiers. The transaction seems only intended to deceive Bradstreet; they were certainly never deputed by their tribes, or they would have been better provided with belts and gone to General Congress at Niagara. Care must be taken not to be accused of an infraction of the peace granted, should they, contrary to his expectation, deliver up their prisoners at Sandusky, as they have already broken it by their continued massacres, and of this the other nations must be informed. Sir William Johnson will do this to the nations near him, and he (Bouquet) must let the others know of the infidelity of the Shawanese and Delawares and that such caunot deceive; that this is the reason of proceeding against them till they make satisfaction. Sends letters for Bradstreet to be forwarded. Sir William Johnson has sent Mohawks to be joined by others from Susquehanna to meet him (Bouquet) at Fort Pitt. He de ires peace and such ratisfaction as shall ensure its duration and trusts be (Bouquet) will do all that can contribute to this end.

B ptember 25, New York.

Same to the same. Has received letters with affidavits against Stephen which are very strong. Bradstreet met going up the Ohio; he has not yet finished with the Shawanese and Delawares, who are never in a hurry to give up prisoners even when sincere. Nothing but fear will bring them to reason, and if they find they can amuse Bradstreet they will do so till it is too late to act and then insult him and begin their horrid murders. Nothing but fear will prevent this, and is happy that he (Bouquot) is in a position to march against them. Only when they see they can be punished can they be made to keep the peace. Movements of troops. Six companies of his (Bouquet's) battalion must he placed this winter at Albany; 8 companies of the Royal H ghland Regiment are to be left at Pittsburgh and on that communication. 469 of Detroit, know the necessity of punishing them. The Six Nations are jealous of the power of the Shawanese and Delawares who have defied them, and are all of opinion that the Indians of Presqu'Isle had no authority to make pence. If the letter to Bradstreet cannot be forwarded by Bouquet, hopes that the dupheate by Oswego may reach him.

Bauquot to Gago. The army crossed the Ohio yesterday. Two Sax Nation ladians-an Onondago and an Onoida-have arrived and delivered two strings of wampum and three belts. Sends their speech and answer. Will not be amused with doubtful promises, but will proceed with the army to Tusearawan, where he expects an answer from Bradstreet. If the Dalawares and Shawanese refuse to deliver the promoters of the war, he shall attack them. Three Indians seen at Fort Ligonier; one who spoke in German after hearing that there was a party on the road, disappeared in the woods with the others. At night he came to the Fort; said his name was Robert tetts, that he had been six years a prisoner, and that the native with whom he lived had made peace with Sir William Johnson, but had come to steal the horses from Ligonier, and that he had taken the opportunity to oscapo. Bolieves he is a spy. Whother or not, it is a breach of the peace that he, as a white man, was not delivered up. Dispatches sent to Bradstreet. There are with him (B) iquet) 243 Virginians, officers included. Hay to command this post.

October 18, New York. Gage to Bouquet. His satisfaction that the forces and provisions had been collected at Fort Pitt. The Delawares with whom he had the conference were no doubt sent to watch his motions and others to watch those of Bradstreet. Nothing could be better than the manner he treated with them, and unless they have seized Bradstreet's party, which he (Gage) always suspected, he should be heard from soon. He was to leave De roit on the 14th and be at Sanlusky on the 17th, to meet the Shawanese and Delawires with their prisoners. Ho had made peace with all the O:tawss &c. around Detroit, seet a detachment to Michillimakimak and Captain Morris of the 17th regiment to the Illinois, who passed the Miamis at the danger of his life, but was protected by Pontiae, who is absolute and had collected all the Indians of the Wabash, who dispersed on finding peace had been made. Pontiae was to meet Bradstreet at Sandusky. If expresses went there it is odd they did not see the Indians, who were to be there by the 8th of September with their prisoners. It is another suspicious circumstance. Is pleased that he is in a condition to reduce the Savages to reason, whether Bradstreet can give assistance or 1 ot. If the promoters of the war are given up they are to be sent to Philadelphia or some place near the frontiers, where they can be secured till matters are settled with their nations, unless there are good reasons why some of them should suffer at once; in that case a plateon must be ordered to shoot them without coremony. Approves of material being collected for bateaux. Fort Massine was to be relieved by the Mississippi. Fort Vincennes reported to be abandoned, but this is contradicted; necessity for the f co navigation of the Ohio, Bradstreet had neglected this, which shows that business of this kind should be lett with those who have had experience of Indian affairs; recent mischief done by Indians on the borders of Virginia. The evidence against Hicks not plain; he and his brother must be sent down to be tried by the civil magistrates. Spies may be hanged in time of war by the military, but rebels taken in arms are to be tried by the courts. Joseph

Thomas may be respited, if there is room for mercy, and a pardon shall be sent.

October 21, New Jork. Gaga to Bouquet. Is satisfied with his answer to the speech of the Ocaandagos and Ocealas. They were no doubt sont by Bradstreat amongst the Delawares and Shawanese at Prosqu'Isle, and knew nothing of the murders. It is reported that Bradstreet has returned to Ningara; it so he (Bouquet) will be left without his support. How he is to act should the Shawanese, &c., really desire peace, but it by must finish properly with Sir William Johnson. Bradstreat was to have been at Sindusky on the 17th. He must have made haste to get in all his prisoners if any were delivered, which is doubtful. If he finish the chiefs resolute not to grant the conditions but to continue the war, he may relax on the entreaty of the friendly Indians and get as good a peace as he can, if assured of their sincerity and real desire for peace.

November 9, New York.

Same to the same. Captain Morris stopped at the Miamis on his way to the illinois, by the intrinues of the Shawanese. Delawares and Senecas. Expects to hear that he (Buquet) has either attacked, or been attacked by the Indians. If a peace he made a proper officer should be sent with some of the Shawanese and Delawares to inform the Savages on the Wabash, that peace has been made and to do the same on the Illinois, to all of whom they should recommend an alliance. The same to be done to of St. Ange, commender of the Illinois, as well as those of the other commandants, who are greatly to be suspented. The efficer, if he can go down the river in safety, may proceed to the Mobile to inform the commander there of every thing necessary. Other Indians to be notified, was not officiate.

November 11, New York.

Same to the same. Is pleased to find by letter of the 21st October, that he had reached Tuscarrayas safely, in a march of so much difficulty, and that he had so good a prospect of bringing these obstinate nations to terms. No place is so proper to make peace as the centre of their towns, where they boasted they could not be got at. The importance of the possession of the Illinois. The Shawanese and Delawares must do this. Knows of no tribes below the Ohio who are hostile except the Arkansas. It quiet possession and reconciliation with the Indians of the Illinois are secured, every thing below will soon be quieted. He can either sond an officer only, or — achment to relieve the French and send their garrison to New Orleons. To ascertain what time the Shawanese sent to the Minmis to stop the English going to the Illinois, &c. 483

Gago to Bouquet. Letters from the Muskingum dated 15th ult, received. The peace he has made does great honour to himself (Bouquet) and must give the greatest satisfaction to His Majesty and every case. Seturns court martial proceedings approved of. Sends a pardon for Joseph Thomas of the Pennsylvanian regiment; will recommend John Lewis for an ensigney. Proceedings at the conferences with the Indians sent to Sir William Johnson so that he may be fully acquainted with them when he meets the Irdian deputies. It was reported that Pontiae had lost his it-fluence, but Captain Morris found he had as much as ever, and he had not come in being afraid to trust himself; he should if possible be brought over. and the Illinois, though not openly in arms are hostile, and Pontiae can manage them as he please. The peace may soften these nations, and a particular belt sent to Pontiae to notify him of this and to take him into favour may advance the service. If he were got to Fort Pitt or Detroit he might be useful. Is afraid the season is too late and the difficulties too great to permit of his (Bouquet's) plan for taking possession of the Illinois by land, the only method is by water. The French are working adversely as privately and as much as possible, of which he had ample proof. To thank Colonel Reid for the assistance given during the campaign.

December 20, New York.

Gage to Bouquet. Has his letter of the 30th November and 3rd instant. The conduct of the Shawanese suspicious; wishes the parties sent to their villages for the prisoners were returned. No doubt he (Bouquet) was the best judge of the prudence of sending an officer with belts for the several nations. The surest way to take possession of the Illinois is to go with a body of troops strong enough to force compliance, but there are not troops to send sufficient to do this with. The delivery of the country has been settled by the two courts and the French declared the Indians satisfied till stirred up by Pontiac, and by the Shawanese and Delawares who had succeeded in getting them to stop Morris on his way to the Illinois. The date of the arrival at the Miamis of the Indians, and of Morris, is proof that every road was secured leading to the Illinois. Further discusses the means of communication with the Illinois, but if the Shawanese &c. are sincere they can easily conduct a person there, so that the consent of the tribes could be asked for taking possession, so as to prevent umbrage at taking rossession of the posts formerly held by the French, who no doubt are endeavoring to prevent entrance into that country. A person might go in safely with a belt and proper message, but should the Indians refuse an alliance, then it would be settled that only force would succeed. The raising of the force was another question. He (Bouquet) has seen what the Provinces will, or rather will not, do, when the enemy is at their doors. What can be expected of them for operations at a distance? Plans for taking possession; the good policy of gaining Pontiac, who, with the Shawanese and Delawares, could put them in possessionof the Illinois whenever he pleased. If the Shawanese are deceiving he (Bouquet) must either force his way or give up all thoughts of it. Presumes he had sent news of the peace to Lieut. Colonel Campbell at Detroit. If the A kansas nation could be gained, there would be no enemy from the Ohio to the Iberville. The Illinois above the Ohio and their allies have been spirited up, but have never been at "ar, and they may be pacified without trouble. Respecting money manners. Hopes Virginia will pay their militia, who had volunteered and done good service. If the smallest hopes are entertained of the King paying them Virginia will not. Respecting the purchase of commissions. Respecting Haldimand's position in Canada, &c. To send information about the James River.

December 24, New York. Same to the same. Should be glad if he found a proper efficer to send to the Illinois. Croghan who is here would be sent with him. The rank of the officer is immaterial, but he must be intelligent and speak French. The arrangements he is making for the mission.

December 30, New York. Same to the same. Has accepted the offer of Lieutenant Fraser to be employed on the Illinois. He is to leave with Groghan for Fort Pitt in two days. Same to the same. Murray's message to the Shawanese it is to be hoped will bring them in, but if the people of the frontiers continue to kill every defenceless Indian they meet, it will be to little purpose to confer with the Indians. A strict investigation must be made into the infamous action reported. Later news from Detroit; does not give much eredit to various stories sent. Believes the deputies of the Delawares are now with Sir William Johnson baving been delayed by deep snow. Is sorry the Assembly of Virginia has refused pay to people who have done more service than all their militia put together; sincerely hopes the same thing will not happen in the other governments. The orders from the Treasury leave him at a loss how to carry on the service. Besides his other business, there is in part that added of Paymaster General, and no service except for sudden emergencies, can be paid for till approved by the King. The only way he can see to settle with the volunteers from Virginia is that proposed by him (Bouquet) to give them a bounty to equip themselves. Arrangements with contractors, Vouchers, &c., received. Asks him to compute for the War Office, the contingent military expenses for the Department of Pennsylvania in time of peace, Same to the same. Letter, &c., received. His letter gave the first news of Croghan since he left. It is as difficult to keep these people in order as the Indians they deal with, and looks as if Lieutenant Fraser were infected, or he would have written. Governor Sharpe's letter makes it difficult to bring a murderer to justice. Had one of their own inhabitants been murdered, the lawyers would have discovered easier methods. The murderer cannot now be taken and tried by court martial. The matter to be laid before the Governor of Pennsylvania, in whose Province the murder was committed. If it is the cause of the continuance of the war and further broils with the Savages, it will be necessary the King should know what has been done, and what obstructions there are in the Provinces to preserve the common course of justice. Gugy has resigned in favour of Colonel Haldimand's nephew.

The expenses must be borne, and it must be plainly told they must either be approved or war begin again. He shall undoubtedly set before the King the scandalous behaviour of Virginia and the generous conduct of the commissioners of Pennsylvania. "The bot spirit of faction which row rages in that Province, I conceive to be the reason why you have met with epposition from persons whose stations should rather have made you expect assistance from them than opposition in so necessary a work. Your personal interest with the commissioners made them willing to give you every support you could reasonably require, and this was sufficient cause for the opposite party to do what they could to prevent it. I conceive it in this light, such proceedings being common in most governments, when party unhappily overcomes all other considerations." CORRESPONDENCE WITH SIR J. St. CLAIR AND CAPTAIN JAMES SINCLAIR. 1758-1763.

B. M., 21,639.

1758. May 27, Winchester.

May 28, Winchester.

Sir John St. Clair to Bouquet. General Forbes states in a letter that he had sent 271 tents to Carlisle, had bespoken 200 more and that he (St. Clair) could get some from Bouquot for Washington's people. He is to send, therefore, 114 tents, to be at the mouth of the Conegogie to be met by a detachment to receive them; they are for five companies of 100 men each of Colonel Washington's regiment and a company of artificers (100) of the second Virginian regiment who march from this to strengthen Fort Cumberland, so necessary on this urgent occasion. They will be ordered to march to Shippenburg to be there by the 5th of June; hopes the tents may be there, otherwise they cannot march further. Will try to send a body of Indians with the troops, but cannot depend on them as they are conscious of their bad behaviour in Pennsylvania, so will probably join the army from Fort Cumberland. Expects Byrd with Indians. Governor Sharpe has returned to Maryland; has not been able to determine with him what is to be done with the garrison at Fort Cumberland. The small pox has broken out at Fort Frederic; asks him (Bouquet) to have as little communication with that garrison as possible. Officers absent from it have been ordered not to return there; they are raising companies in Maryland. Over 2,000 Virginian troops he may call complete, the number wanting not being worth mentioning. They are a fine body of men. Inconvenience caused by U. Blair not coming; Washington had to be sent for him. Stevens will march to Shippenburg; provisions to be ready for his division. His (St. Clair's) field equipage shall be sent from Lancaster, to be left at Carlisle till he comes to Shippenburg

Same to the same, Is pleased to hear of his safe arrival at Carlisle; has sent proposed plan of operations. Washington with his five companies and carpenters will arrive at Shippenburg on the 4th or 5th. The other five companies cannot be sent so soon to Fort Cumberland, as Washington does not return from William burg till the 7th and the five companies have not joined; when four do, and he has tents he shall send them to Fort Cumberland, but they must not stay there from the scarcity of provisions. Is labouring to get Byrd's regiment in order; Basset is ordered to Shippenburg with entrenching tools, which were sent from Fort Frederick when the small pox broke out. The road from Ray's Town to Fort Cumberland may be cut in four days, or, if begun at both ends, in two days; that from Fort Loudoun to Ray's Town will be troublesome. Has men and horses for the troops, a ms expected on Saturday; saddies and bridles must come from Philadelphia; hopes to have all in motion by the 9th of June. With Byrd's 57 there are now 280 Indians with him, but he does not expect to take them all out to war. Byrd's regiment is 900 strong; Washington's, 950. The Virginian troops for Pennsylvania are to take directions at Bollan's for the

Sir John St. Clair to Bouquet. This letter sent by Lt. Colonel Stephen. who is to march with five companies of the first Virginian regiment, of 80 men. The flist company of the second regiment of artificers, who are either sick, or not able to march, are left in Fort Loudoun with a careful officer. The scarcity of captains in the first division for reasons given. Tools &c. supplied to the artificers; Washington's five companies will want hatchets; if tents are ready they are fit for service. Powder horns have been stowed away somewhere; scarcity of bayonets. Basset ordered to join him (Bouquet) with entrenching tools. Shall labour hard to equip four more companies of the 2nd Virginians, and send them by companies under Peachy. Byid cannot be sent as all the Cherokees have resolved never to go to Pennsylvania, as soldiers had taken up arms against them at Captain French's instigation. Shall try to get the Catawbas, to march with or follow Stephen. With nine days preparation it will be sixteen days before the force can reach Fort Cumberland. If the arrangements do not suit, he can send Bouquet more troops. He dare not send them to Fort Cumberland, as they cannot stay owing to scarcity of provisions. What troops he can send. Has had a letter from President Blair stating that he will not dismantle the Governor's house of the King's arms. All that he can infer from the stupid letter is that he wants them in order to make war on the Cherokees. He has asked for a company of veterans (as he calls them) to garrison a Fort in the Cherokee country; shall write him that he may have the 100 men short of the complement of Washington's regiment ordered by the Assembly. Will leave Forbes to settle the affair of the arms; had he known the King had so unworthy a servant he would have taken other steps to secure the arms, but has no time at present. Surely when the arms were sent they were not intended to adorn the Governor's house stand of arms to be sent him. (The rest in French). Is impatient by receipt of that accursed (muudite) letter from Blair being informed that there are no vehicles so as to enable his people to march to-merrow. The greatest curse that our Lord can pronounce against the greatest sinner is to have to do with Indian allies (sauvages amis) and with the commissioners of the Provinces.

Bouquet to St Clair. His letters received. Tents shall be sent as requested, but this leaves him without any for Stephen's detachment, which must remain till other tents arrive from Philadelphia. Needs no reinforcement at present, hopes to take post at Ray's Town with the troops he has; it is there he wants a junction made, to save the encumbrance of the march there with waggons &c. The supply for Washington's whole regiment at Fort Cumberland to be sent if possible; they could begin to cut the road and join him at Rea's Town. Arrangements for cover; part of the men in the fort, the rest in tents. Instead of sending them to Shippenburg, they are to be sent to Fort Loudoun in Cumberland county, the commanding officer of the 600 getting directions as to the road from Henry Pollan. There are provisions for them at Fort Stanwix, but none at Shippensburg. Captain Bosomworth goes to Winchester to persuade the Indians to go to Fort Loudoun to receive their presents. It that measure fail, it is a bad situation. The general is sending arms which shall be forwarded. Tools &c. Wants powder and ball. Details of the difficulties of the situation. His satisfaction at the forwardness of his troops of horse. Intends to leave on Monday, but cannot proceed from Lyttleton till he gets arms.

Same to the same. Hopes Bosomworth will meet Stevens at Conegogee and direct his murch towards Fort Loudoun. Has no tents for these troops; they must make shift for a few days with bark huts. Respecting tools, powder horns &c. Wishes nothing but the b yonets was wanted, a useless arm in the woods. Bosomworth sent to Winchester to bring the Indians; if they will not come to Loudoun, he must try to get them to Rea's Town. Is uneasy about provisions for the people sent to Fort Cumberland. His intended movements on the road to Rea's Town; expects to be there before his (St. Clair's) troops will be at Fort Cumberland, where they are not to stay, but to begin at once to cut the new road to Rea's Town. Shall supply them with provisions. The rest of the troops he may send by Loudoun, Lyttleton, Juniata and Rea's Town, to be sent as they are ready, but not less than 100 at once. President Blair's letter is the most curious paper he ever heard; although not very pleasant he had laughed heartily at it. He (Bouquet) has a better President, who, with the commissioners had supplied every thing wanted to arm and equip the Pennsylvanian regiment, and is sending 80 light horses. The new levies are on the march to form a chain from Lancaster to Rea's Town, half of them walking with sticks. Only one ration a day allowed to their officers, the same as to the regular officers and the general himself. Muskets expected. No troops in Virginia to be allowed to be sent to the pretended fort among the Cherokees. "it is a mere babble near Fort Loudoun." Respecting communication to be provided by expresses. There should be facility of communication with Maryland and Virginia, but expects nothing from such people. Other arrangements.

June 3, Winchester. St. Clair to Bouquet. Stephen had gone, but was sent after and will take the 114 tents. In order to carry on the service, there must be a meeting between them (Bouquet and St. Clair). Where he proposes they should meet &c.

June 5, Winchester. Same to the same. Is glad he is beginning to march, as it will give an opportunity to have an interview with him and Governor Sharp, by which more can be accomplished than in six months writing. Major Lewis is stopped in his march to Augusta Court House by high water; Colonel Washington returns to Williamsburgh on Wednesday. Expects arms from Maryland and tents from Philadelphia.

June 6, Conegogee. Same to the same. Since he (Bouquet) could not come St. Clair must return to Winchester to put the whole force in motion. If a division is to go by Cumberland it must be sent only on a written order, owing to the danger of delay. Shall send off his corps in divisions; only the want of blankets can stop the march. He shall go to Fort Loudoun and afterwards join him or go to Carlisle as he (B) aquet), may think best for the

June 9, Winchester. service &c.

Same to the same. Sapposed details of his (Bouquet's) march; what men he has at Winchester. Arms received from Washington; these with others expected and already here will complete the second regiment. Cannot move withoutblankets. Arrival of Washington from Williamsburgh, President Blair has been graciously pleased to grant every thing asked for. The officers have been pair batt, forage, and baggage money and Blair has sent the arms from Government House to Fredericksburgh, together with blankets, for which he will send an express so that waggons may be provided for the march of Washington and Byrd's men. Virginians are dissatisfied that the whole army goes through Pennsylvania. In a day or two he shall have 40 men for the 40 light horses. The letter enters into details of the arrangments for and the movements of troops &c.

June 11, Winchester. Same to the same. Report by John Walker, a guide, of the difficult nature of the country for a road from the Alieghany Ridge to the Great Crossing. The opinion of the Shawanese as to the same road. Ha

Washington's three companies arrived man, i working hard to get them on their march; their arms miserable condition. They stall be followed by Byrd's when makes are ready. Is anxious to meet Bouquet, &c. Walker, the guide, has engaged to bring a company of good woodsmen. Page 29

St Clair to Bouquet. Letters received; shall try to supply all his wants. Has sent a company of Highlanders to garrison Fort Lyttleton. Cannet send provincials, for to detach them before they are formed would increase the disorder that reigns amongst them to so great a degree. McLean has sent up 100 men of the new levies to Fort Augusta, but no orders for the old garrison to return. Would have called down 100 of Byrd's, leaving 50 of the worst, but learns that there are not 50 fit for service. Shall send up men kept for the horse so that he (Bouquet) may send bet r men. Gives him joy of the arrival of artillery and stores.

June 19.

Thomas Cressup to St. Clair. Has received into his store five loads for which he sends receipts, besides one cask and one doz n saddles not mentioned in the bill. I party of four Indians had attacked a party of 30 or 40 men, half a mile from Fort Cumberland, killed two and wounded two &c.

June 22, Carlisle.

St Clair to Bouquet, Is glad to hear he is at Juaniata; hopes he found Sideling Hill practicable. Has sent 100 Highlanders to Fort Lyttleton, with orders to send on the 100 that were left, in order to join him (Bouquet); shall send more Highlanders to Lyttleton, the number left being insufficient. Royal Americans for Fort Loudour, where he should like to have a strong garrison, in case it should be called on to assist in opening the new road. Has not countermanded the Virginians on hearing that new road was found practicable and blazed. How he proposes to construct the road. Is sending a commissary to Alexandria to conduct 200 provincials of North Carolina to Fort Frederick. Is told that 100 more are come or coming to Winchester; shall send them off with convoy on the 8th of July. Major Lloyd is idling away his time; nor does he hear if Captain Sharp has done his work. Has sent him (Bouquet) ammunition; more shall be sent if needed, &c. Other details.

June 27. Carlisle.

Same to the same. Waggons have been sent out to him (Bouquet) as fast as received, except 30 sent to Fort Frederick, loaded with shot and escorted to that place by Captain Joscelyn and 60 men, which he proposes to make up to 100. The rest of the three companies shall be sent to Fort Loudoun as they arrive. Has detained another company of the Highlanders for Fort Lyttleton. Has received report that the road from Fort Frederick to Fort Cumberland is practicable. Governor Sharpe is collecting wood to lay a bridge near Fort Frederick. Movements of engineer and troops; Lieut. Colonel Sharpe is to take the direction of the road. The number has been made up to 500 men. Importance of having the road finished.

June 30 Carlisle,

Same to the same. Is sending off Hambright with a troop of horse, escorting 38 waggons; the troop is poorly equipped, but the Commissioners will do nothing. Respecting pack horses and saddles. The vile quality of the coals sent out from England. Has sent a commissary to look after the forces from Carolina; it is an army in the clouds. He rever expected them, "if we had them they are good for nothing."

June 30, Rea's Town. Bouquet to St Clair (in French). Requests him to relieve all the posts of communication from Loudoun and to join all the companies of the regiment of Pennsylvania. He has only 811 men fit to serve, and he has to build a fort and store houses for the whole army. The delays caused by having to provide a cover for stores, &c. Hoping for the General's arrival, will give no orders to the troops at Cumberland till then, except to open the communication with Rea's Town. The troops from Virginia make a difficulty about working without being paid; has settled that they work like the others for a gill of rum a day. To pay the troops for their work would cost more than three armies could do in Europe. The communication by Fort Frederick or Fort Cumberland is shorter than by Rea's Town; not a moment shall be lost in opening the road approved by the general. Has sent order to Colonel Washington to employ 300 men on this work, including the troops from Maryland who are with him. Further about roads.

Sinclair to Bouquet. Has, by Sir John St. Clair's orders, sent iron, steel, etc. Money shall be sent by the next opportunity.

Same to the same. General Forbes has sent 100 pack horses loaded with flour to Rea's Town, under the escort of provincials, who are to furnish drivers to that place. The horses are to be distributed on arrival amongst the troops for carrying their baggage.

val amongst the troops for carrying their baggage.

Same to the same. Has sent off to Rea's Town, 18 waggons, loaded with powder, rum, tents, etc. The latter to be sent to Fort Cumberland for Washington and Byrd's regiment, besides light arms for the Indians. The 100 pack borses have been detained at Shippenburg, for want of a party to take charge of them, the provincials having marched.

St. Clair to the same. The guides acquainted with the mountains to be sent down to meet the General (Forbes).

Same to the same. There is not so much of the road done as he expected, but the road is good so far as this, about 18 miles from his (Bouquet's) camp. Sends letter to show what Stephen is doing. He (St. Clair) has begun a redoubt at the Shanoe cabins, which he hopes is finished. Lieut. Allen will move this way; will mark out a camp for him on the river, at the second rising of the mountain. He is to leave a sergeant and 16 men at his redoubt; many of his officers are sick. The work to be done on the roads is immense; unless he has 200 men more does not know when it will be finished. What tools are wanted. Shall move his camp two miles up the gap to morrow. Has to lay out redoubts, Same to the same. Had met Colonel Stephen and Captain Field, who promised to meet him on Thursday on the top of the mountain, but he does not to expect to finish the digging up the gap by that time. Wants men and tools; it is a diabolical work and whiskey must be had. It will take 500 men five days to cut to the top of the mountain, besides the guards and covering parties. By meeting Stephen, he had prevented him sending a strong party to the Laurel Ridges. Asks, for God'ssake, that Armstrong's post may be reinforced, or he may be cut off. Provisions to be sent in waggons as the horses cannot get up the hill.

Same to the same. Captain McKenzie arrived with 200 men, bringing flour; he has marched leaving the waggons behind. Will send Armstrong tools and ammumition; shall construct a redoubt on the plain between the two ridges where Allen is posted. Describes the difficulties of the road, and the manner in which the work is laid out. The enemies are all

St. Clair to Bouquet. Letter received. Rhor sent off as ordered; to report direct to Bouquet. Loyal Hannan suited for a fort. Had there been accounts of another gap in Laurel Ridge he would have reconnoitred it. Is detained here by Stephen having sent off troops. Ask for an explanation of certain orders.

August 20, Fort Dewart. Same to the same. The smoke seen was from Field's camp to Stephen's spring; it is impossible to get a direct road to it, as rocks and deep swamps intervene. Has cut the road round the ascent he rode up yesterday. He may send on the  $\Lambda$ -y (Artillery). Parties have returned from the French fort but he has not seen their reports.

August 23, Rea's Town.

Bouquet to St. Clair. Colonel Byrd and Major Grant march to-day for L. H. (Loyal Hannan). The Troops to be sent, these given in detail, with arrangements for their distribution &c. Urges him to push on the road to Loyal Hannan as fast as possible, as several things are wanted which cannot be carried by horses. The nature of the road to be made for the advance of troops &c

August 23, Stony Oreek.

St. Clair to Bouquet. Arrival of waggons by the road, which is not so good as he shall make it. The more he sees of Edmund's swamp, the less he likes it. Its distance is too small from Dowart, so thinks of placing the redoubts near here. Details of detachments and their duties. Is at a loss for a Commissary, the one sent is sick at Dewart, and seems to have broken his steel yards. The men crying out to sait.

Bouquet to St. Clair. Is disappointed that the road is not open by the foot of Laurel Hill; had sent the artillery and apprehends it will be stopped on the way to Loyal Hannan, which will be destruction the little grass he (St. Clair) may have. He never intended all Amstrong's battation for the redoubts; 25 in each are enough; the rest to push forward the road. The chief thing is the road for which explicit orders are given. The light horse to be placed at proper stages to carry the letters. To keep every one astir to make amends for the unaccountable slowness.

August 27, Kikoney Pawlings.

St. Clair to Bouquet. The road cut half way to the foot of the ridge; the troops are moving their camp, except 200 to guard this post. The Artillery was last night at Edmund's Swamp; is impatient, for the arrival of Major Grant and Colonel Byrd. Extraordinary conduct of Colonel Stephen; has confined him for mutiny, so that the Virginians are now under Lowis. Was afraid of a general mutiny. He has attempted to send him to Rea's Town, but he refused to go after being arrested and as he (St. Clair) had not sufficient strength to seize him among his own men, was obliged to let him have his own way to save bloodshed. The proceedings have not much retarded the service. He has no pack horses. Is sending for horse shoes for the Virginians; when the artillery comes he shall do his best to get it over the ridge.

Bouquet to St. Clair. The cause of Colonel Stephen being arrested; is afraid there must have been some heat between them a d that he will have a good deal to do to justify the arrest of an officer of his rank commanding a corpe. As Quarter Master General he has no right to command, and it world be best for him to make up the matter. Sends copy of letter from Stephen, on which he shall make no report till he hears further. The orders are to preserve harmony with the provincials; thinks he had better report the case direct to the General.

Beptember 9, Loyal Hannan. Same to Sinclair. The road is a most infernal one; the pack horses are in a bad condition; is uneasy about subsistence for the troops, unloss fresh waggons and better drivers are got. To review all the pack horses himself; discharge all unfit and form the rest into brigades. Regulation of carriage of regimental baggage. Orders respecting pack horses, waggons, &c.

September 13, Rea's Town.

Sinclair to Bouquet. Has sent off a brigade of 22 waggons, loaded with park, corn and oats, and one with whiskey, besides 80 pack horses with flour. Is in hopes of getting another supply of provisions from below. Asks for instructions as to sending pork and forage up the country.

September 14, Rea's Town.

Same to the same. Letters received and will comply with orders. Only 10 ack horses here; has demanded 100 from the artillery with a driver for every four, which shall be sent off with flour; two waggons shall be sent with iron, flints, salt and spirits. Arrangements about bullecks. Upwards of 200 waggons sent to Carlisle and only one brigate returned. Clark has gone down to hurry them on, and will also order up bullecks. Explains the cause of short weight in flour.

September 15, Rea's Town. Same to commanding officer at Loyal Hannan. Advising that 100 bullocks, 200 sheep and 169 horses have been sent.

September 20, Rea's Town Same to Bouquet. Will do every thing in his power to put Callender's return right and to prevent imposition. General Forbes has doubtless informed him (Bouquet) that he expects large supplies. A convoy expected and no time shall be lost in forwarding pork, &c. Has sent 114 horses with flour.

October 13, Rea's Town. Same to the same. Shall supply Captain Field with forage; sent off 170 horses with flour and hopes, therefore, there was no want at Stony Creek. Has sent to-day 45 waggons with flour, &c. The waggons sent are from Lancaster, under agreement to carry by the hundred weight to this place, but they were prevailed on to go on to Loyal Hannan at fifteen shillings a day. Sir John (St. Clair) returned from Philadelphia. Many waggons on the road. A division of artillery marches to morrow; hopes all may soon follow.

October 15, Rea's Town. Same to the same. The brigade of waggons sent on the 13th were detained at two miles distance by heavy rain. Three more waggons are sent to join the brigade.

October 18, Rea's Town. Same to the same. Hopes to be able to send off a brigade of waggons every day whilst the General stays and the weather continues favourable. Details of waggons, with their loads, sent and to be sent.

17:9. January 9, Carlisle.

Same to the same. Is taking steps to supply the troops up the country. Has advertised in various places (named) for flour at four pounds Pennsylvania currency a hundred, delivered at Pittsburg. Arrangements for payment, and other details; Callender sent off to Frederick county, Maryland to obtain horses. Captain McPherson has arrived with 100 good store horses from Lancaster; will send off two Brigades with oats to Rea's Town. Has sent to Lancaster for waggons to carry to Fort Bedford &3. Nour-86 Intry. Pennits for ounty, 100 h oats Fort July 27, Bouquet to Sinclair. Articles wanted at Fort Bedford, to be provided.

(List follows, and also a list of tools for the roads at different points.)

July 28, Carlisle.

Sinclair to Bouquet. Has sent to Bedford for shot pouches &c. Returns of provisions in store are sent. Scarcity of waggons on account of the harvest. Hoops has sent off 140 head of cattle. Hambright arrived with pack horses; drivers wanted; expects that when the harvest is over plenty can be had.

Same to the same Hes sent for the cattle.

Same to the same. Has sent for the articles wanted at Bedford. This morning 28 fine teams started for Bedford; they arrived from Lancaster and completed their loads in two hours. Those from Bucks county and Chester have been here for three days and cannot be got off, as the belief of the drivers is that they came by the day; these are the worst teams and have come without forage. Asks instruction about forwarding other supplies &c., and whether the Crown or the Provinces are to be charged for certain expenses.

Same to be charged for certain expenses.

Same to the same. Sends agreeable news from the northward. Has sent off Captain Hambright according to orders. As to forage he had taken steps for a supply, sending out advertisements &c. The arrangements for payment. Has a plan of drawing supplies from Maryland for which £1,000 would be of great service. Minute details respecting waggon service, and the most convenient way of settling their accounts. The difficulty of getting drivers for pack horses raised in Chester County; how the arrangement should have been made. Has kept the last brigade of waggons waiting for the bateau men. Has ordered the company raised by Stevens to come here for arms. What waggons have been sent and are now ready.

Bouquet to Sinclair. Is obliged for his activity and the forwardness of every branch of his department. How the impressed waggons are to be paid for, and the allowances. The letter is entirely taken up with arrangements for transport &c.

Sinclair to Bouquet. Good news flows in apace; reported success at Niagara, and reception of those who had tried to disturb the peace at Pittsburgh. Letters from Amherst forwarded. Arrival of Stevens' company of bateau men, who have been supplied with arms, ammunition and subsistence. Their demands for bounty; those of them teaming are to receive extra pay. Details of transport service &c.

to receive extra pay. Details of transport service &c. 112 Same to the same. His satisfaction at his conduct being approved.
Has sent in pressing terms to the different counties for forage; believes that enough can be got in about ten days. His instructions to Colonel Pratter respecting forage; has sent him £500; Pratter is to concert measures for the service with Long. The backwardness of the people in sending waggons after the barvest; has advised Hoops to go and use his influence. Details respecting the procuring of forage, transport, &c.
The papers show that de Lignorie had fallen into his own snare &c. 116

General Forbes to the Governor. Calls attention to the want of carriages as promised. The county of Lancaster is the most backward, and sends only waggons and horses unfit for the service, this is attributed to the influence of the Quakers, whom the magistrates seemed unwilling to disoblige. Unless spurred by the fear of his displeasure, is afraid they will not exert themselves. Being stopped in his march for want of waggons is obliged to have recourse to him and had sent a circular to the managers in the different counties. The necessity for supplies of food, clothing &3., which requires every exertion to supply. Asks for two companies of shipwrights &3. to build vessels on Lake Erie, 121

1759. August 13. Fort Bedford.

Bouquet to Sinclair. Agreeable news from every quarter but his own, which will be eternally lame for want of carriages. The General has written to all the managers and applied to the Governor. The reduction in the forage requires a fresh supply. Is glad he has dispatched the bateau men; all his engagements with them shall be fulfilled; need of Page 123 drivers, &c.

August 17, Fort Bedford.

Same to the same. The General approves of his measures, and of the diligence he has used. Sends back warrant from Pratter. If assistance does not come from Maryland and Virginia there will be disappointment from Philadelphia. Horses wanted; there should be 1100 effective. The letter relates entirely to the means for procuring supplies, waggons,

August 19, Carlisle.

Sinclair to Bouquet. Has forwarded circular to the counties. Is disappointed in the result of his advertisements for supplies. Shall this week apply to the magistrates, and send round the constables to warn those having forage to thresh it out; and inform them that if not supplied it shall be seized. This would at least alarm them and make them quicken their motions. The demands of the farmers about Lancaster, if acceded to and the price raised, would still cause them to ask more as they are insatiable. The farmers in all other parts of the country are satisfied with the price given. The letter relates almost entirely to the procuring and forwarding of supplies.

August 20, Carlisle.

Same to the same. All that remains to secure continual peace to all the western parts of the country is a sufficient supply of provisions and forage to enable the General to march up his forces to the Ohio and there erect a formidable fortress to restrain the Indians. The French have burned and abandoned their forts at Venango, Presqu'Isle and Le Bouf; all convoys may now go without escort. The delay to furnish stores may frustrate the present opportunity to secure peace for the Colonies and those people who are blind to their own interest and ignorant of the fatal consequences that may result, should be compelled to furnish carriago and forage, to prevent the General from being compelled to march his army back for want of effectual support.

August 21, Carlisle.

Same to the same. Is rejoiced that the enemy has abandoned the remaining posts; this effectually secures the friendship of the Indians. Circulars sent to the magistrates of Lancaster County and by Hoops to the millers, touching them on their tenderest point, oir own interest, that now the General may get provisions from Virg. aia and Maryland. Respecting transport, &c.

August 22,

Bouquet to Sinclair. Is alarmed at the difficulty of procuring forage, Fort Bedford, as there are only 104 bushels of oats and 300 of rye left. No pork, salt or liquor wanted till further orders, and no immediate need for flour, so all the waggons are to be loaded with torage. If the magistrates refuse to help and the country people remain obstinate, the only course will be to seize their forage, granting certificates and paying according to the appraisement of two magistrates, but this must be the last shift. Respecting cattle; contract for flour. Arrangements for waggons; Lieutenant Colonel Mercer of Virginia has been appointed A. D. Q. M. G. in his Province and borders to procure waggons and forage. Braddock's road opened to Pittsburgh; in a few days shall open the road to Red Stone Creek upon the Monongahela, by which means there will be three communications with Pittsburgh, and every Province may send produce which way it will. Respecting expresses. All drivers, except for sutlers, are to have provisions.

Sinclair to Bouquet, Hopes that fears about forage are not well founded, and that there will be no need to raise the price or to use compulsion. Harris is sending large supplies. States the number of country waggons ready, or on the road. Has not, however, slackened his diligence. Hoops writes regarding cattle. Statement of contents of waggons, &c. A few men should be stationed at Shippensburgh to take care of hay, &c.

August 28.

Page 148 Bouquet to Sinclair. The agreeable news about forage, which is Fort Bedford. expected to-day; is afraid that many unload at Lyttleton or Loudoun. Tools to be sent to the posts. Instructions for the meadows to be received from the manager at Shippensburgh.

August 28,

Same to Colonel Chambers. Has forwarded the letter to the General. Fort Bedford. Is sending men to help at the road to the limits of York county; their allowance of provisions, &c. The road to be finished as soon as possible to encourage the York people to bring up provisions.

August 28.

Same to Captain McLean. Is pleased to hear he is getting on with the Fort Bedford. road. Additional tools sent. Returns to be made of all the tools, pro visions, &c., he has.

August 28,

Same to commanding officer at Lyttleton. That he is to use the Fort Bedford. utmost diligence in making the road to Fort Loudoun, as it is the only way to encourage the country people to bring up provisions. Tools sent; old tools to be sent back carefully packed and returns sent.

August 28, August 28. Carlisle.

Same to Captain Sharp. Orders about the road from Loudoun to Fort Bedford. Lyttleton in similar terms to the orders in letters to other officers. 145 Sinclair to Bouquet. Country waggons loaded with oats are sent forward. Is sorry the last waggon horses were so abused; they were light loaded. Hambright writes on the 25th that he was to leave Philadelphia next day, with his waggons, horses, etc, complete and should be here soon, unless detained at Lancaster for want of forage. Deficiency of September 1, Carlisle.

Same to the same. Has advertised for flour, etc., to be paid for in ready money. Has sent off last month 146 waggons, with oats, spelts and rye, about 9,000 bushels, thus removing apprehensions about forage which is hourly coming from all quarters. He has, besides, 1,000 bushels purchased in the upper parts of York county. Hambright has arrived at Lancaster; his difficulty about horses. He will not be able to leave Lancaster till the middle of next week. Waggons loading with flour, etc. Hoops has cattle on the road. 153

Sentember 5, Carlisle.

Same to the same. That he may be free from uneasiness about forage. The price of oats has been raised by Mr. Shipping at Lancaster to two shillings and three pence, and large quantities are now coming in. There has been no need to raise the price at Carlisle or York county, where the people are well satisfied. Details of the quantities coming in from all quarters. Arrangements for transport, &c. 156

Asks for instructions for the settlement of certain accounts, &c., &c.

1760. November 13, Fort Pitt.

St. Clair to Bouquet. Letters for General Monekton forwarded; it is 18 days since he left. He gave no specific orders except that he (Signalia) was to command the troops till Bouquet's arrival and then join him at Philadelphia, and that the troops from Virginia should be left at the posts where they are until further orders. The necessity for his (Bouquet's) presence as there are no orders relating to the march of the Pennsylvanians; they do little else but a nsume provisions. Bontinek has sent off a bateau to Venango but its passage will be very tedious, 214

November 22, Fort Pitt. Same to the same. Had opened a letter from the General addressed to him (Bouquet) as commanding here. Has done nothing in consequence, but sends him a copy to Venange, so that he may give orders to Presqu'isle and Ningara before coming down. He has sent up beeves and will send more. Is afraid to send flour by bateau to Venange till the weather opens. Expects the mason work to be finished tomorrow.

Port Bedford.

Same to the same. Arrived last night through rain, sleet and snow, but there is a more favourable prospect. Ourry had left the day the troops arrived.

December 18.

Sinclair to the same. The forage ordered to Pittsburgh from Ligonier has not been delivered. Could not take it upon him to impress horses, but if directed he will do so.

1761. August 21, Philadelphia.

St Clair to the same. Recommending John Bartram who has done honour to his country by his services in the science of botany, &c. He has made a collection of all American plants for the Royal Society, and proposes to go down the Ohio or to Presqu'Isle as Bouquet may advise.

October 2, kelleville.

The same to the same. Is glad to find Bartram had reached Fort Pitt. On the arrival of Adam Hoops from New York, he shall have all the lucorne seed threshed out; how it should be cultivated. How ploughs and horse hoes should be made. Will send a herd of cows to him (Bouquet) and a young bull; is going to try the Shetland and Orkney breed of cows. Will send scurvy gruss seed, which grows in the winter, and if it can be got at for the snow is as good as spinach, dressed in the same way; no frost can hurt it. Advises him in planting to beware of the Vandevere apple, which would destroy all his cider. 231

GENERAL CORRESPONDENCE 1759.

Vol. II, Pr. I.

A. 14-1

B. M. 21,644

1759. January 3 Pittsburgh.

Hugh Mercer to Bouquet. Has received news of reinforcements and shall attend to instructions. Nothing to be looked for from the Indians except intelligence of the enemy's movements and that at a high price. The argument to secure their services is to be sufficiently prepared. On the return of an Indian sent for intelligence, will report the number wanted for the defence of the post; in the mean time 500 men seem sufficient against a winter attempt. If the French are directed by their knowledge of the present force, they will not send a greater, but he thinks they may send a strong force when the Ohio is clear of ice. Measures he has taken to prevent surprise. The bateaux go on slowly for want of sawyers; pitch also wanted. Canoes may be bought for black wampum. The fort may countain 350 men by building barracks, &c. Want of artificers. How the men sent up should be selected. Arrival of flour. Hogs brought up by McCulloch from the Potomac; as he is the first to venture he should be rewarded, and is recommended as a good man for a contract. Page 15

January 4 Carlisle.

Captain Harry Gordon to the same. Sends the plan of the fort at Pittsburgh, with a letter to Colonel Mercer, for his approbation; asks him to sign it if approved. Did not expect the enemy to move so soon; in any case the ditch could not be made with the garrison left there, and he supposed the post was only intended for a flying party. With the reinforcement sent up, will consider the best means of securing it as shown in the plan sent. Mischief might be done to Ligonier were any accident to happen to the fort at Pittsburgh. Recommends that Captain-Robinson be sent to Pittsburgh as a practical engineer. Is sorry his (Bouquet's) stay on the frontiers is so long, as it may endanger his health. His own health injured, and at present his lungs are very much out of order. Asks for the survey of Pittsburgh by Captain Dud-

January 6, Colonel John Armstrong to the same, The McKinsey (Mackenzie) for Pert Bedford, of 80 Highlanders under Captain Alexander McKinsey (Mackenzie) for the Bedford, of 80 Highlanders under Captain Alexander to make them: blanketting for under jackets and tailors to make them; how the demand was met and on what authority. About 170 more Highlanders and 50 Royal Americans coming will also want jackets; asks instructions for his guidance. Is looking for him (Bouquet) every hour. If he (Armstrong) could be of use in another campaign, is persuaded that this is not the place to be in at present.

January 6 Fort Bedford.

January 8, Captain Mackenzie to Bouquet. Order sent by Major Campbell to send 200 able-bodied men, but as the order reached Major Campbell to send 200 able-bodied men, but as the order reached (Mackenzie) could be sent with 85 men, of whom he was obliged to leave six at Lyttleton and Juniata for want of shoes, clothing, &c, a want universal among the men. His application for blankets, for jackets (pp. 4 and 7). Has only taken enough for his own party, not knowing but that the General would supply the rest at Carlisle, so as to make up the 200 men. If not he shall be obliged to make further demands on the King's stores here to accourre them. Had been ordered, if no instructions had been left at Fort Bedford, to proceed to Ligonier; does not expect the rest of the men before Wednesday or Thursday, and if they are unprovided with clothing, they cannot leave this place till the following week. Shall send them forward as accounted.

The Commandant Armstrong is timorous and confused, so that he (Bouquet) had better write explicitly what is to be done about the men. The necessity of having the mon clothed, which the provincial gentlemen unacquainted with service don't attend to.

January 12. Ligonier.

Thomas Boyd to Bouquet. Arrival of hogs, of which 150 are sent to Pittsburgh under a strong escort. Cannot send the howitzers for want of horses. The garrison still sickly. Sends returns of provisions, &c. 19

January 17, Carlisle.

Captain James Sinclair to the same. Is astonished that he (Bouquet) should have accused him to the General of detaining letters and thus caused the march of the troops from Fort Bedford. Gives the dates of receipt and delivery and calls on him to clear him with the General. 20

In the answer, dated 21st, Bouquet tells Sinclair that when he knows how to write and to whom he writes, he may be answered. Refers him to the General, with whom it may be expected he will observe the decency of his station.

January 19, Pittsburg.

Hugh Mercer to the same. A young Delaware who got into Fort Venango, reports that the garrison consisted of 100 men with seven officers all formerly stationed at Du Queene; 200 men had marched towards the Lakes for Canada. Three Mingoes and one Delaware were hunting for meat for the garrison, whose stock of flour was also small. Description of the fort, which stands about 200 yards from the Ohio, a little below the junction of French Creek. It is intended to watch the communication to Ligonier so he has warned Colonel Lloyd, that he may not send out parties too few in number. Even the pitiful entreprises the French can undertake, if these accounts be true, can be disappointed. Two spies are gone off to watch the enemy's movements above Kaskaskias, one to Priscile (Presqu'Isle), and the Mingoes have agreed to report on the state of Niugara. Another sent up the Onio to Castologas town, to get the different opinions, &c., of the Indians. Sends return and plan of Pittsburgh, with remarks. The ice has prevented the Indians from bringing either cances or Indian corn. His difficulty is to save the flour without affronting the Indians, or to make them suspicious of greater parsimony here than among the French. A blacksmith is wanted entirely for the Indians, as their little jobs perpetually impede the public work. Asks advice as to housing some additional men.

January 22. Philadelphia.

Richard Peters to the same. Introductory phrases. He attends the Governor to New castle, when the Assembly meets His (Bouquet's hints about provincial officers will be useful. Poor Haldimand is in that vile Fort Edward and writes for a news as for an alms, Halket has purchased his majority, and sails by the "Kennington" man of war, with General Aboreromby. Did he (Bouquet) or did he not intend an attack against the French fort when he began his march towards Fort Du Quesne from Loyal Hannan? "General Amherst comes here next week, on the 5th, before the Province Politicians meet and will make an Hog or a Dog on it. They say they will do every thing; I wish they may, but I think otherwise. Our proprietor is asleep at the helm, and the present master of the ship is at Athens among some curious antiquities."

January 23,

Captain Pearis to the same. Desertion of a sergeant with 14 men. Had read his (Bouquet's) letter to those remaining who promised to serve faithfully till the 15th March. Has sent after the deserters hoping to get them back.

length and would not repeat. Has not heard from DuPlessis since the eve of his departure for Louisbourg. Has sought in the list of dead and wounded but cannot find his name, so thinks he is still living, but does not know where. These uncertainties afflict her; a good mother may feel this at the prevision of the dangers which her son has to run. There is every race, age and condition among the 50 girls here, from the daughter of the Duke to that of the courtisan but she takes her own part. Has made a pet of General Abercomby's daughter, only four years old; her father calls every day. Gets news from all parts of the world; that from America would be most agreeable, if it brought word of his good health. Every one is going into mourning for the Princess of Orange. Has had a visit from the wife of the minister from Geneva. R. Townshend, D.A.G., to Bouquet. Sends the new exercise sent by

BOUQUET COLLECTION.

January 26, New York.

January 27, Carlisle.

Amherst to be used in every regiment, Armstrong to the same. Had expected him, but the other road was nearer, so was denied the pleasure. The birth and serious illness of his child. Major Jamieson going to York; had intended to go with him to Philadelphia, but is detained by the child's illness. Has written to Wark to go to Bedford and to Hamilton to take Wark's duty there, should anything happen to prevent him going. Shall not send off the sergeant's guard of Highlanders left here for sentry duty till further orders. Remarks on the unsuitable rations for the sick. Person wanted to take sharge of the King's stores. Shall send his (Bouquet's) sword and coat; the other article sent forward.

January 28, Carliale.

General MacLean to the same. The bad conduct of his (Bouquet's) express. The state of Lieutenant Phillips' health makes it necessary he should be under medical care. Lieut. (James) Sinclair is uneasy about the letter received from him (Bouquet); is sorry that what he wrote had been taken ill (pp. 20, 21). As the General proposes to do something in his favour with Amherst begs for his (Bouquet's) good offices. Hubbard has been struck off the list of officers in the Virginian Regiment; no reason assigned.

January 29, Carlisle.

January 29. Pittsburgh.

Sinclair to the same. Explains the reason of his writing as he had done (p 20) and assures him that nothing disrespectful was meant.

MacLean to the same. Has received his letter with his opinion of the gaping curiosity of the Americans. Describes a drunken seene on the part of a country justice and other two who had come to his room in Shippensburgh uninvited; their theological discussions, &c. His persecutor Osburn has got into serious trouble.

Hugh Mercer to the same. Report from Venango, confirming the former news as to the strength of the garrison, 40 from there had set off for LeBouf to wait till the river opens and a supply of flour can be sent. Reported that the garrisons at Presqu'Islo and Le Bouf were very weak; the men lately there had crossed the Lake for provisions. Two young men from the Lower chawanese town report that the heads of that nation are coming on a visit, and that no body of French is on the river from hence to its junction with the Wabash and Mississippi; other Indians report a party still at the mouth of the Muskingum. Robinson arrived with his detachment, two howitzers, Indian presents &c. Clayton's detachment from Ligonier has been recalled. Has only 45 shells and 14 boxes musket balls. Scarcity of flour; the country people beginning to bring Indian meal. Wishes whiskey were not sent up; his care to prevent abuse.

January 31 Cumberland.

Captain Richard Pearis to Ourry. Complains that money to pay the men has not been received and that furloughs have been granted without his leave.

1759. February 5, New York.

Hugh Wallace to Bouquet. Had received his letter and would have answered it from the ruins of fort DuQuesne, had he not hoped to see him in New York. Has written Duplessis to join him (Beuquet) at once. Major Prevost leaves for Boston to day. Johnel Young expected to settle with Stanwix and Prevost, who are going home. Halket sails for England. No news from there for three months. Haldimand and Munter well. Respecting arrangements for paying his mon, &c. Page 54

Pearis to Bouquet. port of court martial; mutinous behaviour in the garrison. the prisoner (Ragan) to Fort Bedford, knowing him to be a sower autiny. Has sent return of flour &c. received. Reports investigation into the alleged stealing of horses.

February 7, Pittsburgh. Mercer to the same. Hopes his letters have been received since he last heard. Two Shawanese gone to find if any of the enemy are at the mouth of the Muskingum or Yellow Creek. A Mohican reports from the Scioto, two officers and 20 or 30 men to be there, and at the Salt Spring above Kaskaskias a large number of troops. Reports of Luke Indians coming to war here. Indian here have gone off to their towns afraid of the others coming, but due also to the scarcity of flour; will take every precountion to prevent any of the garrison from being scalped. Clayton has gone off to reconnoitre. Indian asks whiskey for delivering up a girl, who had been made prisoner; explains to him and other Indians, that all captives must be delivered up as the price of peace; if not delivered, they would be demanded in the middle of their towns. Sends returns. The late severe weathere had closed the Monongahela, so that not one log has arrived for the rew barracks, The men generally healthy. List of what is wanted for the posts, &c.

February 15, Carlisle. Sinclair to Adam Hoops. Fresh provisions wanted at the posts; to purchase 20 head of cattle. List of the posts to which they are to be distributed.

February 17. New York. Major John Tulleken to Bouquet. Sends this letter by Lapsley, appointed ensign in the battalion, The packet has arrived, but nothing is known of its news. Stanwix sends friendly messages; is waiting here for orders, The King of Prussia is in a fine way; war is the word and peace is no more thought of.

February 17, Pittsburgh.

Hugh Mercer to the same. Since last writing nothing has happened. The Delaware chief has not gone to Presqu'isle for reasons given, and his friends of Kaskaskias are angry with him for letting his son go to Venango; the talk of these Indians shows their secret disposition. The old chief went himself to the Salt Spring and found only one officer and 15 men there, who were trading with the Indians. The officer told the chief that a thousand soldiers and a number of longhaired Indians were coming across the Lake from Niagara; the provisions and military stores had already come to LeBouf, where a descent on Pittsburgh was in preparation, as soon as the Ohio was free of ice. News confirmed by another Indian. It is difficult to reconcile the different reports, but shall be prepared for the worst. Robertson is of great service; bateau building goes on slowly, from want of pitch, &c The Ohio broken up and full of ice. The cold has been intense. Han heard that a strong reinforcement is comin . The French at Salt Springs seem left to keep up an interest in the Indians.

Sinclair to General Forbes. Why he did not write sooner. Thanks for the manner in which his rash letter is mentioned, but states he did not mean to be disrespectful to Bouquet, and expresses sorrow for having written it. Provisions sent off. Has detached six men to Stony Creek, the garrison being sickly; through Ourry's diligence Ligenier is stocked with provisions to the 20th March. Work done on the defences, condition of the armament, &c.

February 20, Philadelphia.

Lieut, James Grant to the same. General Forbes has ordered a medal for the officers who have been in the last campaign. "The medal has on one side the representation of a read cut through an immence forest over rocks and mountains, the motto; 'Per tot discrimina.' On the other side are represented the confluence of the Ohio and Monongahela rivers, a fort in flames in the forks of the rivers at the approach of General Forbes, carried in a litter, followed with the army marching in columns with cannon. The motto: "Ohio Brittaniea Consilio Manuque. This to be worn round the neck with a dark blue ribbon."

February 22, New York. Tulleken to the same. Orders sent for camp equipage for the four companies. Amherst has ordered that each battalion of ',000 men should give 100 for light infantry for the next campaign. The six companies to give 60 and the four companies 40. Mercer to the same. Sends returns of the garrison. King Beaver just returned reports that the messages met with a welcome reception, and proposals for peace would be gone into were the Indians assured they were sincere, as they can scarcely believe their numerous barbarities would meet with entire forgiveness. Report of the enemy's force at LeBearf confirmed. The Delawares removing to Kaskaskias to be out of the way. Weather favourable; all hands preparing to receive the enemy. The health of the garrison improving. Patterson's made enterprise, Indians from Lake Eric asking if peace had been made with the Delawares, as the French were persuading them that the English intended to cut them off root and branch. They have gone back pleased.

The policy of the Beaver to keep right with whoever is strongest. No more Indian meal to be sent.

March 2, Ligonier Lieut. Archibald Blane to Bouquet. The detachment of Royal Americans continues very healthy, and supposes the same is the case at Pittsburgh, although the sergeant never gives the least account. Respecting money. Thanks for the kindness about his commission and asks his support respecting his claim to rank. The number wanted to complete the garrison. The roturn of men firing at a target. Is sorry to hear of misbehaviour of the men in their quarters; they behave well here. A great deal of work has been done. Respecting tents, &c. 108

Lloyd to the same. Thanks for the relief promised. Sends returns of the work done for the month. The distressed condition of the provincials in the garrison described; it would be a charity to relieve them that they may have an opportunity to purchase eider and vegetables, the only means of recestablishing their health, and without which a great part of them can never make another campaign. Scouts sent out on the road to Venargo and Presqu'Isle. The men believe the roads to be impracticable for cannon. One of his soldiers has made a plan of the road. Eusign Clawford is at Stony Creek with a sickly garrison. No went of provisions, thanks to Ourry. Jaundice epidemic in the garrison.

Pearis to the same. Monthly returns sent; asks him to get the ludian accounts settled. The men in the garrison are waiting till the 15th, when they will abandon the post without their pay; many have deserted since receiving an advance.

Mercer to the same. The blunder committed by Hutchins in respect to flour, &c. A Shawanese reports a few French to be on the Muskingum and Scioto; they have been trading and are packing to return to Canada by Detroit. Could hear of no other parties on the Ohio above the Falls. The Shawanese are surprised and pleased to have been treated by the English so kindly.

Edward Hubbard to the same. Money received and paid over. The Assembly of Virginia has voted to recruit the regiment to a thousand and has, he hears, offered the command to Colonel W. Byrd. Colonel Washington has received thanks for his services and is resolved to have the conduct of Colonel Stephen examined by the Assembly, intending to lay before it all the crimes of which he is accoused. Hopes to serve next campaign.

Sends a return of the changes among the offleers. Respecting camp equipage and regimental accounts, &c. A large scout sent out from Fort Edward reports the killing of five Frenchmen, other five taken prisoners, and that a scout of 50 Indians was about Fort Edward and Saratoga. Shall send any other news the scout may bring. Haldimand has reported to Gage that Regers had shown a small party at Ticonderoga, which enticed them out of the post, when he killed 40 and took five prisoners with a loss of three killed and an Indian wounded of Rogers' force.

March 15, New York. Tulleken to the same. Condoles on the loss of Brigadier Forbes, Ourry is to go to New York as soon as possible, to settle his accounts. Captains Harding and Landers may send in their resignations; the price at which companies are to be sold has been fixed by General Amherst, who has ordered a return to be made of lieutenants and ensigns ready to purchase. Arrival of Brigadier Monekton at Halifax. It is reported that the great army is to go up the St. Lawrence; Almiral Sanders was to leave England the latter end of January.

March 17, Pittsburgh. Mercer sending intelligence brought by an Indian from Presqu'lle, giving the number of men, etc., there; the promises of the Indians to side with the French not carried out, in consequence of belts sent by the English; 1500 Indians expected at Kaskaskias to consult as to their course. The Mingoos desire both nations to fight across the Great Water and not dicturb them here, and that they had laid down the tomahawk. Description of the forts at Presqu'lle and LeBeerf, with armament, etc. Reports of French troops at Venange, etc.

Reports of French troops at Venango, etc.

Captain Pearis to Bouquet. The satisfaction of the men in the garrison at his letter; had been obliged to confine 13, but released on the promise to stay till his (Bouquet's) letter came. Had berrowed £10 to pay the mon which will satisfy them till he can get more. They blue Colonel Dagworthy for not sending the money; if they had received it when granted by the Province, most of the men would still be here. Sends returns.

March 18, Pittsburgh.

Mercer to the same. Sends Indian report (p. 13). Shall not relax his vigilance and industry for securing his post. Progress of the work; ammunition secured. Has been obliged to borrow money. Arrival of Indian goods from Bedford; a poor assortment. The Indians have furs for sale and would return disgusted were they not taken. Complaints of indiscriminate trading. Sends Shinga's speech; his faithfulness; about 60 Indians here trading. Indians determined to bury the French hatchet. Has not been able to discover any guns yet; some have been grappled a little way down the Ohio, but in very deep water. Scurvy is appearing; measles spreading, but not proving mortal. Hutchins ill

April 16, New York. Tulleken to Bouquet. The loss of his (Tulleken's) poor boy was a blow, but he will get over it and serve the campaign. April 21, Ligonier. Lloyd to the same. Thanks for the promise of a surgeon, Must wait for the money with patience. Bullocks have passed an are now at Pittsburgh; had been obliged to take some to prevent his garrison from starving. Respecting vinegar for scurvy and whiskey; the garden in hands. The floods have swept the dam away. Notes regarding work, materials, &c. The relief of the frontier garrisons anxious!y looked for. The first battalion of Royal Americans being ordered on the expedition gives hopes of his (Bouquet's) return. Asks for a millwright. The bravery and prudence of Lieut. Campbell in preserving his convoy from an attack by Indians. A party of sick on their way to Bedford surprised by Indians; the escort saved themselves leaving the sick of whom 11 were killed or missing. Other attacks by Indians. Lieut. Miles has been particularly active in pursuit. Note of men of the first and second battalions who have died since the 1st of April.

April 24, Pittsburgh. Report of Abel and Jacob Pearson, horse drivers, taken prisoners on the 6th April and carried to Venango, but made their escape and were brought in by some Mingoes. An extract from Mercer's Journal, which follows, gives a description of the fort at Detroit, as given by two prisoners, who had been taken by the Indians about twelve months ago. About 50 French families live along the river below the fort and 70 above it; 400 soldiers have been stationed there, but at present there are only 200, the usual strength; the garrison poorly supplied. Mercer to Bouquet. Is pleased at the renewal of the correspondence. It being probable that no great force being at Venango, a spy sent off may have to go to Presqu'Isle, or he may be delayed by an unexpected outbreak of his countrymen, the Delawares. Has sent the General an account of Detroit, as given by two men lately escaped from there. The advantage of Charles Hill for a post. Excellent coal and limestone have lately been discovered on the Monongahela, nearly opposite to Pittsburg. Will attempt to make tar here. Chains wanted should Charles Hill be fixed on for a post. If the point on the River Duquesne is to be fortified, a foundation of stone must be raised several feet above its present level, as the Ohio was lately all over the plains and covered the floor of the fort. Refers to Lloyd for account of Indian scalping. The Delawares are still apparently in the French interest. Remarks on Indians. Late standalous behaviour of the troops in face of the enemy. Remonstrates against removing the troops from the garrison, the officers do not wish to retire before the campaign ends, and the effect on the men would be disastrous.

Engagement of a gunsmith and two small apprentices at twenty-five billings currency a day. Rob, the blackmith and his mon, will take twelve shillings a day, though he thinks they are equal to carpenters who are offered a dollar a day, Rob must have a pint, or at least half a pint of rum a day for himself and his man. The miscrable state of the people at Ligonier. The men here are little better than when they left the campaign, there are 60 of them, 15 not fit for duty. A trapper scalped; the danger to the inhabitants, so that patrols should be sent out; how these could be furnished.

Lloyd to Bouquet. Respecting repairs to waggons, &c, and the difficulty of proceeding without assistance on the work from the regulars. By rd reports from Winchester that 300 men are ordered to reinforce Ligonie; the Highlanders to be relieved on the arrival of these Virginian troops. Two millwrights recommended by Morgan. The corporal in charge of the escert for the sick (p. 176) found guilty of great misbehaviour. The unhappy men of the garrison at Stony Creek have been obliged to lie in a foot of water, covered only by a waggon cloth; 32 of the best men have either perished or been disabled. The officer is constantly asking for reinforcements; those sent have been sperified, but to preserve the post more must be sent on the arrival of the Virginians.

May 2, Bedford. Colonel Adam Stephen to Bouquet. Has just arrived with 300 men from Winchester, after a fatiguing march from heavy rains, deep roads and high rivers. Hopes that they will not need to return from Ligonier from want of provisions.

May 3, Bedford. Same to the same. Will do what he is ordered, but it is impossible to do the heavy repairs to the roads if 50 men are left here, many of the detachment being exhausted with the bad roads, &c., and he is carrying with him all who are able to go. What respect is to be paid to Sir John St. Clair's orders?

May 4, York. George Stevenson to Hoops. Cannot get horses to forward the flour. Warrants have been issued, but does not know how many horses can be got by this means. All the wheat here held at four shillings. 200

May 4, Lancaster. Adam Hoops to Bouquet. Sends Stevenson's letter; the prospect of getting waggons, &c. 201

May 4, Lancaster. Armstrong to Stanwix. The complaints from Ligoniar about provisions are now removed; details of how the supply has been set. His brother, with Major Jamieson, set off to recruit in Maryland in consequence of the Governor's orders, a careful lieutenant is left at Bedford; all the other officers of higher rank are out recruiting. Colonel Stevens, [Stephen] with 300 men is on the march between Bedford and Ligonier; there are too few men for the convoys on this side of Ligonier. Hopes that the necessity for fresh provisions has not been overlooked.

May 6, Ligonier.

Lloyd to Bouquet. Is sorry to have incurred his displeasure and explains. His returns regularly contained the state of provisions; enters into details at considerable length to justify his correspondence.

May 12, Pittsburgh. Mercer to the same. None of the enemy have been seen, and few friendly Indians till two days ago. Sonds separately the report of the spy from Venango, and other intelligence. Has postponed sending returns till be heard from the settlements. Not an ounce of fresh beef in the fort for eight days and the state of the flur will oblige them to go on horse flesh, if it can be procured. The garrison becoming more healthy; only the Highlanders, who love the cold weather well, fall sick as the summer advances, but none dead as yet. Has not found pine fit to make tar, but has discovered a fine mill site on the south side of the Monongahela opposite the lower point of the island. The Indians speak fair, but at home are full of cabals; the French emissaries have done a world of mischief. Corporal Ellis, a prisoner, came in last night; he narrowly escaped being scalped when he called for the boat. Page 207

May 12, Ligonier.

Captain Alexander McKerzie to Bouquet. Has heard that his regiment has left Philadelphia; his uncertainty as to when and where he can join. Hopes that Colonel Montgomery has not forgotten his detachment here; reflections thereon. Cannot understand why the detachment here is left to suffer without being relieved. Personally he will do all for the good of the service, but is surprised to hear nothing from the corps to which he belongs, and does not know how he is to supply the want of clothing, settle the men's accounts, &c. His confidence in Bouquet's management, &c.

May 15, York. George Stevenson to the same. The brigade of horses sent from here are chiefly bought by Adam Hoops. Hopes that oats may be got, and how eash can be procured. Cannot be at Lancaster, for reasons given; shall try to got waggons on the General's terms. Trusts that on representation his services shall be fairly paid for. Next week will be time enough to issue advertisements, &c., &c.

May 17, Bedford. Stephen to the same. Has been obliged to stay to forward supplies for the garrisons, which have been in great want but are now supplied for the present. He has forwarded 42,000 pounds of provisions since he came to this place, has had a detachment on the roads, and there are now ten waggons with pork on their way over the mountains. No tools here to build the Quemong bridge, and the escorts for convoys require all his men. Does not see how he can leave this without danger of starving before an active officer and some men come to relieve him.

May 17, Bedford,

Same to Stanwix. Has only this instant heard of the want of provisions at Pittsburg. They have, however, received provisions before this, of which details are given. Reports his work as in letter to Bouquet. The necessity for pack horses and cattle at the garrison beyond the mountains can only be supplied from day to day.

May 21, Carlisle. Daniel Clark to Bouquet. Has sent off waggons with oats for Bedford, there to load flour for Ligonier and Pittsburgh. Is distressed for want of forage stores. The measures he has adopted for obtaining forage (oats, &c). He requires money, the country people having little faith in military payments.

The violent tornado and approach of night prevented him from doing anything but securing the pork, which he shall send for although it is difficult to get horses. The garrison is harassed to death with escort duty, and will soon be incapable of it especially when weakened by the march of the Highlanders. Has sent off a detachment to Stony Creek, which he is atraid the enemy intend to attack. Escape of a Royal American after being scalped near the fort. Mercer to the same, Skirmish between a corporal and ten men of the garrison and a superior force of the enemy. One man looking for game scalped; the Indians then attacked the others who got off except two old men, who were taken prisoners. A pursuit made but the enemy escaped. The most active Indians in the pursuit well rewarded. From the state of provisions cannot maintain many Indians at the fort, but the prospects for supplies are better. Is busy scouring the woods for spies, but without success. Two Delawares from Venango report that there are only 30 soldiers there at present, the rest having gone to Le Bœuf for provisions. A spy has been sent up the Ohio. Returns sent. Arrangements that it would be desirable to make for the sale of necessaries by the traders to the soldiers. Is glad that permission has been given to leave his people at the fort. Return of provisions at Ligonier follows (p. 235).

Return of Captain Morgan from delivering provisions at Pittsburg; when the supply arrived, they had not an ounce of any kind in the store. At Turtle Creek, Captain Morgan on his march with the supplies, was attacked and repulsed the enemy; lost five men killed and one wounded, but entirely preserved the convoy and brought in the wounded. On the 3rd, Lieut. Hughes of the second Pennsylvanians with 15 men from Bedford, was attacked within hearing of the fort, his sergeant and three men were killed, the rest retired in good order and were relieved from the fort. Captain Mackenzie has insisted on marching on the arrival of Ballet. The want of his detachment before the arrival of all the Virginians will weaken the garrison and greatly increase the fatigue of escort duty. The distress of Pittsburg for want of provisions; for want of horses and more provisions it will be impossible to supply it. Will to-morrow send all he can.

smaller escort than the French have at Venango can be safely depended on. On the arrival of Woodward he shall set out with a considerable supply to Ligonier. Ballet's party remains at Ligonier; McKenzie on his march here; this post and Juriata must be left in his care that he (Stephen) may be able to strengthen the escorts. The Indians have killed two Virginian soldiers at Pittsburg, and a Pennsylvanien, besides one very lately at Stony Creek. The impunity increases their insolence. To check this, secure the communication and prevent their insults, it is necessary to march a body of troops to this place. No convoys can be expected till that is done, and if he be drubbed, the advanced garrison will be in extremely bad circumstances.

May 25, Beaford. George Croghan to Capt. Horatio Gates. Has been here ten days waiting for an escort; cannot venture without a good one as almost every party lately has been attacked and beaten. The attack on Ballet's party. The garrisons of Ligonier and Pittsburg have not above a fortnight's provisions. If the next escort meets with a misfortune these two posts must be abandoned. A hundred French and Indians would make an easy conquest here. Has sent off Captain Montour with three Indians to Pittsburg to collect all the Indians he can to meet him (Croghan) and send messages to the Indian settlements to call them to a meeting at Pittsburg.

May 25, Ligonier. Daniel Clark (extract) to Stanwix. The attack on Ballet, but no additional details. Bedford improves, for every thing that comes stays here for want of escort. The cattle that left Carlisle on the 15th are here yet and likely to be for some time. Everything looks gloomy here; since the 25th of April the road has not been clear of them (the Indians). Enclosed by Adam Hoops, whose signature is placed at the foot of the extract.

May 26, Easton. Captain Callender to Bouquet. Expects to send off 400 horses on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Leaves the question of his resignation in the hands of the General.

May 27, Bedford.

Stephen to the same. Asks for men, the communication being lined with parties of the enemy, particularly Indians, from this to Pittsburg. Ballet's defeat leaves them necessitous; he (Stephen) has only 40 men with him. Lloyd was obliged to send Woodward with another convoy to Pittsburg. He (Stephen) can send nothing over the Laurel Hill till he is reinforced. The Highlanders are on their march down, which surprises him at this juncture. The loss of another convoy would rain the advanced posts. Asks for some Virginians to be sent from Winchester to Fort Cumberland; a man was scalped and a boy taken there the night before last; 50 of the enemy could burn the place.

May 28, Carlisle.

Adam Hoops to the same. He and Ourry arrived; constables sent out to gather in waggons. Forty horses are to set off to-morrow. What is to be done for oscorts, as 80 beef cattle and a number of pack horses are at Bedford and cannot stir? The people are all asleep; same of the waggonmen, must be used roughly as a warning to the rest. Four of Scott's waggons passed; 10 more were ready to start; Shippen will report his success at Lancaster. He has 244 fine sheep in pasture and has sent to purchase more. The bad newsfrom above will make waggons more difficult to be got, unless smartly handled. Sends extract (p. 251) of letter from Ligonier.

May 28, Carlisle. Armstrong to Stanwix. Has been urging the magistrates to have the meadows appraised; the accounts for last year are not paid nor settled, which makes the people uneasy. receive and check here the accounts of the contractors' agents. If he can find 60 men who have shoes and blankets, he will send them to Stephen, and has written Burd to hasten up the new levies from Lancaster; smiths are at work getting arms ready for the newly raised troops. Has made a demand on the magistrates for waggons. Page 256

May 28, Carliste. Aimstrong to Bouquet. Arrangements for raising and paying for waggons; has given charge to Mr. Byards at two and a half per cent; he has also charge of one of the King's stores. Recommends that the money to pay the waggons should be deposited here. The superintendence of the meadows; Lyon's appointment, &c. Asks for warrants confirming the appointments. Crawford sent to collect horses. The men sont to Stephen are in a shocking state for such a duty. Summonses issued to bring in waggons; if that does not suit, force must be used. Ballet's affair is a very unforturate and, he is afraid, a very scandalous one. Croghan is still at Bedford; "things have a disagreeable aspect, and neither our manner of making war nor politics seem to have with those savages the proper effects. Is it possible to avoid attacking the Indian towns or renewing the war with the Delawares?" The few Pennsylvanians with Morgan did well.

Ourry to the same (in French). The hindrance to the transport of provisions by the bad news from Bedford. Has been trying to engage waggons to carry up working tools; is obliged to leave money to pay the men on their return. Will try to get stores for forage. Stevenson promises a brigade of waggons; the number uncertain. A saddler promised Mr. Byer (Byard and Dyer in other places) is the bearer of this; is afraid he will be detained the greater part of a week, from the difficulty of getting transport for the working tools.

Colonel James Burd to the same. Advertisements received and distributed; bags are being made; Boyd is sending tents to Carlisle. The difficulty of getting waggons, last year's services not being paid for. Note of the waggors sent or to be sent to the different places. If the people were paid waggons could be more easily got. Has heard of the defeat of Ballet and is trying to keep it quiet.

May 29, Carlisle. Ourry to the same. Refers to Boyle for account of the attack on Morgan. The carrying off of Ballet's convoy is unlucky; had the enomy destroyed the provisions, it would not have been so bad, but to carry them cff to Venango on the pack horses is provoking. Remains here for reasons given; has set sawyers and carpenters to work to repair old stores for forage. Has written Hughes to send the horses he has ready. Wyur to supply oats and Colonel Weiser to raise waggons; supposes they should concert together. The saddler will not go to work till he be paid, so that he can settle his debts. Has found another express on pay; a list of those so engaged should be made to avoid confusion. Has ergnged a forage master.

Same to the same. Recommends the bearer, Abraham Barr, who will start with 30 waggons in a week, to be waggon master. Urges that last year's accounts, which he takes with him to Philadelphia, be settled as soon as possible.

Hopes to raise a couple of hundred waggons. The efforts to raise waggons and the difficulty arising from non payment of last year's services. Scarcity of forage of all sorts; has been obliged to seize some oats from a merchant, &c.

July 5,

July 12,

Tulleken to Stanwix, Had sent express with an account by Captain Fort Bedford. Cochrane, at Stony Creek, of an attack on a small party of his and stating the measures he had taken to secure the communication. Has had no further account though he had sent three expresses to Cochrane, to order him to march into Ligonier with 50 horses loaded with flour and 50 oxen. He has 400 men, which should be more than a match for any thing he may meet. McKenzie has sent forward the orders to Burd to march on, leaving his baggage to follow. Major Livingston has arrived from Fort Cumberland. Morton, waggon master from Juniata, with a servant and commissary Armstrong, reports being fired on by Indians about four miles from here. Nine loaded waggons, with an escort of only five mer, were only five miles back from the place he was fired at. Detachment sent off to try to save the waggons, which they met all safe, and they camped all night. In the morning a provincial about 30 yards off was killed and scalped in sight of them all, and the Indians though pursued got off safe. The number of his garrison and the duties, besides that the enemy are all round, make it necessary, he believes, to send up more troops. Captain Gordon cannot go without a strong escort, which cannot be given him, and as Mercer reports that no escort of less than 500 men is sale, does not suppose that Stephen will send Cochrane to Pitt-burgh. He believes the enemy to be in parties divided all along the communication. If very strong they may still block up Ligonier and send a few here to keep up an alarm. Cannot make out why he does not hear from Stephen or Cochrane. P. S. Still no word from above; will send out a party to Stony Creek and if there is no word by five in the morning will send another.

July 12, Ligonier.

Cochrane to Tulleken. Reports his arrival safely without leaving a man on the road, and gives a detailed account of the proceedings on the march, over the "most terrible, rocky and steep roads, and where we were not troubled with stones the roads were most intolerably slippery." sontry was shot, chiefly from not obeying instructions. The morning leaving Stony Creek a gun went off by accident, and the men believing it to be Indians went forward with such eagerness to attack that they could scarcely be restrained. List of casualties at Stony Creek, July 13, There is no immediate danger of convoys going to Pittsburgh. Disputes about service; strange situation of public affairs, etc. Page 305

July 13, Fort Beiford. Tulleken to Bouquet. Message to Major Gates. Burd is prossing forward without baggage; expects 300 of his people by Wednesday. No account from above, but Cochrane is so strong that no doubt he is safe. He (Bouquet) will be greatly disappointed if he expects much hay here or to find grass. There are about fifty acres which may be out near Fort Cumberland. Thinks that the greater part of the enemy who were before Ligonier had gone home, but that many are on the communication as far as Loudeun. Orders given not to send any smaller escorts than 30 men.

July 14, Bedford. Same to Stanwix. Sends intelligence received from Ligonier. Report received that the enemy has arrived at Presqu'Isle from Detroit about 700 French and Indians, with 10 cannon, intending to proceed immediately against Pittsburgh or Ligonier. The enemy has horses and every necessary to transport artillery, &c. from Presqu'Isle to LePouf. When the force is joined by that from Venango it will be 800 French and it is feared 1,000 Indians. Mercer reports that the treaty lately held with the Indians at Pittsburgh was satisfactory and some chiefs have gone to get the other Indians from the French interest.

July 14, Bedford!

Same to Bouquet. Sends letters received from Pittsburg and Ligonier. Will send off Gordon with his 100 artificers, Captain Broadhead's company and one hundred more (Royal) Americans, leaving here only 100 (Royal) Americans. Would have gone himself, but Gordon thought he had better wait the arrival of the Virginians. Shall send all the oxen (100), and horses (about 300) with this detachment. No waggons can go as there is no stopping now. Shall go with the Virginians as soon as Burd arrives.

July 15, Pittsburgh. Croghan to Stanwix. Report by two spies of the preparations at Venango for an immediate attack on the forts; of the arrival of three parties of Indians; their Grand Council, at which the commandant received a letter ordering him to Niagara, which was to be attacked by Sir William Johnson. Details of the movements of the Indians in consequence. 318

July 18, Bédford. Tulleken to Bouquet. Arrival of Captain Grub of the Pennsylvanians with 36 waggons, reports that an express from Lancaster had passed him near Lyttleton, and that his horse was found killed on the road, the man being either killed or a prisoner. Has heard nothing from above since he last wrote. Expects Byrd (Bird, Burd elsewhore) to morrow, and shall advise him to march to Ligonier, unless he has heard otherwise. If the convoys have arrived safely, there is fully a month's provisions for all the treops above, besides Byrd's 500. If he (Bouquet) or the General is coming, a strong escort should be taken at least from Lyttleton. Is afraid for the garrison at Pittsburg; it may even now be too late to relieve them. Hopes Ligonier in after this fears regarding the battalion (of Royal Americans); urges expedition. Strongth of the enemy sent by Bailly. When Byrd comes were he (Bouquet) or the General here they are strong erough to take the field.

July 18, Ligonier. Stephen to Stanwix. Is uneasy at receiving no answer to six expresses he has sent off; suspects they have fallen into the enemy's hands. The convoy for Pittsburg was too small for the trouble of escorting it. The place has been very weak; a few days will enable them to despise any number without artillery. the conduct of Lieut. Biddle of the Pennsylvanians. The attempt to settle the matter.

July 18, Lake George.

The last page, with the signature and address, is wanting. Nothing is known here of what is to happen next hour, everything being kept in the dark. The light infantry, although on constant look out, have never fallen in with the enemy, who have, however, continued to scalp within sight of the camp. A party of infantry surprised close to the woods, but the enemy escaped, as did a party of the enemy seen on an island. Lord Amherst has established three posts between Fort Edward and this, where another is placed, but not on the ground where Fort William Honry stood. Everything ready and must embark in a few days. The army healthy. Haldimand writes that Prideaux had left Oswego with 7:0 Indians and promises from others that they would join; the great hopes of his success. July 22, Bedford.

Same to the same. Colonel Byrd has left for Ligonier with 350 of his regiment; 10 Pensylvanians, between 50 and 40 artificers, and a convoy of waggons and horses. The additional waggons required to carry up tools, &c. Respecting bags, &c, for transport. The bad roads to Ligonier; does not believe Byrd will get there in less than eight days. Virginians and artificers left here. Necessity of sending an escort to Fort Cumberland for waggons and cattle. Arrival of waggons and horses at Fort Lyttleton, which cannot be forwarded for want of an escort. A communication between Cumberland and Pittsburg would be of infinite service. Byrd has done nothing about it, for reasons given, At a stand Shippen to Bouquet. Sends articles (named) by Captain Hambright. Hopes to send him information next week about the waggons; the harvest will be finished in two or three days, except the oats; which will be finished in ten days. Cash transactions with Hambright. Death of the King of Spain at last.

July 27, Ticondercga.

John Dunnett to the same. Reports the lines and forts of Ticonderoga taken possession of this morning. The enemy had set fire to the fort and retreated in bateaux during the night.

July 28, Bedford,

Tuileken te same. Boyle sent express to Colonel Byrd, has returned from Stony Creek, and reports an attack on that post yesterday. The same party was within two miles of the fort this morning, when it was observed by Hubbard, who got under arms. Believes the enemy to be between him and Juniata. In case he (Bouquet) or any other be on the road with a small escort, sends this word. The Indian mentioned (p. 334) is not the head of the Delawares, although a man in whom Croghan has confidence. Is trying to get waggens to go to Ligonier; if not he shall be at a loss what to do, as he has no horses and few waggens, Is excessively uneasy about the small pox being at Stony Creek; if it is carried to Ligonier, it will be ruin. Lieut. Phillips sent off with 30 men for Ligonier; he is to wait for him (Bouquet) or the General. Ourry has succeeded in getting waggens.

July 29.

Gordon to Byrd. His admiration of the goodness of the roads and of the infinite backwardness to take advantage of it. The bad state of the waggons. Criticises the work ordered on the roads when other work is to be done. There are 10 French and as many Indians at Venango. Does not see how he could return with the artificers af reoming so far. Lieut. Grant to Bouquet. Has sent to Pittsburg 70 bullocks and 19,000 pounds of flour, with Gordon and his artificers under care of Mather. A couple of 12 pounders with ammunition also sent. The post is in tolerable repair and may be defended by 200 men. Byrd sends a return of prisoners with the Indians. Two flags of truce sent in by the French, one notifying excharge of prisoners. The probable loss of the major of the battalion by his imprisonment. The object of the other not yet known. No word of Wolfe. Otter of the Royal Americans killed at Oswego, the engineer wounded and it was reported that LaCorne was shot in the thigh.

The delay in the delivery of his (Bouquet's) letter, the early arrival of which might have prevented his leaving Ligonier; the reasons given at length for marching to Pittsburg. Work done at Fort Bedford. The road to Ligonier was not bad; the only bad places being between Shawanese cabins and the foot of the hill, and a few steps elsewhere; some bridges wanted. How the road should be completed. The bad condition of Fort Ligonier which wants a good deal of repair; details given. What must be done to the road between Ligonier and this post, and what troops should be employed for this purpose, on the Monongahela, Fort Cumberland &: Should the result at Niagara be ever so favourable, there is still mischief to be expected from the Delawares at Venango and the Chippewas at LeBœut.

The army (1,000 regulars and Canadi 2s, and 500 Indians) being mostly drawn from Venango, Stanwix will not meet with much opposition; hopes he will not be delayed by want of provisions. The troops that defeated the French were only 500 and Indians. The French have abandoned and destroyed Crown Point and made off to St. John's.

August 22, Juniata. Thomas Hamilton to the same. Reports he had sent a false alarm, as it was Captain Johnson burning priming, whom he mistook for an enemy.

August 22, Bedford. Buquet to Gordon. To pay the men nine pence a day instead of rum; his plan of working by task approved of. Stores forwarded to be examined on arrival, none to be kept at Ligonier. Tents also shall be sent. Burd, Shippen and Cresup are to open the road from the Great Meadows to the Monongahela and to build store houses there. Artificers to be sent to help, when wanted, with stores, but to be notified by Burd. The General leaving for Ligonier and Pittsburg. He (Bouquet) remains to forward everything. Young Scholeser (Schlosser) recommended for the ensigncy. Affairs begin to look better; hopes to find at Pittsburg 1500 R. T. (regular troops) besides Indians and artificers. 216 bullocks, and waggons with flour gone by Braddock's road to Pittsburg to be followed by 200 packhorses. Contract for flour from Virginia to be delivered on the Monongahela, and salt for winter store; the bateaux to be kept in readiness. A white man should be sent to report on Venango, LeBourf and Presqu'Islo.

August 23, Laucaster.

Shippen to Bouquet. Is obliged for the news from Venango; hopes the French will do the same in Detroit. Hambright shall be sent off with waggons when ready. People threshing, but unwilling to take two shillings for their oats. Sales have been made elsewhere and he bas been promised by Mr. Carpenter, the President of the Court, that he would use all his influence to get the farmers to thresh and bring their oats, Suggestions as to the best means of getting forage.

August 24, Philadelphia.

Hughes to the same. The second brigade sets off under Selby, in a few days. Reynolds will go with another, so soon as he can be govready. Has been unsuccessful in his attempt to raise a brigade of pack horses. 443

August 34, Ligonier. Thomas Barron to the same. Has drawn in favour of Mercer for £811,11.10; sends wa.rants as also the receipts to be endorsed. Has also drawn in Bouquet's favour for £1200, being the balance due him.

August 27, Lancaster. Shippen to the same. Has received the order to send up forage at any price. The price must be raised to induce the farmers to hive hands to thresh, they being themselves busy ploughing. Sinclair has bought a quantity at two shillings. Shall make every effort to send forage. The delays &c.

August 30. Winchester.

John Byers to Bouquet. Sends deposition of John Sanderson, who had his waggon taken from him illegal y. Forage sent off.

Mercer to the same. The progress made in getting forage, pack horses, &c. Arrival of 13 Catawbas and two Cherokees, to join the General shall keep them here till further orders. How he has paid their interproter. Progress making on the road to Cresup's. A ship carpenter wanted to caulk the scow on the Potomac. Arrival of 60 beeves. The Indians referred to above wish to go out to avenge the death of their friends; ammunition has been refused them. Chatterbox, one of the Indians, is very anxious to go to see the fort he helped the English to take. What is he to do if more Indians arrive?

August 30.

Alexander Graydon to the same. Severe illness has prevented him from Berks County answering late letters. No waggons can be got under fifteen shillings a day and provisions. The horses, too, are all atmost unfit for transport, having been immoderately worked by the owners. Asks that clear certificates be given to the waggoners, so as to remove doubts at settle-

August 31, Lancaster.

Shippen to the same. Has sent to Philadelphia for the horse shoes wanted. Hopes to have oats to load Hambright's waggons, when they are ready. The waggons under Postlethwaite cannot leave till the latter end of next week. Will encourage the coming in of oats till he gets 12,000 bushels.

September 1, Fort Loudonn.

Lieut. W. Blyth to the same. Has given Captain Sharp a return of stores, &c. About 100 bullocks will leave to day for Fort Bedford; expects to send off another drove in two or three days.

Reptember 2, Philadelphia.

Hughes to the same. Defends himself at some length against implied charges in his (Bouquet's) letter of 22nd August. When the different brigades of waggons are to set out. It is indifferent to him whether he is employed or not, he will do his duty honestly, whether he pleases or displeases; the King and the army have not a more sincere friend than he is. 471

September 3, Pittsburg. September 3, Lancaster.

Gordon to the same. Requires money for the people's pay. Will begin the fort to-day, which is to be built of earth and not of logs. Shippen to the same. Capt. Hambright has not had time to settle.

being busy with his waggons and horses, on which he has no doubt expended the £3,100 paid him. His and Postlethwaite's brigade with forage will be able to leave this week. The justices are to be in town to morrow, and he will ask the reason of the promised brigade of waggons not being sent. Labourers scarce, so that few can be got as drivers. Money matters. Hopes soon to hear of Wolfe's success, &c.

September 5, Camp at Martin's.

Colonel Burd to the same. Has only got this length (ten miles from Fort Cumberland) owing to the heavy rain. From Cumberland the road is hilly and stony, and in the short distance they have crossed 14 or 15 creeks, not a single bridge repaired and very little done on the road. Has lost seven men by desertion since leaving Cumberland. Vanbiber is on the march from Pittsburg to Cumberland; his reinforcement will make that garrison very strong. Paris is to send 20 or 25 men down the Potomac to look for the deserters, lurking about in these remote places. Will observe and report on the road; the trouble will be with the creeks. Plenty of food on the road for horses and cattle. Has had a violent fever, but hopes to get over it with Jesuits' bark. The Virginian horses are the best they have had but the saddles are bad. Paris, at Fort Cumberland, is in distress for meat; three bullocks sent him.

September 6.

Rutherford to the same. Has purchased 200 pack horses, contracted for 1,000 bushels of oats and Indian corn and bargained for about 500 sheep.

1759 Bepten ber 6, Oumberland.

Major Livingston to Bouquet. How he is disposing of the forage, &c. Repairs to the fort have been pushed on as much as possible &c., &c.

September 7, Pittsburg. James Dow to the same. Sends returns. Arrival of 47 waggons, some with flur, others with Indians, stores and tools. Has sent off 70 waggons and 70 pack horses to Ligonier to be loaded with flour. The Indians have drawn 500 rations daily for the last four days. The work going on well "Its a very sweet pleasant place and great plentie of fish both good and large."

Beptember 7, Camp at the Little Meadows: Colonel Burd to the same. Arrived here last night. It is lucky waggons were not sent to Fort Cumberland, as after the rains the roads must be a perfect swamp. From his last encampment to this the road is very bad; details of its state are given and recommendation for repairs; even light loads have had to be lessened. Hopes to make 12 miles on his march to-day. Suggestions as to repairs on the roads, bridges, &c Is glad the General is sending a bateau to meet him at the Monongahela. The weather has been very severe on his people and himself.

Beptember 7, Fort Cumberland.

Richard Pearis to the same. Asks instructions as to sending men in pursuit of deserters (p. 479). Mercer expected at Cresup's to night, Has sent to clear the roads.

489

Beptember 7, Lancaster. Shippen to the same. The difficulty of getting waggons and forage. How he has settled with the owners of waggons carrying loads only part of the way. The accounts with Hambright show his claim for waggons and horses to be £4,300, of which £1,200 are still due him. Want of iron traces has delayed the loading of waggons with forage. His anxiety to get the work done. General remarks on the prices, the opening of roads, &c.

Hambright's account follows,

Reptember 8, Winchester. Mercer to the same. Details as to the progress of collecting forage. Is afraid he will have to build a new scow. His trouble with the Indiana and how he settled it. Rutherford's dilemma in consequence of want of positive orders to buy cattle. Pearis reports that there is no provision at Fort Cumberland. The difficulty of getting merchants to send up goods to trade with the Indians. Progress of work on the road to Cumberland.

September 10, Fredericktown. John Cary to Mercer. Cannot get forage sent to him, as Colonel Pratter is giving ready money, &c., for all sorts of forage delivered in the town, and seventeen shillings and six pence a hundred weight for carriage to Bedford.

September 10, Castle Dewart.

Col. John Armstrong to Bouquet. Account of the difficulties of coming from the weakness of the horses and the bad state of the roads. Recommending that a young man (Ensign McDouall) be allowed to go down to vindicate his character against certain charges he (Armstrong) believes to be false.

September 11, Williamsburgh.

Governor Fauquier to the same. Acknowledges the benefits done to the Colony by General Stanwix in the opening of roads, Will recommend Mr. Finnie for his services. Trusts the merchants will enter on the Indian trade with energy. Although the trade is open to all, yet a committee has been appointed by the Assembly to trade with the Indians on the public stock for any sum not exceeding £5,000. He will recommend that a good part of this money shall be employed to trade with the Indians on the Ohio. His congratulations on the uninterrupted success of His Majesty's arms.

September 11, Carlisle. Captain James Armstrong to the same. Has appointed two soldiers to go as expresses according to the orders he has received.

Colonel John Armstrong to the same. Arrival this foreneon without the loss of a bullock or anything. Is satisfied that be (Bouquet) and Ourry had done everything possible to carry on work. Had taken pains to find some of the King's horses, but could not get one that could move from the spot. Respecting provisions and forage. The number of women shall be reduced as speedily as possible. Suggestions as to road making. The duty at the posts and oscorts; the reduction in the artillery especially make him more uneasy than he is as to the draughts on him for others. Shall examine the road for eight or ten miles west of the post and send out to repair it, if necessary. The letter from Mr. Peters gives unfavourable accounts from Quebec. Asks that orders be sent to his brother to take command at Carlisle. 15th. Orders received by Stevens to send off Virginians to repair the road.

Liout, James Grant to the same. Rumours that Wolfe had raised the siege of Quebee contradicted, Wolfe, being obstinately determined to make a conquest. Gives incidents of the siege, the rash attack of the gronadiers [that at Montmorency when so many were killed]; the successful carrying off of 300 head of cattle by Fraser from the French, on which he remarks "you would say it was not the first time a Highlander had been overtaken driving his neighbour's cattle, "Colonel Walsh had a few days before driven off about 300 sheep and it was reported that Wolfe had laid the country waste 40 miles round. The Indians have been drubbed every time they have been met with. The Caughnawagas have lost a number of men. The interest taken in the expedition in London; Forbes was to have been honoured and Halket was received most graciously by the King. who did not say a word to Abercromby. Tulleken to the same. Commissions sent by Amherst received. The letter respecting the march of troops to Niagara sent by Stanwix had not been received by Amherst when he wrote. The reprehensible conduct of Armstrong with respect to the women allowed with the troops; all ordered off claim his patronage.

September 19, Ligonier. Colonel Armstrong to the same. Thanks for news from Quebec. As he would not want flour, had therefore sent off two convoys with flour and other stores. Has sent a party to meet the brigade of waggons expected, so that the escort may return. Movements of waggons with flour, &c., of cattle and where sent. Tools wanted. Page 532

Captain Woodward to Bouquet. Has received horses, waggons, and Fort Cumber- saddles, the latter in bad order. Complaints by the waggoners of the time they are kept and the bad state of their horses in consequence. Has turned the horses out to pasture. Sheep (113) and horses loaded with flour are at Colonel Cressop's, where they are to wait till orders are received; 200 horses expected from Winchester.

Complains of the conduct of the teamsters, who are the bane of any army. Asks for a supply of wine, a keg of his having been stolen. Respecting the trial of deserters. Hears that he is not likely to be moved forward for some weeks. Guard houses and hospitals being repaired.

Major Horatio Gates to the same. Sends return of troops at the post. Can only send returns of rations issued from day to day to the Indians, they are so fluctuating. Stevens, with 150 Virginians, has arrived after the return was signed. No answer yet from Amherst to Mercer's letter addressed to Crown Point. Wishes reports from Wolfe were mc. e promising. The French are numerous and strongly posted.

September 25, Red Stone Creek.

Colonel Burd to the same. Had arrived after cutting a good road all the way. Could not carry it to the Red Stone, the country being so mountainous and no place there for a post. Believes the people in Virginia intend to starve him and all his people, as he has been three days here on an allowance of half a pound of flour per man, officers included, and there is only two days' more supply at this rate. The last flour was scandalously spoiled; it takes two bullocks to make one of those he brought from Bedford; he has only eight bullocks left. The river in good order for bateaux, but there are none; materials will be prepared for building, but he has heard nothing yet of nails. The bad state of the horses brought by Lieut. Jones; will nurse them and six men in the same condition, but he has no cats for the horses, nor anything to put them in condition. The waggoners and horse drivers ruin the service, and it is a great misfortune to be dependent on such worthless scoundrels. Thirks this will be a fine post; describes its situation. Mercer to the same. Has had a new pattern of saddles made for the pack horses, as with the old they could not have made another journey. The miscarriage is owing to Rutherford's ignorance and his trusting to others knowing as little as himself: there is no reason to suspect fraud. His own earnest desire for the service. Shall take care to supply Burd's garrison at Fort Cumberland, but William Hoops changes his orders so often that it is impossible to guess what is to be done, and details are given to show his variable orders. The dry weather, as stated by Ramsay, prevents the grinding of flour. The quantity and quality of the flour Ramsay will send. Waggoners discouraged by the bad state of the roads; the necessity for repairs. Money wanted to pay for forage sent off; unless people are paid ready cash as promised before being sent off, no credit would be given hereafter for the least trifle. Proposed charge for transport to the Red Stone. Bills received; note of the exchange charged, a change being made owing to a large importation of slaves. Cash can now be easily got. Asks for leave to go to Williamsburg. Respecting forage; the difficulty of getting paid for transport, has had to advance money, &c. (The letter, which is full of details covers 16 pages). 554

Thursday, the 20th.—At one o'clock launched our boats into the river and proceeded up the river about 12 miles; lay at an island which we called Thursday Island.

Friday, the 21st.—Proceeded up the river, entered the lake at 2 o'clook, crossed a bay which we imagined to be 30 miles, in all this day we proceed about 54 miles, this night we lay in a creek, which we called Friday Creek, a very good harbour for boats, the only safe one which we could discover betwixt Niagara and Presqu'Isle.

Saturday, the 22nd.—Proceeded about 35 miles to a large creek, which we called from the roughness and danger of the entrance, the Devil's Mouth.

Sunday, the 23rd.—Rowed about 4 miles and were obliged to put to shore, the sea running too high for our boats to live; about 2 o'clock the weather became more moderate. Rowed to a point, which we called Bear Point, in all 24 miles this day.

Monday, the 24th.—Proceeded to a small run which we called Lilly Creek, about 00 miles.

Tuesday, the 25th —Rowed to Presqu'Isle about 24 miles. Presqu'Isle is a fine harbour, fine soil and very strong situation, this day were employed baking our flour for conveniency of carriage, hid our boat amongst some willows.

Wednesday, the 26th.—Marched to the Fort LeBœuf through a very bad road, being almost a continued swamp, bridged on by logs, 21 miles.

Thursday, the 27th.—Employed the men in making rafts to transport us from Fort LeBœuf. At one o'clock launched our rafts and went about 25 miles down the River LeBœuf that evening, when our raft over set, by which accident we lost the greatest part of our ammunition, all our provisions and necessaries, went ashore and encamped there.

Friday, the 28th.—Proceeded down the river about 50 miles and encamped at an Indian hunting place.

Saturday, the 29th.—Set off and about 30 miles rowing we met with some hunting Indians, who gave us some bear's flosh, halted there all day.

Sunday, the 30th.—Arrived about 12 o clock at a Delaware Indian Town about 17 miles that day, supplied us with provisions, and procured us a Mingo Indian with a Battoe to carry us down the River. Kept us all night.

Monday, the 1st October,-Proceeded to Venango about 50 miles down the River.

Fort LePœuf is situated upon a very narrow creek, which runs into a small creek which we imagine the River takes its source from, the situation is not at all commanded and the soil is very good, the River for about 100 miles from its source very winding and inconceivably Rapid, the country on each side swampy; the Lower parts of the Stream is more moderate, the country on each side very fine a great deal clear and thickly inhabited by Indians, who have among them a surprising number of English children.

Tuesday, the 2nd.—Left Venango and proceeded 50 miles down the Ohio.

Wednesday, the 3rd,-Proceeded 50 miles.

Thursday, 4th .- Proceeded down about 40 miles, arrived at Pittsburg.

The River Obio from Venango to Pittsburg is winding and shallow and full of rifts, the country on each side high, the soil good, the woods open and pleasant.

October 12, Winchester.

Thomas Walker to Bouquet. Is concerned at the want of provisions at Red Stone Creek, but had received no orders to provide for the troops there before the 26th of September; provisions had at once been sent. The cattle are not so heavy as expected nor the flour so good, as the staple crop is tobacco, and the flour being used by the farmers, who, for economy, have it mixed with middlings and sometimes with shorts, the millers did not care to go to the expense of bolting cloths. If such flour would be accepted plenty car. be sent. The wheat crop has been large, so that he could purchase 200,000 (pounds) before Spring , if sent up the Potomac, the water carriage would save expense. Has sent to Hoops for orders about the quantity of provisions to lay in at Fort Cumberland. A quantity of good pork may be purchased in December. Respecting the rate of exchange allowed him for sterling bills.

October 12. Winchester.

Same to Stanwix. Suggests the appointment of two others, with himself, to settle disputed claims with waggoners for losses they have sustained, and mentions the names of some persons who would be suitable. The last money sent will be all paid out in four or five days; he requires about £3,000 more. The remarks about the want of provisions at Red Stone Creek are similar to those in the letter to Bouquet.

October 13, Philadelphia.

Henry Hughes to Bouquet. Is still getting waggons, but latterly there is difficulty. Capture of Quebcc and death of Wolfe; about 500 killed and wounded. On the French side Montealm killed and about 1,600 killed and wounded. The terms of capitulation not known.

October 14, Winchester.

Mercer to the same. The miscarriage of his (Bouquet's) letter has caused him much uncertainty how to deal with people whose business depended on the orders to be received. The scarcity of provisions at Red Stone, he attributes to the indolence of the drivers. Has arranged to send large droves of cattle instead of small droves at frequent inter Burd to Stanwix. Shall send the party to the great crossing of Yonghyogane to build the flat, &c., there. Suggests building two small houses, one for a small party, the other for stores; shall send Shippen to the crossing to give directions. Proposes the building of a bridge at the little crossing by a strong party from Fort Cumberland; shall send a ship carpenter and two sawyers to the great crossing to make prepartions. The rum received shall be given out only to the people at the works. Shall send word on the arrival of salt, &c., which he hears are on the road. Is glad to hear that Bouquet is expected.

October 22. Winchester.

Mercer to Joseph Galbraith, commissary at Fort Cumberland. That the complaint of Ramsay of delay of his waggons at Cumberland to have the flour inspected is just; the inspection is to be made at Red Stone Creek, the place of delivery, unless there are positive orders to the contrary, with other remarks.

October 27. Winchester.

Same to Stanwix. Is sorry for the disappointement respecting provisions from this Colony; Ramsay doing his best to fulfill his contract, but it is only within the last fortnight there has been rain to enable the mills to work. The letter relates entirely to supplies.

October 29,

Galbraith to Mercer. There has never been a delay of more than two Fort Cumber- or three hours in the inspection of Ramsay's flour. The inspection at Red Stone Creek would entail additional expense, besides being ineffectual, as the troops at Red Stone would take anything rather than starve, Shall pay no attention to Ramsay's complaints so long as he is doing his duty.

Forage sent by bateaux. Deserters sent down. The works forwarded, and he hopes to have them finished by Saturday, and to march for Pittsburg on Sunday. Shippen shall go off to make an inspection of the river. Ammunition wanted, as he has been obliged to hunt for victuals. Conrad Weiser to Bouquet. Congratulates him on his safe return Return of Captain Cochrane's recruits.

Pignoled Bellestre to Bouquet (in French). Thanks for kindness; prays for his recommendation to the General, Lieut. James Dow to the same. Forage wanted. How the 20 bushels a day are expended. J. Livingston to the same. Report given in detail of the movements of brigades loaded with salt, &c. Has sent this to check Graham's accounts.

George Morton to the same. How he has prepared for salting meat. Flour might be brought from Stony Creek to supply the stores here. Flour sent off to Pittsburgh, the roads being good. Other information about cattle, &c.

Jethro Sumner to the same. Has been ordered to his room by one of the gentlemen just arrived.

Major Tulleken to the same. Had sent order to Schlosser for the march of the detachment. His (Bouquet's) praise of the men has given them pleasure. His presence at Lancaster will, no doubt, help to complete the battalion, towards which every effort has been made. Amherst's instructions sent for recruiting, &c., and the camp equipage to be ready by the 1st of March, asks him to have that and clothing made ready; gives lists of tents, &c., that are required. Asks him to vary such orders as he may think necessary. Had applied for leave to sell his commission, his private affairs absolutely requiring leave of absence. Asks for some indulgence in respect to allowances of wine, &c., to the officers of the battalion. Respecting accounts. Return by the Indians of Lieut. McDonald, taken a prisoner. The winter has been very severe.

Garvin Cochrane to Stanwix. Is glad to hear of his recovery. The recruiting officers will do all they can but is afraid they will not be so successful as expected. Remonstrates against being recalled in favour of Etherington when success is expected, which is after the discharged men have spent all their pay and do not feel inclined to work. Cbjects strongly to be sent to Lancaster for reasons given, and states the care and attention he has given to the battalion and has had to undergo much trouble in his command.

Carlisle.

1760. Cochrane to Schlosser (?) His success in recruiting not great. His January 17, Carlisle. surprise that he is reported to be ordered to Lancaster, which is using him ill. Page 21 January 17. January 25. Mercer to the same. Expects to be able to bring a complete settlement Winchester. of all the accounts, except for the salt. How transport proceeds. illness from a fractured jaw. January 25, Tulleken to the same. Amherst has given him leave to sell out, if he Pittsburgh. still wishes it, but urges him to remain in the service. Has agreed with Stanwix to remain till he (Bouquet) can come up. Stanwix has written in the most friendly terms to Amherst of his (Bouquet's) services. Money matters. Orders respecting recruiting had been stopped when he (Bouquet) came to Lancaster; Cochrane's extraordinary letters. January 27, George Morton to the same. Reports the progress made in forwarding Ligonier. flour, forage &c, and asks that he may have copies of the returns for his guidance. January 29 Alexander Simon to the same. Friendly messages. Philadelphia. February 2, James Sinclair to the same. Sends receipts for money. Has himself Carlisle. undertaken to settle the accounts for pasturage, finding those living here unwilling to do so for fear of the displeasure of people interested, if any deductions were made. Is surprised at the General's urgency about provisions as in three months hence they may be sent up at one third of the expense. Suggests a plan for getting horses. Hambright's arrangements for horses at Loudoun and Shippensburgh. Money wanted. 44

John Read to the same. Set ds returns of provisions. Has discharged February 2, Bedford. what people could be spared to lessen expense. Only 37 bullooks sent from Carlisle. February 4. Certificates (two) that Andrew Figuer and George Grotz enlisted in Philadelphia. the first battalion of the Royal Americans on the 6th November, 1756, for three years. February 4, Alexander Graydon to Bouquet. Would have seen him but was pre-Bucks vented; asks instructions for the payment of the last waggons. Remarks County. on the nature of the accounts for the settlement of which he cannot take the responsibility without orders. February 9, James Meyrick to officer commanding the 1st Battalion of Royal London. Americans at Pittsburg, enclosing letters from Lord Barrington for a list of the officers, who have purchased and who may wish to sell their commissions. 43, 54 List prefixed. James Sinclair to Bouquet. Sends receipt for the £2,000 sterling. February 13. Carlisle. Shall observe directions with regard to the King's horses. Hoops disappointed about hogs from Maryland; will try to get them in his own part of the country, &c. Peter Smith (private) to Talleken. Respecting a certificate given February 19, Lancaster. him by Sergeant Pasage. Gavin Cochrane to Bouquet. Sends 17 recruits; remarks on some of February 19, them. Shall send a deserter (Stidwell) by the next opportunity; was afraid to send him with the recruits, in case he should incite some young ones to desert. Further about recruits, &c.

Donald Campbell to the same. His difficulties and want of success in recruiting February 21, Philadelphia.

George Etherington to the same. Has sent off express with letters found here on his arrival from New York. The stores shall be sent to Lancaster on Monday. Prescott who came by the last packet doubts if there will be another campaign, though nine regiments are under orders for Holland. All the vacant regiments reported to be given away and no mention of Stanwix.

February 21. Pittsburg.

Stanwix to the same. Approves of the time fixed for settling the warrants. Hopes that recruiting will be successful, but begins to doubt Etherington gone to York for clothing. Has told Amherst that 20,000 men will be needed for the communication next campaign—peace or war. Respecting transport. Will leave when the weather settles. Guns and ammunition sent forward.

February 22, Philadelphia.

Richard Peters to the same. Has detained the post to send a proclamation offering a reward of £100 for the discovery of the murderers of an Indian family near Carlisle. Mr. Penn is pleased at his (Bouquet's) desire to settle, but the proprietors of the Blue Rock property refuse, from family reasons, to sell at any price. Remarks on the new list of Governors.

February 26, Carlisle.

Cochrane to the same. Has released the deserter Stidwell on his promise to return to the regiment. One recruit brought in and a deserter, who has deserted several times.

March 1,

Burd to the same. The express in swimming a creek had lost one of Fort Augusta. the letters. Murder of an Indian and his family in Cumberland County; the Indians assured that the murderers if found shall be brought to justice. Has written Joshua Howell about further supplies for the Will set out for Lancaster on the 6th.

March 1, Winchester.

Mercer to the same. Is anxious for order to go to Philadelphia. The country people daily applying to know what commodities are wanted at Pittsburg. Contracts and offers of contracts for corn, flour, &c. Orders sent to supply Red Stone with flour. Other remarks about stores. The town and country round infected with small pox, which has become fatal. Gist's Indian accounts all in. Lord Fairfax has ordered his rangers to give up all strays (horses) for the King's service. Byrd's regiment might now be employed repairing the roads.

March 1. Pittsburgh.

Tulleken to the same. His difficulty in writing owing to a boil having weakened his wounded arm. Slow progress in recruiting. His opinion of the most suitable cloth for the men's leggings, that may be of use after the campaign. Thanks of the officers for the promise to send what they want. Expressions of esteem. The General still here; will probably leave about the middle of the month. Is forry that his services have been overlooked. Three men of Campbell's company drowned on the flats at Juniata. The works here begin to look formidable.

March 2, Pittaburgh.

Lieut. James Dow to the same. Sends returns. Plenty of every thing but forage, and it is a pity the works should stop from the want of it to feed the horses.

March 3, Uarlisle.

Cochrane to the same. The bad conduct of Sergeant McIntosh, for which he shall be reprimanded. Reports on the prespects of recruiting and where his parties are stationed, &c. Has just reprimended McIntosh who seems very penitent.

March 4, Pittsburgh.

Tible a Bouquet. Stanwix has been informed that his leave of absence may be expected shortly. All the regiments in this country filted up but the 40th and Amberst hopes that Stanwix will get it, but Stanwix does not expect it; he has resolved to leave this place about the 10th, to settle accounts and to be ready to go when leave arrives. His (Tulloken's) desire to go home next summer. Hopes that he (Bouquet) Haldimand and the other gentlemen may get justice done them. In spite of Lyttleton's pull about making peace with the asvages, he had no sooner got back to Charles Town than they broke out and scalped nearly 40 of the inhabitants of the back settlements. Troops must be sent. Lyttleton goes to Jamaica and is succeeded by Pownall. Respecting arrangements for the pay of the battalion during the campaign. Gordon goes to Philadelphia; arrangements must be made for money as the works would have been stopped had not Barnsley let Gordon have £600.

March 6, Pittsburgh. Stanwix to the same. Proposes leaving this place soon. Sends corrected warrants for £5,000 and £2,000, which he is to sign and return cancelling the others.

March 8, Donegal. B. Hughes to the same. Respecting a sale of land by Delancey to Bouquet.

March 9, Philadelphia.

Richard Peters to the same. A bill has been presented to the Governor for a grant of £100,000 to raise 2,700 men, but the wise heads have determined to raise only half the companies, each to be of 100 men, with one captain, one lieutenant, one ensign, two sergeants, two corporals and a drummer boy. No man of spirit will accept a company on the terms. It is doubtful if the Governor will pass the bill. Gossip.

March 11, Carlisle.

March 11, Reading.

Conrad Weiser to the same. Has expended £3,356, 1s. 8d. of which he would bring an account after his son's return from Fort Augusta. His own commission is not included in the above sum.

Cochrane to the same. Respecting recruiting.

March 11, Carlisle. James Sinclair to the same. Has sent letters to the General and asked the people with accounts to come for settlement to Carlisle. The division of live cattle to the different posts. Various unimportant details, March 14, Frederick Town. E. Shelby to the same. Has been at Nichol's Gap; a good road may be made over the mountain there. Will accertain the price Delancy wants for his land. Several bateaux and canoes have been built on the Potomac; more would be built if wanted.

March 14, Carlisle. Adam Hoops to the same. Respecting cattle and other provisions. The bad state of the roads for the General's journey.

March 16, Pittsburgh. March 20, Venango. Tulleken to the same. Respecting the settlement of recruiting accounts. Snow and bad weather have prevented the General from setting out. 102 Richard Mather to the same. Will come to Fort Pitt as soon as the weather permits, having no chance of recovery here. Flour sent to IteBouf. Mingoes compelled a party to give them flour and rum. Indians to bring no more wild meat, there being enough of provisions in store for a month at least,

March 27, Carlisle. James Sinclair to the same. Expects the General on Sunday or Monday. Respecting the settlement of accounts for flour, &c. 107

B. Hughes to the same. The purchase of land from Delancy and the April 2, Fort Pitt. Tulleken to Bouquet. Sends John McCullough, from South Branch, Virginia, with rum and whiskey, which he (Tulleken) has no power to purchase. Hopes Stanwix has now got over the fatigue of his journey. Sends report of survey on stores. There are 700 persons drawing provisions, exclusive of Indians, of whom there are about 300. Has sent for Croghan, as the Shawanese will not leave till he comes; about 400 more are expected to a Council; is he to feed them?

April 6, Languager. J. Schlosser to the same (in French) Is pleased at his (Bouquet's) return to Philadelphia, the battalion will no doubt, be continued in the west, but no matter where, so long as it is together and under his command. Respecting clothing for the recruits. The General has ordered the discharge of two men; asks for blank discharges. Arrangements for transport of forage; movements of officers.

Schlosser to the same (in French). Deserter brought in. Certain small articles wanted, according to a specification sent. Transport not going on so actively as he had hoped for.

May 5, Lancaster.

The same to the same (in French). Since the provincials bogan their levics, desertion has so increased that men are going off every day, the clothes of several of them being found in the woods. Suggestions as to the best way to stop desertion. The non arrival of waggons promised by Campbell, the waggoners being detained by the magistrates of different places, as is alleged. Has begun to camp out, so as to exercise the Way 10, Winchester. H. Byrd to the same. Has stopped Major Stewart from joining as ordered, owing to the inconvenience that would arise to the settlement of accounts by his absence. Is anxious for orders to move upwards. If the men are not to be employed on the works at Pittsburgh and on the roads, he would send as many as could be sported to the South West frontier where the Cherokees are committing wholesale devastation, and when whole counties will soon be abandoned. It is reported that Stanwix is gain to command in this quarter.

Williamez to Bouquet (in French). The want of money has prevented him from settling for his passage to New York. Hopes he will approve of his arrangement with Haldimand. Apparently the greater part of the army is to go South. Amherst was at Albany a few days ago. The raising of the siege of Quebec and defeat of the French; Indiana arrived from Montreal at Lake Oneida report the French to be in great affliction. These events may change the plan of the campaign.

June 13, Miamia.

Jadot to (in French) Has received his letter. Rocheblave on his arrival asked to see it, which could not be refused. He was troubled at the prohibition about showing the goods which might arrive, but said he was not inclined to ask about it. Seeing the want of the nations for goods, he has left the Miamis and gone to the portage where he offered a gratuity if they would wait for payment which was accepted. Rocheblave has left brandy for the Indians. Hopes of part of the Indians that the English would soon come to trade with them. Those of the River Blanche reproach the Indians of the River à la Roche for their want of firmness, as they thems elves intend to continue as they had begun. This has caused the others to confess they were wrong for listening to the English and would in future only listen to their father Onontio. Rocheblave's orders about provisions; has let 20 minots go to the fort knowing the miserable state it was in, leaving only twelve bags of Indian corn for the subsistence of the garrison and three bags of oats. Prays earnestly for relief. The Indians are asking for seed to sow and he cannot refuse them.

> Major Walters to the same. Shall forward the dispatches to Amherst. Has sent all the flour he can spare. Hopes for the arrival soon of the sloop with news from the army. Want of lodging at the post; the present shelter must be pulled down and a new one built, with a blockhouse, if the party is to remain for the winter. Can give little assistance to his ship carpenters, as Amherst had ordered all the sailors to Oswego. Has written Amherst for material to build the vessel for transporting provisions to Presqu'Isle. There are but few artificers in the garrison and the fort is greatly out of repair. Is afraid a sloop would not as swer on Lake Erie from want of harbours, nor get near the post owing to shoal water; large shallops or bateaux would be best.

Schlosser to the same (in French). Respecting his accounts. Expects September 15. Niagara, the return of a sergeant from Fort Ontario, where he was sent by the major for news.

September 17. Major Stewart to the same. Arrival of McNeill; 10 horses of the convoy gave out on the road and the rest in such wratched order that he does not know when they can return loaded; will send the best of them when the bateaux arrive with flour. Is concerned for the safety of Duplessis, who left for French Creek and has not been heard of since he left a small town 28 miles off twelve days ago; inquiry to be made among the Indians. The great loss to the service should he not be found. Leave given to Captain Miles of the Pennsylvanians to join him (Bouquet)

Major Smallman to Eouquet. Has kept a month's supply of flour, damaged by rain. Has only one day's supply of pork and no cattle have been brought. Indian Johny reports a large pile of timber sawed by the French for bateaux is in the woods; is going to look for it and will use it for building a place for flour. Will go round the Lake in a cance as the Indians report things of consequence hid there. He has collected all the iron about and shall haul in the logs for the house.

September 29, Le Bouf.

The same to the same. Has discovered 27 new bateaux in the woods which the French had partly burned. There are several thousand feet of sawed plank not damaged and a quantity of nails. The tools are probably turied near them.

Certificate that Israel Christian of the county of Augusta who offers to supply the troops with flour, is able to pay the penalty of £2,000 in case of failure.

October 1, Niagara. Major Walters to Bouquet. Arrival of the "Williamson" brig with flour, pork and rice. Is preparing to send him (Bouquet) all the provisions he can want, sending the brig back for more and for the materials for the new vessel. The captain of the brig thinks there are no stores of that kind at Oswego, but he shall ask for two whale boats and six bateaux, which are much wanted. Dispatches for the General.

Monthly returns.

October 5, Niagara. Lieut. George McDougail to the same. Had handed the letter to William Hay. If any blankets come they shall be forwarded. Smaller 1525.

October 8, Niagara. Major Walters to the same. Had sent off dispatches before receiving his letter of the 30th. Congratulates him on the reduction of all Canada. Has kept the sergeant and party who brought the letter to assist him in getting the provisions to the landing; the difficulty of the work. Has pressed the traders' bateaux in which he has forwarded flour, pork, powder, &c. Sends returns; has given the captains Amherst's orders on recruiting. Is sorry for the disappearance of Duplessis; if taken to Detroit there is no doubt he would be well treated. Further about Ensign William Hay's conduct. Damage to flour. Representations sent by the Captains.

October 10, Niagara,

Ensign William Hay to the same. Thanks for his letter and offer of service. Sorrow for his conduct.

October 11, London. J. Calcraft to the same. Captain Barnsley has been punctual with his accounts; the irregularities were before his time, when there was only one paymaster for four 'attalions. Will do his utmost to get the accounts settled.

October 12, Niagara. Walters to the same. Sends by Captain Clapham 120 barrels of flour, 77 barrels of perk and three of butter. Had sent a previous supply by Roger's Rangers, with powder and ball, &c., &c.

October 14, Fort Pitt.

Hoops to the same, Hopes he will soon be down to settle disputes he apprehends between himself and contractors. Remarks on their course of procedure.

October 17, Fort Pitt.

Licutenant W. Potts to the same. A company of the Royal Americans, augmented to 100 men has been ordered by General Amherst to march, but destination not stated. The arrangement of the officers; calls attention to mistakes in the returns from Niagara; the steps he is taking to rectify them. Hopes to see him (Bouquet) at Fort Pitt shortly. A surgeon or mate should be at the post, the daily report of the sick in winter being 26, 28 or 30.

1760. October 17, Venango.

Major Stewart to Bouquet. Has sent off a convoy of 19 horses with an escort of one subaltern, one sergeant and 24 rank and file; this has (with sick) left the garrison very weak. Suggests that Major Smallman let ten of the escort return from Le Bouf with boards. The wretched state of the pack horses. The disappointment about the saw mill; the consequent wast definiency in boards and planks; asks that all the planks be sent that can be spared. Delay from illness of carpenters. There have been no macep for upwards of a month and no meat except seven bullocks.

October 19, Near Fish Creek.

Captain Brewer. Left the landing at Little Niagara on the 10th. The bad weather has delayed them, having had boats damaged, and barely got ashore. Wants additional boats, pitch and tar.

October 19, Fort Pitt.

Hoops to Bouquet. Recommends John Ormsby, who proposes to trade to Detroit.

October 21.

Lieutenant Wilson to the commanding officer of the 1st battalion Royal Americans. The reason for his continued absence; shall certainly join the regiment in the Spring.

October 23, Venango.

Major Stewart to Bouquet. Sending 32 bullocks to the upper posts, and a convoy of 19 horses, with all the stores left but the bar iron, which shall be sent by water; he has been ordered to send an escort with carpenters on their way to Presqu'Isle. The delay to the works by so many parties being sent off. Sawyers much wanted.

Captain Donald Campbell to the same. Safe arival of Major Rogers and his detachment. One man drowned, some bateaux driven ashore and cartridges damaged. It is 100 leagues from Presqu'Isle; this is a favourable season for the lake. Indians have joined; the consumption of provisions. Belestre would not believe they were coming as friends till he was shown Vaudreuil's letter; he then behaved very well. Mr. Navarre will act in his old capacity; he thinks the inhabitants can supply the detachment with flour till spring; the difficulty will be about meat. No dependence can now be placed on the lake which may freeze at any time. About stores, &c. Rogers is preparing to go to the posts to bring off the people, but it is not expected he can get to Michillimakinac. A treaty to be made with the Indiana the day after to-morrow. Buckner sets off to-morrow with 20 more bullocks, and bateaux are loading with salt provisions, besides whiskey, ammunition and Indian corn. If Indian horses could be got they could supply the upper posts, which he hopes have not been abandoned, but if the Pennsylvanians have been guilty of that infamy they are to be secured if they come near and sent to Fort Pitt under a safe goard. To procure venison if he fter leaving the necessary instructions he is to come down. 312

Langdale to Bouquet. Asks for orders as to supplying powder and lead demanded by an Indian in exchange for his furs. Page 71

Captain Campbell to the same. Is anxious for instructions. Healthy state of the garrison; the season has been favourable for venison; the inhabitants continue to supply flour and Indian corn, and do all they can for the service. Hopes to be able to support the troops without meddling with their cattle. There has been only one complaint against the soldiers, which he attributes to the want of rum. Will be in great need of clothing, but can make shift till an opportunity occurs. Drugs wanted; medical assistance given to the inhabitants. The Indians are pleased, except the Shawanese who continue to do all the harm they can; it is through them the commandant of the Illinois knows all that is done at Fort Pitt. Social enjoyments.

Lieut. James McDonald to the same. Applies for an opportunity to purchase in the battalion or any other regiment. The satisfaction of the inhabitants with the present situation.

Richard Mather to the same. Sends returns. Salt sept to Guy to save the beef; hopes to send two months flour when the weather permits. Has secured horses. Has been confined to his room with an obstinate fever, and is now scarcely able to crawl. Hopes for leave to come to Fort Pitt for a chance of recovery. No bateaux arrived.

A. D'Ellient to the same (in French). Had been obliged to abandon the plantation of Walnut Hill to an overseer. His treatment, &c. (The letter is in a very tattered state).

Hoops to the same. The flour, &c. in good order. The careful attention of the sergeant.

Ensign Hubbard to the same. Has been appointed to an old regiment and ordered to New York.

J. Read to the same. The delay in arriving, the guides being so intent on hunting. The quantity of flour here, &c. A stone tomahawk found which the Indians believe belongs to the Cherokees. They have, consequently, given up hunting and returned to Fort Pitt.

Sergeant McDonald to the same. Hoops and Read have come and gone. Has sent to look for Stoddard, who has not yet arrived. Ammunition wanted. Asks orders as to allowing people to plant corn.

Lieut Baillie to the same. Has drawn for £20 Penn, currency, to meet contingent expenses.

T. Hamback to the same. Thanks for preventing his horses from being pressed. Has taken two additional partners. Has invested £3,000 in goods, which have arrived, and he is ready to start.

Sergeant Shryock to the same. Desertion of the Indian guides, carrying off one of the horses, &c., &c. 85

Colonel John Carlyle to the same. Asks for orders to dispose of damaged provisions and bedding, which are an expense for storage. Has asked Colonel Washington for a copy of his remarks on the navigation of the Potomac; he had given them to the Governor and Council but thinks he has a rough copy.

March 26, Abraham Mitchel to the same. Has fitted out Hamback and his partners with a neat Indian cargo. The base treatment of them by Taylor and Cox.

Lieut A. Baillie to the same. Sends returns. French Creek still frozen over. Shall send one bateau to Le Bœuf by the first opportunity. Has given Hickman an order for the hire of his horses. Reports the conduct of a drunken commissary. Garrison healthy. Other orders for cash, &c.

obtaining them from Presqu'Isle has surprised the French. How he has disposed of his detachment. Has sent off twelve persons belonging to Pennsylvania and Virginia got back from the Indians. Is afraid he may be charged with giving too much provisions to the Indians, but there was no help for it. Wishes the Indian trade were put on a better footing; at Niagara, where the Indians go, there is no control on selling rum, they buy it and return without ammunition, becoming a burden on the commanding officer here. Respecting the influx of traders; Makinak will be an outlet for some of them, &c., &c.

Ensign James Gorrell. Respecting his prospects of purchasing a lieutenancy. Hoops to Bouquet. Has lost a letter with orders; asks for a copy.

Monekton expected in a few days.

J. C. Schweighauser, to the same (in French). Has written about papers relating to the late Lieut. Hess, but has received no answer. If his effects are sold he has power to draw the money or to get the effects if they are still on hand.

Capt. Callender to the same. Respecting his trade with the In-

Captain Gordon to the same. Desertion of Ripley, left here to take charge of baggage; does not yet know if he has run him (Gordon) in debt, as he had opportunities of doing. Hopes that the horses ordered to be purchased for the work may be got by Thursday, when he would go to the General for his last orders.

Sergeant McDonald to the same. Has received the bags for the flour, but they are old and some fit for nothing. Sends returns. His candles Wishes some to be sent.

Hamback to the same. Reports his progress and the discouraging prospects of trade. Captain Callender has sent off a cargo and proposes to go into partnership. Asks for leave to trade to the upper Lakes, as there is a better chance there of trading with the Indians.

Lieut Carre to the same. Has arrived; Baillie has transferred the orders to him; sends returns. The rain has swelled French Cieck, which was very low when he passed; shall send off a bateau with five barrels of beef. How is he to settle with the bateau men?

Lieut. Barnsley to the same. Has recovered from his fall; is resting here to get saddles, the horses shod, &c., and to proceed to-morrow. Has made up the quarrel between Byerly and the sergeant. Has ordered the sergeant to take men and cut away the trees that were blown across the road near Bushy Run, and asked Blaine to get the trees cleared off the road near Ligonier.

May 26, Winchester. Stephen to the same. Colonel Byrd expects the garrisons of Fort Burd and Cumberland to join him, &c. Colonel James Burd to the same. Troops ordered to march to Pittsburg; the arrangements. Thomas Cresup to the same. Proposes to him to be a candidate to be elected as one of the four representatives of the county. Arthur Hamilton to the same. Certifying the quantity of flour sent to Venango in charge of Pierce.

Alexander Lunan to the same. Social gossip. Is obliged for his kind-Philadelphia. ness in the affair of the shoes.

Capt. Barnsley to the same. Note of what has been done and is proposed to be done with the shoes sent by Lunan. He leaves this tomorrow morning.

May 29, Capt. Gordon to the same. Further about the desertion of his bat-Kennet. man (p. 202). Recommends private Leech for his discharge, he being lame and having got an excellent recruit to take his place. Goes tomorrow to get the General's orders. The delay in the examination of accounts in New-York. The General [Amherst] satisfied after explanations by Monckton. Page 216 some of the men to desert; shall take care to frustrate it. Capt. Campbell to the same. Had kept the sergeant's party for Presqu'Isle, as he needed a strong guard, there being hints of an Indian rising. Is preparing timber for ten bateaux. The carpenters would have come quicker by Sandusky. Supposes that everything is ready for the campaign, the troops on the march to reinforce this place and take possession of the posts. The necessity of giving presents to the Indians to keep them in good temper. Has induced all but the Wyandots to give up their prisoners. There is a great spirit among the Indians to go against the Cherokees, which he encourages and supplies ammunition. Traders arrived from Fort Fitt; has taken measures to prevent their selling rum to the Indians; the mischief caused by its use. The vessel cast away last year on the North side could be made fit for service and employed in the trade to Michillimakinak. Has repaired bateaux. on the books. His eldest son's commission has arrived. Shall be exact about expenses for clothing. Monckton expected. About 3,000 tons of shipping taken up.

June 6, Presqu'Isle.

Capt. Cochrane to the same. Dispatches sent. Gorrel reports more troops ordered for Detroit; hopes he may be sent there to command, as he may thus recommend himself to Amherst and Monckton; the behaviour of his company would do him honour and the company is proud of his (Bouquet's) approbation. Believes himself qualified to command at Detroit and knows the language pretty well. Minute details about materials for repairing bateaux &c. Lieut Carre to Bouquet. Arrival of bateaux with flour. Sergeant Shryock met a bull in the woods which he shot, the bull being too wild to drive. It may have belonged to the King, but if it belonged to the Indians they are sure to complain and he shall settle with them. Page 237

June 8, Detroit. Capt. Campbell to the same. The Indians come from all points, who must get provisions, &c.; is surprised the Generals give no orders about this. The Jesuits of Michillimakinak write to the Recollet priest here that their Indians were never more hostile than last winter. Monseigneur Langlade and some of their chiefs had difficulty in preventing them from coming to attack Detroit. Mgr. Langlade writes that they are now peaceably disposed and will come here soon. The French never saw so many at this place in former times. A great many go to Niagara for the rum, but there is still a considerable trade here. The traders from Pittsburg have brought goods for the inhabitants only, not understanding the Indian trade. Ammunition and other articles wanted. Lumber prepared for bateaux. Gorrel expected from Niagara with flour. Has made this place easy for his successor.

Lieut. Blane to the same. On the arrival of the Pennsylvanians will send off the present garrison, except a drummer and an old man, his wife and two children, for reasons given. Bouquet to Major Walters. Returns received; is pleased at their exactitude and at the loss of so few men at a place where the 44th buried such numbers. Sends a list of men who may be discharged, their time being up; some whose claims are dubious are to be retained for the campaign. Financial arrangements for the battalion; settlement of old accounts going on. Respecting the disagreement with Ensign William Hay. Ministerial changes in Britain. Monekton to be Governor of New York and, it is said, to command on the Continent during Amherst's absence on the expedition to the West Indies. List of promotions. How accounts are to be made out. Is glad that he has been able to supply Detroit and thinks he should this summer provision Presqu'Isle to the first of June, 1762.

June 13, Fort Pitt. Same to Rattray, Charlestown. Asks him to prevent the sale of negroes on the Fesch and Guinand plantation, as, although its purchase was made in these names, the money was paid by himself and his friends in London, and it is hard their property should be sold for the personal debts of these men.

June 15, New York. Capt. Barnsley to Bouquet. Has been delayed on the road by illness. Reports the progress of the settlement of the accounts of the battalion. The committee has prepared the report, but it is understood that Amherst will send it with the accounts to England. Respecting the settlement of the recruiting accounts. Further about accounts, returns &c. 247

June 15, Venango. Lieut Carre to the same. Letters, beef and pork received. Ill treatment of George Neely by Indians on his way up. Mrs. Cremar sent down. Venison hams sent by Neely. Locks wanted to secure the flour.

June 16, Detroit.

Capt. Campbell to Bouquet. Has been alarmed by the reports of Indian designs, which has put him on his guard The plot was first attributed to the Northern Indians, but it is now found to come from the Six Nations. They have sent deputies and belts to all the Indians from Gaspé to the Illinois to take up the hatchet against the English. Two of the deputies (Seneca Chiefs) came a few days ago to invite the nations here to a great council at Little Lake to meet the Delawares and Shawanese. Hopes to be able to keep the nations here from going. The plan is to cut off the communication, stop the roads at Niagara, Fort Pitt and here; seize the goods and horses of the traders at Sandusky. Has sent Hamback with 50 armed men and bateaux to bring the traders' goods here There is no doubt of the truth of this; it came through the Senecas, who, with the rest of the Six Nations, are to assemble at French Creek about 25 leagues from Presqu'Isle. Has sent word to Nisgura, &c., but in case of accident he (Bouquet) might also serd word. If Gorrel were here with the provisions he would not be uneasy for the post. Page 252 Same to Cochrane. Has supplied the post well with provisions; has found cartridges and kept two artillery men to make repairs. Stony Creek might be abandoned and that garrison join this.

July 3, Venango. Lieut, Carre to the same. Has sent off three expresses with intelligence from Capt. Campbell. Report of the express from Fort Pitt on the state of the road. Returns sent. The keg of rum was stolen from an Indian three months ago; the thief Barny McCannon, got 300 lashes. Has just received letters from Niagara, which he sends to Fort Pitt by Baird.

July 7, Detroit. Capt. Campbell to the same. Sends this by a deputy of the Six Nations returned from Sandusky. Another council held at the Wyandot village, at which it was recommended to go no more to war against the Cherokees, as there would be other business. The deputy then produced a belt painted red, (called a war hatchet) on behalf of the Six Nations, Delawares Shawanese and Southern Indians, urging them to dispossess the kinglish. Sandusky for ammunition. Has been obliged to comply with the unreasonable demands of the Indians. Has sent for stores to Niagara; would send to Fort Pitt for cattle, but can get no Canadians who know the way, being chiefly accustomed to the water. Again interposes in favour of Lowry the sutler.

July 22, Sewickley Old Town. Capt. Clapham to Bouquet. Contradicting the report of the stealing they do not use horses.

Contradicting the report of the stealing they do not use horses.

July 23, Sandusky.

Capt. Callender to the same. Has made inquiry at Tuscarawas of Post's business among the Indians. He said his message was from God, to make them good Christians. Has sent his horse; Capt. Kill Buck will not deliver it up except to Capt. Campbell. The trouble he has had with the powder from bad kegs.

July 24, Venango. Lieut. Carre to the same. Sent letters by John Coyle, who lost them, an Indian picked them up and has them. Recapitulates their contents (about deserters &c). The conduct of Custologa in seizing rum and beating the man carrying it; he expresses sorrow and offers to pay for it, &c.

July 25, Winchesier. Co. Geo. Mercer to the same. His continued ill health Reports in detail the manner in which Donnycastle has behaved to Colonel Byrd in respect to a credit the latter had guaranteed for goods to be supplied. Three 12 oared boats with bateaux and canoes manned by French menwere near the Cherokees from Fort Assumption. Offers of service, &c. 47

Thomas Hutchins to the same. Report in detail of what took place at Custologa's Town respecting the rum stolen (p 46) with the speeches delivered.

July 25, Venango. July 25, Detroit.

Hamback to the same. Thanks for kindness. The arrangement he has made with Callender about another cargo for the indian trade, and the proposal he has made to Mitchel about the old stock.

July 27, Presqu'Isle.

Capt. Cochrane to the same. Recapitulates the contents of the previous letters. Asks leave to retain Fisher as corporal and will pay the difference out of his own pocket, as he is a good man. Where his sergeants are. Explains his reasons for seeking to renew acquaintance with Mr. Townshend, which appear to have been misunderstood. Congratulations on the taking of Belle Isle. His hopes for cattle, as the salt provisions are bad for the sick. The want of money to settle with his company. Shall send returns when those from Niagara arrive

July 27, London. J. Prevost to Andrew Fesch. That it is to the Messrs Guinand he is to apply, who paid the bills for the purchase of every thing in his hand. The more trouble he gives the more infamous will his conduct appear.

July 28, New York.

Capt. Barnsley to Bouquet. Money left in Mortier's hands to meet bills drawn by Major Walters. Capt. Campbell has acknowledged receipt of £600 from Lowry and Callender. Respecting "gratification shoes" for different battalions. Would write Colonel Robertson to deliver his battalion's share of the shoes to Van Schaike to be forwarded to Niagara and Oswego. List of the regiments sent to encamp on Staten Island. Many desertions there and at Crown Point. News of the different officers, their promotions &c. Has applied for batt money, but is afraid the battalion will not get it. P. S. Pondicherry is certainly taken. There are forty or fifty transports in the North River, and it is expected there will be $0 in about a fortnight. Arrival of Monckton; he is appointed aide-de-camp to Lord Halifax. Duel between Demler and Schlosser at Niagara.

Eusign Jehu Hay to the same. Asking to be recommended for promotion.

Andrew Fesch to the same. Further about the ruin of his (Bouquet's) plantation (p. 27) with details of proceedings leading to this.

Maj r Walters to the same. Arrival of Ensign Holmes, with clothing for this post, Detroit and Presqu'Isle. Sergeant's hats are come but no coats for them or the drummers. Sir W. Johnson and Major Gladwin are here on their way to Detroit with 300 light infantry. The hurry to get bateaux and provisions over the landing. Is sending off a detachment to Detroit which will leave a thin garrison. Returns sent. 72

July 30, Detroit.

Capt. Campbell to the same. Arrival of Capt. Callender with the powder. The copy of the last Indian Council will show how well disposed they are at precent; it will be their (our) own fault if they are not kept so, and thus secure the Northern Nations. The Wyandots have sent belts to Killbuck with messages to his nation not to listen to the bad advice of the Six Nations. Walters writes that Major Gladwin is coming to Detroit with 300 infantry, accompanied by Sir William Johnson; presumes, therefore, he will be relieved. Believes he shall be obliged to take part of the cows to give one to each Indian nation, as they expect every thing since the last affair. Thanks for forgiving Lowry, &c., &c.

Lieut. Baillie to the same. That Ourry has written that he has asked him (Baillie) to be sent to Bedford, to allow him (Ourry) to visit Bouquet. Shall remain till he hears the answer.

Ensign Robert Holmes to the same. Has been appointed ensign in the battalion and ordered here with the clothing, &c., &c.

Alexander Lunan to the same. Does not understand that Hamback had ordered Mr. Mitchel to pay the £100. His venture to Detroit will turn out poorly as the shirts were bad.

Cant. Cochrane to Licut. Guy. Sends description of a deserter, John Geddes, who has stolen a horse and besides has been guilty of stealing money; reward offered for his capture. A note attached to this to Sergeant McDonald to Bouquet. That he has sent three of his best men to stop every person coming from Fort Pitt.

Lieut. Carre to the same. Had given Paxton leave to go shooting, to return in two bours; he has taken all his necessaries. None of the deserters took their regimental arms. Hutchins' returns of the purchase of Indian corn. Bateaux returned for in Le Eœut and will be sent back to-morrow with flour, &c. Cochranes description of the deserter has been given to the Indians.

Col. G Mercer to the same. Recommends Godfrey Humbert, a trader, to whom some one under Bouquet's command owes money and refuses to pay, thinking himself beyond the reach of the law.

Lieut. Blane to the same. Has had no better luck with the thieves than he (Bouquet). The offer by Linus to carry oats. Asks for a soldier carpenter for eight days.

Capt. Cochrane to the same. Arrival of Corporal Fisher with clothing, flour, pork, &c. No clothes for the sergeants have arrived but hats and The good quality of the shoes and stockings. Lieut. Williamhouse (Williamoz?) reports that he (Cochrane) is to build a fort at Sandusky. Troops with Sir William Johnson and Gladwin moving to Detroit. Gladwin to inspect the Western posts and Sir William to meet the Indians at Detroit; Croghan to be at Sandusky. The uncertainty has delayed getting provisions, of which he should like a year's August 12, Le Pœuf.

Lieut. Guy to the same. Has sent back Harman, a deserter who surrendered. Returns sent; provisions remaining here.

August 15, Venango. Lieut Carre to the same. Deserter returned, brought in by an Indian who wants the reward paid in rum. Has only subsistence to the 28th. The men in want of shocs Tocson of Gordon's company sent down with a dislocated collar bone. Recommends that Gilfillan, a sutler, be allowed to return here.

August 16, Bedford.

Capt Samuel Neilson to the same. Has arrived ill and is getting worse; asks leave to go down on the chance of recovery, but will want for Captain Ourry's arrival if it is desired. Recommends his son.

August 17, Detroit. Capt. Campbell to the same. Arrival of Sir William Johnson and Gladwin; part of the light infantry sent to take possession of the posts. Sir William Johnson is convinced that the Indian conspiracy was universal on this part of the continent; Amherst discredits it, but recommends they be kept short of powder. A block house ordered at Sandusky; cattle ordered from Fort Pitt to this place; both orders by Amherst. Has sent 8 barrels of pork but can give no flour, only one barrel being left and the inhabitants can only supply 10,000 or 12,000 pounds this year, the crop being bad. A sawyer and carpenter sent to Mr. Meyer. Four bateaux lost coming from Niagara, but the provisions saved. Returns sent. An officer wanted to take charge of the post of Ouiatonon. Respecting clothing, furs, &c.

August 19, New York.

Major Horatio Gates to Capt. Barnsley. No advertisement to be made of the money lost at Pittsburgh; the General believes that the thieves may be otherwise discovered. How warrants are to be written out. Other payments, &c.

Lieut. Edward Jenkins to the same. Thanks for the advice sent and for other civilities (see p. 104). Is sorry to complain, but the major has treated the officers like his slaves, of which he gives instances, but he and the others shall do what they can to some to a good understanding with the major. Asks, should he be relieved, to be allowed to take his soldier servant with him. Major Gladwin, with 300 men, left this a fortnight ago for Detroit. Sir William Johnson with Ensigns Schlosseer and Holmes left the Little Fort yesterday, taking 60 men of the regiment.

August 22, Philadelphia.

Plumsted and Franks to the same. Have been prevented by the General's arrival and sending provisions to Quebec, from coming to Fort Pitt and fear they cannot come this season. Have, therefore, sent Arthur Hamilton to the different posts toget returns of the provisions in them, to be laid before him (Bouquet) for advice. August 31, Lieut. Guy to the same. Has forwarded packet from Capt. Cochrane, and also returns.

LeBcouf. August -

Extract of letter from Mortier to John Powell, respecting over payment to the Royal Americans. (The document is in a very ragged state.)

1761 September 1, Lake Sandusky.

Lieut. Elias Meyer to Bouquet (in French). Arrival after a fatiguing and disagreeable march; the very bad roads. The country, which is described, is generally rich and good. Sudden death of a soldier; loss of a horse stolen by Indians; and of another left on the road, loss of flour, &c. Has been surveying for a good place east of the lake for building boats, but did not find one suitable owing to the nature of the shore. Has fixed on a spot for a block house, three miles from a village called by the Indians Canoutout, where all the traders unload and load their goods for Detroit; it is almost in the middle of Little Lake Sandusky. small value of the sheep, weighing only 21 to 35 pounds and only 18 of them. Has bargained with an Indian for five deer for four sheep. leave to-morrow for Detroit to look after articles required. The two horses lost must be replaced, as it is impossible to bring the woodwork with those left.

September 2, Fort Cumberland.

Major Walters to the same. Cochrane has been ordered to Oswego for medical advice. Schlosser ordered to take command at Presqu'Islo. Etherington was at Staten Island and has been ordered to settle his accounts; hopes he will be back soon. Officers wanted by Captain Campbell for detached posts. His officers are convinced they were wrong, so shall say nothing more about their conduct (pp. 104, 110, 121). Regimental accounts, &c. 234

October 11, Venango. Lieutenant Carre to the same. Has ordered flour to be sent from Le Bout to Sandusky. Loss of one of the sheep sent to Le Bout. Money received for bateau accounts.

October 12, Detroit.

Captain Campbell to the same. Has sont returns of detachments, &s., Distress for provisions, as the country can supply but little this year, and the General has disapproved of Cochrane sending ammunition here, which was intended for the posts of the Miamis, S. Joseph's and Quiatonon; is waiting the arrival of an officer to send the garrison to Quiatonon. Return of a detachment from Michillimakinak, which arrived just in time to save the traders from the Indians. Has got peaceable possession of the fort, but if the Indians knew General Amhorst's intention to keep them short of powder it would be impossible to keep them quiet. Balfour with a detachment has gone to the posts of the Bay and St. Joseph's. Gladwin has recovered. Lioutenant Butler of the rangers has sont a detachment to Sandusky. Ammunition and money wanted. 238

October 12, Lake Sandusky.

Lieut. Meyer to the same (in French). Has received two barrels of pork and one of flur from Detroit which, small as it is, is a help. His men are willing, but cannot do their duty as vigorously as they should owing to the short allowance. The two carpenters are at last arrived and he hopes to finish the block house in a month. Materials for and progress of other buildings. Has been obliged to kill one of the oxen; is thankful there is no sickness. Indians have brought only a small quantity of venison, sufficient for about three days consumption. Has pressed a horse for the service, but will discharge it as quickly as possible.

October 19, Fort Burd. Sergeant McDonald to the same. There will be about 1,000 bushels of corn, besides that for the people's own use. Some salt can be sont from the store.

October 21, Carlisle.

Hoops to the same. His dispute with Plumsted and Franks. It is reported that Monekton is to command the expedition but the reports of its destination are contradictory and it is thought there will be a peace before the expedition can sail.

October 22, Lake Sandusky. Lieut, Meyer to the same (in French). Three men have brought word that Lieut. Jenkins lost his cance in a storm 80 miles from here. Has sent provisions to assist him on his way to Detroit. Had himself gone with a carpenter to repair the boat, so that Lieut. Jenkins could proceed. Escape of two deserters, one of whom he is not sorry for, as he was a thiof; the other was a sawyer, but a man has been found that can take his place. If there had been an interpreter, he could have got the Indians to catch the deserters; the detachment will suffer from this want, as the services of the Indians are needed. The fortunate arrival of an interpreter by whose help he had been able to buy corn. Will only leave the post at the last extremity. It is not only the ordinary rations, but porties arriving whom he must supply, and of whom he furnishes a list. Has sent half way to Fort Pitt to look out for provisions which he hopes are on the way. The men beginning to fall sick. The block house getting on as well as can be done with the men left in health. Has this morning settled about a supply of venison and Indian corn.

October 24, Presqu'Isle. Capt, S hlosser to Bouquet. His arrival to replace Cochrane, gone to Oswego for his health, Guy has returned to his post at LePœuf; Dow has fallen ill there and been brought to Presqu'Is'c. Sends returns. The searcity of provisions at the pests, the supply being stopped from Albany in expectation of the arrival of provisions by the St. Lawrence. The supply from Albany has been resumed but slowly. His attempts to supply the posts. P.S. The bad condition of the ledgings for himself and the officers. The cost of repairs and the want of money.

October 25, Fort Burd. Sergeant McDonald to the same. The inroads of white hunters, who, the ladians complain, kill all their game. They keep so far from the fort that they cannot be caught.

October 27, Charlestown. Andrew Feech to the same. His situation and the malice of Dellient towards him, &c. 255

October 28, Carlisle. Capt. Callender to the same. Asks leave for his people to pass to Detroit with their horses, as they are not to sell goods by the way, and requests help to ferry them over the Alleghany, as well as an order to the efficer at Sardusky to furnish bateaux for their goods.

November 2, Presqu'Isle. Capt Schlosser to the same. That he has sent two boxes to LeBouf, to be forwarded.

Plumsted and Franks to the same. Respecting the supply of live cattle.

November 3, LeBout.

Licut. Guy to the same. Has come back to Le Bouf. Respecting garrison returns; want of kettles, blackets &c. The blankets sent last year were old, instead of the new ones asked for. The bad state of the amnunition.

November 4, Detroit. Lieut. Edward Jenkins to the same. Has written to the Major (Walters) apologising (see p. 104) and acknowledging that he and the other were in the wrong. Is going off to Oniatonon, called on the map Wawiachtas, &c., &c.

November 5, Venango. Lieut. Carre to the same. Sends monthly returns. Has detained two drivers and eight horses leaded with Indian goods, they having no pass.

November 5, Venango. Same to the same. That the Indians have been uniformly well treated. One who was struck by a soldier had begged that the man who did so should be pardoned. Is not aware of any ill-treatment by the traders, but has recommended them at their peril to give no cause of complaint.

November 7, Venango. Same to the same. Has sent down two sick men and some articles. 272

November 8, Lake Sandusky.

Licut Meyer to the same (in French). Sent by a servant of Croghan left here ill. Arrival of flour and some powder; more of the latter expected. The block house will be covered to-morrow, hopes to have it fivished in a fortnight. The two deserters are at Wikenjohn's town with John, a Mohican, who has promised to bring them here; would rather they were taken to Pittsburgh. Respecting the supply of Indian corn, venison, &c. His doubts if the garrison can remain this winter unless provisions are sent; he is purchasing all the venison and corn he can get. There are three oxen and nearly 460 pounds of salt meat left. The horses are in a miscrable condition. There are many of the people ill with fever, flux and colds.

November 8, Detroit.

Capt, Campbell to Bouquet. Details of the want of provisions. Lieut. Jenkins sent to Ouistonon with 20 men and four months' provi-Expects Balfour with the light infantry from the Bay. Sends letter for Amherst; recommends Lieut. Butler, the bearer; is in want of ammunition. 277

Lieut. Meyer to the same (in French). Pay for the detachment has been reserved. The two barrels of powder short sent by the first brigade have been delivered; discrepancies in weight. The progress of muson work on the buildings, and enumerates the materials for finishing inside. Requires only salt at present. Is anxious to know how he is to be employed when the post is fluished. Four days of rain have made half his people ill.

November 15 Niagara.

Ensign William Hay to the same. That he and Jehu Hay are the two oldest ensigns in the Roya American regiment, hopes, in event of any vacancies, that he will recommend them. Is now on good terms with Major Walters.

November 15, Philadelphia.

Captain Barnsley to the same. Has sent a certificate to General Monekton that £1687 10. Penn. currency had been sent to him (Bouquet) for the subsistence of the battalion. Respecting clothing, camp equipage, &s. Various articles sent. Bills drawn and presented have been paid. The troops are embarking for the expedition to be commanded by Monekton; there is no chance for poor Dow getting on it, in fact it is suspected there will be no expedition, everything goes on so slowly, &c., &c.

Major Walters to the same. Sends returns; movements of officers. Bad condition of the shoes, many not fellows and the leather rotten. Searcity of provisions this summer; hopes for a better supply next year.

November 22, Philadelphia.

Capt. Birnsley to the same. The honest character of Barge (p. 295), respecting the robbery by Long, Barge will detain anything suspicious that may arrive. Will send money by the first opportunity. The fleet to sail with the first fair wind and to rendez-vous at Barbadoes. The master of a transport just arrived reports that there will certainly be a Spanish war and that the King of Prussia had been obliged to burn his camp and make a hasty retreat.

November 22, Fort Burd.

November 28, Detroit.

Capt. Campbell to the same. The powder came at a seasonable time, as there was none in store. Is disappointed at not receiving money from Barnsley. The vessel's arrival despaired of; the only hope is on three bateaux from Nisgara, so that there will be the same difficulty in supporting troops as there was last winter. The swivel which arrived in May shall be sent to Presqu'Isle if wanted. Arrival of Balfour from St. Joseph's. Brehm will give an account of the long voyage. Is sorry he could not supply Sandusky. Indians off to their hunting; believes that if supplied with ammunition they would do less mischief, and hopes that the Gereral will change his mind on this subject.

November 39, Ligonier. Licut Blane to the same. Arrival of Hamilton, late commissary at Pittsburgh; letters he brought are forwarded by express. Many of the Pennsylvanians have come to-night and many more are at Two Mile Run; is afraid he cannot stop them. They will remain here till answer comes, if in four days, which they say is entirely to oblige him.

November 29, Halifax. Rudolph Bontinck to the same. Had hoped to get to Philadelphia, but General Amherst's orders to Co. Foster had stopped that. Has taken a house like the other captains, which is best for him as drinking to excess prevails. Has taken a young lieutenant to live with him and must return the hospitality of the inhabitants, although he would prefer to study his profession. His recurrent sore throat; has been recommended to go to Europe for surgical advice &c., &c.

November 29, Fort Sandusky. Lieut. Meyer to the same (in French). Letters, but not the flour, have arrived. Has sent to bring up the flour, the horses carrying it being unable to come further. The necessity of paying the price for the venison; if too high he will pay the difference himself. The Indians refuse to take powder without lead. Could not fix the time of finishing the work, as that depends on so many contingencies; the block house palisades &c., are now finished. Has sent to Detroit the powder and a grenadier attacked with smell pox; the drummer and another man sick.

December 2, Fort Sandusky. Same to the same (in French). Thirty-six horses with flour arrived and will be sent to Pittsburg. Was obliged to send help to bring the loads forward. Arrangements with drivers, &c. 310

December 4, Fort Burd. Sergeant McDonald to the same. Has sent by the bateaux the rost of the blades and the corn raised by the bearer, &c.; to say what is to be paid but to give him no money, as he may defraud the rest. The amount of corn raised is not so much as he expected and will not be ready to shell for two months. Salt is all gone, will lay in corn before he leaves. Recommends John Brown.

December 4, Ligonier. Arthur Hamilton to the same. His arrival, reports on the cattle; stores &c.

December 5, Philadelphia.

Lieut, Dow to the same. Had sent the invoices and receipts for clothing; now sends additional invoices and receipts. Wishes to be ordered up, as he is idle here. Has purchased an ensigncy for his son in the 28th for £.50 starling.

December 5, Philadelphia. Capt. Barnsley to the same. General Amherst has ordered all officers to join their respective regiments. Respecting accounts, &c. 319

LETTERS TO COLONEL BOUQUET. VOL, VI, PART 1.

1762.

A. 18-1.

B. M., 21648.

1762. January 7, Ft. Chiawell.

Colonel Adam Stephen to Bouquet. Has been ordered to march down the Virginians to be disbanded; the mon at Forts Burd and Cumberland to be relieved, that they may march to Winchester, to be paid and discharged. After a long campaign matters are firmly settled in this quarter. The submission of the Cherokees with details of their behaviour, &c. The good conduct of the Northern Indians; they are but indifferent warriors; their pass was signed by George Croghan. Has about 40 stall-fed oxen on his farm; would be glad to know when they are wanted at Fort Pitt.

Captain Yourg to the same. The orders he received as to paying men remaining over their time. Polito messages, &c.

January 17, Philadelphia. January 17,

Governor Fauquier to the same. The uncasiness caused by his pro-Williamsburg clamation, as it seems to tend to prevent the resettling of lands taken up by patent, but abandoned during the late disturbances. There are many who made settlements on the Monongahela, Green Bryer, and New River to the westward of the Alleghanies and on the waters of the Ohio. Asks for a copy of his instructions to issue the proclamation, and if the intention is to ascertain the identity of the persons settling under the claim of a patent from the Crown, so as to prevent vagabonds from taking possession of the just rights of others. Has received orders to make no grants on the Ohio till His Majesty's pleasure be known. Alarm as to the clause relating to courts martial, Alexander Lunan to the same. Giving references to the Willing family, January 18, Philadelphia. entirely of a private nature.

January 21, Carlisle.

Hoops to the same. Respecting the settlement of provision accounts. No word from Monekton's extedition except by a young man from Monte Cristo, who said that there were bets by the French about Martinico being captured.

Japuary 22. Philadelphia.

Plumsted and Franks to the same. Explaining previous letters respecting the payment of bills drawn on account of the Crown for disbursements formerly paid by the Quarter Masters and Engineers. Are thankful for the favourable reports sent and that so many of their stray cattle have been picked up. Discrepany in the weight of hogs unaccount-

[A letter of this date is in vol. A. 19-1, p. 29, from George Croghan, placed among letters of 1763 by mistake. I

January 24, Presqu'Isle.

Capt. Schlosser to Bouquet. Returns sent; the deficiency in pork delivered; recommends a survey. Bakers have loved paid. Intrenchments have fallen down with the frost; what is he wate? Is impatient for news. The sufferings of the garrison; no fresh ment and the ports so bad that neither officers nor men can ent it. He himself has lived on flour ard peasoup, with only a little bear's meat at Christmas; the bread is tolerably good.

January 30, land.

James Livingston to the same. Has received orders for the Virginian For Cumber- troops to march down; what is he to do with the stores at the crossing? The Potomac is to be made navigable by subscription of Virginia and Maryland, Sends returns.

January 30, Ligonier.

Lout Blane to the same. Forwards parcel brought by express from Bedford, the man had lost his horse between the Alleghany and Stony Creek and the packet has been brought on foot from there.

February 2, Venango.

Lieut. Carre to the same. Shall send a barrel of powder to Le Bonf. Patterson, the trader, asks leave to carry his furs down in spring by the old path, &c.

February 6, Philadelphia.

Lieut. Dow to the same. Has purchased garden seeds. The flour has been got as far as the season will admit of. Papers, &c., sent. Social news. Has purchased a commission for his son, Remains of last year's ciothing sent for, &c.

February 8, Hoston. February 8, Fort Pitt.

Mrs. Mary Billings to the same. That she has had her pension granted since the day of her husband's death. Thanks for his kindness. Bouquet to Governor Fauquier. Explains the object of the proclamation is to present people from hunting or settling west of the Alleghany hills without leave from the General orth Governor of their respective Provinces. It is not to invalidate any just rights, but to prevent variabonds, under pretense of hu ting, &c., from making settlements on Indian lands contrary to the treaty made at Easton and since cor firmed. When these people were driven off the Indians complained of new corners, against whom the proclamation was issued, and two days ago the Six Nations complained that ten new huts were built in the woods and land cleared for corn, and had sent to inquire. People living out of the settlements and beyond civil law can be tried by court martial for offerces, but this cannot affect settlements within the known limits of a Province, these being subject to its jurisdiction With regard to persons holding patents under the Crown for lands on the Ohio, he shall afford them every protection on receiving the necessary information from him (Fauquier).

February 10, Detroit.

Capt. Campbell to Bouquet. Had sent off an express, who lost the letters in a river near Sandasky. Has received no flour from Nagara; sent three bateaux which are frezen up half way. Received two barrels powder and some balls. The difficulty of subsisting his garrison for want of fl ur. The necessity of supplying the posts with ammunition; the alarm that would be felt by the Indians were they to know they were to be restricted of a supply. Forwards letters. Want of money. Report from Sandusky that the Shawanese had brought scalps from Virginia and that the Six Nations were still contriving mischief. Respecting furs. The society here is increased by the arrival of Chevalier Daverret (?) a young English Lord, who after making the tour of Europe is spending the winter here and will visit the Lakes in spring, and by that of Lieut. McDougall from Niagara, &c.

February 13, Fort Burd.

Sergeant McDorald to the same. Shall set out for Winchester as ordered; it is hurtful to his affairs, but hopes he (Bouquet) will explain the cause of his absence from the regiment.

February 14, Fort Uumberland.

James Livingston to the same. Respecting the powder and how some can be sent to the Red Stone. Cannot detect the hunters, as they keep away from the forts on account of the proclamation, and cross the river six or eight miles from the garrison. The expense for the river cannot be estimated till the survey is made. A brass gun was found at a post called Pearsal's fort on the south branch, with a quantity of grape shot, and four swivels said to belong to the Ohio Company. A cannon, supposed to be Spanish, was at this post when Braddock came here; the gun is fit for service. Page 35

February 16, Philadelphia. February 17, Philadelphia.

John Read to Bouquet. That returns are to be made monthly for which he had not received the information from Fort Pitt &c.

Plumsted and Franks to the same. Thanks for assistance to Mr. Ormsby in the late inundation at Fort Pitt. Send copy of the agreement made for the supply of salt. Arrangements about flour. Report of Monekton landing at Martinico with little opposition. Report of Prussian successos. A requisition has been made to the Assembly, for 1800 men, but it is doubtful if they will be granted, or if they are whether they can be of service this year.

February 18, Philadeiphia.

Alexander Lunan to the same. Social gossip. Asks that Capt Barns. ley be requested to send down bills for goods furnished. Accounts settled, February 18, Fort Royal Martinico.

Capt. Harry Gordon to the same. Circumstantial account of the taking of Martinico from the 16th of January, when a landing was effected to the signing of the capitalation, on the 13th of February, and the formal taking possession at St Pierre on the 14th. The loss has been 500 men killed, wounded and missing. The enemy admit a loss of three times that number. The health of the troops is good on the whole, but the Dominican troops are in a terrible state, those that remain.

February 19. Ft. Sanducky.

Ensign Pauly to the same. Sends abstracts of provisions; venison damaged in spite of the utmost care. Some discontent among the Indiana about the block house; he does not think it will come to any thing, but asks instructions how he is to behave to the Indians should they be insolent. The detachment is well; has drawn money for their pay. 53

Arthur Hamilton to the same. Assures him that the letters sent in his care had been forwarded.

February 20, Ligonier. February 24, New York.

James Pitcher to the same. Friendly messages. There is a talk of 10,000 men being kept up in America, but thinks it only conjecture, &c., February 24, Presqu'Isle.

Capt. Schlosser to the same. Gives an account of his work on the buildings at the post. Had reported the fall of part of the intrenchments, and has no doubt the rest will follow on the first thaw. Provisions scarce; the pork is extremely bad, no venison nor fish and no relief to expect unless brought by the raven as in the case of Elias [Elijah]. Lord Townshend to the same. February 27. Ligonier.

Le Boeut.

Arthur Hamilton to the same. Sends returns, with remarks. Had got no receipts for rations, so that he will have to lose them unless Bouquet interfere.

March 2,

Plumsted and Franks to the same. Hope for letters, &c. The report Philadelphia. of Prussian successes was fictitious. Paid a bill of Hamilton for salt.

March 3,

Hoops to the same. Money matters. Good news from Monekton. Philadelphia. Respecting his tan works.

March 5,

Plumsted and Franks to the same. Their arrangements about beef, &c. Philadelphia. Report that a Spanish fleet has taken several ships and that all British ships had been detained in their ports.

March 6. Ligonier.

Lieut. Eane to the same. That the loss of provisions is owing to the destruction by vermin. Respecting bateaux and canoes. Shall observe orders about the Indian traders, but requires a list of those allowed. 71 n, sup-

March 12,

Governor Fauquier to the same. The Council, to whom he has commu-Williamsburg nicated his letter, (p. 27) respecting the proclamation against unauthorised settlers, has expressed great satisfaction. Persons who can make any right appear, it must be to lands far to the south of Fort Pitt. it never having been ascertained whether the lands about that Fort are in this Colony or in Pennsylvania, although he believes that the next packet will bring instructions for the absolute prohibition of all future settlements of lands not regularly ceded to the King's subjects by the Lieut. Blane to the same. Will carry out the orders (about the liquor traffic?) but it is impossible to prevent the traders passing, unless a severe example be made. Sends down the first victim. Is the order positively to prevent rum from being sold to any one whatever?

March 14, Ligonier.

Same to the same. Sends letters. Is he to allow an Indian to trade on Croghan's licence?

March 15. Philadelphia.

H. Vassel to the same (in French). Thanks for kindness. Has been able by his trade in the Islands to make enough to retire on to Switzerland, and regards him and Haldimand as the authors of his good fortune. The letter is purely personal.

March 16,

Ensign Pauli to the same. Reports that the Indians in the neigh-Ft. Sandusky. bourhood had been uneasy about the blockhouse, but there was no danger from them, as they had gone to war to the South. One of them had advised the Vindows (Wyandots) not to fight the Southern Indians as the Six Nations had joined them to strike the English and wished the Wyan lots to join also. One of the Wyandots came back to report this to the English commanders. The messengers reported that they had seen with the Six Nations scalps and horses taken from the English, and that they were fitting out another party of 200 men for the same purpose. The Shawanese had also brought in scalps and horses. The meat turns out very bad, and venison is difficult to be had as the Indians do not think it worth their while to bring it in.

March 17. Miamis.

Ensign Holmes to the same. Reports the state of the stores The Indians do not bring as much meat as is required and are constantly tormenting him for presents. There being no sutler, Mr. Crawford has offered to supply the place of one; he has been allowed to sell provided he get his (Bouquet's) leave.

March 20. Philadelphia.

Lieut. Dow to the same. Has seen the bales and casks, at New York, but could not open them, and Amherst will give no orders as to removing them to Philadelphia, although he hints they would be best there; will wait till he receive his (Bouquet's) orders. What he has done about the clothing. No word from Martinico; reports from Jamaica are that orders were given to destroy all the Spanish ships, wherever they could be found.

March 24. Presqu'isle.

Capt. Schlosser to the same. Thanks for garden seeds, nails, &c. Hopes more seeds will arrive with the whiskey for the artificers, the only pay they expect. The lake still frozen, the snow deep and full winter weather. How he proposes to palisade the post. Asks for a carpenter, whom he cannot do without, also for oakum, pitch, &c.

March 29, Venango.

Lieut. Carre to Bouquet. Has sent four men to bring up the clothing; Shall send Guy as much beef as can be spared when he sends up the bateau. Does not expect much more venison, but shall continue to buy what offers. Has sent the party by water, as the rising of the creeks will prevent going by land.

March 29 Philadelphia.

James Young to the same, The Assembly has voted 1,000 men before adjourning. A ship from Lisbon, brings an account of the declaration of war by Spain on the 18th December, and Lord Bristol who had come to Lisbon on the 28th was to leave on the 30th. Everything points to war, and if it is as successful against the Spanish as against the French "we shall become a powerful and haughty nation." The capitulation of Martinico is not yet received, but is hourly expected. Marriage of Sir John St. Clair to Miss Morland, daughter of the late councillor.

April 1, Fort Burd.

Sergeant McDonald to the same. Has been informed that the regiment is troke (disbanded) but there is no word for the pay or clothing of the men on this communication. Gives a statement of the pay and clothing due to several of the men. Is afraid that he will be left alone, and he is informed that some of the men at Cumberland are gone.

April 1, Niegara.

Ensign W. Hay to the same. Sends letters to Mr. Stedman to be for-.warded. Remit ds him (Bouquet) of his request to be relieved. Is now on good terms with the major and other officers.

A pril 3,

Alexander Lunan to the same. Statement of letters received and Philadelphia. answered.

April 4, Niegara.

Ms jor Walters to the same. Sends returns. The troops have been very healthy this winter, having lost only three men, two of whom were frezen to death in a snow storm. The bearer, Mr. Leve, carries bills for money he has advanced; asks that Captain Barnsley meet these bills. If money is not sent for subsistence, &c., will be obliged to send to New York for it.

April 6, Cumberland.

James Livingston, Fort Major, to the same. Three deserters sent back; the depositions of two of them show that one Barny Riley was the instigator. Depositions sent.

April 8, Fort Burd.

Sorgeant McDonald to the same. Two men living in a hunting cabin six miles up the river found killed by the Indians and their cabin burned; believes they were killed for the sake of their guns; this has frightened the people from settling. Has complained to a head man of the Mingoes, who has sent to investigate. Report that Barny Riley had been inciting desertion; will send him to Fort Pitt when the bateau arrives. 105

April 9, Fort Burd.

Sergeant McDonald to the same. Further about Barny Riley inciting to desertion; has sent him to Fort Pitt. Cannot send a list of those who will plant corn, as the people are frightered to settle on account of the murder by the Indians.

April 10, Ray's Town.

Col. William Eyre to the same. The road between this and Fort Cumberland (36 miles) very indifferent. Between that fort and Fort Burd very bad, except for 15 or 16 miles on this side of Red Stone Creck. The nature of the different roads. Hopes soon to get to Philadelphia. Supposes Capt. Basset is now on his way here, &c. No news yet from the West Indies.

April 10, Fort Pitt.

Bouquet to sergeant McDonald. Has received news of the murder (p. 105) Had he obeyed orders to prevent hunting or settling beyond the fort he would have prevented that crime. His reason for prohibiting these settlements was exactly what has occurred and yet Brown, the man who discovered the murder, was going off eight miles to look for a place to plant corn. Repeats his positive orders to prohibit any planting beyond two miles from the fort at the utmost. Riley to be sent prisoner to Fort Pitt. To send whatever information he can obtain.

are to go on planting corn. Bouquet to Major Walters. The high flood in January swept off and spoiled the winter stores, besides damaging the fort and magazines. Death of Capt. Mather; Barnsley is ap pointed to the Grenadiers. Ensign Jehu Hay recommended for promotion. Other promotions. Arrangement for the musicians. Orders received to reduce the rations to the women attached to the regiments. The garrisons of Venango, Le Bouf and Presqu'Isle to be reduced. Other regimental details, &c.

April 13, LeBœuf. April 13, Ligonier.

Lieut. Guy to Bouquet. Returns sent. Searcity of flour, &c; kettles wanted. Arthur Hamilton to the same. Has been careful to send returns of the victualling. Difficulty of ascertaining the quantity of flour and other stores, &c. Bad quality of some of the flour and the bags cut by rate.

April 15, Fort Burd.

Sergeant McDonald to the same. Defends himself against the charge of di-obeying orders and allowing men to hunt and settle out of bounds. The Shawanese are said to be the murderers of the two men; all their effects found but their guns. Corn offered for sale by men who raised it last year. He will have eight acres and Barny Riley and his companions twelve acres of corn this year. 121

April 25, London, April 26, Detroit.

Capt. Campbell to the same. His accounts passed and warrant received. Hopes some method better than that of last year, will be taken to supply the posts. Is sorry for the loss of ammunition at Fort Pitt; the necessity 1762 of having a supply at Detroit and the other posts. Has applied to Major Walters for a supply. Has written the General as to the necessity of giving presents to the Indians, as the small garrisons are at their mercy. The general orders regarding rum will have a good effect, though there is a good deal left at Nisgara by the Albany traders, which he hopes will be forbidden to be sold to the Indians. Does not think young Schlosser will do at St. Joseph's; the French and Indians are so connected that if one is disobliged the other takes its part; his father might ask that he be relieved from that post. Cannot relieve Sorgeant Steiner at St. Joseph's, as there is no other to send. It would be of great service to get cattle from Sandusky. Sends a little girl returned from the Indians; she was too young when taken to give an account of herself, &c., &c.

April 28, LeSœuf.

Lieut, Guy to Bouquet. Will stay for the summer; but hopes to be relieved before the bad weather sets in.

April 29, Ligonier.

Lieut. Blane to the same. Arrival of four horses from Bedford, which shall be kept till he can forward them to Fort Pitt. What liquor can be ordered, &c.

May 1, Venango.

Lieut. Carre to the same. Eight barrels pork delivered by Sergeant Saam. Will send the bateau to morrow with one of Saam's men to pilot them. Sends invalids by Saam.

May 3, Cumberland.

James Potter to the same. Sends Mary Feresick, whose boy was taken by the Indians in 1758 and is now at Tuscarawas. Asks that she be helped to recover him.

May 3.

John Bartram to the same. Had received his letter, but was unable to find the bearer, who had left. Sends a list of North American trees and shrubs, most of which are growing on his land, but to send a list of all the plants he has growing which he collected from New England to Carolina and from the sea coast to Lake Ontario would take up too much time. A list follows of 173 North American trees and shrubs. The letter is written in the distinctive phraseology of the Quakers.

John Bartram was a Pennsylvanian who laid out a botanical garden on the west bank of the Schuylkill, four miles below Philadelphia. He was appointed Amarican botanist to George III and held the office till his death in September 1777. See Allibone's Dictionary].

May 4, Philadelphia.

Hoops to the same Has agreed to a compromise with Thomson about the tan yard & . Hopes he has heard the good news of Martinico; the Spanish war is too true; the large privateer gets on fast. Respecting provisions.

May 5, Ligonier.

Lieutenant Dow to the same. No hope of relief. Amherst has ordered clothing for Niagara and Doroit to be sent in the manner to be ordered by him (Bouquet). The road being good the waggons will set out next week with clothing for Fort Pitt. Colonel Byrd and others gone to Virginia. Colonel Young has gone home at last; Amherst positively refuse 1 to let him sell his commission. Regimental promotions and changes. Colonels Murray and Vaughan are both deal at Martinio. It is said at New York that 1400 men are on their march from Kennedy [Canada?] and the independent companies on their way from Albany to New York; there is to be an expedition, but nobody knows where. Cochrane has been tapped a second time and is not yet recovered. Respecting clothing, regimental changes, &c.

Respecting wine for Bouquet and other private matters. No news from Martinico; supposes that Monckton will soon be here, Lord Albemarle, a general of superior rank, being now in the West Indies. Social talk. Is sorry to hear that the garrison is so sickly.

Lieut, Blane to the same. No forage was issued last winter to Thomson and Paris. Is sorry for the poor people of Carolina, prisoners to the French and Spanish. That Hamilton, who proposes to stay at Fort Pitt, must come down immediately. Colonel Vaughan is not dead, but was so near it that his coffin was made.

Major Walters to the same. The garrison healthy; four men lost, two were frozen and two drowned, besides one man who died having been left sick from Campbell's command. Arrangements for the musicians and about rations for the women attached to the regiment. The present garrisons at Presqu'Isle, LeBouf and Venango should be sufficient but more men are wanted here and at Fort Pitt. He can ill spare men to take provisions to Presqu'Isle; if sent necessary work must stop. Expects carpenters and materials every day to complete the vessel now building. The works of this fort want a great deal of repair. Has got bateaux ready to take provisions to Presqu'Isle; the officer there should be ordered to keep a batcau constantly going till the post is completely furnished with provisions. Arrangements at the carrying place. Is glad Captain Schlosser returns to this post. Christ'e has offered to relieve Dow. Regimental clothing, pay, &c. 166

A mutinous letter (in German) addressed to Bouquet. 171 Lieut. Francis Gordon to Bouquet. Arrival of two soldiers looking for a drummer who has been lost; has supplied them with provisions. The barrels ordered to be sent are very bulky; would, if approved, take thern apart for convenience. The want of clothing, some of the men have only the neck and wristbands of their shirts left; the men cut an odd figure on sentry. It will take five trips or more to supply Le Bouf with provisions, &c.

Capt. Campbell to the same. Refers to letters sent. Has still the same difficulties about provisions. Can place little dependence on the vessels, and after this month the navigation is precarious. The General believes the Indians should support themselves by hunting; if they thought they were to get no ammunition they could not be kept quiet; they are elevated at the report of a Spanish war and that the French and Spaniards are to retake Quebec. They only want a good opportunity and the encouragement of an enemy to begin an attack. Letters from Leslye and Gorroll; the garrison of the latter sickly; those officers at the posts are obliged to give the Indians something, so that there will be large accounts. Accounts and movements for the relief of posts. Is tired of Detroit; the people do not improve on acquaintance. &c.

Capt. Schlosser to Bouquet. Respecting the returns and muster by Mr. Pitcher, &c. Major Gladwin has brought orders for a captain with his company to go to Detroit and thence to Lake Superior to establish four posts. He (Gladwin) is to command at Detroit; Etherington to go on. Gladwin would give no orders as he believes he will go back to the light infantry and that Wilkins will take his place. By Gladwin's arrival he had got the men exchanged whose time was up. Respecting accounts &c. Is setting out for Schenectady in two days for necessaries for the garrison. The sergeant major has applied for leave to purchase the adjutancy.

Petition from the sergeant major follows, 824 Edward Ward to Bouquet. Had ordered 700 pounds of bread for the Indians at Ligonier; neither that nor the meat was sufficient to last them to Bedford. Their extravagance is well known, the Government being too indulgent to them at their meetings. On their return he shall keep them to their allowance.

Capt. Campbell to the same. Hopes he has recovered from the effects of the accident. The General has appointed Gladwin to the command of Detroit, to send him (Campbell) to Lake Superior or to keep him at Detroit as shall be best for the service. Does not think the expedition to Lake Superior will take place this year, the ve sels not being ready. Were his accounts here settled he would wish to join at Fort Pitt. Murder of Clapham by two Pani slaves and Indians, the latter of whom delivered up the Panis. The Indians appear well disposed here at Capt. Cochrane to the same. Respecting men draughted, exchanged or who wished to be discharged from the regiment. Report of mischief done by the Indians at German Flats. The accounts from the Havana are savourable, the Moro is almost reduced to ruins and the capitulation of the town is expected. Newfoundland taken by the French. It is reported that the Queen of Hungary is dead.

Lieut. Gordon to the same. Arrival of bateaux with provisions; the bateaux leaky. The crock is so low that it is impossible to forward provisions to Le Bouf; list of provisions already forwarded. Arrangements about the bateaux; has no liquor to give the men; a little would be of great service. Calls attention to the weak state of the garrison, &c.

Lieut. Blane to the same. Sends return of flour, which shows a great deficiency, and sends this by express, hoping it will reach before the contractors leave Fort Pitt. Remarks on the nature of the deficiency. 337

Licut. Gordon to the same. Hinges, nails, &c., received. The men are behaving well at present. Whiskey received. Shall try to prevent the Indians from doing mischief; they have stolen four horses. Explains his apparent interference with Ecuyer's company. Has sent off provisions, &c., to Le Bouf. Eight of the men have fever and ague.

Ensign Pauli to the same. Latter received. Provisions delivered by Capt. Robertson, commanding a vessel on Lake Erie, which could not get into Lake Sandusky from the shallowness of the water. Respecting man of the old party sick and a grenadier sick at Detroit. The complaints against him of the treatment of the Indians proved to be lies. Capt. Clapham's death.

Bouquet to David Franks, Has received account of stores; sends certificate of wastage. Requires waggons or horses to carry about 50,000 weight of flour from Ligonier to this post before the middle of November. Ourry will arrange about the price, it would be a saving if part of that could be paid in flour. Salt meat for thirty men to be laid in for six months at Ligonier, supplying fresh meat at this season.

Capt. Cochrane to Bouquet. His and other officer's servants have disappeared, supposed to have gone on board the ship Privateer. Has offered a reward, and will prosecute the captain on his return. Aska for a servant to be sent; the good prospects of his recovery. Colonel Amherst sailed on Monday on an expedition to Newfoundland, it is supposed, and to take troops from Halifax and Louisbourg.

Lieut, Dow to the same. Has been at Albany and Ontario, and came here on the 4th. Respecting the movements of Gladwin and Etherington and the quantity of clothing sent to Detroit. The great complaints among the men which he hopes the new major will put an end to. The major had offered to keep him, and said he could not spare men to go with him to Presqu'Isle; will come round by Philadelphia, bringing with him the clothing from New York. His (Dow's) son is very anxious to be sent to Fort Pitt. Demler is to send a sketch of the Falls. This place is entirely out of the world.

David Franks to the same. Thanks for letter, &c., shall procure horses to carry flour to Fort Pitt. How the different qualities of flour are separated. Provisions shall be laid in at Ligonier as ordered. Monekton writes that he no longer has to do with the Department, &c.

James Wright to the same. Describing the place where five skeletons were found by Shawanese—about three miles from the Ohio, about 30 or 40 acres of salt, moist land, in the middle of a large savannah, four days journey below the Shawanese town, on the east side of the river. The skeletons (of huge creatures) are described, the Indians stating that such bones had been found scattered over the plains, but none in such preservation; they said there was a tradition that "such mighty creatures once frequented these savannahs; that there were then men of a size proportionable to them who used to kill them and tye them in their nopputses and throw them upon their backs, as an Indian now does a deer; that they had seen marks in rocks, which tradition said were made by these great and strong men when they sat down with their brethren, such as a man makes when he sits down in the snow; that when there were no more of these strong men left, God killed these mighty creatures that they should not kill the present race of Indians and added God had killed these last five "—that is, with lightning.

Lieut; Guy to the same. Sends certificates; used the damaged flour to feed the sheep; did not know it should have been regularly condemned. The deficiency in his account has arisen from not taking credit for all his issues of provisions, &c. &c. 385

Capt. Campbell to the same. Arrival of Gladwin and other officers. Had been ordered to take posts on Lake Superior, but Major Gladwin has kept him here. The vessels only brought 40 barrels of provisions.

Col. George Mcreer to Bouquet. That many of the King's horses could be recovered, were a reward offered. (This is only a portion of the letter, the first part having apparently been lost.) Page 440

Lieut. F. Gordon to the same. The very bad character of Wilkie. who had imposed on him and has gone off leaving his affairs in a very bad condition.

Lieut, Dow to the same. Has been attacked by a fever at Albany and wrecked on the way to New York. Shall ask leave to take the clothing to Philadelphia, where he will remain till ordered to Fort Pitt. Had met Captain Ecuyer at Fort Ontario, and Meyer at Albany. Arrival of the 17th, 42nd and Montgomery's; the Royals, 15th, 43rd and 48th are daily expected. The officers of the 2nd battalion of Highlanders go to Europe to recruit. His youngest son was well at the Havana; asks that his eldest son may be removed to Fort Pitt.

Lieut. Geo. Demler to the same. That he has been promoted to a lieutenancy in the Royal Americans.

T. Hamback to the same. Has obtained a pass at Detroit. Gives an account of Mr. Schlosser's extravagancies when in liquor. The French people wish that a man of sense were sent to this post and not a boy. 447

Capt. Schlosser to the same (in French). Has received letters which had been delayed. Has engaged men on reasonable terms. Explains why names of men exchanged were omitted by Walters, and gives an account of the men discharged. The place is full of intrigue, of which he gives an account. Movements of officers. Has purchased a plantation from Sir William Johnson, Christie and the sergeant major are by h ready to purchase Carre's lieutenancy. Respecting non commissioned officers. His intention to sell out and his disappointment at the non-arrival of Carre to complete the purchase. The terms of his offer to sell, &c. 419 delivered up, as he has a better opinion of the Shawanese than of the Delawares. The Indians confess to the belt reported by McKee (p. 505); it was got from the French efficer on the Illinois; they had no intention to go to war, but it was time to defend themselves as the English intended to make war on them, and allege the refusal to sell them powder, &c., as a proof of this, and that as soon as all the prisoners are delivered up the war will begin. The Delawares have received a belt from the Susquehanna, have ordered their warriors to remain near home to hunt and are sulky. It is fortunate they are not on good terms with the Indians over the Lake, but if war should break out it would be general, as the Indians are jealous and never consider consequences. They expected great things and their poverty and mercenary disposition will not suffer them to bear a disappointment. Thinks that it will not be

January 8, Fort Pitt. Capt, Souver to Bouquet (in French). Sends returns and report of a court martial. Has received the letter from Lancaster; it seems an eterrity since he came to Fort Pitt. Prisoners delivered up by the Indians; Six Nation warriors passing to go to war with the Indians who are on the side of the Spaniards. Asks for instructions as to giving them powder, &c. A club meets every Monday and there is a ball every Saturday. If the punch is not strong enough, the ladies have the whiskey at their disposal.

January 8, Fort Pitt. William Potts to the same ecting a boy who was to have been engaged as a servant. Deserted from Presqu'lsle have come in and been punished. Six men drowned on Lake Huron. Account of the weekly dancing assemblies.

January 9, Westover. Col. George Mercer to the same. Describes the agreeable party that is with him. Urges the settlement of certain accounts which have been left unpaid for three years and will not be paid till his (Bouquet's) certificates are received.

January 16, Niagara. Capt. Schlosser to the same (in French). The communication between this post and Fort Pitt has been closed since the 15th October last. Complains of double dealing on the part of Sir William Johnson with respect to the purchase by Carre of the company of Capt. Claus, and of the farm he (Schlosser) was persuaded to purchase, but which he now declines. Declines now to sell his commission, and asks that the letter of resignation be returned. Illness of Ensign (William?) Hay, of whose recovery the doctor has no hope.

January 17, New York.

Bouquet to Amherst. That he had settled and received a certificate of the settlement for the money placed in his hands by General Stanwix, to supply money to the managers of the transport service in Virginia and the eight counties of Pennsylvania. Lest doubts should arise is anxious to have the accounts examined and settled by his (Amherst's) commands.

January 18, Fort Pitt. Ralph Phillips to Bouquet. Asks for his interest to enable him to purchase in an old regiment.

January 21, New York. Amherst to the same. Has received a proclamation declaring the cessation of arms, in consequence of the proliminaries of peace signed on the 3rd of November last; to communicate the same to the different posts.

January 22, Philadelphia.

Lieut. Dow to the same. Has sent packet to Fort Pitt; Sergt. Clark to send return of clothing. Respecting Bouquot's servant, &c. 27

January 22, Philadelphia. George Croghan to the same, Has returned from New York. A letter from London, of the 19th November, gives a list of promotions. The armies preparing for winter quarters, and there was a talk of several regiments being raised, so that there would be no peace soon. (This letter apparently by mistake among those of 1763. The preliminaries of peace were signed on the 3rd November, 1762).

January 23, New York. Amherst to the same. That he cannot order a re-examination of the accounte (p. 24). If he thinks anything is wanting, he ought to apply to General Stanwix.

January 23, New York.

Bouquet to Plumsted. Asking him to have a search made for a packet of vouchers entrusted to Hamilton, a clork, in November, 1761, for General Monckton, but never delivered to the General. Asks that all information may be obtained respecting the packet.

A note of the same date is added by Capt. Fesch.

Anna Fitzgerald to the same. Asks after her son by a former marriage—Sergeant Clark.

Capt. Reuyer to the same (in French). All quiet here, but at Fort Bedford Ourry's corporal and five men are in prison for having robbed the store. Has sent a detachment to relieve these rascals and a party to escort them here. The ammunition has also been stolen, but that, it is believed, has been done by the inhabitants. Sends returns.

February 4, Fort Pitt.

February 5, Fort Pitt. Col. George Mercer to Bouquet. A private letter, giving an account of the pleasant state of society in Virginia, their desire for his presence, &c.

George Oroghan to the same. Has been at some expense, but not much, and there shall not be much more. Remarks on the General's objections to his accounts, that the interpreters had not been paid since they were first employed. He did not employ any of them and as the General objects to their accounts, he shall take no more trouble about them; nor was it his business to pay any of them, though he had advanced money for that purpose, and asks that the commanding officers at Fort Pitt and Detroit pay them in future, as he will not advance a farthing. Thinks it cruel of General Amherat to act as he has done about expenses for the Indian Department. Capt. Ecuyer will send the account given by the Indian chief of the belt sent last summer to the Indian pations. Thinks that McKee, now among the Shawanese, will bring up the prisoners in March. Does not believe the Delawares will bring in their prisoners unless the Shawanese bring in all theirs.

Ralph Phillips to the same. Has been appointed to manage the affairs of the late Captain Mather; asks that the money from the sale of his effects, his papers, &c., be rent. His anxiety lest he should be put on half pay by the peace, but hopes that his (Bouquet's) friendship may avert this.

Thomas Hutchins to the same. Thanks for obtaining him leave of absence to go to Carolina; but was disappointed at its being countermanded. Still hopes he may be able to succeed through his (Bouquet's) intercession in obtaining leave to make the journey.

William Potts to the same. Offers to purchase an ensigncy for his brother John.

Lieutenant Blane to the same. Explains why he cannot sell the flour; its poor quality.

Lieutenant Carre to the same. Requests that he may obtain his company leaving the succession to the ensigncy vacant in the meantime. In a P. S. he says that Potts would purchease the ensigncy for his brother. 57 Captain Ecuyer to the same. Indians sent off to Detroit with dis-

Usptain Meuyer to the same. Indians sent off to Detroit with dispatches; one sent to Venango with instructions to send the General's orders to LeBouf and Presqu'Isle; orders also sent to Sandusky. As the Virginian regiment is disbanded he has been obliged to send a corporal and four men to keep the King's stores. The men at Red Stone are deserting every day; is he to keep garrisons from the battalion at these two posts? Has relieved the whole detachment at Bedford, accused of robbing the King's stores; will have the men punished. Another has been punished for theft, &c. Deserters tried. The flour is worthless, even the cattle will not eat it. Eight prisoners brought in by the Indians. Holds his position only by a thread, owing to the expected reduction.

February 10, Rolles. Without signature or address, apparently to Bouquet, written in the warmest terms (in French).

Colonel W. Amherst to Bouquet. Returns received. The report of February 16, New York. February 17, the Court of Inquiry is returned that further steps be taken.

69

James Robertson to the same. Respecting a purchaser for Carre's lieutenancy.

New York. February 20, Fredericksburgh.

Hugh Mercer to the same. Recommends Dr. Spencer who expects to be surgeon's mate of the battalion. It is reported that provincial regiments are to be raised and maintained for the the defence of American acquisitions. Would like something genteel in that way rather than the drudgery of business.

February 21, Fort Pitt. Sorgeant John Burnet to the same. Reports that the trees are planted, the meadows cleared, &c. Thanks for past kindness and for future favours.

February 21, Fort Pitt. Capt. Ecuyer to the same (in French). Respecting dispatches; Capt. Campbell's people will be employed all summer on the lakes. The Delawares have sent word that they will bring in all the prisoners in spring. No appearance of a flood.

February 22, Belœil. Sir John St Clair to the same. Has been confined to bed. Respecting accounts for expenses, &c. Ourry to make out his accounts. 75

February 24, New York.

Capt. Cochrane to the same. Had shown Col. Robertson the part of letter respecting Carre; as he would see from Robertson's letter (p. 70). It seems that at least two battalions of the R yal Americans are to be kept up. Has been ordered to move as little as possible and is to keep confined to his chair.

Major Wilkins to the same. Death of Ensign William Hay. Application of Sergeant Major Butrich for the ensigncy. Has written repeatedly, but does not know if his letters have been received, &c., &c. Account of the liabilities and assets of the late Ensign William Hay.

Niagara.

Thomas Mather to the same. Respecting the affairs of his deceased brother Richard, for whose estate he is executor.

March 8, Chester.

Capt. Ecuyer to Col. Amherst (in French). In consequence of the height of the river had removed the stores and ammunition to the upper storeys. On the 8th at eight in the morning there were six inches of water in the fort. At two in the afternoon he sent two officers and 30 men to the rising ground, with a fortnight's provisions for the whole garrison. Had all the boats ready to remove everything from the fort, when the water abated; all the provisions, &c., safe and in good order, but the timber prepared for building bateaux has been carried away;

J. Calcraft to the same. That the two senior battalions of the Royal Americans are to be continued.

Capt. Ecuyer to Bouquet (in French). Reports the fire at Lieut. Jamet's post of St. Mary (p. 33). His annoyance about returns. Has employed the coopers making barrels for sending off provisions. Has replanted the trees and closed the garden, as he does not expect to enjoy it. The people are grumbling at the last order that they are to work without pay and do so with a bad grace. Every one dissatisfied since the flood about lodgings. The merchants have lost nothing; he assisted them with all his power, although he does not think they deserved it.

the flood about lodgings. The merchants have lost nothing; he assisted them with all his power, although he does not think they deserved it. Hutchins has left for a short time. Has determined not to sell his commission, but as it is clear he will be put on half pay, hopes it will be as soon as possible. It seems cruel to send an officer so far and then to reduce him; it would ruin him. His journey from Quebec here cost him 50 guineas. Sends vouchers, &c. St. Patrick's day was observed in such fashion that Croghan was not able to write.

George Oroghan to the same. That as few presents as possible have been given to the Indians. He has himself spent £100 of his own in presents. The great uneasiness of the Indians on account of late British acquisitions; does not approve of Amherst's plan for distressing them. Had written to Sir William Johnson that if he (Oroghan) had not leave to go to Britain to obtain restitution for the losses by French depredations, he will have to resign, and by Amherst's plan there will be no need of an agent. Sends vouchers for payment; if Amberst does not authorise it, he supposes he must bear the loss. Will not go down the river as he wishes to go to England and, besides, he will not meet the Indians, with no power to deal with them creditably. Robert Callender to Bouquet. Has delivered the warrants to Colonel

March 27, Cumberland. John Armstrong, who will not promise to make the survey till some time in May. Has given orders about the four horses to be bought and sent to the Miamis. Has sent some peltry.

March 30, Fort Pitt George Croghan to the same. Is glad be has got out the warrants for the lands at Trough Creek Vally; those near Bedford and the Big Spring are in the Survey or General's office, but fears those given to Col. John Armstrong are burned. How he settled with Mr. Fay for the lands. Mr. McKee is with the Indians; they and the prisoners have not yet arrived; his (Croghan's) brother has found a copper mine. Thinks his resignation will be accepted, as there is no need now for an agent in these parts. 109

March 30, Fort Pitt. Capt. Ecuyer to the same (in French). Respecting the pay and allowances for the care of the bateaux. Has written to Baset for articles required. Has intended that all owing for flour purchased from the King's stores are to pay by the 15th April, if not they will be sold out, as nothing is to be done with this race by mildness. Is tired of Fort Pitt, where the winter seemed very long.

March 31, New York. Capt. Cochrane to the same. That Carre must make his arrangements with Schloser for the purchase of his company, as Claus declines to sell out. Has been out a week ago, but walks little, being cautious not to hinder his recovery.

Lieut. Blane to the same. Respecting the sale of flour. 114

James Malli-ter to the same. Has surveyed for a road in the mountains from Fort Littleton to Carlisle of which a description is given, 115

Capt. Ecuyer to the same (in French). McKee reports that the Shawanese are not so well disposed as they were, and the Delawares have sent them a message not to deliver up their prisoners till it was seen what turn things will take by the peace. They will, however, come with five prisoners escorted by 100 beggars; they shall be received very coldly. The building of the bateaux getting on slowly for want of material, &c. Has found his (Bouquet's) snuff box, which had evidently been stolen at the time of the flood by a negro cook, who had broken it up and buried the pieces near the kitchen. Has been obliged to place Lieut, Donelan and Surgeon Boyd under arrest for fighting, but released them on agreeing to give up the quarrel.

April 11, New York.

Col. James Robertson to the same. Respecting the quarrel. 116 Claus felling his commission, as Amherst has refused to sanction his absence to join the Indian Department. Carre ought still to retain his lieutenancy as two of the battalions of the Royal Americans are to be reduced, and as an old lieutenant he will be kept on full pay. Reports of what is to be done with the different regiments.

he were sent away; asks that he be sent to Fort Pitt. The Delawares greatly exasperated and threaten mischief.

Capt. Eeuyer to Bouquet (in French). Has sent his mare to the farm. Had sent four horses to Ligonier; they are returning with iron, tools, &c. Has ordered Blane to send all the King's horses here but he says he has none, all the horses there being his own. Respecting the blacksmith's tools, &c. Can get no answer from Capt. Basset, who is very lazy. The industry of Burent; has been obliged to employ coopers as casks are wanting. The order to pay for flour, &c., on the 15th April has been disregarded; will be obliged to take sharp measures with the debtors. Has had great trouble hunting up tools, &c., belonging to the King, yet old Clapham's house is full of them and he has cheated in McKee's declaration of what took place among the other ways. Shawanese; it has been absolutely necessary to give them powder, &c. The Illinois and other Indians are opposing the passage at the instigation of the French. Soldiers asking their discharge. Indians leaving dissatisfied, although their consumption of provisions has been enormous. Asks for good flour.

George Croghan to the same. Three chiefs, with 122 warriors, came Fort Pitt. in to deliver up five prisoners. Sends ores to be tested.

Capt. Ecuyer to the same (in French). Sends a parcel received from Detroit, with a speech from the Miamis to Holmes. Croghan is at Bedford, and proposes to go to Carlisle; hopes he will soon return, as these rascals of Delawares are assembled to hold a great council about the delivery of prisoners. Major Gladwin writes that he (Ecuyer) is surrounded with rascals and complains of the Delawares and Shawanese as the seum who set the others in motion. Has seven bateaux in the water.

General Amherst to Officer commanding at Pittsburg, enclosing public orders for publication.

Lieut, Blane to Bouquet. The returns will show that he has sold the flour that was in the greatest danger. How the sales were made. 135
Lieut. Potts to the same. That his brother has been provided for by the interest of Sir James Lowther, so that his application to purchase Carre's lieutenancy must be cancelled.

Capt. Ecuyer to the same (in French). A large party of Mingoes arrived at the beginning of the month, and delivered ten bad horses; they asked presents, which were refused. The Mingoes and Delawares sold peltry to the amount of £300, with which they purchased as much powder, &c., as they could get, and have gone apparently down the river to stop the passage and intercept the bateaux. They have been committing robberies at Bushy Run, &c. Is putting the fort in the best posture of defence. Arrival of Hudson, with six recruits; 20 bateaux now in the water. It is just reported that the Indians have killed Clapham and all in the house and plundered everything; the three men who brought the news were at work and escaped through the woods. Arms sent to the people at Bushy Run. Byerly warned to leave or he would be killed in three or four days. Is afraid of the small posts, but can answer for this. If no letters are received, it is an evidence that the communication is stopped.

Same to the same (in French). Massacre of the men at the saw mill; a tomahawk left as a declaration of war. Daniel Collet brings word of the massacre of Thomas Cohoun [Colquboun] and his party at Beaver Creek, having left Tuscarawas by order of King Beaver. The Indians report Sandusky taken and the officers prisoners, and that Detroit was attacked. He believes the affair to be general, and trembles for the posts; he is surrounded by Indians but is neglecting nothing. He is to be attacked to-morrow morning, but is passably ready; has formed two companies of militia, numbering 80 or 90 men, and has collected the Page 140 Capt. Ourry to Bouquet. Whilst engaged in repairing the stockades Fort Bedford, had received the disagreeable news from Ecuyer; has mustered the militia and prepared cartridges, &c. Has only a corporal and six men; has sent to Juniata for two men, leaving only a corporal and one man there. There are only 36 men fit to bear arms and 19 guns in the town; very little powder; has sent to warn in the settlers; shall do his best to prevent surprise. The Wolf's half brother came in on pretence of returning a horse and wanted to buy powder, which was refused. If he has not gone off he will be secured, when this is written and sent off; nothing can go without an escort. Can expect no reinforcement from above, but supposes troops will come from below.

Same to the same. At the old trade of express upon express. The weakness of the communication, &c., have induced the Savages to renew their hostilities; from Fort Pitt to this is still quiet; are preparing to receive the enemy. Hopes that if they attack Pitt, they will leave so many on the esplanade as to discourage them, but does not depend on that. Any troops coming must bring powder; the traders here have not an ounce, The militia are armed and guard the town, as he does the fort where he is trying to save all the rain that it shall please God to send, in case of a blockade. Has written to the magistrates at Carlisle how much it concerns Cumberland County to strengthen his hands.

June 1. Fort Pitt.

Intelligence brought to Fort Pit by Colhoun of a message by Delaware Chiefs, delivered at Tuscarawas on the 27th May, that all the English at Detroit were killed ten days ago; all the white people at Sandusky five days ago, 19 in number; the only persons left alive were the officer taken prisoner and a boy, who escaped; at the mouth of the Twightwee Hugh Crawford and a boy are prisoners, six men killed at the Salt-Licks, five men killed five days ago. Had seen tracks from Sandusky, which they believe to be those of a party coming to cut off him (Colhoun) and his party. They advise that he and his men make their escape, and their goods would be kept safe for six months. Neither Croghan nor any of the great men are to ask them (the Chiefs) about the news. The Indians who have taken up the hatchet are the Ottawas and the Chippewas. They (the Delawares) thought that peace had been made by the King, and they had joined in it and would not be led into war, and they ask that no warriors (soldiers) be sent till they can remove out of the way. An Indian guide sent with Colhoun told him that Detroit had been attacked, but not actually taken, probably from about the 13th to the 17th, and that during the four days the Indians had not met with much success, but that they were determined to persist till it was taken. The Chiefs refused to let Colhoun and his party take arms, and he believes that their guides led them into an ambuscade from which they were fired at, and from which only he and three of his people (out of 14) escaped.

Capt. Ecuyer to Bouquet (in French). Two settlers sent to Venango were attacked a mile and a half from this post and one wounded. Two young men have carried an order to the sergeant to get all the settlers to join here, bringing 600 pounds of powder and 1,000 pounds of lead taken there a few days before by a trader; they are to come either by water or through the woods and not to destroy the fort. Hopes the Indian priest will send a good party; he sent word he was bringing a party when he had sent his wife and cattle to Fort Cumberland. The two men from Bushy Run have gone to Ligonier; three settlers have left for Venango.

His own garrison is 250 men, regulars and militia, all resolute men. Has little flour; the settlers receive half rations of bread and a little more meat; the poorest women and children some Indian corn and meat. The cattle are all brought in andare dealt out so as to save the salt meat for the last resource. The Indians are about a mile off, but have not appeared. The good services of the trader, Trent, and of Burent. Gives an account of the work done for defence; the arrangement of the militia, &c., and the precautions taken to prevent surprise. Has expended all his own money and wants a little rum for his people. The three men from Venango were obliged to return after going 20 miles. Page 152

June 3, Presqu'Isle. Lieut. Christie to Lieut. Gordon, Venango. Cuyler, of the Queen's Rangers, reports that his whole party was cut off by the Indians at the mouth of the Detroit River. He left Niagara on the 13th May with 97 men, consisting of Surgeon Cope and 17 men of the Royal Americans, the rest rangers. There were killed Cope and 15 men. Sergeant Frolinger and 42 of the rangers, one woman and child; himself and three men wounded, two since dead. Had lost all the provisions and eight bateaux. On getting to Sandusky he found it burned to the ground. God knows what has become of Pelly and his party. Schlosser at his post met the same fate (as Sandusky). Has sent to Niagara for ammunition, and has kept six men of Cuyler's, as he expects a visit from the hell hounds. Has ordered every one into the blockhouse and shall be ready for them. 157

June 3.

Robert Callender to Bouquet. The Indians have broken out about Pittsburg; the garrison in want of powder. Expects a waggon load this way (ao place given), and shall send ten horse loads to Capt. Ourry. Will try to get men to assist, but they are lulled into too great security to hope for any help.

June 3, Fort Bedford,

Ourry to the same. Has had no bad news since his last letter. No Indians on the communication but two, who, with two squaws and two children, were brought in by a scouting party. Has received plenty of subsistence from the country people; the difficulty he had in getting them to remain in the fort, owing to their fear of the Indians; has lodged, victualled and armed them. There are 93 families in the fort, and the militia rolls show 155 men. The regulars are 3 corporals and 9 privates. Has patched up two drums and the parade makes no small appearance. Plenty of water, and gutters prepared to catch the rain. Everything prepared for an attack.

June 4, Ligonier. Lieut. Blane to the same. The Indians have been firing since Thursday last, but too far off to do harm. Had fired the houses which gave them shelter, so they have disappeared. All the inhabitants from Bushy Run to Stony Creek are safe here. Hopes the General will consider their services and losses. Five of the pack horsemen from Fort Pitt are missing.

June 4, Philadelphia. Plumsted and Franks to the same. Have ordered cattle and flour to Fort Pitt. An escort required.

June 5, Philadelphia.

Bouquet to Ourry. Has sent an express to the General for troops to Fort Pitt, and has applied to Governor Hamilton, who has written to the magistrates of Cumberland County to assist. Has written Callender to send ten horse loads of powder. Water may be taken from the creek to put out fires, as there are plenty of casks, &c., &c. Wishes those scattered in the woods could as easily be relieved.

June 5, Philadelphia. Same to Ecuyer. Troops will be ordered for his relief with the greatest dispatch. Is not afraid of a direct attack; he must guard against surprise, as well in the fort as by patrols at night, the men resting through the day. The ship carpenters to be discharged when they finish the 20 bateaux, &c., &c.

June 5,
Philadelphia
Same to Callender. An escort is needed for the powder to Fort Bedford. The people of Cumberland to supply it, who must, for their own interest, support the post till troops can be sent.

Ourry to Bouquet. Can defend the post unless the country people desert, in which case superior numbers might tire to death his dozen Royal Americans. Never lies down himself till about 12, since the alarm, and by two or three in the morning is walking about the fort, turning out the guards, &c. Has got the cattle secured. His difficulty to keep the undisciplined militia from straggling; they are still in good spirits, but don't know all the bad news. What he has done to the fort. He fears much for Ligonier. Longs for Indian scouts with news, but still more for red coats. Page 171

Royal Americans. Ourry to the same. Is afraid his letters may not reach. Supposes he Fort Bedford, is now on the road, so shall write direct to Amherst. The terror among the inhabitants caused by a false alarm, which arose from the burning of houses by Lieut. Blane (p. 163) at Ligonier. The alleged 50 hostile Indians turn out to be those sent out by him (Ourry) as a scout. The inhabitants of the town are hearty but the settlers who have fled from their plantations are wavering, but he has managed to reassure them. Are living on fresh beef to save salt provisions and do not kill the sheep, as they can be kept in the fort; he has had biscuits baked for the scouts, &c. Does not believe the Indians will attack the fort but is prepared. The garrison of Fort Burd, with the settlers and goods, has arrived safely at Fort Cumberland. The sergeant threw the powder into the Monongahela and buried 900 pounds of lead. Major Livingstone's post is defensible and he has formed two companies of militia. Is sending for a drove of eattle from Cresap's for Detroit. The signals he has arranged for the friendly Indians.

June 10, Ligonier.

Lieut. Blane to the same. Recapitulates the contents of former letters. Hopes that succours will be thrown in by the 16th. Can only ascribe Ecuyer's silence to the watchfulness of the Indians.

June 10, Fort Bedford.

Ourry to the same. Letter received; has written to Ecuyer by a militia man. His scout returned after going 40 miles without seeing an Indian. Sends to Amherst statement made by John Hudson, an Indian brought in the other day. If the Province intends to raise troops it may have two companies complete here in two hours, and this he has mentioned to Governor Hamilton.

June 11, Shippensburg.

Croghan to the same. Report of the people in Path Valley being all murdered and their houses burned and that Fort Ligonier was taken and burned, but this last contradicted, and two men from Path Valley say that no Indians have been there; the people are greatly alarmed, but have returned to their houses. Has engaged a garrison for Fort Lyttleton to prevent its being taken. Is going to Fort Lyttleton and if General Amherst does not approve of the garrisoning and that he (the writer) has to pay it himself, he may discharge the men at the end of The only Indians concerned about Fort Pitt are the Delathe month. wares, and it appears that they wish to deny it, should the plot miscarry. There is nothing about the attack on Detroit but what the Delawares report. Should the outposts be taken there is no doubt the Indians will fall on the frontiers, unless there 've a sufficient check soon. If Detroit is attacked, as reported, it must fal., unless the French assist, which he believes they will not to, being convinced that the French on the Illinois have been stirring up the Indians. June 13, Carlisle.

Col. John Armstrong to Bouquet. Has only seen Trent's letter to his wife and the Indian speech to Colhoun about the Indian depredations. All things will work for good, though bloody scenes may be at the door. Is distressed for the state of the frontiers. Is setting off for the north side of the hills, to prevent a ruinous and shameful flight. Remarks on the necessity for issuing commissions should the war become general, June 14. Amboy.

Major Allan Campbell to the same. Is on the march to Philadelphia with two light companies, and has sent Lieut. Grant, the bearer of this, for orders.

June 14, Philadelphia.

Bouquet to Ecuyer. Troops are sent for his relief. His satisfaction at the measures taken to put the fort in a position of defence. Acknowledgments of the zeal and bravery of the garrison and inhabitants. Burent's services shall be recommended. The blundering of the savages in not attempting to surprise the posts; their lies about Detroit lead to the hope that Sandusky is not lost. Flatters himself that Venango and Le Bœuf can be disengaged if they have provisions. Hopes to see him as soon as possible.

June 14, Philadelphia.

Same to Blane. His post can be in no danger with the prudent measures he has taken. Has recommended the case of the people in the Troops are on the march to relieve the post. Ecuyer to Bouquet (in French). Doubts as to the letters reaching, as there are Indians enough to intercept the communication. Report that Fort Burd is abandoned; Croghan's and Thomson's houses burned. Will retain the post, and save his people, by not exposing them improperly. The fort is so crowded that he is afraid of sickness, and as the small-pox has broken out, he has built a hospital, which is ball proof. Has received news of the attack on Cuyler (p. 157). The formidable preparations at the fort described, as well as the great labour and fatigue of the men to carry on the work, but none complain. How he has arranged his garrison, and details the manner in which the work was carried on. His obligations to Mr. Trent. Hopes Detroit may be defended, but provisions and ammunition are scarce. Trusts that a large body of troops may be sent, not small detachments, which are cut off, thus sacrificing many lives. Attack by Indians on the 15th. Blane was attacked by Indians on the 2nd of June, but unsuccessfully. There appear to be few Indians about here, wishes they would try to assault, even were there 5,000, for the more they were the more would be killed. All his people are on the alert, and ready on the least sign. Has been obliged to stop building bateaux since the Indians appeared. The carpenters have been a great help on the works. Capt. Buny (?) sends word that part of his garrison—30 men—will be here shortly. Arrival of four rascals of Shawanese from the other side of the Ohio. They will receive nothing but bullets.

June 16.

Geo. Croghan to the same. Believes Fort Pitt invested, but does not believe the Indians can long remain there. The Delawares have begun this war and if the Ottawas and Chippewas attack Detroit, it will be found that the French knew of their designs, Imagines that the Delawares will cross the lakes or the Mississippi at the instigation of the French to get population and secure the Indian trade. The Delawares have been very insolent since the last treaty, and the Quakers have done more mischief than he or the other Indian agents can repair. Thinks also that if the Six Nations knew anything of it they kept it secret, to break off the connection with the Delawares, of whom they are very jealous, &c., &c.

Capt. Ecuyer to Bouquet (in French). The four Shawanese (p. 201) have had another talk with McKee, who gives credit to their statements, but he cannot believe such vagabonds. Can only see a few Indians about. They may come when they like, as the post is in good condition.

June 18, Fort Bedford.

George Croghan to the same. Cannot say how long the militia will remain, as they have but little provisions. His opinion of the origin of war. If the Delawares, Munceys and Mohicans in the different governments were seized and notice sent that they would be put to death if the war continued, he believes it would stop the shedding of innocent blood. Capt, James Robertson to the same. Arrest of a private and drummer for debt; he has been unable to get them set at liberty.

Ensign Price to the same. Arrived from LeBouf, which he abandoned on the night of the 18th. Had received word of Keiler's defeat, Another express sent off has never been heard of. The captain of a vessel reports the attack on Detroit by 1,500 Indians, who lost 40 killed; the seizure of Capt, Campbell and Lieut, McDougall, A few days before, they killed Robert Devers, Capts, Robinson and McKay and Fisher, a trader, whose wife they hanged, taking the family prisoners. Detroit had been three weeks besieged when the vessel left; the garrison were living on the few provisions Baby had. The vessel was fired on coming out of the river, and Capt. Campbell was sent on board to see if she would strike, when the lives of all on board would be spared, but he said he would fight his way out, and did so. On the 18th he (Price) was attacked and his house set on fire, so that he retreated with seven men, six of whom are still in the woods, and arrived at Venango on the 20th, when he found the block-house burned to the ground.

June 26. Fort Pitt.

Capt. Ecuyer to the same (in French). Nothing new, except a few slight alarms, until the 22nd, when the Indians were hunting some horses in the woods and fired at some cows, after which they attacked the fort an all sides, except that on the Monongahela. One militiaman killed and another wounded. Had dispersed the Indians with two cannon shots, not without effect. On the night between the 23rd and 24th they were reconnoitring the fort, and after midnight the Delawares asked to speak to McKee: a statement of the conversation is sent. The returns show three soldiers killed and one wounded; two militia men killed and two wounded. The garrison consists of a total of 330 men, with 104 women and 106 children, the whole numbering 540, of whom about 420 receive the King's provisions. Price arrived this morning with seven men of his garrison. Benjamin Gray reports the attack on Presqu'Isle; the capitulation of Christie; massacre of all, but Gray and two others, who fled to the woods. The assailants were Ottawas, Chippewas, Wyandots and Senecas.

Lieut, Blane to the same. Has had no satisfactory news from either Pittsburg or Bedford, nor any letters from him (Bouquet) since 24th Has force sufficient to defend the post, but the roads are guarded night and day by the Indians. Has agreed to pay the men from Bedford and the young servants till the arrival of reinforcements. Has made repairs, &c., so that this is the best stockaded post on the line. His care of provisions; the attack on the 21st; narrow escape of a small party from an ambuscade. Has written Ourry, but has not been able to send it. Expects the Indians to return with reinforcements to make a third trial, but their chance is smaller than ever. On the 21st the Indians killed 13 cows belonging to the inhabitants, and burned a house.

Capt. Cochrane to Bouquet. Has delivered his letters. The arrangement for forwarding such as may arrive. It is reported that nine bateaux, with a great quantity of ammunition, had been cut off on Oneda Lake.

June 28, Philadelphia.

Lieut. Dow to the same. Forwards a letter. Capt. Stuart marched this morning with his company; Major Campbell, with the remainder of the two battalions, has marched from Trenton. The people are afraid to come to town with their waggons. It is reported that Sir William Johnson has had to leave his house and is raising the militia.

June 30, Lancaster Slough and Simon to the same. Have bought the flour wanted; it will be necessary to pay for transport by the day.

July 1, Carlisle. Another letter of the same date on the same subject.

Bouquet to Governor Hamilton. Suggestions as to the best means of raising the provincial force for the defence and protection of the Province. A list of suitable places for erecting forts for the safety of the country is at the end of the letter.

July 1, Lancaster. Capt. John Stewart, 42nd Regiment, to Bouquet. Forwards letters from Amherst. Arrived this forenoon; proposes to remain for a day to rest the men. Major Campbell, with his men, will be at the sign of Admiral Warren this evening.

July 2, Philadelphia. Capt. David Hay to the same. As many artillery stores are wanted at Fort Pitt, thinks he will be of more real service by remaining at Carlisle to procure and forward them than he can be by going on. 250

July 3, Crossing at Juniata. George Wood to the same. A corporal and volunteer either killed or taken by the Indians; the report of two guns was heard after the men went out. Has sent to Ourry for a reinforcement.

July 3, Carlisle. Bouquet to Governor Hamilton. The posts at Presqu'Isle, LeBoeut and Venango cut off and the garrisons massacred, except an officer and seven men escaped from LeBoeut; Fort Pitt briskly attacked but the enemy dispersed. Fort Ligonier has also stood a vigorous attack. The Indians expect a strong reinforcement to renew the attack on these posts. If the measures he proposed (p. 242) are not adopted, the Province on this side of the Susquehanna will be ruined. York County should assist in building forts to save the harvest, and arms should be sent to defend the reapers, &c., &c.

July 3, Paxton John Harris to Bouquet. Andrew Montour arrived; he has been through the Indian villages; he finds the Indians inveterate and inclined for war. Will get him to go over, so that he can give information personally.

July 3, Paxton. Thomas Foster to the same. All the traders positively deny that they have sold powder to the Indians. Has sent men to find out, but they have been unable to do so. Strongly suspects one Capt. William Patterson.

Bouquet to Governor Hamilton. Is glad, for the sake of the frontier inhabitants, that 700 troops are to be raised. The Indians being elated with victory, it will be a risk to send up a convoy to Fort Pitt with such men as he has. If the men raised by Pennsylvania cannot be sent with the troops to the relief of Fort Pitt, then he must run all risks to relieve it. Sends Ourry's and Croghan's letters respecting the men raised for Fort Lyttleton. So soon as the remains of the two regiments arrrive, he shall proceed to Bedford.

The list of killed from 40 to within 16 miles of this town is now 19 and increases every hour. The desolation, &c., form a scene of horror impossible to describe. Inoffensive Indians brought in who should be removed to Philadelphia for their own safety. The whole country is abandoned west of this, with the harvest, cattle, &c.

How the people are to be supplied with powder. When he sent suggestions to prevent the ruin of the country, he little expected to see it so soon, nor that the Assembly would pay no regard to his representations. The few troops voted cannot be raised in time, nor can they save the people and harvest; that requires united action. Is marching to the relief of 1762. August 21, Niagara.

Vol. VII, PART 2.

Major Wilkins to Bouquet. That he has received his commission and is to remain at this post. Major Gladwin left for Detroit on the 2nd, with Captain Etherington, Jehu Hay and Jamet. Movements of other officers. (This letter should be in volume A 18-2, see letters there, written in July, 1762.)

W. Plumsted to the same. Sends a letter brought by a private hand. The difficulty of saving from the mob the Indians brought in. No further account of scalping. Is going to church to pray for the safe arrival of Plumsted and Franks. Proposal for the purchase of flour. Patrols out every night; no additional murders. Parson Thompson had preached a suitable discourse for the occasion of the War, &c., &c.

Bouquet to Governor Hamilton. The ferment of the inhabitants, who imagine Government to be insensible to their distresses. Will have strict inquiry into the crimes said to have been committed at Lancaster and shall transfer the criminals to the civil power. The law as to transport will prove useful. It would be hurtful to suffer Fort Lyttleton to be burned by the savages, as it affords shelter to Col. Armstrong's parties. Had not intended to go beyond Bedford, but being disappointed of provincial reinforcements, he shall go forward with the troops to Fort Pitt.

John Read, Commissary to Bouquet. Respecting the cause of the delay in sending the returns.

Same to the same. Sends returns with explanations.

Robert Callender to the same. How is he to settle with the people for pastures about Carlisle? Respecting money to be paid by Croghan. 334

Major Livingston to the same. Will observe instructions about provisions. Asks him to write Col. Sephen for militia to assist to garrison this fort. Is sure that the two expresses sent on the 9th are killed or taken, as the pistol lent to one of them was found as Cresap's.

Same to the same. Is sure that Capt. Barrett will not get more than 12 men; he has now eight pretty good woodmen. The bearer, William Linn and the two lads, will be of great use in sconting. Field has left for men; on his return he will march with Barrett through the woods to Ligonier. The., are 42 horses ready at the South Branch, but word has been sent that there is no escort. Governor Sharp sent some militia to scout round Fort Frederick, but will send none above that post. Has asked Col. Stephen for a company to be stationed at the Ohio store. 336

Lieut, James McDonald to the same. On Cuyler's arrival with 30 men, who had escaped to Niagara, word was sent to Christie, who sent an express to Venango to Lieut. Gordon, and Major Wilkins sent word to the General of that and of traders being killed or taken. Had been shown a letter written by Campbell, stating that he (McDonald) was going to Fort Pitt ill, but he is not going. The Army expected, which will probably meet with a warm reception, as the Indians are assembling from all quarters, probably 1,000 men, to attack. Expects to see some of them brought to punishment. Had forwarded shirts, shoes, &c., to Leslie and Etherington.

James Livingston to Bouquet. Has mustered 14 of the best men; has promised to look after the wives and children left behind. Capt. Field expected; rations for the men. Has purchased flour for the garrison; McCulloch can take 30 horses to Bedford after delivering the flour. His garrison very weak. Has advanced money to Barrett and has given lead for bullets and powder.

August 2.

Callender to the same. Nothing new since he (Bouquet) passed Three Indians report at Fort Augusta that the Delawares and Shawanese are innocent, but that the French and seven other nations are hostile; they don't know who they are, or at least don't choose to tell. Montour seems disposed to join the Indians. It was reported that the troops had been sent from Havana to England and that Amherst had sent for troops to Newfoundland, which are hourly expected at New York, Wishes he (Bouquet) were up; many who never prayed before now pray for his safe arrival. It is reported that Byrd made a vehement speech to the three Indians, and threatened to strike terror into their hearts.

August 2, Fort Pitt.

Capt. Ecuyer to the same (in French). Has received letter by Hudson, who has been three days among the enemy and will report. Has had ten days' council with the Indians, report of which McKee sends to Croghan. On the afternoon of the 28th there was a warm attack, but no mischief done, none killed, seven wounded, himself slightly; the attack lasted five days and five nights. There were certainly twenty of them killed and wounded, besides those not seen. No one allowed to fire until he could see the mark, and when they showed their noses they were shot like flies, for he has good marksmen. The enemy had crossed the Ohio when the express arrived. The scarcity of Indian corn, &c. The men are doing wonders, and are eager to fight, so that he would have been glad had the enemy made an assault. Why he did not fire the cannon when his people were attacked in the garden; the enemy has stolen all his horses and 40 cows; has only a few scalps to offer. Lighted arrows fired to burn the works, but they did not reach, two arrows fell into the fort; one wounded him in the left leg. Order by Bouquet to inspect the biscuit reported to be damaged.

August 3, Ligonier.

August 3. Fort Pitt. report is annexed.

Ecuyer to Bouquet (in French). The express has arrived and set out again. The Indians have crossed the Alleghany and have given no trouble since, but he is informed that 400 are round the fort of Delawares, Shawanese, Wyandots and Mingoes. He (Bouquet) may meet small parties on the road; any great number would be at Turtle Creek or at Chestnut Ridge, according to reports, which are probably exaggerated by fear. Hudson will report on his arrival. He reported that when the Indians read his (Bouquet's) letter, the Beaver King went to his town, and that there was a division, some of the Indians being for and others against carrying on the war, the Wyandots declaring they would never make peace, so long as one was alive, so that they must be cut to pieces. He has a large party of volunteers, all good marksmen, who have gone to take them in the rear. Expects news from Lake Erie and from the Scioto. Hopes the Wyandots and Shawanese will do like the Delawares. Suggests cutting the women and children in pieces, whilst the warriors amuse themselves round an impregnable fort, Plumsted and Franks. That General Amherst had instructed them to get all orders about provisions from him (Bouquet), &c., &c. 353 Major Allan Campbell to Bouquet, recommending a promotion Bouquet to Governor Hamilton. The attack by the Delawares, Shawanese, Wyandots and Mingoes had been completely defeated on the 5th and 6th. Before advancing to attack his troops on the march they had kept up an incessant fire on the fort for five days. Basset, who carries the dispatches, will give particulars of the bloody affair, in which the most warlike of the Indians lost their boasted claim of being invincible in the woods. If the Province would enable him to follow up the blow, he might drive them over the lakes or compel them to sue for peace, but that cannot be with prudence attempted with the few troops he has, and if the Indians have time to recover, all will have to be done over again.

Robert Boyd to Bouquet. Applies for leave, till he can make arrangements, to retain the girl who has been living with him.

Major Robert Rogers to the same. Asks that a note for £100 granted by Ensign Holmes be paid out of money in the hand of the paymaster.

Lieut, Blane to the same. Congratuations on the victory, Hopes he will no longer be left in this forlorn way, as fatigue is getting the better of him; asks therefore for a proper garrison, not less than four officers, five sergeants, six corporals, one drummer and 80 or 90 privates, for reasons given. Col. John Armstrong to the same. Congratulations on his success. A party of volunteers (between 100 and 200) are gone up the west branch of the Susquehanna; is doubtful of the result. Only single Indians seen since he (Bouquet) marched. There have been 48 or 49 of the inhabitants killed within the county. Has kept men at Lyttleton and Bedford. Young Culbertson put in irons by Ourry; hopes he has been released. The Governor has written for the Indians, who have been sent off under escort.

Bouquet to Gladwin. Is glad to hear by his letters that he was able to defend Detroit against such a multitude, the Indians having reported that it was taken. The loss of the detached posts was what might be expected, but Capt, Campbell's death affects him greatly. The steps taken to rescue the others will, he is afraid, hasten their death. He (Gladwin) is to have command of all the troops sent to Detroit to retake the country. The capture of Venango, and LeBouf, and the surprising surrender of Presqu' Isle. The attack on Fort Pitt and Ligonier described. To relieve these he was obliged to take his handful of men, the Province

Ensign Herring came up with him at the Shawanese cabins and delivered letters from Amherst, which will be sent to Ligonier by Cap. Grant of the 42nd, who goes with a strong escort, to protect 200 pack-horses loaded with flour besides bullocks and sheep. Could not leave men at Ligonier from want of provisions, but this strengthens Grant's escort, as he takes plenty of provisions back. Notes of what was done with waggons, &c. Five regiments arrived at New York from Havana; three sent to Canada, one to Albany and one to Halifax. Waggons sent to Fort Loudoun with a strong escort, but the sick and wounded cannot be sent. The temperary consequence of the success has been to stun the Indians, but if allowed to recover they will again vent their rage in defenceless families. The argument for an offensive war must continue every one not absolutely determined to act against evidence, and could reason prevail he would not renounce all hopes of assistance from the Province (Pennsylvania), as no other has so much at stake. The enemy know that whilst opposed in Maryland and Virginia by a numerous militia, they can commit depredations almost with impunity in Pennsylvania. Lieut. Blane to the same. Sends returns. Hopes that affairs at Detroit September 25, are changed for the better. Asks what garrison is to be kept here and what is to be done for barracks. There are no masons or carpenters, and the officers' barracks are not habitable without repairs. Where shall he get blankets? Two horses are sufficient to supply firewood. Small parties of the enemy discovered, but no mischief done except the killing of Hugh Henry. Want of hay will render it next to impossible to keep cattle during the winter, Bouquet to Col. Stephen. Will second his attempt to carry on offensive measures by means of the volunteers he proposes to obtain from the men under his command. Thinks the General's plan not only practicable but easy, either by land or water, a number of new bateaux being ready, wanting only men to strike a decisive blow, but no time should be lost. He (Stephen) would have command of the most promising expedition that has yet been attempted against the savages. Would answer with his head that with 700 good men he could burn and destroy all the Indian towns and settlements between this post, the lake and the Wabash, and drive the brutes beyond the Mississippi; one half should be picked men of the Province (Virginia). He (Bouquet) knows all the roads, the number of men in each town, and could furnish guides. The post at Red Stone might be restored if Virginia would garrison it.

September —, Canagogick, Christian Frederick Post to Bouquet. Shall take a tour to North and South Carolina, to preach the Gospel to the heathen. The losses he has sustained by the Indians. Thanks God for protection, &c., &c. 456

On the 3rd he reports having received a letter from Lieut. Blane, certifying the loss sustained by 19 men kept for the defence of his post. 466 George Clerk to Bouquet. Is better, but not sufficiently recovered to join.

October 4, Philadelphia, October 4, Ligonier.

October 5, Detroit. Eneas Mackay. Sending corrected returns.

A letter on the same subject, without date or signature, follows. 492 Jehu Hay to Bouquet. Owing to domestic circumstances (given) he begs that he may not be reduced, and believes he can raise £100 to get another step. Gives an account of a fight with the Indians, who attempted to surround them when sent to reconnoitre an island to see if wood could be brought from there. Defeat of the Indians with a number, unknown, killed.

October 9, Cumberland. Major Livingstone to the same. To whom he supplied provisions in accordance with instructions, in addition to what were given to poor people who would otherwise have perished, but none received provisions who could subsist themselves. His garrison is now reduced to twenty-one persons.

October 10, Winchester. Col. Adam Stephen to the same. That a respectable body of men wait orders to march to Fort Pitt to execute any offensive plan against the Indians, but it will take some time to collect them here; but for the backwardness of the gentlemen of Virginia he would have been near him (Bouquet) by this time with 1,000 chosen woodmen. Has written to Amherst, to the Governor and Council of Virginia and others, but has received no answer. If the season should be too far advanced to carry the design into effect, everything can be ready early in spring, but this is the time to distress the Indians effectually. The bastions at Fort Burd stand good, but the buildings forming the curtain are burned down; should the war continue the post must be re-established. Presumes the Virginians would garrison Fort Burd, as it would contribute to cover their northern frontier. (The letter is dated September, endorsed October, which last is the correct date).

1763. October 10, Bedford.

Capt. Ralph Phillips to Bouquet. Had taken other men than those originally named, for reasons given. Arrived on the 7th; saw no Indians. McKinley arrived this morning with his party from Fort Cumberland. He (Phillips) will march in half an hour.

October 11, Carlinle.

George Croghan to the same. Arrived to-day from the northward; all the Indians quiet but the Senecas. The Seven Nations of Canada have offered their services, but the General will neither accept their services nor those of the provincials. A few troops were killed near Nigoro lately. Has sent in his resignation and will sail for England. For the last eighteen months no attention has been paid to his reports or opinions. Thinks this Indian rising may be good for people hereafter, if they are sufficiently punished, but does not think there are troops enough to do it this fall. Has left warrants for land with his brother, and sent an order for the amount due him (Bouquet). Wishes his accounts all settled before he sails.

October 11, Bedford. Major Allan Campbell to the same. Has obeyed orders. The grand convoy is to leave this to-morrow. His health compels him to give up the command of it to Murray, to whom he has given the necessary directions, as well as those relating to the reduction and to the posts on the communication. Despairs of receiving reinforcements from the Virginians. Has broken off negotiations with Col. Reid about the purchase of his commission and will be glad to get leave to go to New York after the reduction of the two battalions. The Provinces have sent no militia to assist in garrisoning the post, and as no service can be expected from the invalids, he is at a loss how to form the garrison, so that he is obliged to trust the security of the fort to ten or twelve inhabitants, who come reluctantly at night. Some small scalping parties have been molesting this place for ten days past; they have killed one man, wounded another and carried off a boy.

October 11, Bedford. Capt. John Graham to Major Allan Campbell. Points out how necessary it is that he should go down the country to settle the accounts as paymaster.

October 12, Ligonier, Lieut. Blane to Bouquet. Returns corrected. The kind of sutler wanted at the post. Stoves wanted, there not being a single chimney in the barrack.

481

October 12, Carlisle (?), Callender to the same. Is in distress for an escort for pork, &c., to Fort Pitt, and one for Bedford; pasture for cattle getting bare. Can expect no escorts from this Province, so that he is disappointed about the flour to be sent to Bedford, although he might perhaps induce the waggoners to go that length without an escort. Is sorry that Ourry goes to Bedford, as nobody who succeeds him can do the business so well. Believes a large number of volunteers could be raised now for an expedition against the Shawanese. Movements of troops.

Major Gladwin to the same. Congratulates him on success, and has no doubt the good effects have been felt on the frontiers. Has been ordered by the General to establish outposts, which is impossible. Is tired of his command and hopes to be relieved; if not, he will leave the service, as he does not choose to be exposed to the treachery of the settlement and of the Indians. Hopes the order for reinforcements to this post may be countermanded, as it can be of no use at this season, and cannot leave Presqu'Isle if it gets there. If it comes, shall send off the R-yal Americans. 520 mandant of the Illinois; that to Pontiac is extraordinary. Indians are pressing for peace; thinks it would be for the good of the service were matters accommodated in spring, by which time the savages will be sufficiently reduced for want of powder, and does not think they will break out again if examples are made of the French who set them on. Reasons for not prosecuting the war, among others, that it will drive the Indians beyond the Mississippi, to carry hostility there. The free sale of rum will destroy them more effectually than fire or sword. If there is to be an accommodation Sir William Johnson should be sent up. A message received from Pontiac that he would send to the nations concerned in the war to bury the hatchet. Andrew, a faithful Huron, will assure the Delawares of peace, if they are quiet during the winter. If exclusive trade is given for a year or two to the merchants who suffered it will make up their loss, Page 524

Enclosed in this letter from Gladwin is copy of a letter from Pontiac to him (in French), in which he says that he accepts the offer of peace. All his young men have buried the hatchet and all the bad things that have passed should be forgotten on both sides. Gladwin's answer was, that had he begun the war he could have made peace, but as Pontiac had begun it the decision must be left to the General, 528Callender to Bouquet. J. Montresor to Capt. Basset. His state of health. The attacks on him by Indians, &c. Gladwin obliged to listen to their offers of peace, as there was only flour in the fort for 14 days, and no wood. Letters from the Illinois signed "Negon," with belts and pipes of peace to the Indians, telling them that the country was to be evacuated, but that the French would never abandon their dear children, the Indians, who would be supplied with everything needful. Reasons for making peace with the Indians similar to those in Gladwin's letter (p. 525). (The letter is written in very loose terms).

Governor was absent and nothing could be done in the affair at the present;" and at the same time orders came to disband the greater part of the militia, a genteel reprimand for sending them out of the Colony and a hint that they would not be paid, although he hopes to prevail on the Assembly next session to pay them. November 9, Bedford.

Capt. John Stewart to the same. Their arrival; report of deserters as in Ecuyer's letter. The Pittsburgh militia cannot be kept, and were of little use on the road, as they were subject to no subordination. November 13, Bedford.

Capt. Ecuyer to the same (in French). That the rear guard of Capt. Stewart's escort had discovered three parties of Indians, who killed a driver and horses and massacred two settlers in the neighbourhood of Bedford, and carried off a third. Capt. Ourry, who came to the camp, which had just been left, narrowly escaped, as the driver was killed near him: they tried to take the driver prisoner, but not being able wounded him mortally. The rear guard running up, the Indians took to the woods. Capt. Stewart sent to reconneitre the upper part of the mountain and e escort two expresses, but near Bosworth they discovered six Indians watching the camp and were followed by several others. The escert returned to camp at midnight. All were under arms. At a meeting of officers called by Stewart it was resolved to return to Bedford for a larger escort. Believes the Indians intend to attack before reaching Ligonier; they are a desolation to the frontiers. It is reported that Pennsylvania is to raise three battations and rangers. The Cherokees have refused the presents, and declare they will not treat so long as they have a man living. It is said also that the Senecas have taken up the hatchet and that it was they who made the attack at Niagara. Sends a list of deserters, 18 in all, and two prisoners, not counting those who left before marching from here. He is 22 years in service and never saw such a troop of bandits and thieves, especially the Grenadiers. He has been obliged to flog two on the field, one for trying to shoot the sergeant and another for trying to shoot himself (Ecuyer). He would have shot the man, but was afraid of wounding others round him. "In the name of God let me go and plant cabbages; it is in your power to let me go, and I will be eternally grateful for it." "(Au nom de Dieu laissez-moi aller planter de choux; c'est dans votre pouvoir, monsieur, et j'en aurai une reconnaissance éternelle)." Besides, such is the state of his health that he doubts if he can go back with the convoy. (A note is added by Forbes, that in consequence of meeting the express he had made all haste to Bedford).

November 13. Bedford.

Capt, John Stewart to the same. Account of the attack as in Ecuyer's letter. Capt, Ourry has written to Major Wilson of the Virginians for 50 or more of his volunteers, which are expected here in a few days; would have waited, but as the enemy had not been seen for some time had thought it better to proceed. J. M. Prevost. The conditions on which he is willing to accept the paymastership of the 1st Battalion Royal Americans. Page 11 Dr. Boyd to Bouquet, for three months' leave of absence.

Capt, Beatinck to the same. Has just returned from the opera; wishes he (Bouquet) were here to share in the lands granted in America; the Island of St. John given to Lord Egmont; does not see why he (Bouquet) could not also get a grant; Penn would help to get him lands in Pennsylvania; Allen's influence. His own prospects, &c.

Lieut, Leslye to the same. Must leave for New York to take the transport sailing from there. Respecting money matters relating to his command at Michillimakinak, Capt. J. M. Prevost to the same (in French). Gage writes that Bouquet will be in New York and that matters respecting the three companies here shall be settled. Asks him to write to Calcraft to accept bills drawn on him for subsistence. Thanks for the offer of the paymastership, but before accepting must go to New York, and asks leave to go. Believes that the Indians have no desire to continue hostilities since their attack at the Long Canes, where they killed 14 persons, but scalped only one. Capt, Stuart, the Indian Superintendent, says that the Creeks will deliver up the murderers, but this is doubtful; the settlers have taken refuge in Fort Augusta. The Assembly have taken no measures of defence and refuse to do business with this Governor; 100 Indians could take possession of the posts in a short time, which are destitute of everything, owing to the obstinacy of the Assembly.

Major Wilkins to the same. Sends list of discharged men; declines to purchase from Lieut, Colonel Munster, Has recommended Sergeant Major Butrick for quartermastership.

Callender to the same. The cause of the delay in the convoy for Bedford. Correspondence relative to the quarrel between Ensigns Guy and Fort Bedford. Watson and Capt. Stewart, nearly illegible from damp J. M. Prevost to Bouquet (in French). Wishes Capt. Cochrane had been here to share the annoyance he had in refusing the command to Governor Boone, who demanded it. The independent companies are the worst lot he ever saw, old drunkards, dirty, insolent and not drilled; it is said that those in the posts are better. If he can be of use as paymaster he will accept on certain conditions. Cannot get subsistence like the other troops, and has been obliged to draw for the amount, &c., &c.

Major Murray to the same. That he had marched the three companies to Lancaster on the requisition of Governor Penn. Letters respecting the quarrel between Ensigns Guy and Watson and Fort Bedford. Capt. Stewart almost illegible.

Capt. William Grant to Bouquet. By impressing horses to bring salt from Ligonier has been able to save the beef. The officers of the 42nd and 60th all sick, except himself and Lieuts. Carr, Potts and McIntosh. Two horses lost coming from Ligonier. Since writing Carr is also taken Callender to the same. Ourry writes that he is sending salt to Fort Pitt, besides forage. Respecting beef and other provisions, &c., &c.

Capt. Ecuyer to the same (in French). The dealings between him and Hay respecting stores, &c., &c. Apologises for not having given notice to him (Bouquet), in order that the stores might have been transferred to him.

question; the case of Wilkes, &c. His own treatment by the Ordnance Department. Respecting money due to deceased officers. Charges made against Monckton; the conduct of the Ministry in relation to them will make Monckton refuse any post at their hands. Believes himself that Amherst will be chosen to command in America.

Lieuts. Watson and Guy to the same. That the papers relating to the affair between them and Capt, Stewart of the 42nd had been dropped on the road in saddle bags containing clothing, &c. Asks him to represent the case to General Gage.

Lord Middleton to the same. Apologises for his long neglect in writing; has asked the Secretary at War to write Gage to give him (Bouquet) leave to come to England, where he would be eagerly welcomed, &c.

Capt. Bentinck to the same. That, at the request of Lord Middleton, the Secretary at War had sent a letter to Gage to grant him (Bouquet) leave of absence. His (Bentinck's) regiment ordered to Glasgow, where all the officers are busy recruiting.

Plumsted and Franks to the same. That the time allowed for the settlement of transport accounts is too short to give notice to the claim1764. March 11, Philadelphia.

Capt. Barnsley to Bouquet. Governor Penn will give orders for two companies to march with the convoy to Fort Pitt; is, however, afraid they may mutiny, as they have not been paid, and are in want of shoes and blankets. Colonel Armstrong's orders for the men to march. Page 62

March 14, Philadelphia.

Plumsted and Franks to the same. Respecting the accounts for transport, the money needed for various services. Provisions forwarded. The supply bill been returned by the Governor with remarks to the Assembly, which got up in a passion, the members having no end in view but to serve themselves, &c., &c.

March 15, Philadelphia.

Capt. Schlosser to the same. Summary of returns sent. Has sent Lieut. Winter to Pittsburgh, in room of Lieut. Gallot, for reasons given. Respecting men entitled to discharge. The necessity of having Capt. Etherington here. Complains that postage on letters he sends on official business is charged to him.

March 19.

Callender to the same. The two companies of provincials are ready to join; the whole company will start from Fort Loudoun on Thursday.

The arrangement he has made about loading the horses.

March 20, Charlestown.

Capt. J. M. Prevost to the same (in French). Returns sent and to be sent; the three companies not yet complete, from desertion, but if twice the number would desert they would be better. Scarcely a boat leaves that does not take some of his men away, and one who escaped into a house was shielded by upwards of 100 men, and no house can be entered without a search warrant. Asks leave to go to New York. Requires a sergeant major.

March 25, Detroit. Lieut. Jehn Hay to the same. Thanks for kindness; would accept the 2,000 acres, but does not know on what conditions or where they are to be. Gladwin has written to have him appointed Fort Major or Quartermaster General. But for his circumstances he would not stay longer than till things are settled. Owing to the doubts as to the prisoners being all in life, there are uncertainties in the returns.

March 25, Philadelphia.

Capt. Schlosser to the same. Sends returns; remarks on the cause of desertion. Gallot has left without paying his debts. Repeats his request to have Capt. Etherington here.

March 26, Shippons. Joseph Brady to Callender. Sends list of prisoners taken by the Indians, of buildings burned and of horses and cattle stolen. A party sent after them; they are certainly in the Path Valley. (No doubt the place from which the letter is dated is Shippensburg).

Alexander McKee to the same. Heard no particulars about going to Fort Pitt, so came to Lancaster a few hours after he (Bouquet) had left it. Asks for payment of his account, of which the General has said nothing.

March 31, Philadelphia.

Plumsted and Franks to the same. Their anxiety about the arrival of the convoy from Fort Loudoun. Are afraid the imprudent conduct of the Assembly will leave the frontiers open to the Indians, who seem determined to come in in numbers, and leave the Province desolate. Hopes he will get warrants to settle the accounts, as the back country is drained of all its money and the people are ravenous after it.

April 2, Fort Pitt. Capt. William Grant to the same. Had sent returns. His illness madehim employ Sergeant Burent to write; recommends strongly that he be made an officer. Sends deposition of a boy escaped from the Indians, who says their disposition is for war, but this post may defy all the Indians in the woods. How the garrison is employed. He is longing for the convoy, and hopes it will bring live cattle, as the men are already touched with scurvy.

Deposition of the boy Mathias Warren follows.

April 2, Philadelphia.

J. Mallet to Bouquet. Has arrived here with two mates, and is to be employed on medical attendance during the campaign under Bouquet's orders.

April 2, Fort Pitt. Capt. William Grant to the same. Had been serenaded by eight death howls by some Indians on the other side of the Monongahela; is afraid they have done mischief down the country. Will act with caution, but will give the rascals a blow if they put it in his power.

April 5, Ligonier. Capt. Stewart to the same. No Indians have been near here, except four who chased Mr. Sexton, as he was hunting. The convoy left on the 3rd for Fort Pitt; has kept the empty horses till the convoy returns, as it would not be safe to send them with only a corporal and four men. Has enclosed the pasture.

April 6, Ligonier, Capt. Stewart to the same. The express returned, having been fired on by a party of Indians at Laurel Hill; the express heard a woman among them call out in English. A party sent out could not see any of them, &c., &c.

April 10, Philadelphia. Bouquet to Horatio Sharpe, Lieut. Governor of Maryland. Has been appointed to command from Philadelphia southward, and calls on him for the services of the militia of his Province to join with His Majesty's troops; asks for such information as shall enable him to avoid any infraction of the provincial militia law whilst employing these troops, and also for special permission to employ them for escort duty necessary in the case of Fort Pitt, which is most important in keeping the Indians at a distance, &c.

Some Indians have been trying to get scalps or prisoners, and had to go off after killing a few cows, and the last party fired on three men, but did no harm. An escaped prisoner from Saginaw said the Indians had killed several persons this spring, and that they are coming in great numbers to take the fort. Contradictory reports of their intentions, but Gladwin is prepared for them. Some friendly Hurons have been allowed to plant corn near the fort.

The men recovered from the scurvy. The fort is impregnable, so that the Indians will give no amusement, though shots were heard last week across the Alleghany. The shots might have been a signal to Hicks, who is now in fetters; he says several Delawares died after their return home of wounds received at Edge Hill, and that he would make a good pilot. Does no believe that many Indians are on the communication, as they must be in terror of other Indians taking up the hatchet against them. Is pleased that he (Bouquet) has taken up Burent's affair; Potts sends his resignation by this express, &c., &c. Bouquet to William Rutherford. Is glad to find that the frontier people are in a favourable disposition to put an end to the war; there is no other way but by attacking the savages in their own towns. Cannot give the volunteers the pay allowed by the Province, that being against the provincial law, but those who have all at stake should not let this question of pay lead them to neglect the only opportunity of chastising these enemies and making them observe their treaties. The heavy expense to the Crown for this expedition leaves little hope of another so that if neglected the war may last till the Indians are tired of it, but with the cheerful assistance of 300 or 400 good woodmen every Indian town about the Ohio may be burned. A reward is to be offered for scalps, which may encourage the volunteers. Colonel Cresap and Major Field have offered volunteers, and other well dispended to join. Bouquet to John Harris. Cannot employ his brother. After all the boasting of the frontier men they are going as waggoners and drivers, instead of going as soldiers. People will say they found it easier to kill Indians in gaol than to fight them fairly in the woods. Is more concerned at this meanspirited behaviour and the little assistance given by the frontier inhabitants, as hereafter they may be left to fight their own battles; being exempt from taxes, Government had a particular right to their personal services, to make some amends for the large sums of money laid out for their protection. They have called loudly for a reward for scalps, but he does not hear that any of them have stirred to procure it. The Virginians have offered to serve without pay, but not a single man of this Province has done so. Sends the papers promised: "Hints how to conduct an Indian War," although he thinks there is nothing new in them. Remarks on the elections in Poland and on the Russians entering "with an army to preserve peace! and secure the freedom of the elections!" In order to meet the attacks of enemies charging him with opposing and obstructing His Majesty's service, he sets out the services he had re-dered on all occasions (specifying them), and asks him (Bouquet) to take occasion in some letter to express his sentiments on his (Franklin's) conduct in this respect.

August 16, Philadelphia. Capt. James Young to the same. That the Governor and commissioners have agreed to allow £3 per man and 20s, to the officers for raising 200 men to complete the Pennsylvanian Regiment, and have directed him to supply the money. How it may be drawn for.

Governor Fauquier to the same. His readiness to concur in every measure for the good of the service which the laws of the Colony will permit. How the volunteers are to be raised. Hopes that Col. Stephen's conduct has been misrepresented, and is disposed to believe so from receiving an application from Major Field, belonging to Col. Stephen's district, for a commission for the expedition, which he cannot grant, but he would be glad should Field be employed, as he may be useful.

Major Small to the same. Arrival of Capt. Hay, with ordnance stores and six gun carriages, which were put in position. The escort consisted of Capt. Webb and 36 Pennsylvanians. Disgraceful conduct of a sergeant's guard in allowing two captured deserters to escape under very discreditable circumstances. Vague reports of the enemy being in caves not far from here, which may reasonably be disregarded.

335

Affidavit of Richard Hogeland that Col. Stephen tried to engage him as a pilot for an expedition against the Indians, and said he was opposed to that under Bouquet, and would do all in his power to prevent men from Virginia joining it.

346

Affidavit of Tuckett Morgan as to the attempts of Col. Stephen to deter men from joining Bouquet's expedition. 347 Others to a similar effect from James Chew and Jacob Pucket. 348, 349

Capt. John Holmes to Bouquet. Offers the services of his company for the expedition.

Capt. Stewart to the same. That the last of the salt provisions will be expended by the 24th; with some flour and three cows there will be provisions for some time longer. Has found out eight or ten of the ringleaders when the men refused to be put on allowance, and shall confine them when the convoy arrives. Their reasons for refusing. Desertions, &c. Is getting wood ready to make beef casks.

Capt. Wotiams to the same. The road is made on Sideling Hill; the road up the hill was very bad, but the force with him worked so as to deserve credit. Shall go next to the foot of Ray's Hill and mend the road to Loudoun.

Lieut, McIntosh to the same. Had only marched the Royal Americans here, but as Col. Reid thought the whole party was to be brought, had sent for the men of the 42nd left at Fort Cumberland. Sends copy of the instructions he had received.

Col. Reid to the same. Has been detained, the south branch of the Juniata being impassable from the rains; many of the horses knocked up and some missing, but no provisions left behind. Has been unable to make the pack horses march more than two abreast, making a long line, which it is impossible for the escort to cover with safety. States the plan he has adopted so as to secure safety in case of being attacked, but no Indians have been seen on the line for some time back. Desertions from the provincials; men left behind from old age and infirmity, they being fit only for garrison duty, and provincials taken in their stead. Lieut. McIntosh has sent for the rest of his party, left behind through misapprehension of orders. Has been obliged to purchase powder. The detachment is encamped four miles from here and no irregularities have been committed on the march.

August 21, Halifax. J. F. W. DesBarres to Bouquet. The hard conditions on which the lands along the Shipody River have been granted to him (Bouquet), Haldimand, &c. Governor Wilmot will do all he can to meet their wishes. There are 6,000 or 7,000 acres of marsh land fit for the culture of hemp and flax, and which require no manure, as they can be flooded, leaving a layer of slime. Will be absent all the season on his survey and has already finished about 42 miles of the coast.

August 22, Fort Loudoun. Bouquet to James Young, paymaster of the Pennsylvanian troops. Is drawing on him as directed (p. 344). It would have been more satisfactory could be (Young) have paid the recruits himself.

August 22, Bedford. John Read, deputy commissary, to Bouquet. Sends a report of the steps he is taking to ascertain the quantity of stores; the means he has taken to preserve them from damage, &c.

August 22, Fort Loudoun, Bouquet to Governor Penn. Thanks for the contingent; his application though unusual was not unreasonable. The whole of the force agreed to be furnished by Pennsylvania has never been completed, and to reduce it by 200 men would be of more serious consequence than the saving of money that could be effected. Has sent Lieut, Piper for the money for recruits, as no bills can be cashed here. The field officers of the two battalions (Pennsylvanian) are much to blame for not sending a list of deserters, &c.

August 23, Fort Pitt.

Capt. Grant to Bouquet. Sends returns; no enemy seen. Desertions in spite of every method to prevent the practice. Arrival of five Indians with letter from Bradstreet, dated at Presqu'Isle, the 14th, announcing the peace with the Ohio Indians; has forwarded the letters from Bradstreet addressed to him (Bouquet) and the General. Hopes soon to eat roast beef and drink a little wine; at present there is only water. The benefits derived from the garden. Asks his acceptance of two horses, which he is sending with Mr. Potts' baggage.

August 23, Fort Pitt. Adjutant Burent to the same. Has given Mr. Potts a note of hand for £100, to pay for the adjutancy.

August 23, Bedford.

Capt. Lewis to the same. Martin McDonald, from Col. Reid's party, was, with other two men, fired on by Indians, with no damage but the loss of a horse and 100 pounds of drygoods. On his return home two horses were missing; between Shawanese Creek and Caliender's house he saw seven Indians with four loaded horses marching towards Donning Creek. On pursuing them Isaac Shemble (Stimbol in another letter) was found killed and scalped. McDonald thought there were between 30 and 40 Indians.

August 23, Bedford. Col. Stephen to the same. That in discharging men from the militia, he has kept in pay officers and men who desire to go on the expedition, and has stated his belief that the Colony will take notice of their services, and that there is a chance of plunder, &c., with other reasons

Lieut, McIntosh to Bouquet. 375). Capt. Lymes (or Symes) could not get the inhabitants to pursue the Indians. The express will give further intelligence. There will be a deficiency in stores, particularly liquor. The detachment of the 42nd has joined. Col. Lewis to the same. Has received a letter from Governor August 25, Augusta. Fauquier; though he (Lewis) cannot march the 550 men to the enemy's country, yet is determined he (Bouquet) shall have some of them. Has directed some officers who are hearty in the cause to march to his assistance with 150 men and as many volunteers as can be got. The steps he is taking to secure volunteers. Hopes to be able to join himself. Col. McNeill will command whatever number goes, and it is hoped he will have an opportunity to distinguish himself. Capt. Stewart to the same, Arrival of Col. Reid with convoy; the August 25, Legonier. quantity of provisions to be left is not yet settled. Potts reports that peace has been made; nobody here believes it will be lasting. Col. Reid to the same. Sends Bradstreet's dispatches; Potts to travel August 25, Ligonier. day and night to deliver them. Does not find in the terms of peace that the ringleaders are to be delivered or any satisfaction given; hopes the peace will not be ratified, as it can be of no long duration, but that examples may be made. The convoy shall proceed after leaving the proportion of provisions here. Will be on his guard against the perfidy August 26, General Stanwix to the same. Asks him to accept a deputy in room London. of Mr. Jackson, chaplain to the 1st Battalion Royal Americans. Capt. Webb to the same. Was shocked when put under arrest on August 26, Fort Loudoun account of the escape of prisoners. Is not conscious of having erred in August 26, John Read, commissary, to the same. Sends return of provisions at Bedford. Fort Cumberland. Has brought new bags, &c. August 26, Capt, McClellan to the same. Sends for ammunition for the two Fort Fredecompanies of volunteers. The greater part of them will be here next week and require provisions, which can be got here as cheaply as anywhere. August 26, Bedford. Lieut, McIntosh to the same. Sent express for Commissary Read. and sends on letters. The escort which passed drew 135 pounds of powder, leaving 63 pounds of the last powder in store. August 28. Robert Leake to the same. Has recommended to the General the New York. purchase of 200 head of cattle for winter provisions, but the General declines to alter the agreement already made. Is sorry for Read's conduct; has sent another commissary, Bayley, to Fort Loudoun. Has made every effort to get good storehouses there. Order to Bayley to make arrangements for victualling men from Virginia. Lieut, Potts to Bouquet. Was too fatigued to carry on the packet, Peter Bard to the same. Same arrival of provincial stores at Loudoun; has supplied Col. Armstrong with articles for his two companies, including arms and ammunition; they are now completely equipped, and most of them have marched. Now looking for the Virginians. His own ill state of health. Had made up the deficiency in arms by getting those in possesion of Butler, the gunsmith.

1764. August 30, Fort Pitt,

Col. Reid to Bouquet. The convoy has arrived. An exact account of the provisions received has been sent to Capt. B. rusley. The drivers report 17 bullocks and 19 sheep lost on the road, but they hope to recover some of them. The care taken by Prather of the provisions; even the officers at this post were reduced to drink water for six weeks. Notwithstanding Bradstreet's peace, supposes that he (Bouquet) would prefer to have a number victualled at Ligonier or Bedford rather than here, where the rations cost more.

August 30, Fort LouStatement of provisions to be supplied to the different posts, the columns being headed: "Flour," "Meat for Camp," "Meat for Winter." 390 James Young, paymaster, to Bouquet. Has paid Lieut, John Piper Governor Penn to the same. Has laid the list of deserters before the commissioners, who will not go to the expense of apprehending them, as they had given him (Bouquet) power to supply their places. Wishes him success in Virginia but is afraid this peace of Bradstreet's will cause the expedition to end at Pittsburg; would have preferred to see the Indians chastised.

August 31, Fort Loudoun. Capt. Barnsley to the same. That Brown has arrived from Virginia, after completing the business he was sent on. Col. Lewis has acted to the utmost of his power for the good of the expedition. Sends invoices of the convoys.

Sir William Johnson to Bouquet. Sends a party of Indians of both the Mohawk castles, to be joined by others on the Susquehanna, to assist in the expedition. The Indians dislike to be long in a fixed place. If Bradstreet can make a good push into the enemy's country it will take off their attention and alarm them. His detention at Niagara prevented him sending as many Indians as he otherwise could have done. Has settled affairs with the western Indians and made peace with the Senecas; their concessions.

September 2, Fort Pitt. Col. Reid to the same. Hopes that the feeling of indignation at the pusillanimous treaty will rouse the General to refuse to ratify it till satisfaction is obtained. Remarks on the peace, which is discussed in very strong terms.

September 3.

Intelligence from Fort Cumberland of the advance of Indians, whom Lieut. McDonald has gone out to meet. Lieut. Sealy writes to Major Livingston, sending copy of McDonald's letter.

September 3, Lancaster. Edward Shippen to Bouquet. Asks his influence to get his claim settled for services done in Stanwix time, General Gage having refused to do so, referring him to England.

September 4, Fort Pitt.

Capt. Grant to the same. Is grateful for the satisfaction expressed with his conduct. The result of this year's crop; it would have been ten times more but for the destruction by vermin. The trouble caused by infamous women. Has confined a soldier for mutiny.

September 4, Fort Pitt. T. R. (Thomas Rutherford). Describes the fort, the completion of the redoubts and the parade; the appearance of the gardens and amount of crops in the field, &c. Has ordered hay to be made. Calls attention to a petition prepared by the soldiers stating grievances, for which he proposes certain measures of redress. Soldier missing.

Cpten > 6, Ligor t. Stewart to the same. Two expresses for Fort Pitt have arrived of again. Other two arrived from there at 7, having left it at 6 is morning; they go on again in the morning. The mutineers have same flogged. The hay and forage are not appraised yet, but shall only be applied to the King's use. Note of stores, &c. 417

September 9, Fort Loudoun. Capt. Barnsley to the same. Had detained Lieut. Piper till he could send him with an escort, as he had the money with him. Is getting in the cattle by degrees, and hopes to get them all; he has offered a reward for each head. Robertson says nothing about a new fort or storehouses; he has lodged money in Philadelphia, to make up the £10,000, but how it is to be got here he (Barnsley) does not know, unless he goes for it himself. So soon as the hunters who are after the bullocks return he shall send off the droves.

September 11, New York.

Col. Eyre to the same. To settle with Lieut. Pfyster for his pay. Owing to the peace concluded with the Indians by Bradstreet it is uncertain if the expedition will proceed against them.

September 12 Ligonier, Bouquet to Governor Penn. The £500 received. Deserters think themselves so certain of impunity that they desert openly with arms and baggage, and some had the impudence to shoot two oxen wantonly. The Light Horse carry off their horses and accoutrements; and if the civil power does not interfere he does not know where it will end. No certain return of the number to be expected from Virginia.

September 13, Williamsburgh. Governor Fauquier to Bouquet, Has fixed on the last day of the general court for hearing the evidence on the charge against Col. Stephen of obstructing the expedition, September 15, Charlestown.

Capt. Cochrane to the same. Various documents, orders, returns, &c., received and sent. Remarks on returns. The Governor and Assembly have agreed to repair the forts; hopes to get them built of stone. A prudent officer needed at Frederica; arrangements about paying the sergeant there in the meantime. Price, who commands at Fort Prince George, has quarrelled with the Lieut. Governor, who throws obstacles in the way, by refusing to allow any interference with the Indians who, he maintains, are under his charge, notwithstanding the General's orders. Price's obstinacy. Keough put in arrest for disobedience and insolence, and for refusal to account for his proceedings. Will set out for Georgia in a few days to settle with the Governor about the forts in that Province.

September 15, New York.

G. Maturin to the same. Has received and delivered letters. Those for Colonel Haldimand shall be sent to Canada by the first opportunity.

September 16, Fort Pitt (?).

Col. Reid to the same. Magee, an express sent to Bradstreet, has returned, having discovered that Brown, one of the former expresses, had been murdered by the savages and his head stuck on a pole in the middle of the road; Lowrey made prisoner. The only way to send expresses will be by an escort of 20 or 30 light horse. Bradstreet overreached by the Indians till they could dispose of their wives and children. Mc-

B. Franklin to Bouquet. His attendance at the Assembly has prevented him writing. His (Bouquet's) letter full and satisfactory (see p. 342); asks him to take an opportunity to let the Secretary of State know of his (Franklin's) services to the Crown. Reference to a change of the constitution. Sends extracts from Voltaire's pamphlet on religious toleration.

GENERAL CORRESPONDENCE.

1764-1765.

A. 21.

1.

B. M. 21651.

December 7, London.

Capt. Bentinek to Bouquet (in French). Private and political news. The officers, non-commissioned officers and drummers of the regiment (Royal Americans) have arrived, all the privates being left in America to complete the 40th and 45th Regiments. There must, therefore, be recruiting in Scotland, the headquarters being at Glasgow. He (Bentinck) has been appointed by General Erskine to be at the head of the recruiting service in England. Report given him by General Monekton, that he (Bouquet) intends to resign. Messages from Capt. Holland, who is always at the Duke of Richmond's; he expects to leave in January for America, where he is to be Surveyor-General. Offers to act for him either here or in Holland. His letters to be addressed to the Duke of Portland. Munster lately arrived from America, has married Miss Pratt, after twelve month's courtship. She is old and ugly and has £8,000 sterling in the bank.

August 7, Pittsburgh.

Col. John McNeill to Bouquet. There being no appearance of his getting well soon, has sent off the party. If a peace is made hostages should be demanded, and that Virginia shall have the right to place a garrison on the new river, &c., &c.

October 1, Ligonier. Ensign John Folmer to Bouquet. Arrival of a white man dressed like an Indian, who gives his name as Robert Bell, made prisoner in Forbes' campaign. He was brought by two Indians to steal horses, but made his escape.

October 3, Ligonier. Same to the same. The prisoner (Bell) sent off with two light horsemen. One horse stolen and another killed by Indians. Has assisted the inhabitants to reap their oats. Want of forage for the borses arriving October 4, Bushy Run.

Capt. Green to the same. The prisoner Bell was taken within three miles of his (Green's) house and his father killed at the same time, in Lancaster County, Hanover Township. The good character of all Bell's relations.

October 4, Fort Pitt.

Statement by James Bell of his capture; what happened to him among the Indians and how he escaped.

October 4, Carlisle. Letter from Capt. Hay transmitting the statement, Peter Bard to Bouquet. That his health will not permit him to wait longer for instructions. Has packed the clothing and left the key with
Col. Armstrong, who will attend to orders.

October 6, Fort Pitt. John Gough to Peter Hay. That the first tickets for bread for Blane and Shepherd's pack-horse men were only issued for two days, but on the third day additional tickets were issued which the men neglected coming for.

Capt. David Hay to Bouquet. Cows sent; none of the stray bullocks seen. Is afraid of Col. McNeill's life, he is so ill; his volunteers march this morning. The prisoner Bell seems to be an idiot and can give no information. How the officers, &c., are employed.

October 8. Quebec. Capt. Turnbull to the same. Forwards a communication from Mr. Guinans, banker in London, and makes offer of services.

October 9, Fort Pitt. Capt. David Hay to the same. Sends dispatches from the General. The Maryland volunteers were yesterday within seven miles of the post, and are just arrived—two captains, six subalterns and 49 privates; very fine fellows. Will try to have their muskets repaired, so that they can set off, which they are eager to do. A captain and two men missing. 14

October 10, Charlestown. Capt. Cochrane to the same. Illness of the Lieut. Governor and bad weather have kept him here. Things going on well and Price sensible of his mistakes. Is to visit the posts and look for a site to build the new fort in room of Fort Moore. Has orders not to recruit; has discharged a man.

October 15, Sandusky. Lieut. McDougall to the same. Sends returns. Cannot march to Secota Plains; it is probable that Bradstreet will order him to go from Presqu' Isle to Fort Pitt. Repeats former information about clothing, &c.

October 15, Sandusky. Lieut. Dow to the same. Polite messages. Killbuck was here on the 1st and was to have returned on the 8th with 10 chiefs, but did not comes so that he (Dow) was disappointed in the expectation of going to Fort Pitt. The officers with the Royal Americans. Detroit is the best country he has seen in America, but the inhabitants the poorest rascals, &c., &c.

October 15, Fort Lcudoun. John Prentice to the same. The Indians, when he was a prisoner, would have accepted peace on any terms, and were so conscious of their bad conduct that they doubted if it could be granted, and then only on condition of restoring all the horses and goods they had stolen. The whole strength of the Wyandots at Sandusky does not exceed 90 or 100 fighting men.

October 17, Near Sandusky Lake.

Col. Bradstreet to the same. Dispatches received by the two Indians &c. Had sent the tenour of Gage's instructions respecting peace as far as the Illinois, the Bay, &c. Does not believe, after being a month on the lake, &c., that it is possible to execute Gage's orders. The doubtful condition of various tribes. Indian scouts returned and others to be sent off. If these people do not continue the war it must be from bad management (on the part of the British officers). Cannot get a faithful messenger or he would write more plainly, as the enemy have prisoners who read English.

October 18, Philadelphia.

Sergt. Berfield to the same. Has continued Joseph Connor on pay, since he delivered himself up, after deserting.

Asks for further directions.

October 29, Pittsburg. Lieut. Col. McNeill to the same. Thanks for sympathy in his illness. Is happy to find that the volunteers please him; the good character of Capt. Lewis. Congratulates him on the success already met with, as shown by the arrival of 19 prisoners given up without fee or reward. Respecting his suggestion as to hostages from the Indians.

October 29, Fort Pitt. Capt. David Hay to the same. Arrival of prisoners from the Indians with Lieut. Winter. Will take care of a little girl unknown and try to find her relations. Has sent the tents, &c., delivered by Lieut. Winter, and the other things asked for. Is glad that the stubborn necks of the Indians are at last bent, and hopes he will give peace to a groaning people.

1764. October 30, Ligonier.

Capt. Green to Bouquet. The soldiers here are well; has built two bridges that he thinks will resist all floods. The garrison is supplied with provisions for the winter, &c., &c.

October 31, Fort Loudoun.

Capt. Barnsley to the same. Has sent flour and beef to the different posts, also shoes, shoe packs and forage. Hopes to see him return soon, covered with laurels. Has given Mr. Furmier easy rates by the returning waggons for his hides. As soon as the horses from Virginia are rested they shall be sent forward to Fort Pitt. Has done everything he could for the two horsemasters, Crawford and Neville.

Capt. David Hay to the same. Sends the General's dispatches. don succeeds Eyre in command of the Royal Engineers.

Lieut. Carre to the same. His friends have obtained leave of absence for him; asks for his recommendation to the General to give his sanction.

Return of the effectives in Bouquet's army. The total is 1174, including 4 sick; regulars, and provincials are included. 32

Lord Middleton to Bouquet. Apologies for not writing. Is sorry to find he is going on so troublesome a command against the Ohio Indians, but is satisfied he would acquire new honours. The letter details his building operations, family news, &c. 33

Thomas Smallman to the same. Arrival of a French officer San Ceurs (Sanscœur?) to excite the Shawanese to hostility; a trader coming from the Illinois to supply them with ammunition. The officer has gone to Waketancka with the same object. Other proceedings of the French emissaries among the Shawanese and Delawares.

Brigade Major Small to Capt. Buford, of the Pennsylvanians. Instructions to escort prisoners delivered by the Indians, pack horses, &c. The prisoners are 110 in number, with a particular description of each, so that the parents and friends of those who can give no account of themselves may be able to claim them. Some who are attached to the Indians may try to escape; this to be prevented. The prisoners, pack horses and arms, &c., in possession of the drivers to be delivered at Fort Pitt. 39

Bouquet to Capt. David Hay. Has received dispatches; the detachment with horses not yet arrived Has sent off Blueford (Buford) with the prisoners to Fort Pitt; they are to be closely watched, as some might run away; others may walk about the fort and assist in taking care of the rest. What is to be done with the escort. An officer of the Pennsylvanians is sent to Fort Pitt under arrest. The Delawares have delivered all their prisoners; the Shawanese have done nothing yet; will soon know what is to be done with them. The male and female prisoners to be kept separate.

Capt. Barnsley to Bouquet. Thanks for kindness received. Arrival of pack horses; a number left on the road. Crawford, with the Virginian horses, only arrived yesterday; how and when he will go forward. Crawford, in charge of the horses, had been delayed to give evidence in the case of Col. Stephen; 100 witnesses were there against him, but he did not attend. The people dislike him, and now rip up old sores. Fox appointed Speaker. Franklin goes home to assist the agent. It is believed that the proprietor has consented to be taxed with the rest of the people. The Cumberland people have sent an address to their representative, Montgomery; the journeymen tailors of Philadelphia have also sent him an address, which has made him very angry, he being originally of that trade.

November 13, Carlisle. Edward Ward to the same. If Smallman is not delivered up, asks him to use his interest to effect his deliverance. Dennis Cuchen (Croghan) has gone to look after debts due; recommends him.

November 14, Winchester.

Thomas Rutherford to Barnsley. The difficulties he met with in establishing the charge against Stephen. Asks details respecting the contract entered into by Stephen for flour.

November 15, Muskingum.

Bouquet to Col. McNeill. The Shawanese attempt to resist, but are convinced of their mistake; the terms of their submission, namely, to deliver all prisoners, to give hostages and to send deputies to make peace with Sir William Johnson. The prisoners received are sent to Fort Pitt under escort of Capt. Lewis and his corps, who have given every satisfaction; has recommended all the Virginian troops to Governor Fauquier, and begged he would recommend them to the House for their pay; if refused, he shall himself pay the men. Orders concerning pack horses. He will return with the army when the prisoners of Wicatamisca are received; it is the most considerable town of the Shawanese

November 15, Muskingum. Same to Capt. David Hay. Prisoners sent by Capt. Lewis. On receipt he is to deliver all those belonging to Virginia, with descriptive lists to be signed and to be sent to him (Bouquet). Horses to be provided and other necessaries. The prisoners from Hampshire county and district to be delivered to Major Field. The Pennsylvanian officer and men to join the garrison.

November 15, Muskingum. Same to Governor Sharpe. The complete success of the expedition and the terms of submission by the Mingoes, Delawares and Shawanese, Sends report of the proceedings. Requests him to order a suspension of arms; the inhabitants may return to their plantations in safety. Upwards of 200 prisoners already received; some of them have been so long with the Indians that they are reluctant to leave and have to be guarded. The Mingoes and Delawares have not only delivered their prisoners, but even their own children born to whitewomen. The obstinacy of the Shawanese; the fear that they might massacre 150 prisoners prevented speedy chastisement, but they finally submitted. Recommends the volunteers for their public spirit; it would be agreeable to him if the Assembly gave them some gratification.

November 30, Ourry to Bouquet. Is within five miles of Tuscarawas, where he over-Camp No. 1. took the light horse and found Williams distressed with gout; has lent him two horses to replace others. Williams has not slept for five days and four nights, yet in the intervals of pain he is in tolerable spirits, Capt. Barnsley to the same. Sends Rutherford's letter respecting November 20, Stephen's flour transactions. Returns with remarks. Lieut. Guy's financial ruin, his mother having died and his father married again and wasting the estate.

Same to the same. Dispatches from General Gage will be forwarded. November 21, Has had no answer to his statement that he would require £40,000; remarks on the financial position. November 23, Major Small to the same. Has arrived here in 96 hours from Muskingum. The baggage horses and some of the light horses were not well able to perform their task, &c.

Bouquet to Sir William Johnson. The troops returned here on the 27th; flight of Shawanese hostages. Notice of the peace sent to the Miamis. Why he allowed the Shawanese deputies to go to him (Sir William) to treat, before all the prisoners are delivered, &c., &c.

D. Brehm to Bouquet. Offers to exchange from full to half pay for £220 sterling, as he cannot bear to be in a frontier post for life, reminding him of Siberia.

Bouquet to Sir William Johnson. Since writting on the 30th, there has been a revolution in Indian affairs. The Shawanese deputies have fled to their own towns. The Delawares have sent a message to send wiser men instead of them, and he (Bouquet) has added his own message to the same effect.

Capt. Barnsley to Bouquet. Respecting accounts, money matters and December 3, Fort Loucontracts. doun. December 6.

Sir William Johnson to Bouquet. Is very anxious for the success of Johnson Hall, the expedition. Hopes the Mohawks and white men had joined, whom he sent after his return from Niagara, but is afraid they may have been tampered with. Is persuaded that he will do all in his power to render the expedition successful, although he is aware of the difficulties caused by the transactions of the other army. Fears for the consequence of the words subjection and domination, said to be acknowledged by the Ottawas and Chipewas. They have no words to express anything like either, and their jealousy was aroused. Would rather make such terms as they would keep than such as they have an invincible aversion to. The emigrants to the Ohio should join their own nations, as being without chiefs they fall into evil schemes, but their removal must be the work of time. The duties of the Indian Superintendent, &c.

December 13, New York. Lieut. McDougall to the same. Respecting Alexander Dixon, who had leave to retire on getting another man, which he did, &c. Is waiting the arrival of Capts. Prevost and Barnsley.

December 14.

Capt, Byers to Bouquet. Has received his letter and will be with him to-morrow if the weather permits.

December 15. Williamsburgh. Governor Fauquier to the same. His sense of the services rendered. The Assembly return thanks, and desire him (the Governor) in his communication to the Board of Trade to recommend Bouquet's services. Encloses the resolves of the Assembly respecting the pay of the men. Sends the resolutions of the Council and the proceedings of the House of Burgesses in relation to the charges against Stephen, and a remark of the latter.

December 16,

Capt. Buford to the same. Has delivered all the captives to their friends except five left with Col. Abraham Hight, who is to send word to their friends. Three horses stolen are in possession of the thieves, who live near Fort Cumberland; it is hoped the horses will be secured and returned to their owners.

December 16, Lancaster, James Young to the same. His arrangements for paying the provincial troops who were on the expedition.

December 17, Johnson Hall.

Sir William Johnson to the same. Congratulates him on his success, &c. Nothing but his penetrating into the heart of the enemy's country could have produced the advantage acquired. Will give the Delawares proofs of British generosity. Is not surprised the Shawanese stood out so long, being supplied by the French; whenever Illinois is taken possession of that resource must end. The terms on which he would enter into a treaty with the Indians. Will provide for Owens; Artel's [Hertel] good conduct and that of the Caughnawaga Indians with him. Shall confer with the Six Nations as to the removal of those of them who are about the Ohio; they went of their own choice, and bear a bad name amount their people.

December 17, Lancaster. Capt. W. Prevost to the same. Explains his reasons for leaving the post before his (Bouquet's) arrival. January 22, Charlestown. Capt. Cochrane to the same. The officers at posts acting to his satisfaction, but he is distressed for want of officers and men; it is important to have a strong garrison at the spot he has selected to build a fort, which is on the savannah, above Long Canes. Ensign Keough refuses to obey orders, and has been under arrest since September, Would be glad to have Lieut. Brehm, as he would be of great use in his capacity of engineer. Remarks on Caffy, made sergeant, and on the dishonest character of Shryock, a discharged man. Returns sent. His pleasure at hearing of his (Bouquet's) prudence and success in dealing with the Delawares and Shawanese. Has applied for leave of absence.

January 24, Lancaster. Capt. Schlosser to the same. Returns sent with remarks. The detachment would be in distress if ordered to march, as there is no money and the men in debt. Clothing ready, but the arms not in good condition, deficiencies being noted.

January 31, Fort Pitt. Capt. W. Murray to the same. Mohawks who had gone with a message to the Shawanese had returned, having met the Virginians from the 16th Encampment, with the chiefs, they having gone to look after their relations, prisoners with the Shawanese. They, with the chiefs, returned. Benewiscin, the chief expressed his satisfaction at the peace; he had assisted the Virginians whilst in his country as he promised. The Virginians say that he was of great service and hunted for them or they would have perished in the woods. Nine prisoners recovered, but frost bitten, so that they could not proceed beyond Big Beaver Creek; assistance sent to bring them in. The whole of them in a bad state of health. The Mohawks have returned home. Owing to the severity of the weather the captives cannot be got till spring, but hostages will be sent.

Hopes he (Bouquet) will be enabled to pay the officers and men. Thanks for his not only strictly complying with but far exceeding the engagements he (Lewis) had entered into with the men. Shall be glad to receive information about the Shawanese and Mingoes. The illness of Col. McNeil. Hopes that the expenses may be paid of McClanahan who is going to have the pay bills settled.

February 4, Stenton. James Donaldson to the same. States his services and leaves it to him (Bouquet) to fix the amount to be paid him for acting as surgeon to the volunteers from Virginia.

February 4, Bedford.

Lieut. McCulloch to the same. Sends report that the Shawanese brought nine prisoners to Fort Pitt. The inhabitants have been supplying the troops with fuel, in consequence of the inadequate allowance during the severe weather. The men of the 42nd who came with the returns are still here, frost-bitten, but not dangerously.

February 5.

Lemuel Barritt to the same. Prays for an allowance for losses sustained by him and his party of rangers at the battle of Bushy Run, on the 5th of August, 1764.

List follows.

February 5, London, Potts to the same. His pleasure at the news of the success over the Delawares, &c.; the credit he (Bouquet) and his little army is receiving. Thinks he should be here to receive his promotion. Asks for his interest to obtain promotion for reasons given. Had sent a memorial to the Secretary at War, of which he encloses a copy. Asks him to recommend the issue of a certificate by General Gage of his services.

February 11, Lancaster.

Capt. Schlosser to the same. The proposal to enlist recruits could easily be executed, but not without money. Will have the invalids supplied like the other soldiers. Money matters. Capt. Harry Gordon to the same. Has been sent for respecting re-arrangement of the engineer service, which will suspend operations this year, but enable them to be carried on with more vigour next year. Asks him to certify the loss of three horses and baggage cart in the campaign of 1758. His demand for the pay, &c., of men taken prisoners by Indians in 1762. The question who is entitled to the perquisites of the companies in a regiment is discussed at great length. The General's congratulations on the good news from Fort Pitt.

March 7, Bedford. Lieut. McCulloch to the same. The convoy with Indian presents attacked by a gang disguised by having their faces blackened; the attack was made 12 miles on this side of Fort Loudoun. The rascals will, no doubt, be caught, and an example is needed in this Province. The commanding officer at Fort Loudoun reports that 200 men were in arms to stop the goods for the Indians from coming up, and that 100 Virginians were to waylay the convoy between Loudoun and this post.

March 7, New York. Capt. Harry Gordon to the same. Sends the memorial he is to send to the Ordnance; after signing certificate asks him to enclose memorial, &c., and forward them. Certificate of the loss of baggage, &c., in 1755, under Braddock, is appended.

Lieut. Churles Grant to Bouquet. The country people are greatly alarmed at the goods going up to Groghan for the Indians; about 100 armed men followed the convoy to Great Cove, killed three horses, wounded three more, and burned 63 loads of goods. A party sent out who took some prisoners, whom the country people tried to rescue; the prisoners are left in the fort as the country people are rising in arms, determined to rescue them if possible, and threaten to burn the fort. Had all his men under arms last night.

March 10, New Yorks Capt. Harry Gordon to the same. Thanks for and offers of service, &c. His demand (p. 230) affects all the captains in the service. Did the riot on the frontiers arise from Groghan regarding the interest of his friends more than the King's service? Is sorry that this should be another cause of displementer at his conduct; remarks on his proceedings. Strange accounts from England. "There is no minority, about texing and playing the Devil with poor North Amories. That proud island I knew would be in a flame at their addresses from this and other Colonies. I knew it would and that their jehu-like manner would never do." Had been promised to be remembered, but has had too many disappointments to trust that. His stay here has deprived him of seeing the survey made on the Susquehanna.

Callender to the same. Account of the attack on the convoy (p. 235). It is not believed the people attacking were Virginians. Has had no answer about the plantation. The prisoners made by the sergeant's party of those attacking the convoy have been bailed. What is to be done with the rifles taken from the prisoners? Mr. Grant and Justice Maxwell have behaved well in the affair. Justice Smith has rather incited this mad people. If speedy measures are not taken to suppress those people he shall sell every foot of land he has, as no man's property sate as affairs are.

Capt. Barnsley to the same. Difficulty of settling the horsemaster's accounts from the want of papers which were taken charge of by Ourry, for which no receipts were given. Asks for instructions. About £8,000 will be wanted to settle the accounts. Refers to the riots. About the settlement of accounts.

Col. Reid to the same. The conduct of the Shawanese satisfactory. The person he (Bouquet) hints at is not suspected without reason. He exposed himself lately to rebuke when intoxicated for attacking him (Bouquet), but no notice need be taken of him; the news from Fort Pitt may be his punishment. Hopes soon to see him.

George Coghan to the same, Respecting the attack on the goods; if unpunished, all civil and military rule must cease. What the Indians will think if traders are not allowed to come among them.

Capt. Cochrane to the same. Thanks for his kind letter. Has visited all the posts but Frederica, which is said to be 150 miles beyond Savananh, and to go there would have made him too late to report to the Lieut. Governor before the meeting of the Assembly. Price's conduct to the Lieut. Governor completely changed since he was convinced of his error; the Lieut, Governor has now the greatest confidence in him. The difficulty of finding a post not commanded by a higher ground. The place for the new fort, in place of Fort Moore, is on the River Savannah, about 45 miles above Augusta; the Province wants it built of stone. Description follows. Had recommended Brehm to be engineer. Further about Keough's behaviour; need of an officer at Frederica; his own multifiarious duties. About discharges so that he may get rid of useless men. Has written for leave of absence. The forts must be large to be a refuge for the inhabitants; otherwise block houses would do. The temper of the Province; the infection catching from the north; the Committee thought it needless to build forts, but the Assembly believed the Province bound in honour to do so, but they will no longer furnish transport. The confusion in the regimental accounts.

March 14, New York. Capt. J. M. Prevost to Bouquet. Introduces a gentleman well acquainted with Nova Scotia. Complaints of economy introduced in every branch, which will have a bad effect on the service. Is glad to hear that the Shawanese have delivered up their prisoners; this will stop the mouths of detractors.

March 16, Lancaster. Capt. Schlosser to the same. Respecting men who are enlisted and to be promoted to the rank of sergeants as vacancies occur. Hopes that the insurrection will not cause the troops to be turned back; it is disagreeable to be employed against the King's subjects, as the officer's hands are tied in the execution of duty; hopes, if required, that sufficient civil power will also be sent. Sends list of effectives and of the progress of recruiting, &c. 261

Capt. Schlosser to the same. Has no discharges left, so must send men to Philadelphia to be discharged there. A soldier, guilty of theft, has deserted.

March 24, Fort Pitt. Capt. Murray to the same. Several Indians, but none of the chiefs, have come to Mr. Croghan. Returns sent. Pass given to Mr. Syms at Bedford to bring up liquor; the snow is so deep that he is afraid of a flood; is taking precautions against damage.

March 25, Lancaster. Capt. Schlosser to the same. Sends two men to be discharged. Is not responsible for the discharge of Woodington; knows he (Schlosser) has been guilty of errors, but cannot be responsible for those of others, and gives the reasons for several discharges. It is unfortunate the regiment has not one friend to increase it by draughts from other regiments, as has been the case with the second battalion. Has sent a guard for the Governor, but could not go himself, being confined to bed. Has been treated civilly by the Governor on sending for orders; the detachment shall be ready to march when ordered by the Governor, but there are not above 90, the bad weather having caused sickness.

March 26, Lancaster. The same to the same. Sends returns. Is sorry that no ammunition, buckshot or flints have been sent. The Governor went off in such a hurry there was no time to ask him for them; there is plenty for sale here, but that would involve the advance of money which there is no certainty of getting back.

March 26, Fort Augusta.

Ensign Keough to the same. Had applied for a court martial, which the General had refused. Asked to be sent to another post, as Cochrane makes his life disagreeable.

March 28, Bedford, Nathan McCulloch to the same. Sends returns, copies of orders and instructions left with him, &c. The gratification of the inhabitants of Bedford at being thanked for the supply of firewood, &c., to the garrison. They have treated the troops well and are always ready to help them. The infamous character of Rachel Sly; Murray has got over his infatuation.

Capt. J. M. Prevost to the same. Respecting the packets. The unfortunate result of land speculations in South Carolina. Contingent accounts; failures in London; general stagnation of trade.

May 12, Fort Pitt. George Croghan to Bouquet. Has been detained here owing to the jealousies and disputes among the Indians, two tribes of the Delawares pretending that one of their people had been up to heaven and was directed there to make peace with the Quakers. LETTERS FROM COLONEL BOUQUET TO VARIOUS PERSONS.

1757-1759,

Vol. I.

A. 22.

B. M. 21652.

1758. April 23, New York.

Bouquet to Forbes (in French). Arrived on the 19th with four companies of the Royal Americans; the fifth arrived on the 21st. The Major's company remains here if the four others go to Philadelphia. Asks leave to remain a few days at Philadelphia to obtain the necessaries that could not be found in Charles Town. Is detained here for 8 or 10 days to settle accounts.

April 28, New York. The same to the same (in French). Asks leave to send Duplessis to Louisbourg, as he has a commission from the General and is a young man of talent for engineering, so that he (Bouquet) would wish him to see siege operations.

May 4, New York. The same to the same (in French.) Has been longer detained by accounts than he wished. The General has ordered the artillery stores and ammunition for his (Forbes) expedition, there being no news of these coming from Europe, which will cause longer delay to him (Bouquet). Thinks it would be well to have bombs to fit the mortar at Philadelphia, which he thinks is 8 inches.

May 20, Lancaster. The same to Allen. Asks him to look after a new pair of riding breeches, as he was now confined to the house, having seen some ladies laugh and blush at his rags. Intercedes for McLean, a prisoner, with reasons for urging elemency. Proposes to set out for Carlisle on Tuesday.

May 20, Lancaster. "Send me my breeches and my prisoner they are both greatly wanted". 5
The same to Forbes. Had arrived this morning; Young waiting for money to clear Armstrong's battalion, the commissioners having disappointed him; he expects £10,000, then to go to Carlisle and return for other £10,000. Hoops is expected back from Philadelphia to-morrow.

Bouquet to Forbes. Hoops has brought the £10,000; the arrangements for sending the other £10,000 to Carlisle. Arrangements for waggons to form the magazines at Ray's Town, with the daily stages. Has engaged George McGuy for the Indian service. Arrangements for blacksmith, gunsmith, repairs of weapons, &c. Other arrangements for the expedition given in detail. Shall leave to-morrow morning and be at Carliele on Wednesday; no time shall be lost in erecting the fort at

Ray's Town, &c., &c. Respecting the supply of spirits. Page 10
The same to Francis West. Requisition for warrants to impress waggons for transport.

Of same date, Requisition sent by West and Atricks to waggon owners.

Bouquet to Forbes. The difficulties of getting waggons for transport and the inaction of the magistrates. The people are so obstinate and disaffected and the magistracy so weak that he can depend on no service; the two provincial battalions are all in disorder and the officers have no notion of the service. Movements of troops, of Indians, &c. The weak state of Fort Augusta, a post of great importance, which cannot be relieved in case of attack; asks for a stronger garrison. Desertion; has promised to obtain pardon for those who return, &c., &c.

The same to the same (in French). Arrived yesterday morning. The swelling of the Susquehannah detained them three days, and the creek to be crossed before reaching Harris was so deep that all the buggage was in the water. A couple of flats needed to cross the waggons at Harris' Ferry; to save time the waggons shall be divided to cross at the different ferries. No plan can be formed so long as the troops are under the Commissioners; their battalions are in the most frightful confusion; their arms unserviceable, nearly three-fourths of them cannot be fired. They have neither tents nor field equipage, and Hoops has to feed them, &c., &c. He may judge whether post can be taken at Ray's Town without either arms or utensils. How he proposes to provide necessaries. Not a soldier dare fire the new arms and each of the old is as heavy as two. If arms are not speedily provided the troops will certainly be affronted; and there are 1,000 muskets at Philadelphia which could be used. Armstrong and Byrd will march on the 29th to Forts Loudoun and Lyttleton; the magazines will be advanced to these posts, but he cannot advance a step further till arms are received. Arrangement of troops; the new levies are drinking about the taverns; proposes to send to Lancaster the companies that are complete, and form a chain as far as Carlisle. Has written to St. Clair to make Washington's regiment march to Fort Cumberland until his (Bouquet's) troops shall be in a position to advance to Ray's Town; 400 men of that corps (Washington's) shall be employed in cutting a communication between the two posts. An early attack expected, as the French have collected all their Indians and cannot long restrain them. Has put the Cherokee chiefs in good humour; those from Shippenburg are very ill behaved, and have seized the presents by force. The letter (which is long) gives an account of the bad state of the roads, the conduct of the Indians, the movements of troops and arrangements generally.

The same to the same (in French). Has forwarded tents to St. Clair. Repeats the orders given to Washington's corps to proceed to Fort Cumberland, leaving there the number necessary for defence, the rest to join him (Bouquet), cutting the road as they advance. To avoid confusion, requests that all orders may be sent through him. The bad conduct of the Indians in Virginia makes it necessary to take them to Ray's Town and renders the sending of arms to the provincials the more pressing.

Bouquet to Forbes (in French). The chief of the Catawbas will keep his people quiet, seeing that the troops are collecting. His fears for the safety of Fort Augusta; the Quakers consider it the key to the Province, and the present commandant is not fitted for the post. The necessity of having a good supply of shoes. The provincials have no medicine chests and no regulations for the transport of tents, &c. Has engaged a good armourer. Cherokees out towards Fort Duquesne with orders not to return without prisoners or scalps. The Indians here are in good humour. Respecting deserters. The same to West. To have the meadows appraised that are to be kept for His Majesty's service.

The same to George Stevenson. Appeals to his known zeal and public spirit to assist in obtaining waggons for transport and in settling disputes, &c.

June 2 Carlisle,

The same to Forbes (in French). Sends returns. The necessity of making one man responsible for Indian affairs. Sir John St. Clair despairs of keeping the Cherokees, but he (Bouquet) does not believe this, as the march of the troops, new presents, &c., will change their spirit. Details the daily marches he intends to make, leaving a detachment at each post. An officer needed to regulate transport, &c. He (Forbes) has done wonders in getting the commissioners to equip the troops. Details as to the condition of the regular and provincial troops, the supply of ammunition, articles wanted for the troops, for boats, the arrangement of posts, the supply of waggons, &c. His suspicions of the French among the provincial troops well founded; has put two of them in irons. (The letter covers 11 pages.) Enclosed is list of articles and stores wanted.

Letters from Bouquet to Conrad Weiser and the magistrates of Berks County respecting the waggons to be supplied for transport.

Bouquet to Forbes (in French). Is detained by the non-arrival of the tents, &c. The bad state of the roads, even after repairs are made. The Virginian troops being sent to Fort Loudoun has deranged his plans; supposes St. Clair had to send them for want of provisions. Respecting waggons. The bad quality of the pork. The flour may be accepted. as although not white, it is good. Arrival of horses, which are better, or rather less bad than he expected. Various arrangements. The bad conduct of the Cherokees; has assembled the chiefs, one of whom has been sent to Fort Loudoun to keep the others, and contradict the report that they were leaving the troops. Remarks on their intentions. After Gordon arrives with cartridges there will be only 20 rounds for each man and no reserve; even with what is at Winchester there will not be enough; more must be purchased. Waggon ropes with strong iron hooks wanted. To pacify the country people recommends payment for the horse drowned last year. Deserters; sutlers; the bad quality of the axes, &c.

The same to the same (in French). Arrival of arms, &c. Details of his arrangements; remarks on the different toutes, regarding which no dependence can be placed on the reports of the country people. The French, with a great number of Indians, are building a fort at Chingan la Mouse, on the Susquehannah, 140 miles N. W. of Fort Augusta; another reason for fortifying that post. Is sending three French soldiers down in irons. Recommends the purchase of horses for the artillery. Leaves at daybreak to-morrow for Conegogee; in the meantime all the troops are busy repairing the roads.

The same to the same (in French). Had arrived from Conegogee, where he had an interview with Governor Sharpe, Sir John St. Clair and Col. Washington and arranged, the march of the troops; details of the arrangement follow. Governor Sharpe's proposal to open a road between Fort Frederic and Fort Cumberland, the advantages of which are given. The impending ruin of Dr. Ross, who has supplied the Maryland troops, unless he is paid for his advances; his zeal and good qualities. The difficulty the provincials have in making cartridges. The trouble with the Indians is increased by the breaking out of smallpox; the presence of Mr. Glen among them would have a good effect. A postmaster with couriers and horses is necessary for the army.

June 16. Fort Loudoun. Bouquet to Sir John St. Clair. Has succeeded in getting over the intrigues, and besides the 27 Catawbas, 100 Cherokees are ready to go anywhere with the troops; never saw people so altered, and was astonished at their understanding, dignity and strength of argument. Is setting out for Lyttleton. Waggon covers and 100 hogsheads of run and whiskey wanted.

June 16, Fort Loudoun. The same to Forbes (in French). Substantially the same account of the dealings with the Indians as in the preceding, but more in detail. Can say nothing of his advance beyond Fort Lyttleton till he sees the road with his own eyes, having been so often deceived with reports. Has left Basset with tools in case the road between Forts Frederic and Cumberland require repairs. Recommends that Major Grant be employed. More waggons wanted for reasons given; offers of waggons were made to him at Conegogee by men from Maryland and Virginia.

June 22, Juniata.

June 22, Juniata.

June 28, Rea's Town. The same to Mercer (?). Is glad he remained at Lyttleton to forward convoys. List of waggons sent off by Hoops; others to be sent. A sufficient store is to be kept at Lyttleton to supply the garrison. 95

The same to Forbes (in French). Arrival of Callender after being two days on the road, notwithstanding his activity. The difficulty of getting waggons; Callender sent to Carlisle to get but horses, being better acquainted with the country than anyone. The Indians whom Bosomworth brought made difficulties about leaving Lyttleton, as he was not going with them. If he leaves them here not one will remain, so he has been ordered to join them at Ray's Town, in order to obviate the risk of losing the few there are. Two interpreters are at Winchester Lyters have been difficulties.

ter. Hoops has sent everything needed.

The same to the same (in French). Arrived on the 24th with the Pennsylvanian Regiment and troops from Virginia. After much trouble a site has been selected for a fort on the height, with a communication to water which cannot be cut off. Has begun, but the troops from Virginia will not work unless they are paid; the Pennsylvanians have willingly offered to work for a gill of rum a day. Until further orders, he shall make the one corps mount guard and the other work. If the soldiers were paid for all the work done, the army in America would cost four fold, as searcely a step can be made without axe or spade in hand. The Indians behaving well; scouts sent out of Catawbas, Cherokees, &c. Hopes the rations will not be reduced, as the provincials are already dissatisfied. Return of a soldier from a scout almost dead from hunger, who reports that the Indians killed and scalped a Frenchman. The soldier was bitten by a rattlesnake, but the Indians gave him a root to chew; the leg swelled so much that he could not follow, but it is now almost well.

June 30, Reas Town. The same to St. Clair (in French). Pressing him to relieve all the posts on the communication between Loudoun and here and to send him the Pennsylvanian Regiment. The amount of work to be done, &c., &c. Troops ordered to make and repair roads.

July 11. Rea's Town.

Bouquet to Forbes (in French). Discussing the state of the roads. The Catawbas have left like rascals; has asked Washington to get the Governor of Virginia to report their conduct to their nation. Cherokees scouting towards the Ohio, and another party out. The roads are lined with broken waggons, and unless an honest and able waggonmaster is found no order can be established. The arrangement of the troops; the progress of the different works. Indian reinforcements. Has sent to search for the tools buried by Capt. Burd after the defeat. Concerning waggons. The sabres, or rather hangers, for the light horse, are a mockery; it is their chief weapon, yet they could not kill a hen with it.

July 15. Rea's Town.

The same to the same (in French). The settlement of Shingle Clamasche is a chimera, there being no one there. Dunlap's good service with the Indians; he should be recommended for a commission. Does not know how to cure the provincial officers of their indolence, except by cashiering one when the army is collected. The detachments and scouts have the same marks as the Indians, namely, a yellow band round the forehead and a streamer of the same colour from the arm. Two men scalped and a third taken prisoner by pretended Cherokees; had called a council of the Cherokees, and warned them that all Indians not having the mark would be fired on. Movements of scouts, troops, provisions, &c. (The letter enters into minute details).

September 4.

The same to the same (in French). His critical position, with only a month's provision and no certainty of waggons to bring a supply. It is impossible to do anything with the small number of waggons, and great delays are caused by the strong bodies of the Indians in the French interest, who should be threshed when opportunity offers. Then the army is getting dispirited, and for his own (Forbes') reputation it is necessary to act, for no explanation will be listened to if there is a failure, for it will be said that it is extraordinary that with 6,000 men for three months, in a Province where there are more waggons than men, and having the power to press them, they were not got, and the officers will be condemned on this point. His plans are: 1. To pay for all waggons that can be obtained willingly; 2. To send St. Clair to refractory districts to take them by force; 3. To represent the matter strongly to the Governor for the Assembly, representing the ruin of the expedition, and the necessity of retreating if waggons are not furnished. If the Assembly refuse, this public letter will be his justification. The public letter should be preceded or accompanied by letters to the principal members of the Assembly, and Young, the paymaster, might be sent to urge the matter. Arrangements for Washington's march. Dagworthy has marched with picked men and Indians. September 19, Bouquet to Ensign Blane. Order to carry a flag of truce to Fort Loyal Han-

Duquesne.

BOUQUET COLLECTION.

The flag of truce carried a letter to the commandant of the fort applying for information respecting Major Grant and other officers supposed to be taken prisoners.

September 24, Loyal Hannan.

Bouquet to the Governor of Fort Duquesne. Thanks for kind usage of prisoners. An offer has been made to the Cherokees for the ransom of Belestre, but they refuse to release him. Further efforts shall be made and he hopes the same efforts will be made by the French to rescue Ensign McDonald from the hands of their Indians.

September 24.

The same to de Rocheblave (in French). Is sorry that he cannot thank him personally for the trouble he has taken to escort Blane, for his politeness to Major Grant, &c.

December 3, Fort Du Quesne.

(in French). The capture of Fort Duquesne; abandoned and blown up by the enemy. The difficulties of the march; the obstinacy of the defence; the army is composed of raw levies and provincials, many of whom had never seen a musket, but they had succeeded, and the honour is justly due to the General. The capture of Louisbourg is more striking, but this is the most important. The present disagreeable situation of the troops. Out of 9 officers of the Royal Americans 5 have been killed and 2 taken prisoners.

December 26, Ligonier.

The same to Col. Mercer, Pittsburgh. The General desires him (Mercer) to engage the Indians to join him in case of an attack by the French, and full instructions respecting his conduct in the defence of the post, &c. 166

April 13,

Phiiadelphia. April 13, Philadelphia. Heads of a letter from Bouquet to Byrd, Bouquet to Mercer. General Stanwix intends an expedition to go up the Ohio, so he (Mercer) is to attempt nothing against the enemy's posts till he receive new instructions, but to act on the defensive and keep a good look-out. The French reported to be 6,000 strong at Venango, which he does not believe. Stores sent; when the new levies are raised his garrison shall be relieved. Bateaux to be built. The bad conduct of the Indians respecting prisoners; hopes to be able to force them to comply with the treaty; till then there must be patience. The delay in passing the Bill is the cause of not being able to support the advanced posts. The men to keep close to the fort in case of being made prisoners. Changes in the command; Amherst in town. A sawmill to be built.

Same to Lloyd. A surgeon sent; the sick to be attended to without distinction of corps. General instructions.

The same to General Stanwix. Had reviewed the four companies, which are better than he expected, but are badly off for clothing, &c. York Town.

Page 183 Bouquet to Mercer. The General will defer settling on the situation of the new fort till he can make a personal examination. Gordon is collecting artificers and materials to build a respectable fort; the difficulty of getting waggons till the accounts of last year are settled, Sawyers to be employed. Croghan to deal with the Indians. The Highlanders to be relieved by the Virginians. The bad conduct of some of the parties sent out; an example shall be made. Pemberton to be paid a just price for his goods.

The same to Lloyd. To give Stephen command at Ligonier and come to Philadelphia. The Highlanders to be relieved, &c., &c. 191

Report on the state of the Southern Department. May 11. Bouquet to Stanwix. How he proposes to overcome the reluctance of May 16, Lancaster. the people to furnish waggons; the chief difficulty arises from want of money. Details of the method of proceeding. The same to Edward Shippen. Hopes he has settled with the Mennonists. Sends advertisements for waggons. Bags to be made and forage collected with all possible speed, without raising the price.

General is only waiting for waggons to move the troops. How money is to be provided.

The same to Conrad Weiser. Sends cash to buy outs and other May 26, The Philadelphia. forage, May 26.

The same to Neilson. Has given credits on him to Shippen and Weiser for £1,000 each, and confirms the credit already given to George Stevenson.

The same to Mercer. The cause of the scarcity of provisions, of which he complains. The want of waggons prevents the moving of troops; arrangement for those contracted for, to be supplemented by 1,000 pack horses to supply the posts. Gordon's movements. The wavering disposition of the Indians will soon be fixed when they see the British strength and the weakness of the French. Orders to be given that no grass is to be cut within four miles of Pittsburgh.

May 26, The same to Cor. Stephen. The General Philadelphia. The arrangements about transport, &c., as in preceding letters. The same to Col. Stephen. The General approves of his measures. The same to Weiser. Approves of the steps he has taken to procure waggons, and leaves it to his judgment as to the pay to be given to constables for the purpose of collecting the necessary number. The troops begin to march from Lancaster on Monday; 1,000 pack horses are to be at Bedford in a few days to carry forage and provisions forward. The same to Stephen, The General approves of what he has done, and is sorry for the affair with Capt. Bullet. Waggon horses ordered to Bedford, to be employed carrying to Ligonier. The General leaves it to him to march there with a convoy, or to wait till he is reinforced. McKenzie, with his Highlanders, is to stay at Bedford and Juniata. The garrison at Ligonier is never to leave that post without a sufficient force to repel any attack by the enemy. Convoys to Pittsburgh must have strong escorts. 210 The same to Mercer. The General approves of his measures. The Indians to be employed in discovering the movements of the enemy. Everything is in motion to support him; the plans detailed. Gordon and Mayer, Royal Engineers, on the march to Pittsburg with artificers, but their motions will be slow, owing to the number of waggons. It is

June 1, Philadelphia.

The same to Ourry. Hopes he has extricated himself from Carlisle; the dismal circumstances of the advanced posts render his presence necessary at Bedford. The movement of troops is given as in preceding letters. ""The inhabitants of Cumberland did distinguish themselves last year by their backwardness for the service. I am afraid we shall be obliged to use again the same argument to put them in mind that the King has a right to their service on paying."

June 2, Philadelphia.

The same to Shippen. Is disappointed at the backwardness of the people about the waggons; the Assembly has rejected a Bill to authorise the lending of £100,000 to the General to pay them, so that the people must wait till money comes from England. Arrangements for the supply, &c., of waggons.

June 4.

Abstract of letter from Mercer, and abstract of one from Armstrong of 11th June, both sent to General Stanwix.

June 10.

A private letter (in French), without place where dated, signature or address, but evidently written by Bouquet, giving an account of his labours owing to the ill health of Forbes; his securing the confidence of the new General in spite of intrigues, &c.; he is second in command and Adjutant General during the campaign, &c., &c.

Postcript to a letter from Bouquet to Major Tulleken. Byrd writes he has no tools to open Braddock's road and to build the post at Red Stone Creek; proposes to march his whole corps to the creek, especially as the small-pox had broken out. The General approves of this, unless upon his (Tulleken's) application he had already passed Cumberland; in that case he was to proceed to Ligonier. Movements of other troops.

July 16. Carlisle.

Bouquet to Tulleken. His letters received; his measures approved of, and the General, owing to the increasing numbers at Ligonier and Pittsburgh, is pleased that he has another convoy of provisions ready to set out. Virginians, if they come to Bedford, will form an escort for the convoy. Reinforcements ordered. Abundance of grass within a few miles of the post. Were Gordon at Ligonier or Pittsburg, he would soon have them in a state of defence.

July 17, Carhale.

The same to Col. Chambers. Orders to put in repair the road from his house to Fort Loudoun.

July 23, Chambers' Fort.

The same to the officer commanding at Fort Loudoun. The General orders an escort (noted) with waggons, &c., to Fort Bedford; disposition of the waggons, cattle, &c., on the march. 234 The same to Clark. Orders to forward cattle, &c. 235

Approves of the increase to the salary of Calhoun, the forage master. 317 September 12.

The same to Alexander Graydon. Is sorry for his illness. The means taken to disable their horses show that nothing is to be expected from the people of his county; to pay by the day will never do with people of such principles. How the torage should be carried and settled for.

He must be very idle at Ligonier to pick a quarrel with an officer for walking with a sutler; he himself (Bouquet) deserved to be broken a hundred times if that was unbecoming the character of an officer. October 1, Bedford.	The same to W. Ramsay. All the flour delivered on the Monongahela this year will be paid at the same rate as the quantity mentioned in the contract; will depend on him performing his engagement, but will not cavil about a day. Payment is in the hands of Mercer.
October 1, Bedford.	The same to Mercer. Has his letter, with receipts for money. The fatal consequences of the delay of the pack horses, namely, the starving of Byrd's party; a little convoy went to him yesterday, but is horribly afraid of the consequences. The rest of the letter gives detailed instructions respecting supplies.
October 4, Bedford.	The same to Armstrong. Owing to the heavy rains has stopped the waggons, but flour being wanted at Pittsburg, he is to send it on pack horses, &c., &c. 343
October 5, Bedford.	General order respecting officers' horses.
October 6, Bedford.	Bouquet to Adam Hoops. Upwards of 200 beeves received besides sheep. Graham has a written contract for salt, but not for cattle; has however, given orders that all above 400 pounds would be received from him and sent to Pittsburgh. Has never yet received a return of pro-

October 6, Bedford.	The same to George Stevenson. Sends money. Sinclair will inform him of the quantity of forage wanted.
October 24, Pittsburgh.	The same to Byrd. Has been on the road opened from the three redoubts to this place. The General approves of the two small houses proposed to be built at the crossing of the Yioghiogheny; a sergeant and 10 men to be left at that post. He is to get the bridge built at the little crossing, Fort Cumberland. He is to leave a lieutenant and 25 men at his post, and take the rest of his detachment to Pittsburgh.
October 25, Pittsburgh.	The same to Thomas Walker. Instructions as to the supply of flour, beef, &c. The General is willing to pay for the waggons destroyed by the enemy during the campaign. Instructions as to supplies till 1st January, 1760. Money sent to settle his accounts.
October 25, Pittsburgh.	The same to Mercer. Note of orders given about the settlement of accounts. No supplies received from Virginia. Contract was made with Ramsay for flour, but meal was ordered to be taken to prevent evil consequences; the meal was however, so had that it had to be refused. Only quences; the meal was, however, so bad that it had to be refused. Only cattle of 400 pounds and upwards taken. Other orders about provisions, and the General desires him to settle everything before leaving Win-

The same to John Hughes. Is obliged for an account of the glorious success at Quebee, which will close the war. Is disappointed that Seely's brigade did not go to Ligonier; Ourry has received orders to send the waggons there for at least one trip. There are now provisions enough for the rest of the campaign. Virginia was to send 1,000 barrels of flour, but none received.

10th 12th representations and 1,000 barrels of flour.

November 13 to 24.

Jottings. 13th, respecting money, &c.; 20th, notes that all papers and receipts were burned in Callender's house, besides baggage and wine; 24th, note of salt, &c., forwarded, and apparently a list of clothing lost in the fire.

November 18, Fort Burd. Instructions to the commanding officer at Fort Burd on the Monongahela.

is now high, but there are no provisions to send; part of the convoy gave out on the road; only pack horses can now be used. Horses stolen, and expects to lose many when the troops are ordered down. Goes to morrow to Fort Cumberland; the country people have brought in flour; snow deep on the mountains. The fort nicely finished. Stoddard left as King's commissary.

November 27, The same to Capt. Richard Paris, at Cumberland Fort, instructing Fort Cumber bim to open a new road, to repair damages, &c. 366

December 14, Winchester,

The same to Blythe. To take an inventory of stores at Fort Cumberland and leave a copy with Ensign Wass. The horses of the people on the South Branch are not to be impressed; others, especially those carrying liquor, to be pressed to carry salt. Detailed instructions respecting transport.

December 29, Lancaster,

The same to Hoops. Provisions to be supplied to the old and new levies by the method pointed out. Returns of the cost of beef, &c., wanted.

December 29, Lancaster.

The same to John Nelson. Sends a bill to be cashed; desires him to send his account, December 29, Lancaster.

The same to Stanwix. Reports the steps taken towards the settlement of accounts and the money wanted. The barracks cannot be made habitable this winter; the magistrates refuse to quarter the troops; has quartered them himself without noise or complaint. Prevost has asked for clothing to replace some burned at New York. Haldimand writes from Oswego.

December 29, Lancaster. The same to Sinclair. Approves of his proposal for appraising the meadows. How the accounts of Harris are to be settled for forage. Detailed instructions respecting his duties as Assistant Deputy Quartermaster General.

No date.

Various memoranda. The first relating to the roads, 200 miles of continual mountains, impracticable for waggons. If part of the army is to march to Fort Erie to dispossess the enemy, bateaux must be built at Pittsburgh. Opening roads; the portage at Le Bœuf and taking the forts would take till the 25th September or beginning of October. Then follow calculations respecting provisions, ammunition, transport, &c.

Remarks on Colonel Bouquet's accounts with the public in 1759 settled with Major General Stanwix at Philadelphia on the 24th of May, 1760.

LETTERS TO VARIOUS PERSONS.

1760-1764.

VOL. II, PART I.

A 23-1.

B. M. 21653.

1760. January 6, Lancaster. February 24,

Lancaster.

Order by Bouquet on Capt. Sinclair to pay a sum to Capt. Evan Shelby, with receipts.

Bouquet to Peters. Enters into a statement of considerable length as to the causes why he is dissertiofed with his (Peters) conduct tends.

as to the causes why he is dissatisfied with his (Peters') conduct toward him, giving details, but adds that his probity and virtue will make amends, and that he has kept nothing on his mind that may affect his true regard for him. The Governor's proclamation will, he hopes, remove suspicion from the mind of the Indians. Is in a fair way of being a sufferer by his investments in Pennsylvania for reasons given. Prevost's affairs still in the same state. The horrid confusion of regimental accounts under Young's administration has stopped payment of arrears and promotion.

February 29, Lancaster. The same to Plumsted. Has received report of his being appointed agent for victualling the troops. Live cattle and flour wanted for next campaign.

April 24, Philadelphia.

The same to———. Governor Hamilton has sent word that Frederick Post was thrown from his horse and so much hurt he had to be brought back; that Amherst's speech to the Indians was to be modified at Post's suggestion, and that Logan was to be consulted, so as to get Post's views, in order to express the changes necessary in Amherst's speech. Explains the changes and sends the speech as altered.

The speech enclosed, with remarks, &c. 12 to 15 The same to Hugh Wallace. Has received draught for £137. Not to advance more money to Mrs. Gualy. Books and clothes received. 16

The same to Armstrong. Is sorry that he is not to be employed on this campaign. Asks his assistance in the valuation of certain horses and names the appraisers.

June 6, Fort Loudoun.

Order by Bouquet to supply a ration to the people employed by the contractors.

7, Orders for the repairs of the road to Turtle Creek and a little way beyond it.

Bouquet to Lieut, Timberlake. His detachment is to be sent here in charge of a sergeant; he is himself to remain at Fort Burd to receive forage, &c., till Stoddard arrives. Sends prices to be paid and other arrangements.

General orders for the day, respecting recruits, muster rolls &c., with list of officers present and those absent.

Bouquet to Major Walters. His detachment has arrived and is detained waiting letters. Flour &c., received; must depend for supplies on Niagara. Is building a large boat to bring them, but will require oakum, sails, &c.; if not fitted out, the garrison will run the risk of starving. Deserters sent. Materials needed to build a sloop.

Same to Thomas Cresap. Must take time to consider the offer to take shares in the Ohio Company. He could get German and Swiss families to settle, but by the treaty of Eaton it was agreed not to settle land beyond the Alleghany, and though Virginia and Maryland did not accede to that treaty they are equally bound by it. The form of Government, too, must be fixed. He wishes to have details of the plan, but would readily contribute to the settlement as being of great service to the Colonies.

September 22, Presqu'Isle.

Bouquet to Major Walters. Letters received and sent. Duplessis missing; is afraid he may have been killed or carried off prisoner to Detroit; the Indians to make inquiry. He should report Ensign William Hay as unfit for duty, so that he could get enough from the sale of his commission to carry him to his friends. Respecting provisions. General expectations of peace. Amherst's answer concerning recruiting. List of officers who have purchased.

September 22, Presqu'Isle.

The same to Major Gates. Hutchins has brought the letter and five Indians; they will not go on the errand. Hutchins goes to Venango to be back in a week; he will try to bring Indians to search here. Does not expect an attack, but that the communications may be infested. A boat sent with an officer to Niagara has been wrecked, people and letters saved. Niagara very ill provided. Is sending to Le Bœuf to cut and square timber, &c.

October 9, Presqu'Isle.

The same to Stanwix. Gives an account of his march from Fort Pitt on the 7th July, with the distances, state of the roads, &c.; he was ten days getting here, where he found Gladwin, with 400 infantry and provincials and bateaux for the detachment of Royal Americans, which left for Niagara on the 18th, under Major Walters. Remained at Presqu'Isle with 100 Virginians to build a Royal blockhouse, reinforced by Mercer with 150 of the Pennsylvanian new levies. Several men lost by the attacks of parties from Detroit. Stewart has taken post at Venango. Duplessis supposed to have been killed; he is a loss to the service. Niagara cannot supply stores; most of them are brought from Pittsburgh by land. Rogers has arrived with rangers from Montreal; a detachment is to come up to garrison Detroit, Michillimakinak and their dependencies. How he is to send off and victual the rangers he does not know. The distance to Detroit is 240 miles, and as much more to Michillimakinak, so that he does not believe any post but Detroit can be garrisoned this winter. Rogers is to escort the French troops to Albany.

October 25.

General orders. Owing to the repeated thefts of pork, the commanding officer finds himself obliged to put the men on half allowance, &c. 42
Bouquet to Capt. Clapham. Bateaux sent for provisions, &c. The sloop cannot be trusted during the variable winds.

Presqu'Isle.
October 31,
Presqu'Isle.

The same to the same. If he cannot make this post, he is to unload at the nearest harbour; the provisions shall be brought up in bateaux. 44 The same to an officer in command of a party with provisions to Niagara, enjoining the greatest care during the bad weather of men.

November 18, Presqu'Isle.

Niagara, enjoining the greatest care during the bad weather of men, boats and provisions.

on the work. All the escorts to be supplied by Virginians; only small parties required. Disappointment in receiving provisions from Niagara; all that could be spared sent to Detroit; depends for supply on those sent by bateaux to Le Bœuf, thence by pack horses. To employ all the horses he can get.

December 11, Fort Pitt, Bouquet to Major Stewart. Is obliged for his expedition in sending detachments ordered. It he cannot get bateaux to LeBoeuf, to try to get horses from the Indians; arrangements for payment. Explaining the order for garrisoning Venango, LeBœuf and Presqu'Isle. Other orders as to troops, bateaux, &c.

December 20, Fort Pitt, The same to Capt. Cochrane. Vaughan's regiment being sent to this department to relieve the Virginians, who are to be sent to Winchester, it will not be necessary to detain the 40 Royal Americans, and with the 60 men from Niagara he is to garrison both Presqu'Isle and LeBœuf, sending all the Virginians to their forts. Other arrangements about flour, eattle, &c.

December 20, Fort Pitt.

The same to Major Stewart, Venango. Letters received. The sutler could not reach Venango with the £50. Materials cannot reach LeBœuf this winter; how they are to be stored and looked after. If the bateaux cannot get up with flour to LeBœuf, the garrison must be reduced to 14. Concerning Vaughan's regiment, as in preceding letter. Only 40 men, including officers, sergeants and drummers are to be kept at Venango.

December 31,

Order that no strong liquors are to be sold in the garrison (Fort Pitt?)

No date.

Remarks on the necessity of quartering troops in Lancaster in 1760.

1761. January 24, Fort Pitt.

List of articles necessary for the western department in 1760. 65
Bouquet to Livingston, Fort Major at Cumberland. Returns received;
he is to obtain returns of tools from the man sent by Capt. Hay to take charge of artillery stores. Two men sent down, prisoners for debt; the creditors are to provide for their subsistence.

January 29, Fort Pitt. The same to Lieut, Garsten. Instructions as commanding at Bedford, respecting stores and forage. No one to go to the settlements from the upper posts without a pass. Two men to be kept as expresses, one at Eedford and one at Juniata.

68
Similar instructions to Capt, Gwynne at Ligonier.

70

March 6, Fort Pitt. Order to an officer (not named) to march with Ensign Artel (Hertel) and three soldiers of the French marine and five militia men from Shawanese Town to deliver them to General Monckton at Philadelphia; if the General has gone to New York they are to follow him there with the prisoners.

March 19, Fort Pitt. Bouquet to Capt. Gwynne. Blane to relieve him at Ligonier; he is to join that garrison to the regiment and proceed to Philadelphia, &c., &c.

April 12, Fort Pitt. Weight of Col. Stephen's bullocks killed here in 1761.

April 20, Fort Pitt. Bouquet to Lieut, Blane. Orders forbidding the impressment of horses or carriages at Ligonier and Bedford.

May 20, Fort Pitt. The same to Lieut, Carre. Instructions for his command at Venango, to which he is to march to relieve Lieut, Baillie.

May 21, Fort Pitt. The same to Lieut. Guy. He is to keep the canoe carrying flour, &c., during the summer, to Venango; some sheep will be sent up.

June 9, Fort Pitt. The same to Col. Cresap. Is obliged for offer of his interest at the next election of members to represent the county, but must decline the honour.

Bouquet to Major Walters. Regulations as to drummers carrying arms. Respecting soldiers claiming their discharge.

List of soldiers to be discharged at Niagara in June, 1761. 84 Bouquet to Dellient (in French.) Respecting his mismanagement of the estate. Hopes to be in Charles Town; to wait his arrival. The same to ______. Has received six venison hams. Tooson to go with an Indian to explore a shorter and less hilly road to Venango, and if thought worth while to have it blazed. Sends locks, &c.

The same to Capt. Campbell. His first account of the defection of the Six Nations he could not credit, but the last puts it beyond doubt. Has secured the post against an attack. The chiefs here deny all knowledge of a plot, and appear to be sincere, and it is for their interest to be at peace with the British. They have engaged to negotiate with the Shawanese to deliver their prisoners and give up stealing horses. The general behaviour of the Indians (the Delawares excepted) has been intolerable. One was shot the other day when carrying off eight horses, seven of which were recovered. Venango and Le Bœuf have provisions for one year. Powder sent. Cannot spare an escort for bullocks just now, but will send some when the storm is over, which he believes will be soon, as the Six Nations could only trust to surprise. Has had no instructions about Detroit, except to send cattle; he should employ Canadians to fetch them. Does not know where troops could be spared to reinforce him. Naval stores wanted. Paymaster's accounts settled, Movements of officers.

The same to the same. Believes that the repulse given to the Six Nations by the western Indians and the discovery of their scheme will make them drop it, but it gives a fair opportunity to close the connection with these nations. Sir William (Johnson) must know of their plots. More horses stolen and ineffectual pursuit; the Indians have also stopped expresses. The indiscretion of publishing the affair about Baby, which is now known to everybody. The inconvenience of dealing in Indian politics, in which so many are concerned, without any general system. The Pennsylvanian Government are treating with the Delawares in an underhand way, so that he can do no good. Is purposing to have a closer union with the Delawares, who will join in a belt to the Wyandots; their first step was to pursue the thieves of the Six Nations and to bring the Shawanese to a sense of duty. The steps he has taken to curb the licentiousness of the traders. Trusts Callender's imprudence may be forgiven on account of his services; Amherst expected. The miserable condition of the soldiers from want of clothing, &c. The same to Capt. Cochrane. Respecting men claiming their discharge. If he has not enough of sergeants, to appoint Corporal Moss. Mrs. McIntash to be sent away. "She is not better than the rest of her sex here, who seem a colony sprung from Hell, for the scourge of this place." Dow not yet arrived; clothing sent. The new Secretary at War is Townshend; does not think he would have time to look at petrifactions 98

The same to Andrew Fesch. Respecting his plantation in South Carolina,

The same. Apparently a circular to the posts, that he has been robbed of a large sum of money, and that every one going down the country is to be arrested and searched.

The same to Barnsley. Details of the robbery referred to in the preceding letter. Part of the money found, but not the thieves. 104

The same to Blane. To allow those detained to continue their journey; no one coming down to proceed without a pass, nor those having more than £15 in money.

1762. February 17, Fort Pitt.

Bouquet to Plumsted and Franks. Will continue to have their interest in sight, by preventing negligence on the part of those employed. Remarks on pork, salt, &c., received.

BOUQUET COLLECTION.

February 17, Fort Pitt.

The same to Capt. Young. Asks him to thank the Government of Pennsylvania for their attention to his recommendations. To represent, if Pennsylvania is to raise more men for next campaign, that the boys and old men in the last were the cause of great expense, and did not answer the expectations of the public.

February -Fort Pitt.

The same to Lunan. A letter written in a humorous style, in answer to fault found with his handwriting, and recommending Lunan, instead of wasting his time on such criticism, to marry before old age come. 152

March 11, Fort Pitt.

The same to Madame Fesch (in French). Respecting the attempt to retain the management of the estate by quibbling and legal delays, which can only lead to ruin.

March 29. Fort Pitt.

The same to Plumsted and Franks. To have returns made of women drawing rations as attached to the Royal American Regiment.

April 8, Fort Pitt.

The same to Capt. Schlosser. Orders to reduce the garrisons at the three blockhouses on Lake Erie; the rest to march to Fort Pitt. The reduced force noted. He himself is to return to Niagara, but may come to Fort Pitt to settle accounts. Instructions of what is to be done before

April 8, Fort Pitt.

The same to Lieut, Guy. That Schlosser is to relieve his post; to settle with Schlosser about the men's subsistence.

April 8, Fort Pitt.

The same to Lieut, Carre, Letters with orders to be forwarded to Schlosser. He himself is to remain at Venango till relieved. Provisions sent; a year's supply to be sent to LeBouf. Instructions as to the arrangements he isto make before leaving.

May 2, Fort Pitt.

The same to Capt. Bentinek. Although it may be of advantage to him to go to Europe, advises him to postpone it. The Spanish war is favourable to young officers, but he (Bouquet) is cured of ambition, and three years at Pittsburgh would wear out any man's patience. The letter is of a private nature, relating to friends.

May 17, Fort Pitt.

The same to Sergt. McDonald. Has leave to go to Fort Cumberland for his pay. To give no bounty to men re-enlisting, for reasons given. 171

May 18, Fort Pitt.

The same to Lieut, Guy. To account for provisions since his arrivaat LeBouf. Returns to be regularly sent. Only one woman at a post to be allowed provisions; and no Indians are to have provisions, except at Fort Pitt; Kettles are provided for Cochrane's company. Will send sheep and cows, but recommends purchasing venison.

May 20, Fort Pitt.

The same to Lieut, Dow. Has received his letter giving him the disagreeable news of being another year in this department. To go with clothing to Niagara. Walters will forward the proportion for Detroit. At Presqu'Isle he will see his son; Hay would relieve him if he could get the major's consent; if not some other way can be tried. Thanks for dispensing with his joining the battalion till further orders. June 14. The same to Capt. Ourry. Two companies of light infantry of the Philadelphia 42nd and 77th ordered to march this way, under Major Campbell; they shall be employed in forwarding a convoy up. Shelter can be given to the people flocking to him, but it is impossible to feed them; wishes he could reduce the garrison to 30 men, which is sufficient for the post. Public buildings outside the fort might be appropriated for shelter; the families might come into the fort when necessary. His measures approved of; he shall make the people here sensible of the service he (Ourry) has rendered in keeping the frontier people together till they have got over their panic. The schemes of the Indians are so stupid that he cannot doubt they will soon be reduced. Hopes he has retained all the Indians taken. Powder to be sent to Fort Cumberland, and meantime Livingston must get all the help he can from the settlements. Sheep to be saved for the upper posts. No house near the fort to be set on fire till it is absolutely necessary.

Bouquet to George Croghan. Is anxious to know the cause of the hidden insurrection; supposes the western Indians have been instigated by the Senecas. Sir William Johnson will inform him if the Six Nations are concerned. He is to proceed to Fort Pitt to ascertain the real causes of the war. Quacks are busy blaming the settlements at the Yioghiogheny as the cause, but that is a falsity. Reinforcements for Fort Augusta and the posts. Is astonished the Indians did not surprise the posts instead of giving the alarm. Is too much in the dark to do anything but secure the forts.

The same to Thomas Forrester, J. P. for Lancaster County. To warn the people living on the Susquehanna of the consequences of selling ammunition to the Indians under present circumstances, and desiring him to send a list of the guilty persons.

Memorandum by Bouquet of orders respecting the providing of waggons and pack horses for the service of the troops under his command, proceeding to the westward.

Bouquet to Lieut Blane. Introducing Lieut Campbell, sent with another officer and party to reinforce Ligonier. He is to send down the pack horse men and any others he can depend on. The post to be defended to the last extremity; the steps he is taking to clear the road of Indians, &c.

The orders to Lieut. Campbell of same date, with number of his men, &c., and how he is to know the scouts.

Agreement with John McCulloch to receive from him 21 to 49 horse loads of flour at Fort Cumberland, where he is to load his horses with musket balls for Fort Bedford.

Bouquet to the Governor. Andrew Montour reports that when he left Sir William Johnson nothing was known there of the insurrection. His Indian family and other Indians ask to be allowed to come to the settlement during the war. Suggests the issue of a proclamation to stop the sale of powder and lead to the Indians.

The same to Capt. Ectyer (in French). His indignation at Christie's infamous capitulation of the fort to the Indians, who never keep their word, and have obtained a post of the greatest importance. Can say nothing of Venango till he knows the facts. Price shall be tried; remarks on the case. The reception given to the Indians at his post and Ligonier is greatly approved. Remarks on the tricks of the Delawares. To be economical with the provisions and powder, in case of accidents; he is to urge on his people a reduction in rations. He (Bouquet) is coming with force enough to overcome all opposition, but the loss of Presqu'Isle has made a great change in the plans; will send notice when

September 7, Fort Pitt.

The same to Major Campbell. The Indians sent to Presqu'Isle had returned from about half way and reported that there were no English there; that the Chippewas had taken post there on their way to Detroit to attack parties going to the relief of that post; that they had mounted the swivels to be taken to Detroit, where the Indians numbered 4,000 men of six different nations; that 400 men sent to burn an Ottawa village had been defeated. Bouquet to Major Gladwin. Sends news brought by the returned express (see p. 307). Had too few troops to spare the 42nd, and the last express brings letters that there will be no reinforcements. Expects in ten days the last convoy with a strong escort; shall then send the 42nd to Presqu'Isle to proceed to Detroit. The detachment of the 60th to relieve Wilkins at Presqu'Isle, so that he may come to Fort Pitt before winter. Regrets the death of Capt. Dalyell and hopes that he (Gladwin) has by this time obtained some satisfaction for the infamous barbarities of the Indians. Those here have not appeared since their rout in August, having retired towards Muskingum and Scioto. September 30, Fort Pitt.

The same to Col. Stephen. Knowing his zeal, he is not surprised at his intention to procure volunteers to follow up the late success against the Indians for the relief of this post, and to make a new attempt to make the villains submit; will do all he can to assist him in its execution; only men are needed now to strike a decisive blow, but no time should be lost; about 700 men will be sufficient to burn and destroy all the Indian towns between this post, the lake and the Wabash, and to drive the brutes beyond the Mississippi or the lakes; he is well informed of the roads, &c. Does not know if the post at Red Stone is destroyed, but it might be built again if his Province would garrison it. some volunteers from Maryland not be added to those from Virginia; thinks Shelby and other good woodsmen would cheerfully go with him. 338

September 30, Fort Pitt.

The same to the Rev. Mr. Peters. Thanks for his congratulations and for the generous proceedings of his friends on the occasion of the success it had pleased God to give. Indeed there was something providential in all that affair; he never found his head so clear as on that day, nor such ready compliance with orders, firmness and perseverance on the part of the troops, whose conduct has not been done justice to. His sorrow at the death of his good old friend Dalyell. (The date, 1764, is endorsed, but that of 1763, at the head of the letter, is no doubt correct).

October 23, Fort Pitt.

The same to Col. Stephen. Would be sorry should the plan proposed (p. 338) not take place this fall, as it is the only season for such operations, the spring being usually wet, the creeks full &c. No service could be more useful, but the General cannot undertake to do more than supply the volunteers with provisions, so that it remains with the Assembly to raise and pay the men; no less than 1,000 good men should be provided. Had intended to attack the upper Delaware towns, but a sufficient number of volunteers could not be prevailed on to join, and as he could not employ regular troops alone, who are unacquainted with the woods, and require woodsmen to reconnoitre, he was forced to abandon this design;

The Delawares will alter their insolent behaviour when they know the Senecas have submitted. Bradstreet is moving towards Niagara with an army of 3,000 men, 300 Canadians and a large body of Six Nation Indians, to chastise these murderers; expects shortly to move on the Ohio to humble them. His (Grant's) three companies and three of the Royal Americans marching to Fort Loudoun; waits only the decision of the Assembly to proceed on the proposed expedition, All returns to be sent to him (Bouquet); he is pleased with the improvements made on the fortifications and garden. Has taken steps to stop the scandalous impositions in respect to the pork fattened at Bedford; the flour will be closely inspected. Shall send cattle as soon as an escort can be provided, and hopes the men will get rid of scurvy by the use of greens from the woods and gardens. Regulations for the internal economy of the regiments, the care of stores, liquor, &c.

The same to Capt, Ralph Phillips. That he must return or pay for a horse employed to carry his baggage to Carlisle last campaign. The same to Capt, Stewart. It is lucky the rascal Hicks confessed his treachery, but as there may be some truth in what he said, the utmost vigilance must be used to prevent surprise. Bradstreet's appearance with an army will recall the attention of the western Indians to their own homes. Storekeepers to be struck off; command money to be allowed. If the Assembly of Pennsylvania will do nothing he will station a number of Indians at each post for expresses. Recommends him to assist the inhabitants to plough and sow near the fort by sending them seed, &c.

May 17, Philadelphia.

Bouquet to Col. Robertson. Thanks him for recovering certain money, of which he had given up expectation. Respecting the sale of a horse, &c., &c.

May 22, Philadelphia.

The same to Plumsted and Franks. In order to prevent the delay in regard to provisions, desires one of the partners to reside for the time in Cumberland County or to appoint an agent with power to execute all orders received from him (Bouquet), without waiting for directions from

June 4. Philadelphia.

The same to Armstrong. To agree beforehand with extraordinary expresses from Carlisle. The heavy blow lately struck by the savages in Virginia and this province and their appearance at the same time at Fort Pitt, Ligonier, Bedford, and all the communication, show that they are very numerous and determined to carry on the war with all their might. The utmost vigour must be used on the other side, and the commissioners are preparing with the greatest diligence to equip the troops. He shall collect them to march to the Ohio to secure the distressed frontier more effectually than by defending them on the spot. Hopes men will be found to complete the 1,300 men voted by the Province. 421

June 4, Philadelphia.

The same to the Governor and Commissioners of Pennsylvania. Requesting them to complete, arm and clothe the thousand men granted by the provincial government, and to supply one troop of light horse, as was done in the campaign of 1758. Submits for consideration the use that might be made of dogs for tracking Indians in the woods, which cannot be done by foot soldiers; their audacious attacks on the troops and settlements were to be ascribed to the certainty they have of evading pursuit; a few instances of them being caught and worried by dogs would do more to deter them from war than all the troops that could be raised; how these could be obtained and used. The troops when raised to assemble at Fort Loudoun, from which time they would receive pro-(A note says: All articles mentioned in the above letter have been agreed to by the Governor and commissioners).

June 6, Philadelphia.

The same to Capt. Robert Callender. That a new contract has been made for provisions; Plumsted is no longer agent, but Franks continues with Inglis and his son-in-law, Barelay. Orders to provide cattle, with directions about their monthly supply and payment.

Philadelphia.

The same to Capt. Murray. Returns received of the 42nd Regiment but not of the three companies of the Royal Americans. To get ball brought from Bedford. How letters are to be sent. The Pennsylvanian troops to be sent to Fort Loudoun, so soon as their clothing can be got ready.

June 6. Philadelphia.

The same to Capt. D. Hay. Desires him to send returns of the arms sent by the King to the government of Pennsylvania for the use of the provincial troops, and a certificate of the ordnance at Fort Pitt belonging to the Province. Thinks half a dozen pateraroes would be of service in the small posts. He is to provide powder and flints for 2,000 men for this campaign. Bouquet to Capt. Gordon. (See A. 20, p. 54). His accounts settled with the late paymaster and balance paid to his credit; confused accounts received of certain other balances and arrears to come to the officers, Barnsley negotiating for the sale of his commission. Introduces Lieut. Changes in the regiment. Everybody tired of the disgusting work of Indian fighting. The Province having voted 1,000 men, is now picking up every vagabond on the street to go on service, without being put in shape, and as he cannot get the brave men in the forts, he must venture with this strange mob; it will require another miracle to succeed with such tools. Maryland, as usual, will do nothing. Virginia will defend herself, but the people are abandoning the frontier, unless he can take the bloody savages off their back. Is sorry that Monckton has had to defend himself from a rascal, but it will turn out to the confusion of his jealous enemies. Recommends Mr. Relfe to command the three companies on the frontiers to the east of the Susquehanna.

General order. The Pennsylvanians to be in readiness to move. All violence or damage to persons or property forbidden; offenders shall be punished with the utmost severity. Returns to be sent in of powder and flints required. 433

Another order of the same date, with instructions respecting the course to be taken with the waggons, which are paid for carriage by weight. 438 Bouquet to John Harris. Had not placed much dependence on the young men of his county, but did not think they would have been so backward to engage in the cause of their country, but let others fight the wild Indians; they will do well hereafter not to boast of what they will do and have not done. It will be well to have a list of those joining the army in various employments, so that those in the service may not be confounded with those who remained at home.

August 31, Fort Loudoun.

The same to Gage. Sends Lieut. Potts with Bradstreet's dispatches from Fort Pitt. Expects to be joined by 400 volunteers from Virginia and elsewhere. The commissioners of Pennsylvania have authorised him to complete their contingent at their own expense. The force even at Pittsburgh will convince the savages that they can be effectually chastised, and compel them to submit to any alterations in the terms so injudiciously granted them. Governor Fauquier hopes that Stephen's villainous conduct has been misrepresented.

List of the men's names that shot best at the target belenging to the 1st and 2nd battalions of the Pennsylvanian Regiment, with receipt for the premiums. The winners of the prizes were Frederick Pifter, Capt. Irwin's Company, 1st; James Duff, Sergeant, Capt. Lindsey's Co., 2nd; Isaack Irwin, Capt. Brady's Co., 3rd; James Herred, Capt. Piper's Co., 4th.

October 2.

Orders by Bouquet to the troops in anticipation of moving towards the Indian towns to attack them.

November 5, Muskingum. Bouquet to Stanwix. Had received his kind letter on the march. The Delawares already reduced, and have sent in their prisoners. Is going to march against the Shawanese unless they submit. Hopes soon to see the burdensome war ended, when his career must cease, as after all his services there is no hope of obtaining naturalization, and he is confined to this regiment, not being even allowed to sell out; a sad prospect after 27 years in this service. Shall take advantage next year of the leave of absence and make a last effort in London to be naturalized. Respecting a chaplain to take the place of Jackson. 456

November 15, Muskingum. The same to Gage. (Only a part of the letter has been preserved.) Reporting the settlement with the Indians; that he would march the troops back to Fort Pitt, dismiss the provincials and volunteers and fix the regulars in their winter quarters. Mentions the merits of several officers, and the good service rendered by the volunteers from Virginia, &c. The two brothers Hicks sent for trial. Deserter, Courtmartial, 458 Marching orders to detachments.

November 29, Fort Pitt.

November 30, Fort Pitt. Bouquet to Gage. The army returned here on the 28th; the Royal Americans marched yesterday; the volunteers and provincial troops are following. The captives are sent to their provinces. How the different forts (specified) are garrisoned. The Caughnawagas proceed with the deputies of the Delawares to Sir William Johnson. Details respecting Indian hostages, &c. Does not think Gage's plan would have succeeded with the distant Indians, for reasons given; dread of English power is the only motive capable of making a solid impression on their minds. The scheme proposed for overawing them, by a rapid advance on the Mississippi, and Fort Chartres could be reached sooner than a force could be collected to oppose the advance; when that fort is held by a proper force would be the proper time to offer friendship and trade; time must establish it. The obstacles to the expedition from having to wait for orders from home and for provincial troops which are never ready.

December 4, Philadelphia.

Geo, Croghan to Alexander McKee. Is pleased to hear that his (McKee's) conduct has been approved of. The change in the management of Indian affairs, by which the agents are independent of any of the officers commanding at the posts. To inform the Indians that he shall be at Fort Pitt to open the trade and transact the affairs of his department with the tribes in that country, and that they are to be ready to bring in peltry on his arrival, till which time they should be cautioned not to deal. He need not tell any officer what instructions he has received, except that the Indians were to be informed of his (Croghan's) coming, and to be prepared for him.

December 7, Fort Pitt. Bouquet to Col. Clayton. To take charge of Gershom Hicks and Levy Hicks, to be taken as prisoners for trial at Carlisle.

December 14, Fort Lou-Bouquet to Capt. W. Murray. Order to open the letter sent by George Croghan to McKee, with messages to the Indians, and if it contains such messages, he is not to permit it to be delivered.

The same to Gage. The measures he recommends with Pontiac are necessary, but owing to the change in the management of Indian affairs, he doubts if it would be proper for him to interfere. Respecting the letter from Croghan to McKee. The officers will be glad to have no further concern with Indian affairs, but it is to be regretted that powers of such importance should be trusted to a man illiterate, impudent and ill-bred, who subverts the purposes of government and begins his functions by a ridiculous display of his own importance and an attempt to destroy the harmony which should subsist between the different branches of the service. The evil effect of hurrying on the trade with the Indians. Croghan's previous conduct. Murder and scalping of an Indian at Pittsburgh by Maryland volunteers, and another of the same gang is in the woods with a similar object. Unless the insolence of the frontier inhabitants is repressed it will be impossible to preserve peace with the Indians; had written to the Governors of Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania to publish orders as to the suspension of hostilities. The same to Capt. Gordon. Acknowledges the kind sentiments expressed by Gordon. Will recommend to the General what he (Gordon) desires.

January 25, New York.

The same to Sir William Johnson. Had received his letter of 1st September by the Indians on the 8th December near Fort Ligonier, the others at Philadelphia. Hertel left with the Caughnawagas and the deputies of the Delawares, expecting to be with him (Sir William) by Christmas, but he is afraid the snow has made him remain with the Senecas. Had furnished Croghan with the necessary orders for the posts, but does not expect him to get over the mountains on account of the snow. The flight of the Shawanese hostages arose, no doubt, from fear, but the nation has sent back the prisoners, as agreed on. From losses by war and small-pox, they can do nothing without the Delawares. Is gratified at his (Sir William's) sentiments with regard to the terms of peace and that his equity will establish it on solid foundations; thanks for his approbation. Capt. Ward's account for clothing, &c., for the Cherokees. Page 1

Fort Lyttleton.

May 30,
Shippenburg.

May 11,

Capt. Bosomworth to Bouquet. That the Indians, after being here for a day or two, might go on to Fort Loudoun. No word yet of the Indians from Winchester. Capt. Trent arrived with a party of warriors led by Wahatchez, a great warrior, who must be well cared for. The rice ordered will be very acceptable to the Indians; asks that all the Indian presents be ordered here, so as to show that preparations are made for the campaign.

June 5, Fort Loudown. Capt. Trent to the same. Arrival of Anthony and another Indian from Carlisle. Council held, at which the Cherokees refuse to wait till Bouquet arrives; demand large presents, threatening that if they do not get them they will rob all the English houses on the way and join the Creeks to fight against the English, that the French were good people. The trouble caused by Anthony and by the want of an interpreter. Thinks a general council should be held; will consult Col. Stevens (Stephen?) who is encamped six miles off. The Indians (Cherokees) throwing back their clothing, owing to Anthony's misrepresentations. Arrival of a war party, who had fired on some other Indians at Venango, but were fired on by a party of the enemy, which they had not seen; one of them killed, the rest came in naked. A postcript, dated the 6th, says the Indians remain till Bouquet arrives.

June 7, Fort Loudoun. The same to the same. Eleven Cherokes arrived from Fort Lyttleton, who report the loss of one man at the little French fort. Four Cherokees who had arrived at Fort Lyttleton reported they had lost seven in an engagement with the enemy. By advice of Col. Stevens presents have been given to Wahatchee and the men who had received none before, Does not know whether they will go or stay.

June 14, Reading. Conrad Weiser to the same. What progress he has made in contracting for waggons. The bad effects of the example set by people who will do nothing themselves and keep back others. Lester appointed waggon master; his good will. The dislike to George Roth; he might be employed elsewhere. The valuation of waggons. After to-day shall press waggons for the service.

June 16, Fort Loudoun,

Capt. Bosomworth to the same. Delay in fitting out the Indians to march to Lyttleton; how they are to receive their proportion of goods for the campaign; they shall then be stored till their return, as a pledge for their performance of duty. &c., &c.

June 18, Fort Loudoun. July 14, Cumberland. The same to the same. Further about fitting out and securing the presents to the Indians. Two parties have marched for Lyttleton. 13

The same to the same. Has arrived after a narrow escape of being scalped. There are no Catawbas at Winchester, nor any word of the Little Carpenter. The 28 Tuscaroras expected he shall desire Col. Byrd to send to Rea's Town.

1758. July 23 Ray's Town.

Calculation of the expense of Indian warriors for their service during the campaign,

September 10. Ray's Town.

Bosomworth to Bouquet. Has been detained here by the illness of the interpreter and other causes; will leave to-morrow with all the Cherokee and Ohio Indians to join the others at the advanced posts. Sends a rough draught of the talk he had given to the Ohio Indians. Reported arrival of Wolfe at New York, with 8,000 men.

December 4 and 5, Pittsburgh.

Bouquet's conference with the Delaware chiefs held at Pittsburgh, 4th December, and their answer, 5th December. 19

1759. January 1, Bedford.

Account of Indian goods in the King's storehouse at Fort Bedford. 25

January 8, Pittsburgh.

Minutes of a conference held with the Indians on the Ohio, at Pittsburgh.

January 8, Pittsburgh,

Col. Mercer to General Forbes. Sends the minutes of conference. The report by the Six Nations that 12 nations on the other side of Lake Erie are in the French interest and engaged to cut off the Six Nations. Such a stroke would be their ruin, so they have come to ask assistance; they believe that one or two defeats suffered by the French will detach their Indians. They report the state of the French posts, not a word of which has been brought by the Delawares, who must be kept on good terms in the mean time. An interpreter wanted, as well as presents for the chiefs of the Six Nations..

January 8, Pitsburgh.

The same to Bouquet. The different accounts from Venango; does not know which to trust. Refers to the conference to show the feeling of the Six Nations toward the other Indians as well as towards the French. Has sent Ward to interpret, but needs an interpreter in his place. The enormous consumption of provisions by the Indians. Will try to get up two cannon sunk in the Ohio.

January 11, Fort Loudoun.

Robert Tuckniss to the same. Has been appointed Indian agent. Cannot get forward for want of waggons, &c.

January 15, Fort Loudoun.

The same to the same. Respecting the delay in proceeding; cannot engage waggons on the report that the roads are so bad; asks for a store house for the sale of goods, &c., &c.

A memorandum of necessaries wanting to transport goods to Pittsburgh and the cost of building a store there. A note dated 27th, enclosing memorandum.

July 11, Pittsburgh.

43 Col. Hugh Mercer to Bouquet. The news of reinforcements being sent to Venango confirmed by the attack of the enemy on that Wyandots from near Detroit report that the French were raising all the men of that post, amounting, with the garrison, to 500 or 600 men, and collecting the Indians to prosecute the war Two Indians from Presqu'Isle sent by one of the Six on this river. Nations, report a body of French and Indians (about 700) had arrived there from Detroit with 10 pieces of cannon, to attempt this post or Ligonier, and that several chiefs at Venango had gone to draw off their people from the French. Is sending off a convoy with 300 men which he hopes cannot be insulted on the road; on their arrival the force will be nearly 1,000 strong. Is sending to hasten Col. Byrd's march. Cannot tell if it is practicable for Col. Stephen to send artillery. conference with the Indians satisfactory, but their force too small to be of consequence. No word from Ningara, Expresses sent by Indians.

July 11. Pittsburgh.

George Croghan to the same. Reports news of the movement from Detroit, as in Mercer's letter (p. 44); has had no certain news yet from Venango if the force which attacked Ligonier had yet arrived there. 1759.

July 11, Pittsburgh.

July 13, Lancaster. Shall have spies constantly out; their intelligence saved the last convoy. Has had to draw money.

George Croghan to Bouquet. News from Presqu'Isle as in Mercer's

Bouquet to Mercer. The General has given orders to open a communication from Carlisle to Red Stone, where a post is to be built for the reception of provisions. The flats to be built when hands can be spared. Peace to be confirmed with the Indians. Orders given for Indian goods. To try to engage 50 or 100 young Delawares to take up the hatchet against the enemy. Hopes the repulse at Ligonier will cool the enemy. The Virginians were to set out on the 11th, part to clear the road to Red Stone Creek, the rest to proceed by Bedford to Ligonier. Report, not believed, that the Shawanese proposed to come to his fort (Pittsburgh) as friends, and when admitted to attack the garrison; the precautions to be used. The new levies arrived at Carlisle; there is a prospect of plenty of waggons for the campaign. It is reported that Croghan has changed the price of Indian goods. No changes to be made but by the General. News from Prideaux expected, and that Amherst has passed The same to Croghan. Orders as to Indians, Indian goods, &c., sub

July 13. Lancaste

July 16, Pittsburgh. stantially as in letter to Mercer (p. 49). Col. Mercer to Bouquet. Croghan has sent full information. The enemy not yet come. The garrison in good spirits, although with a scarcity of provisions. The convoy with supplies will be in to-morrow. The Delawares and other Indians have shown great zeal; but for them news could not have been sent nor supplies received. Twenty Wyandots arrived; a part of 70 going to the French, but brought in by their peo-

July 21, Pittsburgh.

The same to Stanwix. No accounts from Venango to confirm previous Joscelyn's convoy of horses for Ligonier detained, on the report of considerable parties of the enemy being about. Chief of the Delawares sent to ascertain the intentions of the Indians who had passed through the night. Will detain the convoy till further information, as the provisions can hold out for 10 or 12 days. Expense of provisions for Indians; how he is trying to lighten it. The importance of having them for obtaining intelligence. Returns of troops sent. Onondagas and Delawares have returned to their homes till wanted. Defensive works for the post. Col. Mercer to Bouquet. Congratulates him on the happy change of circumstances. Is afraid the expense for Indians may be thought extravagant, but it has been necessary. A fair opportunity offers to clear the Ohio; Indians leaving the French daily.

The same to Stanwix. The Indians dropping off from the French. Joscelyn marches this morning; believes he will meet no insult; 200 Indians waiting at Beaver Creek till they know what reception they may meet with; he will, however be prepared for the worst.

Bouquet to Mercer. His gratification at the certain news of the enemy's retreat. The Delawares have paid for the cost of provisions by their assiduity. Convoys on the road to Ligonier; troops to remain there till a month's provisions for a thousand men can be sent to Pittsburgh. The necessity for strong escorts has caused delay; roads are yet to be repaired. An express has been intercepted by the enemy, with letters and £400 in cash; copies of the letters are sent. July 28, Pittsburgh. Col. Mercer to Stanwix. Has sent off 200 men to meet the convoy, to relieve that number to return to Ligonier. The convoy to be detained no longer than to rest the horses. Shall do all that is possible to draw the Indians to the British interest, with remarks on the subject. Statement of the number of Indians here; Croghans' journal shows that 1,200 Indians had been fed and clothed since his arrival. Small parties of Indians are occasionally seen, but as one or two Frenchmen are usually with them it is probable they are only watching the movements of the troops.

July 31,

Reports received from Venango, &c., on the 29th, 30th and 31st July, of the state of affairs at that post, the movements of French parties on the road, &c.

The letter from Croghan covering the above states that he and Mercer had been obliged to buy Indian goods; denies that he had made any change in the prices fixed by the commissioners. How the escorts for provisions are composed. Spies sent to Venango and Presqu'Isle to watch the enemy. Respecting the rations to Indians. Has been informed where the enemy buried the guns down the river last fall; proposes to raise them.

August 1, Pittsburgh.

Col. Mercer to Bouquet. Capt. Gordon has joined with 100 artificers; has reduced the garrison to 350 rank and file, has sent the sick to Ligonier, and has sent off as many Indians as possible with the convoy for there. Sends returns. Indians daily arriving. Two men of the Highlanders carried off by the epemy. Respecting the prices of Indian goods. Indians have brought news from Venango that 100 French and some Indians are there settling the terms of peace; about 40 Indian parties are now on the road for the French interest. The French are preparing to make off on the news of the reduction of Niagara, or of troops marching against them; not above 50 Indians remained with the French when they crossed the lake. The bateaux will be ready in about eight days to go to Red Stone Creek. (A note is added by Major Tulleken, that he would join the pack horses, sheep and oxen in one convoy).

Bouquet to Mercer. In event of the success or failure of the attack on Niagara he proposes to burn Venango, but leaves it to him to judge of the probability of this succeeding. (fives a sketch of the plan of operation. Tulleken on the road with 200 men; the chief dependence for the execution of the plan must be on the Indians, so that if they will not go he is not to leave Pittsburgh. George Croghan to the same. Sends the latest intelligence. Indians met for a council to take the hatchet out of the hands of some Indians who still keep with the French. Great numbers of Indians coming to trade. (Note from Major Tulleken that he would keep by the waggons he found at Stony Creek till they reach Ligonier.

Intelligence, dated 1st Aug., from Venango enclosed.

Minutes of conference between George Croghan and the chiefs and warriors of the Delawares, Shawanese, Wyandots, Twigtwees, Ottawas, Chippewas, Cuscuskees and Pottawatomies.

Bouquet to Croghan. His intelligence from Niagara is welcome. The Indians do as much mischief devouring provisions at Pittsburgh as by destroying them on the road. A large number of men must be employed to build the fort at Pittsburgh, but they cannot be sent so long as these idle people daily consume all the provisions that arrive. This must be stopped. Those who must be kept are to be reduced to the same rations as the soldiers; the rest must be referred to a general treaty.

Col. Mercer to Stanwix. The report of the burning of Venango, LeBoeur and Presqu'Isle by the French is confirmed. Bateaux and flats getting ready to carry troops to Niagara. Capt. Robertson marches to-morrow with the convoy to Ligonier.

The same to Bouquet. Elevating news flows in from every quarter. Indian news true in general, but false in particulars, as the Indians get reports from second hand. Regrets the expenditure for Indians, whose services, now that the enemy are running across the lake, have become contemptible. Is observing orders to get rid of the Indians and to reduce the allowance of those who remain. No horses have been stolen since the arrival of the convoy, orders having been given to fire on every Indian seen taking off any; some might be purchased from them, were there goods to give in exchange. Bateaux fitting up; the convoys from Ligonier return as strong as they come. The knowledge Capt. Robertson has of military affairs, &c.

The same to the same. Has sent Major Ward to join the Pennsylvanians, and drawn to pay him and the waggoners. Reported burning of Venango, &c. Of the French troops that went to relieve Niagara, 200 were killed and few of the rest came in.

The same to Stanwix. Forwards a letter brought by Indians from Sir William Johnson. Owing to the roads, it is impossible to march a body of men from Presqu'Isle to Niagara; how the troops can be sent. The Indian who scalped the waggoner is one of Killbuck's party; he is to be delivered. Severe measures must be taken with these people; their rapacity, &c.

The same to Bouquet. Arrival of Major Tulleken and different convoys. Will purchase such of the horses as may speedily recruit and send them to Ligonier, as they are not secure in any pasture here. The villainy of Killbuck's party; the insolence of the Delawares must be checked. Is afraid the arrival of Catawbas will embroil matters. 108

The same to Col. Byrd. A waggoner killed and another fired on by three Indians on the road to Ligonier, who killed his horse and stole some horses from a convoy of empty waggons, under escort. Waggons found on the road to Cumberland, with the traces cut. No convoy safe
